To Ascertain Definitely Whether Restelli Committed Suicide after the Tragedies

Clews in Maine and at Bolton Being Followed Up

Although the police at Biddeford, Me., believe that the man seen at Sanford, Me., Sunday, by A. H. Atkins was not Luigi G. Restelli wanted in Quincy for the murder of his mother and Henry E. Hardwick, Mr. Atkins still declares that he is the man. When shown one of the new photographs of Restelli on Wednesday, Mr. Atkins was very emphatic in his belief that the photograph shown him, and the man he saw, are one and the same person and no amount of argument can make him change his opinion.

State officer John C. Scott left Quincy, Wednesday noon, for Biddeford, Me., and he will run down the clew, and if possible find the Italian who Mr. Atkins declares is Restelli. Officer Scott took a supply of circulars and Restelli pictures with him and will see that they are well distributed.

While the local police are not inclined to place much credulence in the statement of Mr. Atkins, Chief Burrell is taking no chances of letting any clew pass without a thorough investigation that will prove positively whether the suspect is or is not the elusive Restelli.

At the same time that Officer Scott started for Maine, Inspector McKay was dispatched to Bolton to look up and run down the clew that came from that section a few days ago.

It seems remarkable that a man could do what Restelli did on the afternoon of July 29 and then drop completely out of sight, as he seems to have done, without leaving any absolute certain clew as to what became of him.

This leads many to hold to the opinion that he never left Quincy, but that he took his own life in one of the old quarry holes. It is pointed out that the explosion of dynamite in these quarries was without result, yet at the same time it is well known that the bottom of these quarries are filled with jagged rocks, and it is not among the impossibilities that if he jumped into one of these quarries his body might have become wedged under a rock. In that case no explosion of dynamite would dislodge it. The only absolute certain way therefore of determining the fact is by pumping them out. This would be quite a job, but in the opinion of many it is worth the try. At least it would set at ease the minds of many timid people, who still cling to the belief that the murderer never left Quincy. They will have no peace of mind until it is settled one way or the other.

FIRST AVIATOR COMES TO GRIEF

Box Kites Successfully Flown and Lift Men

All parts of Ward Six are waking to the possibilities of Aviation week. A large tent for refreshments has been erected near the Atlantic depot, and at points on Squantum street outside the Aviation field lumber has arrived, and booths and tents are being erected.

The Street department of the city and the street railway company have practically completed their work on Squantum street. The street has been widened out and the grade raised, the street railway being located to the east side. Until today the street was terribly dusty, but the rain should settle it.

Work has been rushed on the office buildings at the entrance to the Aviation field, and they are nearly ready. Several turnstiles have been installed. The new roadway to the field is enclosed by a high wire fence as far as the creek, and new locks have been placed near the outlet of the creek which keep the creek flooded and impassable at all times.

The roadway has been divided by a wire fence in the centre, so that autos and teams must enter on the south side, and leave on the north side.

But one does not have free access to the Aviation field after travelling this private way, for he is heldup by another wire fence behind the large grand stand. There are seats at different prices but not much desirable standing room.

Some distance across the getaway in front of the main grandstand tents have been erected for the aeroplanes, dirigibles, etc. Horace F. Kearny has a hangar all to himself. Just beyond are two hangars which will accommodate about six machines each, and then a tent for the dirigible of Cromwell Dixon, which was inflated on Wednesday, but not equipped. The stand for the automobiles is also across the getaway near the hangars.

Horace F. Kearny had the honor on Wednesday to be the first aviator to get off the ground at the new Quincy Aviation field, but passengers on the kite line went as high.

Kearny tried to fly early Wednesday but his attempt was a failure and his monoplane was badly damaged. It is being repaired.

Possibly Dixon may attempt a flight today.

NEW TELEPHONE.

A Boston paper publishes a list of the projected telephone districts and gives the Quincy district as follows: Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton—four towns.

The Braintree district is even larger, as it includes all the above towns with the addition of Randolph—five towns.

Milton is favored, as there are seven exchanges in her district—Milton, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Canton, Randolph, Braintree and Quincy.

The Dorchester district which includes several Quincy subscribers who live in Atlantic, includes—Dorchester, Milton, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and South Boston.

The Norfolk county shire town of Dedham has two exchanges outside the county, being made up of Newton South, Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Canton, Norwood, Deedham and Dedham—seven towns.

BRAINTREE MAN KILLED

Was with Automobile Party in Wayland

Reckless auto riding over an unknown road was the cause of a fatal accident to a Braintree man on Wednesday, but his companions escaped with slight bruises. J. Frank Perry, the electrician, well known at the Fore River, was the victim, and Lawrence S. Fay belongs in Springfield.

The accident occurred on a dangerous curve on the state highway, near the Linnehan farm, about halfway between Wayland Center and the Weston line, where at least six bad automobile accidents have occurred in recent years. The accident was the second fatal one on the same curve in two years, a Mrs. Dillon of Fitchburg having been thrown out of an auto there and instantly killed in 1908.

When about halfway around the curve the big car began to skid on the smooth macadam. Suddenly, according to the story told by the uninjured occupants to those who were early on the scene, the left-hand front tire came off, and the operator found himself unable to control the machine.

The automobile swung completely about, and the left side of the car struck the substantially built fence along a high embankment nearly half a dozen times before finally coming to a stop. The machine brought up against the fence for the last time more than 100 feet back of the spot where it swung about.

Perry, who was riding on the front seat with the driver, was thrown completely over the front of the machine when it struck the fence the first time He cleared the fence and landed, face downward, in a rocky field 30 feet below the roadway.

He was badly cut and bruised and numerous bones were fractured. He never regained consciousness, although doctors made every effort to revive him when they treated him at the roadside, and everything possible was done to aid him in the Waltham hospital, where he was taken in another automobile.

Although the wrecked automobile was owned in Springfield one of the women occupants told members of a family living near the scene of the accident that they had started from Worcester.

—Dr. Wiley endeared himself to the masses of his fellow-countrymen in saying to the cross-examining lawyer: "I don't give a hang for the business world; what I care for is the health of the people." The interests of the business world should never menace the health of the people. When they do ,they will suffer, provided the people are intelligent enough to smash them.—Springfield Republican.

EVENTS AT PLAYGROUND

Closing Exercises Will Be Held Tomorrow

The closing games and exercises of the Y. M. C. A. playground will be held on Friday afternoon from 2.30 to 5 o'clock. Games have been arranged for both boys and girls and the following program will be carried out:

2.30—Boys base ball game.
2.30—Group games for girls.
3.30—Relay races on track (boys.)
3.40—Sack races (girls.)
3.50—Blind mans buff (boys.)
4—Potato race (boys)
4.15—Flag race (girls.)
4.25—Chicken fight (girls).
4.40—Ice cream and cake.
5—Peanut scramble.

Prizes will be awarded to the winners of the various races and at the close of the afternoon's sport, a flag will be given to each boy and girl.

These souvenirs were donated by a gentleman who wishes his name to be withheld. No part of the fund raised by the "committee of one hundred" will be used to defray these expenses.

An invitation is extended to any adult who is interested in children's work and play, to be present at the day's sport. In case of rain, the program will be carried out in the Y. M. C. A. gym.

—A trained kindergartner is to open the Kindergarten class at Miss Spear's, 1168 Hancock street on Wednesday September 14th at 9 A. M.

HOW DO YOU USE TELEPHONE

May Pay Different Prices for Same Service

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. has notified the Massachusetts Highway Commission relative to proposed telephone rates, "the company has decided to give the entire plan a complete and impartial trial." The company will make every effort to begin to furnish service under the new rates Nov. 1.

Ex-Representative Joseph Leonard, counsel for the United Improvement association in the telephone inquiry before the Highway Commission, in a statement on the new schedule of rates recommended by that board, shows that a subscriber may pay three different prices for the same service. He believes that every case requires an individual study and that subscribers under the new system really need an expert to get the best service for the smallest amount of money.

This new development of the situation as worked out by Mr. Leonard is as follows:

"Whether or not the subscribing telephone public are to receive any advantage from the new rates as proposed by the Highway Commission is going to depend ver ylargely upon the accuracy with which they can judge of their telephone requirements and the care in which they choose their particular telephone contract. The new proposition offers greater variety

SPECIAL OF CITY COUNCIL

A Hitch on the Appropriation For Sewers

Notices were sent out today by Mayor Shea calling a special meeting of the City Council for Friday evening. There are four items in the call, namely:

To draw jurors.

To disignate polling places for the caucuses on Sept. 27.

To receive from the Mayor the appointment of election officers for the coming year.

To take action on order 264 appropriating $10,000 for the extension of main and lateral sewers.

The order appropriating $10,000 for main and lateral sewers, provides that the same may be borrowed under the acts of the legislature of 1902 and 1905.

When the City Treasurer attempted to sell the bonds the bankers turned the order down. The objection to the order was that it did not state what part of the amount was to be borrowed under each act. The order was drawn against the two acts for the reason that there was not sufficient balance under the 1905 act.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Things will be flying through the air next week. Look out and get out from under for they will weigh more than the birds that have heretofore had a monopoly of the realms above.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

An organization that has more than 500,000 members in North America, to say nothing of branches essewhere, and owns property worth nearly $70,000,000, is something in which the religious world may take collective pride. Such is the Young Men's Christian Association, whose new year book announces these tremendous facts. When the humble start of the association some years ago is considered, the phenomenal success that has attended its endeavors compels the respect and admiration of all who have watched its progress or come within its sphere of influence.

The Young Men's Christian Association provides a haven for youths who otherwise would find less inducement for reading, study and progress. In that atmosphere of kindliness noticeable in all well-regulated association rooms are bred the sapient and valuable qualities that make for strong physical, moral and intellectual manhood. If it is the gymnasium that calls, the boy meets there with developing competition; the reading room and library afford him the means of mental exercise and training the parlor games serve to enhance the pleasures of meeting with others.

It is the non-sectarian character of the association that has brought it to so high a degree of success. In the Y. M. C. A. prayer meeting many Protestant denominations are represented, and thereby the association gains its strength. The educational courses provided by this organization, whose broadening sphere of influence and numerical growth make it already an indirect factor in world affairs, are comprehensive and attractive, and have started many men on useful life careers. The Y. M. C. A., conducted as in the past, will continue to receive the commendation of all, even those who have failed to benefit by the helping hand that assists so many toilers up the road leading toward the promised land of right living, where bloom the flowers of self-respect, good intent and happiness. As a vast and growing system the Y. M. C. A. has accomplished world-wide good and its possibilities for work of even greater scope constantly seem brighter.—Christian Science Monitor.

Because of the folding to which treasury notes are subjected, the life of these bills is materially shortened. Hence the plan on the part of the government, business men and bankers favoring, to cut down the size of treasury notes of all denominations about one-third of the present form. By doing away with the folding, in order thus to accommodate the bills to ordinary pocketbooks, not only will the bills last longer, but there is also another factor of importance, to wit: a saving of about $1,000,000 annually through diminished consumption of paper and ink. Reduced to the suggested size, the treasury notes would be removed from the "shinplaster" form in which the currency of an earlier generation appeared. It is also safe to assume that the new form would prove more convenient. Of course the notes would be as much prized, and therefore welcomed, as those of the present size. And this is the main thing.—Salem News.

—It is worthy o fnote that there are more buyers here this year than last and that their plans are for longer stays. It is also worthy of note that they speak of conditions "back home" as eminently satisfactory with prospect of increasing business. But more impressive than all is the fact that they are buying more and better goods than in any season since 1907 and that the tendency noted in preceding years, to rely largely on duplicating orders later is absent. These buyers have felt the business pulse of the country and found it strong.—N. Y. Herald.

COLORADO E. WINS IN RECORD TIME

Readville, Mass., Sept. 1.—Colorado E. established a new world's record for 3-year-old trotters here for a single heat and for two successive heats, by going the first in 2:06½ and the second one in 2:07¾, winning a $5000 purse.

This was accomplished in the American Horse Breeder Futurity in the teeth of a howling wind that blew directly in the faces of the horses when finishing, and was a big surprise to experts who declared, before the race, that only ordinary time would be made under the weather conditions.

Colorado E., the new champion, is the property of George H. Estabrook of Denver. An offer of $50,000 was refused for the colt Monday, and the report is that William Bradley, the New York horseman, who is after him, has advanced his offer to $75,000.

"WATERMELON DAY"

Thousands Are Attending Great Feast at Famous Rocky Ford

Rocky Ford, Col., Sept. 1.—Today is Watermelon day here—of all the "days" in Colorado, the biggest, best and most exciting, topping all the elaborate "harvest home" festivals in this state.

Special excursion trains are loaded to the platforms with jolly, melon-hungry crowds. They make a company of from 12,000 to 15,000. All marched from the railroad station to Melon grove, half a mile away, where there was a rick of watermelons 35 feet wide, 125 feet long and tapering to a point 8 feet high; the mountain flanked and garnished with cantaloupes—wagon-loads of them. The total is at least 12,000 Kleckley Sweets and 24,000 cantaloupes.

STOLE HIVE OF BEES

Aged Sinner Who Wanted Honey Gets Three Months In Prison

Westfield, Mass., Sept. 1.—Hubbard Hollister, 70 years of age, a resident of Granville, was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for the larceny of a beehive containing seventy pounds of honey and several hundred bees, the property of Albert E. Butterfield.

A remarkable feature of the case is that Hollister has a fracture of the neck, which he sustained in an accident more than a year ago.

Value of Cleveland Estate

New York, Sept. 1.—A gross valuation of the estate of the late Grover Cleveland in New York was filed with the surrogate today, showing $39,650. Less taxes, commissions, etc., the residue is $32,378, the bulk of which goes to the widow and children.

AN EARLY WINTER.

According to the predictions of weather sharps we are going to have an early winter. Blackbirds, chipping sparrows, bluebirds and other summer visitors have been flocking for the past week. Migration to the south is unusually early this season, as noted by the fight of the black-birds.—Fitchburg Sentinel.

GENTLE WORDS.

The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew the drooping flower,
And eyes grow bright and watch the light
Of autumn's opening hour.
But words that breathe of tenderness
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the summer time.
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give
With all its subtle art,
And gold and gem are not the things
To satisfy the heart.
But, oh! if those who cluster round
The altar and the hearth
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth.

—Census returns are being announced from some of the larger cities, and they are not always up to desire or expectation. For instance, Hartford people confidently anticipated passing the 100,000 mark, but the official return falls short of that figure by a paltry 100 or so. St. Louis, which has stood fourth among the cities of the country, has gained less than 20 per cent in the past decade, and will have to give w.. to Boston for fourth place. Atlanta, which has been the third of the southern cities, has made the remarkable gain of 72 per cent since 1890, and displaces Memphis for second place, being preceded only by New Orleans in population, but as a business centre, taking precedence over all the cities of the south.—Milford Gazette.

IS CONTAGIOUS AND DANGEROUS

Authority on Infantile Paralysis Makes Startling Statement

SAYS MALADY CAN BE CURED

Absolute Quarantine the Only Method of Handling Disease, Which Is Contracted Through the Nose and Throat—Washington Doctors Take More Cheerful View Than Investigator From Nebraska

Washington, Sept. 1.—Dr. Lucian Stark of Nebraska, appointed by Governor Shallenberger to investigate infantile paralysis in the eastern cities and reputed to be an authority on this disease, has reached Washington, and has aroused much interest by statements attributed to him in the local press.

He pronounces the disease contagious, dangerous and difficult to cure and advises isolation in every case.

"A great many physicians," says Stark, "confuse this infant disease with spinal meningitis in their diagnosis. It is even worse than meningitis. It is worse than smallpox. It is more contagious than any other plague on the earth except cholera, yellow fever or the bubonic plague. Absolute quarantine is the only method of handling the disease. One of the most certain proofs of the fact that infantile paralysis is contagious is that it follows a railroad from town to town and leaves its deadly imprint wherever it spreads unless checked by isolation."

Dr. Stark believes the disease can be easily conquered if taken early and recommends as treatment the puncture of the spinal cord at the base and the withdrawal of twenty-two minims of the fluid. Salt solution to the amount of eleven minims is then injected and the rest of the treatment consists almost entirely of massage. He says that a spray of glycothymoline two or three times a day and complete isolation of the children is the best preventative of the disease, which is contracted through the nose and throat.

Local physicians of much experience with children's diseases are not inclined to credit the alarmist theories of Stark. They say he has a right to his own theory as they have to theirs, and that with the present limited knowledge of this epidemic one man's opinion is as good as another's.

Dr. D. G. Smith of Washington, one of the leading physicians in the treatment of children's diseases, takes a much more cheerful view and apparently speaks from a ripe experience, for he familiarized himself with "acute anterior poliomyelitis," as the disease is known to science, long before it became epidemic in Washington.

"We know nothing of the origin of the disease and shall not until the germ is isolated," said Smith. "Isolation of the patient is safe of course, but if the disease is epidemic, as in Washington, we can no more isolate against it than we can against grippe. I have had several cases where in families of perhaps a dozen only one person was afflicted.

"Death is rare, occurring in not more than 3 to 5 percent of cases at the most. I have seen twenty-five or thirty cases this summer without death.

"My theory of the cause is that the germs are carried in the air and into the nose by breathing, passing through the cribim form, process of the ethnoid bone to the brain and thence to the spinal cord. I regard the disease as probably mildly contagious and probably epidemic. It is most common in summer, I presume, because of the immense quantities of dry dust which is whirling about."

Wider Pleads Guilty to Five Indictments Charging Grand Larceny

New York, Sept. 1.—When Erwin J. Wider, the cashier of the Russo-Chinese bank who got away with about $525,000 in securities from that institution, was arraigned before Judge O'Sullivan, he withdrew his plea of not guilty to an indictment found by the grand jury last week and pleaded guilty, and also pleaded guilty to three new indictments which were recently found. Wider has now pleaded guilty to all five indictments charging grand larceny.

Through counsel, Wider asked that he be sentenced at once, but at the request of Acting District Attorney Moss, who said that he wanted to make a further investigation, sentence was adjourned until Sept. 9.

HOW DO YOU USE TELEPHONE?

of choice as to the kind of contract to make than the present existing schedule. I believe that it is almost certain to happen that many people having practically the same amount of telephone service in the course of the year are going to pay widely variant prices for their service. The only remedy seems to be for the public to study their needs and get proper contracts as a large number of the public do not understand all the details of the new scheme.

"I believe that the telephone company should be required to make a study as far as practicable of the number of calls within a given zone of each individual subscriber, and the number of calls without that zone which will be subject to a toll rate. If each subscriber had this information accurately compiled for a period of four or six weeks prior to the time of making his new contract he could then determine within what class of contracts his service should come.

As an example of the way the price would vary he says: "Now let us take the case of a suburban householder having 60 out-going messages per month, of which 40 are within the subscriber's zone and 20 are five-cent toll charges. Should this subscriber take the measured service covering the entire metropolitan and suburban areas he would pay as follows:

For the first 600 calls.....$60.00
For the next 120 calls at 5 cents..6.00

Total $66.00

"Another suburban resident having the same number of messages contracts for the two-party, unlimited service within his own zone. For this he pays, if he lives in Jamaica Plain or Cambridge, or any of the nearby suburbs..... $30.00
For his 240 five-cent toll charges for the year he pays 12.00

Total $42.00

"Another resident having the same use contracts for the measured service, 480 calls for $24.00. As the five-cent toll charge does not apply until the 480 calls are used up, we have the folowing result:

This subscriber gets 320 calls within his zone, and 160 calls within the eight-mile radius for $24.00
He then pays for his extra calls, for 160 at three cents 4.80
And for 80 toll charges at five cents 4.00

"This is less than one-half the first party cited pays and 50 per cent less than the party who contracted for the unlimited two-party service. I think from these figures and they can be applied to various rates in the new schedule, it is demonstrated conclusively that if there is to be a saving made to the public it can be made only as a result of accurate information on the part of the subscribers as to what their needs are and how best to contract therefor.

"The whole proposition is novel and new. There is a vast lack of information among people who ought to be informed, and until such time as the new rates are understood I believe that the Highway Commission should maintain an expert advisory department to a advise the public as to how they should best contract for their telephone needs."

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by James Ward to George H. Brown, trustee under deed of Mary Pollock, said mortgage being dated May 9, 1900 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 870, page 182, for breach of the condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises on FRIDAY, the sixteenth day of September, A. D. 1910 at four o'clock P. M. all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, the same being situated in Quincy in said County of Norfolk and in said mortgage deed described as follows: The following parcel of land situated in that part of said Quincy called Wollaston Park, being lot number fifteen (15) on plan of land of Josiah P. Quincy at Wollaston Park by H. T. Whitman, dated March. 1855, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Plan numbered 769, bounded and described as follows, viz:

West Northwesterly one hundred five (105) feet by lot number fourteen (14) on said plan; North northeasterly fifty (50) feet by Gould street; East Southeasterly seventy-eight (78) feet by lot number sixteen (16) and twenty-seven (27) feet by lot number twenty-three (23) on said plan; South Southwesterly fifty (50) feet partly by said lot number twenty-three (23) and partly by lot number twenty-four (24). Containing according to said plan five thousand two hundred fifty (5,250) square feet.

Said premises will be sold subject to the restrictions referred to in said mortgage deed and to unpaid taxes and municipal assessments, if any. $190 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale and the balance within ten days from delivery of deed.

FRED L. NORTON, Administrator of the estate of Carrie W. Norton, assignee and present holder of said mortgage.

DEEPER INLAND WATERWAYS

Convention at Providence Is Largely attended

Over 1000 are in attendance at the Deeper Waterways convention at Providence and the Quincy contingent will not arrive until tomorrow.

That there eventually will be an inland waterway connecting Boston with Narragansett Bay was the prophecy of Congressman William S. Greene of Fall River at Wednesday's session says a special to the Boston Journal. He said the providing of waterways inside the dangerous shoals and currents of the Atlantic coast was more important than the Panama canal. He spoke of the surveys being made from a point near the northern boundary of Fall River, up the Taunton river to a point near Taunton, and thence in a northeasterly direction towards Quincy and Boston.

All speeches made showed the country is awakening to the need of inland waterways and the improvement of water transportation facilities generally. Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, who was to speak Wednesday, will make an address Thursday. There was considerable disappointment over the failure of President Taft to attend.

In his address E. Chamberlain of Brockton, president of the Massachusetts State Board of Trade, pointed out the inability of the railroads to give the country adequate transportation rates and facilities.

That the 1800 miles of Atlantic seaboard, from Maine to Florida, will ultimately be linked by a chain of inland waterways was predicted by all speakers. This, they held out, would insure against marine disaste r and lower the transportation rates.

Encouraging addresses were read by Congressman J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania, president of the association; Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina, Secretary-Treasurer Burke of Philadelphia, Commander Alfred Brooks Fry, chief engineer of the United States Treasury service; Commissioner Herbert Knox Smith of the bureau of corporations; Commissioner Calvin Tompkins of the New York city department of docks; and Joseph F. Gray, State railroad commissioner of Savannah, Ga.

Commander Fry said that now it is possible to obtain quicker deliveries by water than by rail and believed that with the growth of the cities, which would demand all the land for homes and such buildings , that the railroads would be crowded out of their freight yards, or their facilities reduced, which would more than ever cause delays in freight traffic.

A gratifying evidence of the growth of the association was contained in the report of Secretary-Treasurer Burke. The membership has been increased by 318 membeds, and the organization now includes eight cities, 105 trade bodies, 101 firms or corporations, and 454 individual members.

TODAY'S COURT.

Sixty-one continued cases were called and disposed of this morning.

John Guilford was arraigned for uttering a forged check at Quincy and was held in $300 for the grand jury.

Mary Clark was fined $75 for keeping a disorderly house at Quincy.

Mrs. Spencer Hallett was fined $15 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Quincy.

The continued case of Jacob Herman for being a pickpocket at Quincy was called and he was held in $1000 for the grand jury.

RECEIPTS OVER $300,000

Those of 1910 Show Increase Over Recent Years

The Aug. 31 report of City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks shows 1910 receipts by the city from taxes, water rentals and sewer assessment s to amount to $330,225.57, against $283,172.75 for the same period last year. Each year the amount assessed is larger, but nevertheless the gain is quite satisfactory. Here are the figures on tax collection for three years:

1910 to Sept. 1,	$218,370.24
1909 to Sept. 1,	176,198.05
1908 to Sept. 1,	166,736.02

WATER RECEIPTS.

Largely because of new services the water charges are larger and the receipts for the eight months are:

1910 to Sept. 1,	$102,204.23
1909 to Sept. 1,	96,187.04
1908 to Sept. 1,	92,842.05

SEWER RECEIPTS.

Sewer receipts depend on construction work ordered and whether payments are apportioned. The receipts of three years follow:

1910 to Sept. 1,	$7,113.94
1909 to Sept. 1,	10,787.66
1908 to Sept. 1,	9,651.06

PEKING PUNISHES GRAFTER.

First Time Retribution Has Overtaken Chinese Office Peddler.

More graft has been discovered in Peking, and, much to everybody's surprise, it has been punished.

A high official of the board of civil office, who had charge of the civil service lists from which appointments to government office were made, was caught tampering with the lists and practically selling appointments to the highest bidders. He has been dismissed and degraded.

The graft in the civil service board seems to have been widespread, and many officials are implicated. It is stated in Peking that the graft disclosures may result in the abolition of the civil office board and the placing of all appointments to office in the hands of a member of the new regency council.

Graft in high official quarters in Peking has been discovered often, but it has rarely resulted in the punishment of the guilty. It is apparent that a new era in Chinese government affairs has arrived at last.

Many Aviators Are Eager For Long Flight Prizes

All the Famous Man Birds Preparing to Compete For Big Cash Rewards For Cross Country Air Voyages Offered by Metropolitan Newspapers.

Vivid Review of Recent Thrilling Achievements In Aviation -- America Up to the Front In the Beginning of the Human Flying Age.

By J. A. EDGERTON.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

FOLLOWING the successful flight of Glenn H. Curtiss from Albany to New York the country blossomed into a bouquet of aviation prizes. For that feat Curtiss received $10,000 from the New York World; also a large bunch of fame and a banquet. It was at the banquet that the bouquet of prizes burst into bloom. Mayor Gaynor as toastmaster announced that the New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch offered a purse of $30,000 for a flight from New York to St. Louis. Almost simultaneously the New York Times, which had run a special train accompanying the Albany-New York flight, announced in conjunction with the Chicago Evening Post that it would give $25,000 for a New York-Chicago flight.

This was followed by an effort of Governor Hadley of Missouri and others to raise $10,000 for a St. Louis-Kansas City flight. Then a Muskogee (Okla.) paper started a purse of $5,000 to induce some of the New York-St. Louis fliers to continue on to Muskogee. Various cities along the different routes wired that each would raise a fund to have the aviators stop at that particular town en route. An offer of $5,000 was made for an Indianapolis-Chicago flight, and later there was a proposal of a triangular course embracing Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis.

Then the Scientific American offered a prize and in addition announced that Edwin Gould offered $15,000 for the "first best" aeroplane equipped with two motors and two propellers, the purpose of this doubling up being that if one motor stopped because of any of those unaccountable whims which motors sometimes have the other could be switched on. On the heels of this offer came another from the New York World proposing to give a silver trophy challenge cup worth several thousand dollars for the longest continuous cross country flight made each year.

New York to Philadelphia.

In the midst of all this prize offering activity came the news that the New York Times and the Philadelphia Public Ledger had arranged for Charles K. Hamilton, the diminutive, nervy and red headed aviator who had been putting over such thrillers at Mineola, to fly from New York to Philadelphia and back again. The machine to be used was that in which Glenn H. Curtiss had won the world's prize at Rheims. The route was to start at Governors island and follow the Pennsylvania railroad, on which a special train was to run and keep up if it could. The same course was to be followed on the return flight, except that on the New York end, weather conditions permitting a trip was to be made up the Hudson to Grant's tomb, then back again to Governors island. The whole journey, amounting to more than eighty-five miles each way, was to be made in a single day and the date set was Saturday, June 11.

It was Monday, however, before Hamilton actually got off to Philadelphia, the rain of Saturday preventing a start on the scheduled day. On attempting to leave Governors island a propeller blade was broken, but a new propeller from Glenn H. Curtiss' biplane was substituted. Then at 7:36 Hamilton got away, flying high through the fog straight across New York bay toward Elizabeth. There the New York Times special train was picked up and a race was begun such as New Jersey had never witnessed before. Amid screeching whistles and cheering crowds that lined the Pennsylvania tracks all the way between the two great cities the bird man and the flying locomotive made their way. The run down was exactly on schedule time, occupying one hour and fifty minutes. At Philadelphia letters were delivered from Governor Hughes to Governor Stuart, from Mayor Gaynor to Mayor Reyburn and from the New York Times to the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and answers were taken by the aviator to be delivered at the end of the return flight. On the way up the special train was delayed, but overtook the aeroplane by running part of the time at eighty miles an hour. At South Amboy Hamilton was compelled to alight because of a cracked spark plug, mistaking a swamp for a meadow and breaking another propeller. Repairs were made, and the flight across New York bay was continued in the dusk of the evening. It was the writer's privilege to witness the finish, and as the strange new craft emerged from the mists and flew straight across the water until taking the long glide to the landing on Governors island he felt that he had been permitted to look upon the dim beginnings of a new age.

To Put America In the Lead.

It is possible, of course, that not all of these other projected flights will take place, but enough of them will be pulled off to raise American interest in aviation to fever heat. This is the object of the prizes. With the remarkable aeronautic achievements recently recorded in England and France it was felt that America, which gave birth to the aeroplane, should not lag behind. The proposed contests will put her in the lead, where she belongs. It should be a matter of pride to members of the press that their own craft has been instrumental in bringing these results to pass. Practically all of these prizes have been given directly by newspapers or through their mediumship. It is peculiarly appropriate that the press, which is so distinctively a product of the present age, should thus advance the transportation of the future. If the newspaper stands for anything it is progress, and the aeroplane is about the most progressive thing the hand of man has yet fashioned. It has in it possibilities not only of a new, pleasurable and swift method of travel, but of world peace and world brotherhood.

Future of the Aeroplane.

It is not given to the pioneer to see the multitudes that will follow in his footsteps nor to the discoverer to foretell the nations that will be reared upon his new found domains. Neither is it vouchsafed the inventor to know the future uses or development of the contrivance which he fashions. Gutenberg had no vision of the modern Sunday newspaper, the best seller or the muckraking magazine. Fulton had no prophetic hunch of a Mauretania or a Dreadnought a century after the Clermont paddled her way down the Hudson. George Stephenson had no advance notice of the Twentieth Century limited or the rate bill. Neither is the inventor of the aeroplane gifted with knowledge of what will be made of the toy he has created.

Wilbur Wright, who is perhaps the man entitled to that badge of immortality, is most modest in his predictions and says he believes the chief use of the aeroplane will be for military observations. Glenn H. Curtiss takes an opposite slant and thinks it will be the means of ending war. Who knows what it will be? The wonder is that it has been invented at all, but, having been invented, who shall set limits to what improvements the future man may give to it? Why may it not be as radically and swiftly developed and advanced as the ship, the railroad train or the automobile? In the days of Columbus and his toy sailing vessels the crossing of the Atlantic was a perilous undertaking. Today it is a week's outing with hotel accompaniments. The modern ocean liner defies the waves by its very bulk. Why may not a giant aeroplane find equal stability amid the currents and eddies of the air?

Beginnings of Mighty Things.

The inventor is not necessarily a prophet, nor is it essential that he should be one. It is enough for him to do the trick and let the future take care of itself. The idea is his, but the moment he gives utterance to that idea, whether that expression be in the form of a word or of a machine, it belongs to mankind, and if it be good mankind will use it and improve it to the uttermost. The aeroplane now belongs to the human race, and that the human race is about to do marvelous things with it is attested by this very fever of prize giving for cross country flights. With all due respect, it is not for Mr. Wilbur Wright to deny the future greatness of his own invention. Imagination is a necessary part of the world's mental equipment. While it may go beyond the mark, it as often falls lamentably short of it. As no one in Franklin's day could even guess the coming wonders of electricity, so no one now living perhaps has the faintest conception of what the invention of the aeroplane means to the future of humanity. Leave us our imaginations, for few things in this matter of fact world have so appealed to them as the feats of these man birds. We have a right to feel that we are in the beginnings of mighty things.

America saw Franklin fly his kite, Hudson navigate his first steamboat, Morse send his first message and Edison light his first electric bulb. America likewise is to see these aeroplane contests on courses that spread out like a spider's web from her metropolis. They cannot be less than epoch making. The inventive genius of the country was never more alive than now. Stimulated as these races must stimulate it, the improvements it will give to the aeroplane should be as remarkable as the invention itself. The first forms of all machines are crude. With the start that has been made and with the whole country—and the whole world as well—at work solving the problem of aerial travel, the revolution should be accomplished in a lifetime. Even if Wilbur Wright will not dream day dreams, there is nothing to prevent the rest of us from doing it.

Three Big Races Assured.

September has been named for some of these races, and all of them that materialize probably will take place during the present summer or autumn. The one now most talked of is that from Chicago to New York, which the Wright brothers have pronounced entirely feasible and which they and many other famous aviators, including Curtiss and Hamilton, have promised to enter either in person or with their machines.

It will be a memorable day when a flock of aeroplanes shall fly from New York to Chicago or from New York to St. Louis. It is possible that the courses will be set in the opposite direction, as Orville Wright has suggested that the prevailing winds are from the west. But whether the starting points are the western cities or the eastern one it is a certainty that at least these two great contests will take place. In addition to the Wrights, Curtiss and Hamilton, the veteran Baldwin has said that he will enter with his "red devil," as will also Harmon, Mars and many more. Some may fall by the wayside, but it is a certainty that others will go through. A French aeroplane has already gone 105 miles at one flight, carrying the aviator and two passengers and taking photographs on the way. America cannot be left behind in a contest involving the use of her own invention. The New York-Washington event is also assured, and a host of others will follow. These contests will place the entire nation truly in the beginning of the flying age.

WOMAN DISCOVERED RADIUM.

Mme. Curie, Polish Scientist, Noted For Brain and Brilliance.

The supreme distinction of being recognized as the most brilliant intellectual woman of her race belongs to Mme. Curie. This Polish scientist, who married the French savant Professor Curie of the Sorbonne, in Paris, has in her early middle age done wonderful things in that mysterious branch of chemistry known as radio-activity.

She shares equally with her late husband and Professor Becquerel the honor of having "isolated" (discovered) that wonderful substance radium, whose possibilities have only now begun to be suspected.

During the past year Mme. Curie again scored a triumph by discovering another rare chemical element, which she has named (patriotic Pole that she is) polonium, a radio-active substance 5,000 times rarer than radium.

Like all true scientists, Mme. Curie is very modest and unassuming. She takes her great honors quietly and without ostentation. Some of her reserve may be due to early influence, for Maria Sklodowska before she met the Frenchman whom she was to marry had always lived in Warsaw under the heel of the Russian boot and before the suspicious eyes of Russian officialdom.

Mme. Curie is an effective lecturer, clear and distinct of utterance and rigidly precise in her methods. She is an essentially womanly woman. Indeed, her way of combining sweet femininity with the precision of exact science is the marvel of all who listen to her fascinating lectures at the Sorbonne.

BRIEFS

September.

Flour and coal are higher.

Showery and overcast today.

New voting lists are being printed.

And now the oyster comes into style again.

Master Osborne Rogers of Hancock street is visiting friends at Kittery, Me.

The Wednesday half holidays are over, and many will have their last Saturday half holiday this week.

The New England Swedish Baptist conference will be held at Bethel Beach, Quincy, on Sunday and Monday.

Eben Stocker has made arrangements for parking automobiles in a field near the Aviation field and boulevard.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. has already discontinued one or two of its summer trains to and from Cape Cod, particularly trains that run on Sundays, Mondays and Saturdays. Special trains will be run on Labor day.

SUICIDE IS IDENTIFIED

Mother of Miss Cavanaugh Had Feared Tragedy For Some Time

Boston, Sept. 1.—The young woman of mystery who was found dead, shot through the heart, in Young's hotel, was identified as Miss Clara E. Cavanaugh of 52 Savin street, Roxbury. Medical Examiner Waters said that it was a clear case of suicide.

Every mark that would be likely to lead to the identity of the dead girl had been carefully removed. The police had worked in various directions to establish the identity of the girl, and had failed. The identification was made by the mother of the victim.

The mother said that Clara had been ill from nervous troubles and that she had feared some such tragedy for some time.

The dead girl was 28 years of age. She lived with her mother and had three sisters and two brothers. The father died a year ago. Miss Cavanaugh was an expert dressmaker. She had also been employed as a saleslady in some of the big stores of the city.

NEWMAN KILLED HIMSELF

Finding of Committee Which Urges Changes at Lyman School

Boston, Sept. 1.—The report of the committee of the house of representatives appointed to look into the death of John Newman, the Cambridge boy said to have committed suicide at the Lyman school at Westboro, but who, his parents claimed, was beaten to death, is made public, the committee reporting in brief:

That corporal punishment should be continued, but that there had been too many whippings.

That detention rooms should be abolished.

That the board of trustees of the Lyman school and the industrial school for boys at Shirley be abolished and a new board to manage the reformatory institutions of the state be appointed.

That taking the Lyman school all in all "much credit" is due it.

SPOOKS HOLD NIGHT REVELS

Weird Sounds Are Heard In an Ancient Grist Mill

BUILDING TO BE DESTROYED

Automobile Parties Go Miles Out of Their Way Rather Than Pass by It Late at Night—Young Farmer Who Intruded on Ghostly Revel Emerged a Raving Maniac and Remained So Until His Death

Wilburthas, N. J., Sept. 1.—Superstition, which peoples the ancient structure with mysterious and terrifying occupants, who weep, wail, laugh wierdly, dance and even fight at different times, threatens the further existence of one of the oldest buildings in New Jersey.

Situated near this place, the structure is a deserted colonial grist mill, standing near a macadam road much frequented by automobilists. Historical societies and persons interested in the preservation of the acient landmarks are trying to save the old mill, but it is likely that it will be torn down within a few days.

The reputation of the place as being haunted is not confined to the residents of the neighborhood. Persons who have passed the scene at night in automobiles have told strange stories of grewsome sights and sounds as they passed by the old building. Some of those who have had the experience once now go miles out of their way rather than pass by it late at night.

Among the countless legends which have clustered about the "haunted mill" is one concerning a young man of the neighborhood who went to investigate the place alone about fifteen years ago. The mill, even at that time, had acquired a doubtful reputation and the young man, a farmer, said he was determined to find out for himself just what was inside. He went in, but no one but him ever knew what he saw, for he was a raving maniac when he emerged from the old grist mill and he remained in that condition until his death.

The tradition upon which the reputation of the "haunted mill" as a resort for unearthly visitors is based tells the story of a young man who lured his betrothed into the building, more than half a century ago. They were to be married the next day. According to the story, the youth slew the girl and afterward took his own life.

Stories are told how at least four other persons have committed suicide in the old mill, and how two or three other persons have been murdered there.

Such is the ill-repute of the mill that even if the municipal authorities decide to tear it down, it is expected to be extremely difficult to get men to do the work.

MAINE'S LOVE FOR REED

Finds Visible Expression In Unveiling of His Monument

Portland, Me., Sept. 1.—The monument which will perpetuate the memory of Thomas Brackett Reed long after all of the present generation will be gone was unveiled on the Western Promenade in this city. Reed was for many years the representative of this district in congress.

In the course of his review of the life of Reed, Congressman McCall, the orator of the occasion, told why he had retired from public life at the height of his power. McCall said:

"Just at the end of his public career a new set of issues were coming forward. He was opposed to the annexation of the Sandwich islands. He was equally opposed to the Spanish war, and used the power of his office, so far as he properly could, to prevent both the annexation and the war.

"Long before the Philippines appeared upon our horizon, he declared in a speech in the house, 'that the best government of which a people is capable is a government which they establish for themselves.'"

TO RETURN TO MINT

Former Director Roberts Appointed to Succeed Andrew

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 1.—Within a day or two, announcement will be made of the appointment of George E. Roberts of Chicago, to be director of the mint to succeed A. P. Andrew, who was promoted to be assistant secretary of the treasury.

Mr. Roberts was director of the mint for a number of years under the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, and achieved a high reputation as a financier. Two years ago Roberts resigned his position in the treasury to become president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago.

The tender of the office of director of the mint was made by President Taft to Roberts about two weeks ago and he has accepted.

Conductor Crushed to Death

Turner, Me., Sept. 1.—Ellis Cole, 24 years old, a conductor of a freight car on an electric railroad, was crushed to death between two cars while coupling them on a turnout here.

TARS CRAZED BY BAD LIQUOR

Admiral Evans Has Poor Opinion of the Maine Law

POISON IS EASILY SECURED

Would Rather Take His Men to Any Part of the World Than Maine—Oceans of Intoxicating Stuff Obtainable at Any Pine Tree State Coast Ports—Prohibition Law Never Enforced, He Says

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 1.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, who is spending the summer here, disapproves of the Maine prohibitory law. He says it does not prohibit, and that the quality of whisky served in defiance of the law is atrocious.

"I am reluctant to say anything about the laws of Maine," said Evans. "I do not want to talk about laws of states other than my own without first making a thorough investigation and inquiry.

"But I will say this honestly and fearlessly and as one who is sure of his ground—I have had more trouble in the direction of my sailors getting drunk in the ports of Maine than I have had with my men while at any other port in the world.

"I have gone ashore with a boatload of men in Portland, and when they returned to the boat, in a surprisingly short time, they, my own sailors, did not know me. As far as the liquor question is concerned I would rather take my men anywhere in the world than bring them to Maine.

"I do not believe in a prohibitory law unenforced, and I have never yet seen it enforced in Maine. I have found by experience that my men could always get whisky in Maine. No, not whisky, for it is always poison, and for the most part wood alcohol. I know that my men, on shore liberty, would easily find the most impossible and abhorrent dives and there obtain their obnoxious concoctions, worse, much worse, than liquor. It made them, always, not so much drunk as crazy. I do not believe in a law that works like that.

"In New York my sailors go to places to get liquor, too. No law will stop them from looking for it, any more than the law of Maine has so far prohibited their finding it. Yes, in New York they look for it too, and, of course, find it. But it is not poison; it is real whisky. And if they are imposed upon in the quality of goods they know it, on the instant, and go where they can get what they want. I say that this condition is better than the condition in Maine.

"Theory aside, it requires a very short experience such as I had with my men and much shore liberty to demonstrate most practically and tellingly that oceans of intoxicating liquors are obtainable in Maine coast ports, and that the effect of this liquor on men is infinitely worse than is the effect of liquor obtained elsewhere.

MANIAC INJURES FOUR MEN

Runs Amuck With an Iron Bar While Returning From Work

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 1.—Armed with a heavy iron bar, Fred S. Stanley attacked and painfully injured four men on Lynn common late yesterday afternoon.

Stanley, who was temporarily deranged, also chased a party of women with his weapon, and Mrs. Elizabeth Flaherty narrowly escaped a blow on the head as the maniac swung his vicious weapon.

After a terrific struggle, in which a half dozen citizens assisted Policeman Doherty, the insane man was finally overpowered.

Stanley, who is 35 years of age, was walking toward his home from his work at the General Electric storerooms, when he suddenly grabbed for an iron bar which George E. Ryan held in his hand close to the fountain on the common. With the bar Stanley atttacked everybody within reach until he was overpowered.

THREATS ARE UNHEEDED

Copper Magnate Heinze Makes Actress Henderson His Wife

New York, Sept. 1.—F. A. Heinze, the copper magnate, and Bernice G. Henderson, an actress, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Harry F. Hambel in his apartments at Brooklyn.

Mr. Heinze made the arrangements for the wedding over the telephone and told Hambel that he was anxious that there be "as little fuss as possible."

When Heinze appeared at the minister's house he did not seem to be worried over Mrs. L. H. French's threat that she "would follow him to the ends of the world and get a fair deal."

No Cholera In Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 1.—It is officially announced that the medical authorities have established definitely by bacterlological examination that no case of cholera exists in this city. The nine suspected cases have been diagnosed as other maladies.

THREE WAITERS DROWN

Sink In Deep Water and Bodies May Never Be Recovered

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 31.—Beverly and Salem police have abandoned hope of recovering the bodies of the three Casino waiters drowned yesterday, because of the great depth of water off Mystery island has made grappling impossible.

The three men were drowned when they attempted to change seats in a boat. They were half way between the Beverly Farms shore and Mystery island.

They were Arnold Surdez, Alexander Lossi and Leonard St. Pierre. In company with Marcelle Cantalope they were out rowing when the craft was overturned.

Cantalope managed to hold on to the overturned craft for some time and was rescued by a fishing sloop. The ages of the men drowned ranged from 20 to 24 years.

SPEARS POTATO BUGS

New Kind of Beetle Makes Its Appearance at Uxbridge

Uxbridge, Mass., Sept. 1.—Stephen Goldthwaite, chairman of the assessors, has found another potato bug destroyer in his potato patch at his home. Like the destroyer he found two months ago, the beetle yesterday had a young potato bug impaled on his spear point, the potato bug being dead.

This is the third case he has discovered this season, and he believes that the new beetle makes a business of killing potato bug larvae.

The killer is about half the size of a full grown potato bug. The bug has six legs. Besides the spear arrangement, which is out of sight nearly all the time, it has two long antennae or feelers.

CHOLERA IN BERLIN

Ten Suspected Cases In City Proper and Five In a Suburb

Berlin, Aug. 31.—Fifteen cases of cholera have been discovered in Berlin and the suburb of Spandau. Three new cases of supposed cholera were found in Spandau in different neighborhoods. The total number of suspected cases in Spandau is now five, one of which terminated fatally.

Ten suspected cases of cholera were discovered in Berlin Tuesday. In the northern part of the city a man is dead.

"SUNDOWN" DOCTORS ONLY.

Found Only Among Government Employees at Washington.

"Sundown doctors" are an institution peculiar to Washington. They are physicians who practice their profession only after sundown.

From 9 in the morning until half past 4 o'clock in the afternoon they are holding down desks in various departments of the federal government. When their daily task for Uncle Sam is done they take up that pertaining to their profession.

There are many sundown doctors in the employ of the government at Washington. In many cases medical students with little means secure clerkships in the departments in order that they may provide themselves with a living while they are finishing their medical courses.

Their diplomas thus laboriously acquired, they enter tentatively upon the practice of medicine, holding on, however, to their government jobs until they shall be firmly established professionally.

Nor are all sundown doctors mere clerks. Not a few of them hold chiefships of divisions, a circumstance which, of course, renders the act of resignation from the government service a still more unlikely event than in the case of a simple clerk. No matter how earnestly a sundown doctor may tell himself that some day he will quit the departmental service to engage exclusively in the practice of his profession, he generally deceives himself.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment,

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Quincy evidence proves this statement.

Mrs. F. Burke, 143 Quincy street, Quincy Mass., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills to be an excellent remedy for kidney trouble. I used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have my highest recommendation."

JOSEPH H. CHOATE

Lawyer Is Charged With Dishonoring Profession

AN ATTACK ON CHOATE

Petition to Have Him Expelled From American Bar Association

Chattanooga, Sept. 1.—Charges that Joseph H. Choate of New York, former ambassador from the United States to Great Briain, has been guilty of the violation of the constitution of the American Bar association in a failure to uphold the honor of the profession of the law, and a petition that he be expelled, were presented to the American Bar association and referred to the committee on grievances.

These charges were filed by James R. Watts of New York, through his attorney, George W. Chamlee of this city, a member of the Bar association. The charges allege neglect, deceit and failure to protect a client's property rights, entailing a loss of between $500,000 and $1,000,000. Choate is also accused of violating professional confidence and to have wrongfully used money.

BREAKS AMERICAN OVER-WATER RECORD

Curtiss Sails Sixty Miles In Airship Over Lake Erie

Cleveland, Sept. 1.—Glenn H. Curtiss established a new record for over-water flying by traveling over Lake Erie from Euclid Beach, nine miles east of this city, to Cedar Point, O., approximately sixty miles distant.

The announced time consumed in the passage was one hour and eighteen minutes. The aviator's own estimate of the time was one hour and nineteen minutes.

His average time was forty-five miles an hour, although one stretch of twenty miles was covered at a rate of a mile a minute.

Curtis used the eight-cylinder fifty horsepower biplane of his own construction in which he made his recent flight down the Hudson river from Albany to New York.

NO STANDARD OIL SIREN

Archbold Says Certain Statements Are a Tissue of Falsehoods

New York, Sept. 1.—John D. Archbold, vice president and director of the Standard Oil company, has given out a formal denial of reports which have been sent out from Boston that a beautiful young woman, whose chief charm is a profusion of titian hair, has been employed by his company to ferret out secrets and thwrat its enemies.

"Standard Oil does not employ red-haired sirens in its business," said Archbold. "These statements are a tissue of falsehoods, ridiculous upon their face and unseemly. I cannot make my denial of these reports too emphatic. There has never been any basis for these absurdities regarding a woman such as is described acting as a secret agent for the Standard Oil company."

YIELDS TO THE POPE

Sillon Society Will Dissolve, but Leader Will Continue In the Work

Paris, Sept. 1.—Marc Sangier, the head of the French Catholic Sillon society, the dissolution and reorganization of which was ordered by the pope, has written a letter of complete submission to the pope, saying that the work for popular education of the 500 branches will be turned over to the Episcopate.

Sangier adds, however, that he regrets the decision of the Vatican, as it gives the impression that the church is opposed to democracy, and announces that he will personally continue a democratic propaganda.

Taft Lays Y. M. C. A. Cornerstone

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 1.—President Taft laid the cornerstone of the new $100,000 Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon. He was the first contributor to the fund for the new building, subscribing $100 last summer.

FRESH AIR APOSTLE IS CHICAGO'S SAVIOR

THE Lincoln park zoo in Chicago was a hotbed of tuberculosis a few years ago. Lions, tigers, reindeer, pythons, buffaloes, ostriches—no species of animal seemed immune. But the monkey house was the center of trouble. Here there were practically only two causes of death—violence, for monkeys are great fighters, and tuberculosis, says McClure's Magazine.

Dr. William A. Evans, pathologist of the zoo, performed an autopsy on every animal that died. There were fifty or sixty deaths a year, and 80 per cent of these were from tuberculosis. When appealed to Cy De Vry, the superintendent, called Dr. Evans' attention to the fact that so far as circumstances would permit they faced conditions of temperature as in their wild states.

He had found that the average temperature in monkey countries was 85 degrees F. The zoo monkey got that out of doors in summer. When winter came they were taken inside, steam heat was turned on and their quarters kept at about 85 degrees.

Cold Air Doctrine Tried.

The next fall the zoo purchased its usual consignment of monkeys, most of them fresh from the tropics and in good condition. As usual, though, five had been in this country long enough to become sad and mangy specimens, having practically no hair and with skin drawn tightly around their bones—feeble, timid and feverish.

At Dr. Evans' suggestion these were placed aside as safe subjects for experiment, and as the winter came on they were kept in a place where they were constantly exposed to its chilling drafts. A thatched shelter was provided into which they could retrent when the weather became too icy, but no artificial heat was supplied.

With the gradual approach of winter the monkeys showed as natural an inclination for the cold, open air as their healthy brothers did for the hot drafts inside the monkey house. Presently there appeared upon their emaciated bodies a faint sprouting of hair, which grew thicker as the weather became more severe. Before the winter was over all of them had thick brown furry coats; their muscles had grown large and strong; they ate eagerly and manifested an increased desire for the favorite simian pastime—fighting.

But the twenty monkeys that had entered the steam heated monkey house in splendid physical condition had not fared so well. By spring not a single one was alive—all had died of tuberculosis.

The five outdoor animals, however, never showed the slightest trace of the disease. And two of them are still living, strong, healthy, active and ferocious, though the cold air experiment was made five years ago. Of the other three one broke its back in a fall, one died in giving birth to young, and the third succumbed to paralysis.

Cy De Vry at once revised his philosophy of animal hygiene; he recognized that the point was not to make the climate adaptable to your animal, but to make your animal adapt itself to the climate. The Lincoln park zoo, winter and summer, became an open air, cold air zoo. As a result of this reform there is no more tuberculosis in the park. In five years there has not been a single death from this disease.

People Also Thrive.

Events soon gave this same Dr. Evans a large measure of influence over health conditions in Chicago. When Mayor Busse came into office in January, 1907, his greatest problem was the selecting of a health commissioner. When he declared that he would appoint any man whom the medical profession should select a big committee of Chicago doctors unanimously decided on Dr. Evans.

In an investigation early in his term Dr. Evans showed precisely the kind of air that the people of Chicago were breathing. The laboratory experts reported that in one of the largest theaters the air was worse than that in English prison cells. In the street cars the passengers were breathing, along with minimum quantities of oxygen, microscopic particles of "soot, sand, hair, starch, wool from clothing" and other materials. This description, of course, fits most American cities.

Hygienists divide the contagious diseases chiefly into three classes as being caused by one of three things—impure water, impure food or impure air. Typhoid is the most important disease of the first class and is caused mainly by drinking impure water. Dysentery is the most important of the second, caused largely by eating impure food, while the diseases most commonly caused by impure air are tuberculosis, pneumonia and bronchitis.

Everywhere modern science has made wonderful progress in combating the diseases caused by bad water and bad food. Take the city of Chicago for example. It built its famous drainage canal and at a stroke cut down its typhoid rate nearly 500 per cent. By the careful inspection of food, especially the babies' milk supply, the dysentery death rate was cut in half. But the story of the impure air diseases is not so reassuring.

When Dr. Evans took charge of the health department these diseases instead of decreasing were increasing. New York, Boston and other American cities had made great progress in subduing tuberculosis. In Chicago the progress was almost inappreciable.

Pneumonia was on the increase. More people were dying of this than of any other disease. In Chicago fifty years ago pneumonia ranked eighth as the most frequent cause of death. By 1907 it was first in rank.

Forced Air In Cars.

Dr. Evans first directed his attention to the street cars. He approached the railroad companies and suggested changes. In all attempts to ventilate street cars he insisted on the recognition of two fundamental principles—some apparatus must be contrived to force the used up warm air out at the top of the car and the fresh, cold air must be introduced at the bottom.

Dr. Evans explained all this to the railroad companies, but they did not readily see the point. He then promptly brought suits, but he did not have to push them far, for as soon as they saw that the health commissioner meant business the corporations agreed to ventilate the cars.

In the roofs of these cars are exhaust appliances which mechanically suck out the used up air in the floors, and under the seats are large intakes into which the outside air constantly pours and after passing over the steam coils rises into the breathing zone. On the coldest days, when the doors and windows are shut tight and when the cars are packed, every passenger has an allotment of 400 cubic feet of outside air an hour.

Then Dr. Evans tackled the schools, went through them and found an astonishing percentage of backward pupils. The thing most responsible for their backwardness was hot, dry air. All air fit for the sustenance of human beings contains a large percentage of water vapor.

The Chicago schools and the public schools in nearly all American cities took this humid air from outdoors and heated it until nearly all the water was squeezed out. The school rooms were thus filled with air the relative humidity of which was only 18, whereas nature's own air contains about 72. The child subjected to such an atmosphere for any length of time becomes kiln dried and unfitted to perform the usual functions of his body, to say nothing of his mind.

As a result of this agitation the Chicago educational system has originated a new verb, "to humidify." The meaning is simple. All hot air before entering the school room is passed through jets of water or of steam. It now picks up its moisture in "humidifying" chambers in the basement instead of in the throats and nasal passages of the children and teachers.

Made Bakeries Sanitary.

Dr. Evans took hold of the underground bakeries and insanitary kitchens, even invading the first class hotels and restaurants. The latter fought him and succeeded in getting the law under which he was working declared unconstitutional. But after a year's struggle Dr. Evans has obtained a new ordinance giving him power to close any bakery having improper lighting, ventilation or general sanitation.

Next he paid his respects to the nickel theaters. Chicago already had devoted some ordinances to the moral side of the moving picture show. As a result of his demand that the 700 or 800 theaters of this sort in Chicago should be adequately ventilated—and the doctor specifies what he means by "adequately"—there is now plenty of breathable air in these places. Laws have been passed recently for the ventilation of department stores, factories, mills, workshops and other establishments of like character.

But the most pressing need is to reach the people in their homes. There is no law requiring the people to open their windows, to sleep out of doors, to let a gale blow through their living rooms several times a day. The only possible recourse was an appeal to public opinion. With this idea Dr. Evans became an agitator, a spellbinder for fresh air. He went actively upon the stump, preaching this new evangel from many platforms.

Great Health Advertiser.

It is almost impossible for the people of Chicago, however much they try, to escape Dr. Evans' advice. The subject is forced upon their attention everywhere. If they go to church, to their lodge, to the theater, they are pretty likely to hear it. In nearly every trolley and elevated car in Chicago warning placards appear: "Dirty air is death." "Fresh air prevents consumption and pneumonia." "Ventilate all the time, winter and summer, day and night." "Too much fresh air is just enough."

That this campaign has affected the daily lives of the people is evident in many ways. Chicago is rapidly becoming a great out of door city. It has organized associations and movements with the sole aim of making Chicago a fresh air town.

When Dr. Evans started preaching these diseases appeared on the debit side of his "sanitary trial balance"—that is, the death rate from them was increasing. At the beginning of the present year Dr. Evans struck another balance, and this time these diseases appeared on the credit side—that is, the death rate from them was decreasing. The gain was a small one, about 9 per cent, but the fact that there was a decrease instead of an increase showed that the preliminary skirmish had been won.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Pineapple Souffle. Melt two ounces of butter in a stew pan, put in three ounces of fine flour, mix with half pint of milk, boil until it thickens; have ready three ounces of pineapple cut small, the same quantity of sugar; put with the cooked mixture, add one by one the yolks of three eggs, then the whites beaten to a stiff froth; make a sauce with one cup of pineapple juice, half cupful of cut pineapple. Cook the pudding three quarters of an hour.

Raspberry Mousse. Over a pint of ripe red raspberries sprinkle a cupful of powdered sugar, and let it stand for two hours and then mash through a sieve. Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatine in half a cupful of cold water, and when it is dissolved mix with the berry juice and set aside to cool. To this add one quart of rich cream whipped to a stiff froth and beat it into the berry mixture. Pour the whole into a mold and pack in salt and ice until set.

Tongue and Jelly. Cook the tongue in slightly salted water until tender, remove the skin, trim off the fat and roots and let it cool. Then cut in thin slices. Make a quart of lemon jelly with one box of gelatine soaked in one cup of cold water, then dissolved in three cups of boiling water, add the juice of four good-sized lemons, two cups of sugar, and strain the mixture into a pitcher; then fill small molds and let it cool. Arrange the tongue on a platter and turn out the jelly for a garnish round the edge.

Soft Cream Cookies. Cream one-half cup of butter and one and one-half cups of sugar, add one cup of slightly sour cream, two beaten eggs and one level teaspoon of soda sifted in two cups of flour. Use enough more flour to make a soft dough. Roll out a small portion at a time, and cut in rounds or better than using a rolling pin, roll small balls lightly, lay on the pan and press out one-third of an inch thick. Use any flavoring or spice preferred.

ROOSEVELT AFTER SPECIAL INTERESTS

Says They Are Not Entitled to Right of Suffrage

Osawatomie, Kan., Sept. 1.—In his speech here Theodore Roosevelt struck out straight from the shoulder at the special interests and urged the enactment of some radical legislation looking to their control.

He declared that the United States is face to face with a crisis as important as that which brought about the Civil war. Points in his speech were:

The true friend of property, the true conservative, is he who insists that property shall be the servant and not the master of commonwealth.

I stand for the square deal. But when I say that I am for the square deal, I mean not merely that I stand for fair play under the present rules of the game, but that I stand for having these rules changed so as to work for a more substantial equality of opportunity and of reward for equally good service.

The constitution guarantees protection to property, and we must make that promise good. But it does not give the right to suffrage to any corporation.

It is my personal belief that the same kind and degree of control and supervision which should be exercised over public service corporations should be extended also to combinations which control necessaries of life, such as meat, oil and coal, or which deal in them on an important scale.

I believe that the officers, and especially the directors, of corporations should be held personally responsible when any corporation breaks the law.

What World's Armies Cost

Brussels, Sept. 1.—The sixteenth interparliamentary conference opened with 800 delegates present. In an address M. Beerhaert, Belgian minister of state, said that the world was living in a regime of armed peace with 14,000,000 men under arms at a cost annually of $1,000,000,000.

—The expert entomologists of the United States department of agriculture have found that there are 7,900 square miles in New England infested with either gypsy or browntail moths or both. The folly of stopping the moth crusade between the years 1900 and 1905 is now apparent.—Medford Mercury.

FORGERY OF CHECK

The Charge Against John Guilford of Gilbert Street

John Guilgord, of 83 Gilbert street, was arrested by Officer Goodhue on Wednesday for forging and uttering a worthless check. The check was drawn on the National Granite Bank and was for $76.98 signed by A. M. Roberts, and made payable to John Guilford. The check was what is known as counter check. That is one that is left on the counter at the banking rooms for convenience of customers.

Wednesday noon Guilford entered the store of the Norfolk Credit Co. on Hancock street, where he had an account ,and offered the check in payment of his account. After some discussion, the proprietor agreed to take the check, give Guilford credit for $16.98 and gave him $60 in money, the balance of the face value of the check. Guilford then indorsed the check and took a receipt for $16.98 and the $60 in money. Guilford said, in response to inquiry, that A. M. Roberts was a granite dealer.

The proprietor becoming a little suspicious decided to call up the bank and find out if A. M. Roberts had an account. The answer came back that they had no customer by that name.

At this Guilford assumed an injured air, and handing back the $60 and receipt, demanded the return of the check saying that he would get it cashed himself.' This the proprietor refused to do and Guilford went out. Officer Goodhue was then notified and Guilford was placed under arrest. In court he was held for the grand jury.

SPORTING NOTES.

Two records were broken on Wednesday at the Readville course, both for three-year-olds.

Arrangements have been completed for the inter-city matinee races at the South Weymouth track on Labor day between the horses of the Old Colony and Brockton Driving Clubs. Two horses will represent each club in the inter-city events, and although half-mile heats have prevailed to date, there is a likelihood that in two of the races at least, the distance of the heats will be placed at one mile.

The McGregor football team will play the Fosse team at Lynn on Saturday, when the league season will open.

• • •

DIVORCED BRIDE'S AGE EIGHT

Abyssinian Record Separation Caused by Intriguing Aunt.

The youngest divorced couple in the world are to be found in the court of Abyssinia. On May 16, 1909, the Princess Romanic Onosk was married to the Prince Lidj Eyassu, the heir apparent, the bride then being eight years of age and the bridegroom fourteen. Now they have been divorced.

It is not a question of fault on either side, no incompatibility of temper, none of the causes which figure so frequently in usual divorce division.

The princess happens to be the niece of the Empress Taitu, and this lady is not popular with the regents of the country. So to prevent the empress exercising any baneful influence upon the future ruler's wife the statesmen have required the prince to divorce her.

—"Family all back from the summer trip?"

"Yes."

"I hear your wife is confined to her room. What does the doctor say?"

"We haven't employed a doctor. The laundress promises to have her out in about four days."—Courier-Journal.

ENGLAND HAS IT BOTTLED UP

Don't Propose that Chili shall Award Contract in America

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company has felt quite confident that it might obtain a contract for a battleship for Chili, but the Monitor prints this dispatch from London:

American and continental shipbuilders who expected to compete for the construction of the new Chilean warships, probably have been frozen out. Chile has invited tenders to be submitted by Sept. 15 for two battleships of 24,000 tons each, capable of a speed of 23 knots.

The plans have been drawn up by Sir Philip Watts, chief naval constructor of British navy, and sepcify that the guns and certain machinery must be of English design and manufacture. The opinion is quite generally expressed here that foreigners would not be likely to arrange terms with English manufacturers which would enable them to compete. The terms of the recent Chilean loan floated by the Rothchilds may have stipulated the advantage to English builders.

The Making of Bead Chains.

All the designs for bead chains seen in the cut are easily made if the following directions are carried out: The first design is a simple chain, and this should be practiced before attempting floral devices. First string four blue beads; tie the end of the silk through the first bead to prevent them slipping off. Hold the work between the finger and thumb on the left hand, then string a blue bead and pass the needle through the third bead from right to left. Take up another bead and pass the needle through the first bead through which the silk is tied. It will be noticed that the beads do not follow in straight lines across, but one up and one down, so that each bead fits into a little gap in the previous row.

SIMPLE AND EFFECTIVE DESIGNS.

The work should now be turned over. String one white bead and pass the needle through the second bead from the edge. String a blue bead and pass the needle through the last bead at the left edge. The work must be turned at the end of each row so that the needle always passes from right to left. Now, for the fourth row string a blue bead and pass the needle through the second bead of the row, which is a blue, then string a white one and pass through the white in the previous row. For the fifth row string a white and pass needle through the white in the fourth row, then a blue and pass through the blue bead on the left edge, when it will be seen that four rows of blue beads are worked and the pattern begun again on the opposite side. Having mastered this design, the other patterns will be quite easy.

A SKY OPEN BEDROOM.

The Roof a Novel and Clever Feature.

"It is built under some big red oaks about ten feet back of a one story cottage near Washington, and it is reached by a little covered passageway from the dressing roof. There is literally nothing to it but a floor and a roof, and the roof is made of glass, so that lying comfortably in bed one can look straight up into the trees and through them to the stars

In constructing our little house we built first four corners of brick—cement could be used—and laid floor joists across to form what carpenters call the plate. It is not necessary to make the corners more than two feet high above the ground, for if the land is well drained there is no danger of the bedrooms being damp.

On the joists is a floor ten feet square, and upon this is built the rough pine frame. The upright 4 by 4 inch corner posts and 2 by 4 inch studs are braced at the bottom by putting in short 2 by 4's crisscross to form a wainscoting three feet high.

The most novel feature of this sky open bedroom is, of course, the roof. There is a little cap of wood extending down about eighteen inches on either side of the ridge, and the roof itself, which is made of ordinary cheap greenhouse sash, starts underneath this and slides up and down on the rafters. In fair weather the roof can be opened, and when it rains one can lie and look up at the raindrops as they strike upon the glass panes, and anything more magnificent than a thunderstorm at night I cannot imagine, with the great oak branches bending and tossing above one's head. Sash cords and simple, inexpensive pulleys are all that are necessary to raise and lower these greenhouse sash, provided the rafters on which they run are well soaped and plenty of play is left between the sash frames and the strips of board which hold them in place.

The wainscoting is covered with unbleached cotton sheeting tacked on inside to a height of three feet from the floor, and this allows free circulation of air, but affords the semi-privacy required and will last for three or four years. The height of this wainscoting is a matter of choice, and if more privacy is desired it could be made higher.

POP AT THE BALL GAME.

He sat at the back of the press box at American League park with his small son. Furthermore he was one of the talkative sort and let the surrounding world get the benefit of what he knew. The small son was being taught to score and he wasn't very keen on it, because pop was bothering him so.

"You start with the pitcher and number them right around," said pop. "The pitcher's 1, the catcher's 2, first base 3, second base 4, short-stop 5, third base 6, right field 7, centre field 8 and left field 9."

Now pop's notation happend not to agree with that of any of the men in the press box. Almost any one knows that the shortstop is 6 and the third baseman 5, while the fielders are numbered from left to right and not the way pop had them. The result was deep cursing every time the short stop got an assist or a putout because pop bellowed out to his small son:

"Write it down, 5-3" when everyone knew it ought to be 6-3.

Son after awhile rebelled:

"I don wanner keep score."

Pop said:

"Go on now. Go on now. You gotter learn, because some day when I bring you up here I'll want to watch the game and let you keep the score. I'm giving up the game for the sake of teaching you today."

But Son got his release about an inning later. One of the New Yorks got up to the bat in the fourth inning.

About every one else in the stand knew it was Moriarty who had taken Stahl's place in left field two innings before when Stahl was put out of the game for objecting to umpire calling him out on strikes.

"Come on, now, hit it out Jake!" vociferated pop, and kept on cheering for Stahl.

One of those in front stood it for a little while, but finally he turned around and remarked:

"Ah, cheese it, that ain't Stahl, you loud-mouth; that's Moriarty."

And pop was so crushed he didn't harry his young son the rest of the game.

BALL PLAYERS TIRE OF ONE JOB

Many Stars Want to Change Regular Berths For Others.

ROGER BRESNAHAN VERSATILE

Manager of St. Louis Nationals Has Held Down Every Position on Team. Other Diamond Cracks Who Like to Work Out of Positions.

The average ball player is a queer individual. Constant appearance in the public gaze, continued work in the profession, the every act of which is the subject of comment of thousands, no doubt tend to bring out the peculiarities which lurk in the disposition of all men. One of the chief things a ball player wants to do is to work out of position. The outfielder wants to pitch, the pitcher to play some base, the catcher to do anything except don the big mitt.

Several players on the St. Louis team are no exception to the rule. Roger Bresnahan is one of the most versatile athletes in the profession. Originally a pitcher, Roger turned to catching. While with New York the strenuous leader played in the outfield with great success. Since assuming the leadership of Camp Cardinal he has played the outfield, as well as second, short and third base. In Brooklyn recently he went in and pitched a fairly good game.

In former years Johnny Lush was played in the outfield, owing to the grand little southpaw's fondness for hitting other pitchers. While with the Philadelphia club John assumed Roy Thomas' place in center any time the Quaker City aggregation was scheduled for Sunday games. He broke up several battles while in the role of foe.

Steve Evans can play first base with very fair success and came into the majors on his recommendations as an initial sacker.

Bob Wallace was a pitcher prior to breaking into the infielding game, and he was sent to third base before he became a shortstop. Bailey was an outfielder down in Texas before Eddie Karger put a dent in his chin, which affected his batting prowess.

Bailey then assumed pitching and has been trying ever since. Dan Hoffman was originally a pitcher, but was so wild and maimed so many ball players that the president of the league persuaded the manager to shift Daniel to the outfield. The reverse was the case with Joe Lake, who was with Newburg, N. Y., and led his league in batting.

Ty Cobb loves to pitch. He goes through the motions of a man preparing to go into the box. Cob can bend 'em some, and nothing delights him more than to curve a ball unexpectedly and have a regular catcher fight it. During the off season he pitches a game occasionally.

The big Detroit catcher, Oscar Stanage, engages in bunting practice. Stanage wears a finger glove and essays fancier stunts than the regular fielders can pull off. He gets behind the regulation catching outfit only when he has to.

Adrian Joss of the Naps aspires to be a first baseman. Day after day he stands at the bag during practice periods and grabs off wild throws and hot grounders. If given a chance Joss would probably be a star at that position.

Overall of the Chicago Cubs would be a catcher, and, as a matter of fact, when right he is a grand catcher. And so it goes all down the line. If you can catch you would rather pitch, and if you can field you aspire to catch.

But there's one thing none of them overlooks—hitting. A man might as well try to tip over a house as crowd his way, out of turn, up to that plate during batting practice.

JAPAN IS TOY CENTER.

More Shops For Children Than Any Other Country.

There is no country in the world where there are so many toyshops as in Japan. In all the towns and in most of the villages there is a children's bazaar, and the neighborhood of the temples is crowded with stalls containing things to amuse children.

At the great religious festivals even the poorest are to be met with their arms full of toys to take home, and the number of men and women who earn a livelihood by interant street shows got up solely to amuse the children can be counted by hundreds.

Bolivian Image Valuable.

In Bolivia there is a vast number of saints, each with its shrine. The most famous of them all is Our Lady of Copacabana, whose image is worth some hundreds of thousands of dollars, the costume being spangled with precious stones. The image wears a crown and in her left arm carries a doll, likewise crowned, supposed to represent the Christ Child. In her right hand is a jeweled scepter, and surrounding her head is a great halo, sympolic of power.

ALL READY FOR AVIATION MEET

Police Arrangements and Entries For Big Meet

Chief of Police Burrell has practically completed his arrangements for the policing of the aviation field during the meet and in looking after the crowds that are sure to attend. In all he will have sixty officers on duty fifty of whom will be in uniform Quincy will have 30 uniformed men on duty and there will be 20 uniformed men from the city of Newton.

In order to avoid any mixup in carriages and automobiles all vehicles going to the field will go via of Madison street. Newbury avenue, Atlantic and Squantum street. Returning vehicles will come via Squantum street, the boulevard, Atlantic and Hancock streets.

Signs will be posted at corners of intersecting streets giving the necessary directions.

Up to the present time 22 airmen have entered for the meet with 17 types of biplanes, besides numerous dirigible, helicopter and kites.

Some of the greatest aviators in the world will take part in the meet which begins tomorrow Saturday.

Among those who visited the field Thursday were C. Graham White, and A. V. Roe the two eminent English aviators who arrived from England that morning, Wilbur Wright, Walter Brookins, Ralph Johnson and Clifford B. Harmon.

The Farnum biplane brought over from England is much larger than the Harmon machine and a large tent will be erected today to accommodate it.

Thursday was a busy day at the field as will also be today as the finishing touches are being put on ready for the meet which opens tomorrow. Everything is practically in readiness for the big event.

Cromwell Dixon who was to go up in his big dirigible Thursday was much disappointed that the weather conditions were against it. He had the balloon in readiness hoping for favorable weather but was obliged to postpone his trip to Boston until today. He proposes to circle the dome of the state house and alight on the common. After a brief stop he will again ascend and fly back to the aviation field.

Following is the list of entries thus far received and the letters that will designate them.

AVIATORS.

Letters, aviator and machine.

WATERWAYS CONVENTION

Many From Quincy in Attendance Today

It loked rather dubious this morning for the excursion of the Board of Trade to the Atlantic Deeper Waterways convention at Providence; but the sun looked out during the morning and the day from the Quincy end looked bright.

Thursday the committee on credentials reported 575 delegates and an estimated attendance of 800. Richmond, Va., was selected as the place for the meeting in 1911. The time was left to that city.

Congressman J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania was selected for his third term as president and was presented with a handsome ivory gavel by the business men's association of Pawtucket.

Nearly 500 new members were pledged and $2600 contributed to the funds of the association.

One of the important matters at Thursday's meeting was the adoption of a set of resolutions outlining the projected chain of protected waterways, explaining its benefits and widespread effects, demanding the construction of this system of waterways at an early date, appealing to New England to stand by the proposition and explaining why it should, stating that only the general apathy of the people has prevented the project from becoming a reality long ago, that the federal government should construct the chain of waterways for coast defence purposes and asking that the internal waterways survey include the coast of Maine.

The Quincy party left home on the 8.05 train and Boston on a special car attached to the 8.40 train and those in the party are promised a day full of pleasure. One of the pleasant features of the program will be the annual outing dinner of the Board of Trade that will be held at Crescent park.

MOCK TRIAL HOUGHS NECK

Finds Able Brown not Guilty Now on Probation

After an unfair and partial trial the biased jury at the mock trial session under the auspices of the Houghs Neck associates found Able Brown not guilty of driving an automobile at 40 miles an hour on the Sea street boulevard and placed him on probation for six years.

The jury room was located in one end of the Casino building and the musical accompayment to the trial was furnished by the pool players in the opposite end of the building and by babbling women and crying babies in the audience.

The warrant charged that Able or "Unable" Brown as he was often called with driving an automobile at an excessive rate of speed. That he paid more attention to his lady passengers than he did to the car and that when opposite the residence of Susie Decker at Calamity corner he did run over and kill one Thomas Gray Cat whose hairs so besmeared the speedometer that it could not be told whether he was going 40 or four miles an hour.

Some difficulty was experienced in impanelling a jury but eventually twelve good and true men were secured and sworn to misjudge whatever testimony might be offered.

Then came the opening charge to the jury in which it was claimed that the vacuum caused by the rapid progress of the automobile had been disfiguring the Hose house building to such an extent that the paint applied

WHAT IS A BUSINESS MAN?

Business means taking things from where they are plentiful to where they are needed. Business means making things that people want.

To be a business man implies that you are orderly, systematic, exact, competent, reliable; that you keep your promises (and expect others to do the same); that you are on time; that you pay your debts; that you set idle men to work, and see that they do the job properly and well.

Business men build factories, towns, railroads they tunnel mountains, drain swamps, dredge rivers, pave streets, construct sewers, supply vast cities with pure water, quick transportation, and a thousand and one conveniences for lubricating the wheels of existence. That is to say, the business man serves humanity, assists in the business of the world and helps himself by helping others.—The Fra. Magazine.

to that building years and years ago had fallen off in places.

Counsel for the defendant in his opening said that Brown was an honest ice dealer. That it was untrue that he sold mouldy ice. That he never owned an automobile but that he did own a two year old colt that was remarkably speedy. That in accordance with its usual practice the City of Quincy had not labeled Calamity corner as dangerous as promised as would be shown by a plan that had been dug from the vault under City Hall.

The first witness was Athie Howe who said that she was Browns best girl. On this occasion her attention had been so taken up admiring the beautiful features of her beau Brown, that she had not noticed the accident. On cross examination she said she did not know what a sparker did to an automobile but she did know what Brown did.

Miss Kittie Cat one of the ladies in the car at the time never saw Brown go so fast as he did on this occasion. On the way down the automobile only hit the high places in the street. Had the car been going slow the riding would have been rougher. Sea street had not seen water for four or five years and was very dusty. It was not safe to wheel a child across the causway as it would get wet.

Miss Pussy Willow was a shy young thing of 14 summers. She was on the rear seat and saw the cat-as-tro-phe, but could add little to what had already been said.

Hardly Able Brown the defendant denied selling ice that had moss on it. He had not sold that kind of ice since they fined him $10 for playing Kelley pool. He was familiar with the streets of Quincy and especially those at Houghs Neck. He denied running over any Thomas Cat.

Bridgebrain Randolph said that he was the Commissioner of Public Works and knew a street when he saw it. When asked when the City Council intended to appropriate that $10,000 for Sea street he said never. That Houghs Neck would get the same old turn down. He was proud of the Hose house.

Isaac S. Argent, City Engineer said the plan for Sea street called for its being widened five inches at Calamity corner.

Medical Examiner Ownes was then called. During the giving of his testimony, Brown the defendant got thirsty and left the desk and after getting a drink of ginger ale in the barber shop started down Sea street. No one seemed to have missed him and the trial went on just as though he was present.

The Medical gave a detailed description of the wounds he had found on the Thomas Cat and that after he had completed his examination the Board of Health had been notified and nothing more had been heard from them.

Then came the charge to the jury by counsel for the government and for the defendant and by the judge. The jury without leaving their seats found the defendant not guilty and recommended he be placed on probation for six months.

By this time most of the spectators had become hungry and thirsty and had gone out for refreshments but there was no let up in the noise made by the pool players, the babbling women and the crying baby.

Some of the personages in the trial were:

Judge—J. E. Johnson.
Clerk—C. L. Southwick.
Stenographer—C. E. Decker.
Court officer—Channing Ryder.
Court Crier—H. C. Darrow.
Counsel for government—Franklin Saylor.
Counsel for Defendant—Henry W. French.
Com. Public Works—Harry Chellman.
City Engineer—H. G. Sturgess.
Medical Examiner—Dr. Von David.
Prisoner—Abel Brown.

The jury were J. W. Webster, Gordon Webster, W. P. Saylor, John Chellman, Dr. Von David, Lloyd Chellman, A. B. Brown.

Shock Recorded In London

London, Sept. 2.—A violent earthquake was recorded by British seismographs here. The first shock was followed by a series of less severe ones lasting for nearly an hour. The disturbance was at a point at a distance computed to be 5800 miles.

Little Ethel surprised cook in the kitchen in the act of skinning a rabbit. Shocked beyond measure, she enquired with mingled pity and indignation in her wide-open eyes—

"Whatever are you doing, cook?"

"I'm dressing the rabbit, Miss Ethel."

The child reflected an instant ,and said, "I should think you were undressing it."

How Man Has Achieved Voyaging by Air Route

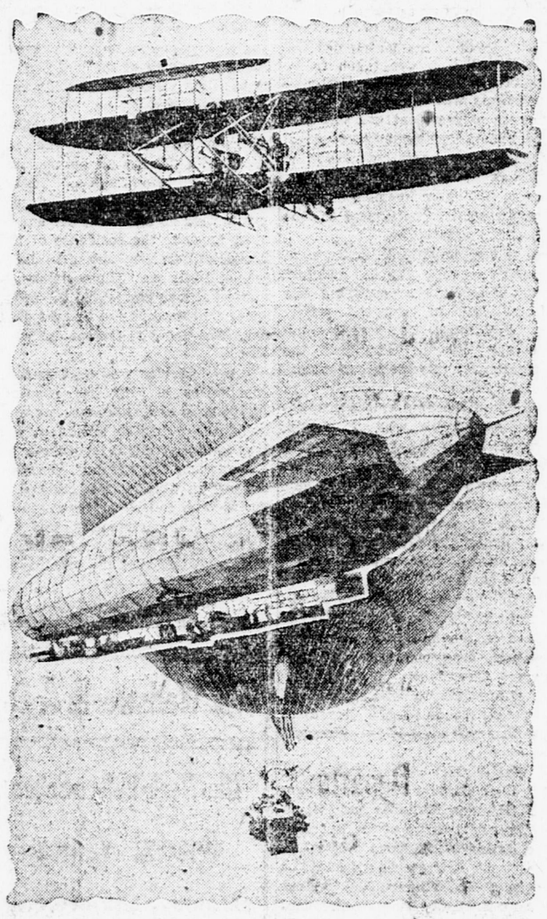

Story of the Conquest of the Sky by Application of the Bird Principle of Aerial Locomotion--The Wrights the Original Aeroplane Boys.

Operation of the Heavier Than Air Machine Described In Detail -- Some of the Startling Stunts of Hamilton and Other Aviators Who Dare.

By J. A. EDGERTON.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

MEN have wanted to fly for several thousand years, and now they are doing it. So strong has been the desire to emulate the housefly and the crow that we have pictured heaven as a place where we should all have wings. If, as Omar says, "heaven is the image of fulfilled desire," then the wish to fly has been the chief want of man. He has dreamed of it in paradise and lived to see it come true on earth. When Charles K. Hamilton over the Mineola field chased a bluebird hither and yon until he had the poor thing scared out of its wits the feat marked a new departure in human history. In these days when we say, "Up, up, thou lark," we can have the proud consciousness that Brother Lark is not the only one who can do the "up" act.

THREE STAGES IN FLIGHT PROGRESS—BALLOON, DIRIGIBLE AIRSHIP AND AEROPLANE.

We can do a little upping and have an aerial lark ourselves—or at least we can if the Wright brothers do not enjoin us.

The Wright brothers are the ones who did the trick. We can abuse them all we want to now, call them dogs in the manger and get peevish on account of their lawsuits and injunctions, but we are bound to admit that they are the original aeroplane boys. Langley and Chanute worked out the theory, but did not make it practical. The Wright brothers by the use of flexible tips to assure equilibrium and of elevation and direction rudders, as well as sustaining planes, motor and propeller, solved the problem of the ages and actually aviated a heavier than air machine. At Kitty Hawk, N. C., in the Daredevil—or is it the Killdevil?—hills, they experimented with gliders until they could slide down a breeze. Then at their home in Dayton, O., they installed a motor and began to fly at night so that nobody would catch them at it.

Strange stories came out of Dayton those days. People were sure the Wrights were flying, but had never seen them do it. The inventive brothers were not yet ready to take the public into their confidence and until they were the dear public might as well go out and lose itself. It is altogether possible that they were then planning to take out these very patents which are now causing so many grouches among other aviators. Until they had perfected their machine and had the patents safe in their inside pockets they were not going to let anybody else steal their ideas. The chief item of their patent was the flexible tips which are used to keep their craft on an even keel. Any one who has watched the buzzard soar has seen him shift and tip his wings to maintain his equilibrium. That is just what the Wright brothers did with the aeroplane. Why should they not patent it? If any invention should be protected from petty larceny, why should not this, which may prove the greatest invention of the ages?

As the aeroplane is now perfected its resemblance to the bird is quite startling. The elevation rudder in front takes the place of the head, and the planes are widespread like the wings, the flexible tips answering to the slant of the wings, the guiding rudder behind acting as the tail. There is one fundamental difference, however. The bird gets its motor power by flapping its wings. Now, man has never discovered how to flap his mechanical wings. The only times he ever tried it ended in disaster. But he has learned to run six cylinder gasoline engines and screw propellers. Thus it is that the aeroplane blows people's hats off, smells like an automobile and buzzes like a swarm of bees. There is one advantage in the propeller, however. It gets speed. It would take a rather husky bird to fly from Albany to New York in one forenoon or to go from New York to Philadelphia and back in one day, yet the aeroplane manages both with seeming ease.

For a century or more the aeronauts confined their attentions to the balloon, finally perfecting the dirigible, which reached its highest standard under Santos-Dumont in France and Count Zeppelin in Germany. The aeroplane is an American invention. Since its advent the balloon, dirigible or otherwise, has become a back number. The gas bag, which rises on the same principle as does a bubble in water, may be all right for county fairs, but for real air travel it is out of it, passe and a has-been.

The mechanical arrangement of the aeroplane is simplicity itself. For example, take the machine used by Glenn H. Curtiss in his flight from Albany to New York, a distance of 150 miles. The same principles are involved in this as in the Wright biplane, as evidenced by the suit of the Wright brothers against Curtiss for infringement of patent. The two sustaining planes of the Curtiss machine are thirty feet from tip to tip and four feet apart. The seat of the operator and the engine are situated between these planes, the screw propeller being just behind the engine. The steering wheel is immediately in front of the operator and controls both the elevation planes, which are ahead, and the steering rudder in the rear. The elevation planes are controlled by a backward and forward motion of the wheel, the steering rudder by a turn of the wheel, as on a ship or an automobile. The equilibrium planes are at the ends of the main sustaining planes and are controlled by a movement of the operator's body, which also moves the back of his seat, which in turn is connected with the planes by means of wires. The same motion that tilts one of these planes downward tips the other upward. Thus if the operator feels the left end of his machine dropping he leans to the right, which is the natural movement for him to make. This motion carries with it the back of his seat, which tips the left hand equilibrium plane upward and the right hand one downward, thus restoring balance. For shutting off the engine he presses a foot pedal, which short circuits it; otherwise the engine is controlled by levers at his hand.

We're Off!

After starting the motor the operator takes his seat, attendants in the meantime hanging on to the machine until given the word to let go. Then the aeroplane starts forward on its three wheels until it gains sufficient momentum to take the air. By pulling the steering wheel toward him the operator lifts the elevation planes, the machine shoots upward, and the journey is begun. After that it is a matter of guiding, finding the proper elevation and keeping an even keel. When ready to alight the operator chooses his landing, which must be an open level field, shuts off his engine, turns his elevation planes downward and goes earthward with a swiftness which takes the breath of the groundlings below. At the proper distance from terra firma he elevates his planes sharply, which serves both to check the motion and break the descent. The result is that he glides forward and lights as gently as a bird.

At the Mineola field on Long Island Charles K. Hamilton in a Curtiss biplane recently did some surprising stunts. Cutting figure eights in the air were among his most commonplace performances. One of his most daredevil feats was stopping his engine at a great height and dropping to the earth. When it seemed that he would be dashed to certain death he would start his engine again, elevate his planes and glide away. He would also swoop down to within a few feet of the heads of spectators, causing them to scatter in all directions, then rise again and sweep away until he was like a bird on the distant horizon. He habitually smokes a cigarette on his machine. Despite his pranks he did not suffer an accident at Mineola.

A Few Aeroplane Thrillers.

Since the first public exhibition by the Wrights the aeroplane has made marked advance and accomplished many thrilling feats. In France Wilbur Wright had the kings and notables of the world his eager spectators. Afterward Orville Wright at Fort Myer fulfilled all the government requirements, making a straightaway flight to Alexandria and return without alighting, also breaking the record by remaining in the air with a passenger for more than an hour. Later in Germany Orville repeated the triumphs of Wilbur in France, making at one time a 1,600 foot ascension, the highest up to that time. Another notable aeroplane feat by the Wright brothers was Wilbur's circling of the statue of Liberty and Grant's tomb during the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York.

Of late the Wrights have settled down to manufacturing and training operators. They never did fly in prize contests. Their whole purpose now is to protect their patents and perfect the aeroplane as a commercial proposition.

Their dropping of the thrill making line has not been followed by other aviators, however. Count that month lost that does not break some aviation record. Louis Blerlot's feat of crossing the English channel was afterward beaten by another Frenchman, who went over in shorter time, and this in turn was cast in the shade by the Englishman Rolls, who, in a Wright biplane, crossed the channel and back without alighting. Louis Paulhan has made some of the most wonderful of all the flights recorded, going from London to Manchester, a distance of 186 miles, covering 117 miles without alighting, in 2 hours and 50 minutes. Paulhan also reached the highest altitude attained by an aeroplane, 4,165 feet, at Los Angeles. At Rheims, France, Henri Farman remained in the air 4 hours, 6 minutes and 25 seconds. Glenn H. Curtiss' two most notable flights were his winning of the speed prize at Rheims and his recent trip from Albany to New York.

All these aviators and others who as yet have not succeeded in flying into the universal limelight are willing and waiting for opportunities to break other world records in aviation.

What they may be able to accomplish in the days to come is not for us to forecast.

QUINCY'S NEW PHONE RATES

Measured Service the best for Quincy Subscribers

Much uncertainty regarding the new telephone rates exists in Quincy. To make the matter clearer the following summary of the scope and effect of the new schedule has been secured from an authentic source. The Quincy district, within which unlimited, flat rate busines and residence service may be had without extra charge, includes Braintree, Dorchester, Quincy and Weymouth.

The rate in Quincy for a single party, unlimited, business line will be $60 a year; a two party unlimited business line, $54; a single party unlimited residence line, $36; a two party, unlimited residence line, $27. Subscribers to this class of service can telephone as many times as they desire within the Quincy district named above without payment of tolls.

To exchanges outside of the Quincy district, and within 8 miles of the Quincy central office, there will be a toll charge of 5 cents, and an additional charge of 5 cents for each additional eight miles or fraction thereof.

The exchanges within the 8-mile 5-cent radius of the Quincy central office, including adjoining exchanges, follow: Braintree, Dorchester, Hingham, Hull, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Milton, Quincy, Randolph (including Holbrook) Roxbury, South Boston, Weymouth and the seven Metropolitan exchanges including Back Bay, Fort Hill, Haymarket, Main, Oxford, Richmond and Tremont.

Under the new rates, measured service is sure to prove attractive to Quincy subscribers. In Quincy the rates for measured service follows:

Single party, business 840 calls, $42, additional calls 3 cents each; two party business 660 calls, $33, additional calls 3 cents each; single party residence 840 calls, $42 additional calls 3 cents each; two party, residence 480 calls, $24 additional calls 3 cents each.

To illustrate a Quincy subscriber elects to take the measured service contract giving 480 calls for $24. These 480 calls may be used in the Quincy district or to any of the 19 exchanges enumerated within the 8 mile radius.

If more than the 480 calls were used during a year all additional calls within the Quincy district would be charged for at 3 cent each, while those outside the district, but within the 8 mile radius would be charged for at 5 cents each.

All other classes of measured service have the privilege of using the number of calls contracted for to any of the exchanges already mentioned as being within the 8 mile toll ardius.

The new rates for coin boxes are: Special guaranty of $60 per year; four party business, four party residence, $21 per year. The present rates are: $30 a year for business, and $24 a year for residence telephones, but on all calls outside of Quincy the charge is 10 cents.

Under the new schedule all calls from coin boxes to any of the exchanges within the 8 mile radius will be 5 cents, and not only these receipts but all toll charges to other exchanges in the Boston and Suburban district will be applied to make up the monthly guaranty of $5.00 or $2.50 per month for business telephones, and $1.75 for residence telephone.

CHILD THIEVES.

Stealing by Children Under Sixteen—Who Will Become a Public Benefactor by Devising Laws to Protect Property?

If a house-to-house canvass were made, of those owning and occupying homes in the suburbs of Boston, whose property has been stolen, damaged or destroyed, there would be found great unanimity in opinion that the boys and girls of our smaller cities and towns are permitted to continue their thieving and destruction by parents; that the masters and teachers in the schools attended by them are silent on the subject; that the police pay no heed to any demands against juveniles; that the juvenile courts are managed so as to shield these young people from adequate punishment. The boldness, fearlessness, and persistency of these young thieves is amazing! Many accounts of their deliberate raids in broad daylight, with the property owners looking on, and expostulating, are given. These young depredators are thoroughly versed in the present law. They know how far any complaint may go towards stopping their nefarious work; they actually stand and argue the case, often with the property stolen in their hands, pockets or receptacles brought with them. They tell you how little good any complaint will do and what will happen to the owner of the property of he "assault" or "restrain them of their liberty." If they take to their heels, through any fear that the aggrieved owner may reap summary vengeance upon them, it is only to disappear in one direction and return in another, or to come back from the some direction as soon as the coast is clear. Few persons are financially able to hire a special guard for their fruit and flowers. The men of the family are away during the day, and protesting women are objects of scorn and ridicule. A gang of these children were seen leaving a garden which was protected by a fence, with their arms filled with roses, not one having been left upon the bushes for the use of the unhappy owner; all this was within one hundred feet of the street and two miles from the heart of Boston. A house recently repaired, painted and occupied, opposite a schoolhouse, was found chalked over by the school children with the vilest kind of language, not once, but again and again. A poor woman owning a few pear trees, from which she derived a little profit and great pleasure, was compelled to have them cut down because all the fruit was stolen, and for fear that the missiles hurled at the trees might break her windows and do her bodily harm. A lady sitting upon her piazza within twenty feet of a cherry tree, hired a boy to pick the cherries; a couple of boys, at least fifteen years of age, drove up to the steps, spoke to the lad in the tree, asking him to come down a minute that they might make an inquiry ,and upon his complying with the request, they seized his basket of cherries, jumped into the team and made off. A boy of thirteen being caught in a tree stealing fruit and handed over to an officer, was permitted to go at large, with the admonition, "Don't let me catch you doing that thing again." The police when appealed to for protection in this matter, pay no heed ,they patrol their beats and ring in their boxes in the usual manner. A boy or girl thief is beneath their notice; it is not that class of thief or law-breaker who interests them, but an adult thief or law-breaker. The police know that juvenile courts protect miscreants under sixteen. Complaints like this are constant, insistent, and in many cases pathetic. There seems to be no redress. To lay hands on these juveniles is unlawful. What is left for the unfortunate owner of property to do? Nothing but to continue to see his property destroyed, or to cut down his trees, lay waste his gardens, and permit the mutilation and disfigurement of his houses.

Is not this a deplorable state of affairs in a "law abiding" country? It is a free country in one sense, free to those who, owning nothing, help themselves to anything in sight. The wonder is at the patience, one might almost say the stupidity, of the public.

If the laws are made by the people; if the officials who enforce them are elected by the people, why then do not the people see that such laws are made and enforced as shall protect their rights of ownership and proprietorship? Is it a wonder that men rob orchards, hen houses, that anything left on the premises of the owner is stolen ,that houses are entered, that copper and lead, etc., are cut out and carried off, that apartments are ransacked and every article of value appropriated by thieves; that our prisons are overrun and public safety menaced, when children and youth are allowed to commit crimes on a smaller scale. They begin by stealing flowers and fruit, and becoming bolder help themselves to vegetables, poultry, etc., ending by taking things of greater value, finally landing in a felon's cell.

Where is the fear, which is the beginning of wisdom, in the hearts of parents for their children? If a child is known to be in possession of a flower taken without leave, or fruit which does not belong to him, the parent should see that the child returns it to its rightful owner, punishing it upon a recurrence of such act. They should teach the child that stealing is a crime.

What about preaching on "Thou Shalt Not Steal," from our pulpits and of clergymen with children of their own exemplifying their exhortations by training their children to let other people's property alone? What of the lessons in Sunday school and in the day schools, where respect for the law of the land should find its first and greatest exposition? When these things fail, the courts should step in and show the delinquent that he will be punished if he steals. It is doubtful kindness which permits a child to attain the age of sixteen before he can be made to understand that he cannot take the property of another and go free.

The question under discussion is a very serious one, for the lessons taught our children are the guiding influences in their later years ,and no amount of sorrow, or regret, can wipe out the fault of the parent, guardian, teacher, or law court, which permits these evils to go on. What of the foreign element pouring into our country? If the influx of ignorant and lawless population is one day to represent the citizenship of these United States, the sooner we teach the children and youth the first principles of good government, that of respect for the rights of others, the sooner we will lay a solid foundation upon which to build our national liberty. There can be no liberty of government, or individual, which does not respect, and protect ,the rights of each.—Mme. Marie Guion in the Boston Courier.

—The number of aviators who in falling with their aeroplanes have been spared serious injury by landing in the sea, from which they and their "wings" have been fished out, makes it seem advisable to construct the heavier-than-air machines of a material that is still lighter than water—C. SARAH JOSEPH IS RESCUED

Taken From Shipwrecked Party of Holy Ghosters

CURSE SHOUTED AFTER HER

Girl Who Appeared Dazed When Before Boston Court Declared by Clergyman to Have Been Under Hypnotic Influence—Escape May Mean One of Closing Chapters of Sandford's Career

Yarmouth, N. S., Sept. 2.—Sarah Joseph, the Syrian girl who for seven years has been a member of "Elijah" Sandford's Holy Ghost and Us society, has been rescued by her brother from the shipwrecked party of Holy Ghosters on the barren shores of Mud Island off the Nova Scotia coast, and is on her way to Boston.

When the girl left them the Holy Ghosters became almost insane with rage. They heaped the vilest insults upon her, and shouted after her the dreadful "God's curse" of the Sandfordites.

Her rescue was sensational. As she left the bleak shores of the island, where those who were taken from the Kingdom had been housed in lobster huts, Elders Perry and Whittaker, the last named the husband of Mrs. Florence Whittaker, who herself was rescued in Portland in June, made every effort to change her decision.

Sarah Joseph was taken from the barkentine Kingdom in Boston harbor on July 10 of this year on a writ of habeas corpus. This writ was issued by Judge Sheldon to Rev. N. H. Harriman of Boston, who was formerly a member of the Holy Ghost and Us society. Harriman declared that the Joseph girl was under a hypnotic spell, and was being detained against her will aboard the Kingdom.

Before the judge she at first seemed dazed, and could not make coherent answers to the questions which were put to her. Finally she declared that she wished to return to the vessel.

Judge Sheldon was obliged to dismiss the writ; but Harriman declared that the girl was hypnotized, and either could not or did not make a stand for the freedom which she had previously declared that she wanted.

She is 23 years old, and has been under the control of the Holy Ghost and Us society since 1904.

Her escape is believed to be one of the closing chapters of Sandford's career. He is not with his flock, but is in hiding and he has shown that he dares not return to Maine and to Shiloh for fear of arrest and the service of civil suits for heavy damages. Any attempt to live up to their faith on the part of his followers will be combated by Nova Scotia authorities, and many now see the end of a remarkable religion and of the power of a remarkable man.

The Kingdom is in Yarmouth harbor, having been hauled off the treacherous rocks of Big Mud island. The repairs on the barkentine will cost at least $1000 and where this amount will come from is a question.

A DEMOCRATIC BISHOP

Not Too Proud to Smoke His Black Clay Pipe In Public

Boston, Sept. 2.—With his unusually tall silk hat fastened with an elastic band under his chin, Rt. Rev. Lord Archibald E. Campbell, in black frock coat and leggins, was a picturesque figure as he strolled the deck of the Cymric smoking a black clay pipe.

Despite his elevated ecclesiastical position and the fact that he is a member of the house of lords, the lord bishop, because of his democratic familiarity, was a favorite aboard the ship, and no one begrudged him his smoke.

Mr. Campbell is on his way to Nova Scotia, where he will attend the bicentennial celebration of the establishment of the Protestant Episcopal church there. Immediately upon the docking of the Cymrick he engaged passage on the Prince George for Nova Scotia.

A Mark of Refinement

It is something to be proud of when you offer a cake of Pears' Soap to your guest. It indicates that you know and appreciate the best and purest soap obtainable in all the world. Pears helps the skin to retain its health without roughness, redness or irritation. It is matchless for the complexion and is a soap

Which Is Inexpensive

Its price is as low as that asked for inferior and often injurious soaps. It is absolutely pure, with no foreign substances: is best for the skin and lasts longest. It corrects the harm caused by common soaps. Pears continually beautifies, and as a woman's beauty is a woman's duty, it is a pleasant duty to use

Mrs. Adriance Has $100,000 Worth of Jewelry Returned to Her

New York, Sept. 2.—Mrs. I. R. Adriance of Poughkeepsie simplified the smuggling charge against her by proving to the satisfaction of the customs authorities that an assortment of jewelry, roughly valued at $100,000, which was seized when she arrived here last Sunday, was not purchased abroad. It was accordingly released, as was a $3000 necklace, taken from her daughter, Marion.

The lot released does not include, however, the $6000 pearl necklace, which Mrs. Adriance had concealed in her hat.

SENT BACK TO POLICE DUTY

NEW LAW GOES INTO EFFECT

No One Left to Guard Prisoners on Trial Because Special Sessions Assignments Have Been Abolished—Deadlock Over the Situation Considered Possible—Night Court Ends Career as Tribunal For Both Sexes

New York, Sept. 2.—More than 200 policemen, including nine lieutenants and eighteen sergeants, have been removed from soft jobs in the court of special sessions and sent back to police duty. Some of them did not know the way to the stations where they must serve the city, so long have they been away from patrol duty.

The judges of the court don't know just what to do. The new inferior courts law specifies that temporary assignments of policemen may be made to magistrate's courts, but no provision is made for special sessions, where there will be no police to guard prisoners.

The next meeting of the judges will not be held until Sept. 17, and in the meantime the judges will be compelled to get along as best they can without the policemen formerly assigned to the court. The court is also without probation officers, whose appointment is provided for in a similar manner under the new law governing the lower courts of the city.

The judges declare that they will appeal to the commissioner of charities to assign men from his department to look out for the prisoners, but the warden at the Tombs is just as positive that he will not release any of the prisoners unless the persons to whom they are entrusted can show some authority. Special officers will also be asked of the sheriff, and these, in addition to several subpoena servers, the judges are confident, will be capable of caring for the prisoners.

No decision has been reached regarding the appointment of probation officers under the law. It is the belief of the magistrates that the new law permits the appointment of these officers by the magistrates themselves, but the civil service commission declares the officers must be selected after competitive examinations.

Among the policemen detached from the courts was George H. Twine, who has been in the department for fifty years. He is 72 years old. Twine declares it as his intention to retire from duty unless he is permitted to continue as a court officer.

John Buckley, who has put in twenty-five years' service in police courts and who has eight service stripes, representing more than forty years' service, was transferred to the Morrisania station. He has not yet made up his mind whether or not he will retire.

The night court, after a period of three years and one month, came to its last session as a tribunal for both men and women early yesterday. Separate courts for each sex came into existence last night.

THINK COURSE DANGEROUS

Aviators at Boston See Peril In Circling State House Dome

Boston, Sept. 2.—A number of aviators on looking over the course for the $10,000 prize from Boston light to the state house declare that the state house end of the course is most dangerous. Grahame-White, the English aviator, was particularly outspoken in regard to it.

"The course ought to be changed as far as flying over the city is concerned," said he. "It is not only dangerous for the aviator, but it is just as dangerous for the citizen who is going about his daily task to have an accident happen while the machine is flying over the city."

The Wrights also regard the state house end of the course dangerous. Other aviators now on the flying field regard the lap to the light as the best part of the whole course and have expressed the wish that the entire race was over the water.

SCHOOL MORALS DEFENDED

But High School Secret Societies Do Not Meet With Favor

Sagamore Beach, Mass., Sept. 2.—A defense of the American colleges and schools against the charge that the student bodies were irreligious and immoral, and a vigorous condemnation of secret societies in high scools were the features of the Sagamore Beach conference on the moral and religious training of the young.

Professor Amos R. Wells of Boston, editorial secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor and a writer on Sunday school topics, denounced secret societies in high schools. Wells said that out of 190 replies he had received from educators to the question: "Do you approve of secret societies in high schools?" all but five were emphatically in opposition.

The speaker argued that such societies impaired school discipline and were a factor in making high school education more expensive to the student. He also took the stand that these societies were liable to foster immoraity.

APART FORTY-EIGHT YEARS

Aged Ohio Couple Rewed and Are Enjoying Second Honeymoon

Kenton, O., Sept. 2.—A quaint romance found its ending here in real life when Philip Carr was remarried to the wife he lost in the turmoil of the Civil war, nearly half a century ago. He is now enjoying with her his second honeymoon.

Separated by raiding guerillas, who captured the federal mails with the result that letters from Carr to his young wife never reached her; divorced because of a believed desertion; each remarried, and each again widowed, they found the love of their youth still aflame upon an accidental meeting not long ago, and their new betrothal followed at once. Carr is now 74 years old and his wife 68.

REBELS ON RAMPAGE IN THE PHILIPPINES

Soldiers Are Rushed to the Province of Nueva Vizcaya

Manila, Sept. 2.—An uprising against the government is reported in the province of Nueva Vizcaya. A constabulary force is hurrying to the scene and a battle is expected hourly.

The rebel movement is headed by Simeon Mandac, former governor of the province of Ilocos Norte, who has long been a fugitive from justice.

Mandac occupies Solano, a town of about 6000 inhabitants, northwest of the centre of Nueva Vizcaya and about five miles north of Bayonbong. The telegraph wires north of Bayonbong have been cut and it is impossible to learn the number of Mandac's followers. It is doubtful, however, if the rising is serious.

Mandac, while governor, subjected a prisoner to a "third degree" examination of such severity that the man died. The governor was convicted of homicide and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment.

He appealed from the verdict of the court and while the appeal was pending he jumped his bond and had been missing for several months. It was thought that he had escaped abroad, until an official dispatch announced that he had turned up at the head of a band of malcontents. Nueva Vizcaya is the central province of Luzon, and Bayonbong is its capital.

BLAME LAID ON OFFICIALS

Mayor, Sheriff and Chief of Police Could Have Prevented Lynching

Newark, O., Sept. 2.—The Licking county grand jury places the responsibility for the lynching of "dry" Detective Carl Etherington on July 8 on the then mayor of Newark, sheriff of Licking county and chief of police of Newark, all of whom have since resigned or been deposed.

The report says that had these officials acted with reasonable diligence the riot and lynching could have been prevented. A total of fifty-eight indictments was returned by the grand jury in the twenty-seven days of its sitting, all in connection with the lynching. Of these twenty-five charge alleged rioters with murder in the first degree, twenty-one are accused of rioting, ten with assault and two with perjury.

Fight Film Pictures Barred

Holyoke, Mass., Sept. 2.—The Jeff-Johnson pictures will not be seen in this town, as was expected. The fight films were to have been exhibited here yesterday for the first time in the state, but City Marshal Lynch put his official ban on the matter and they yet remain in the glim.

MURRAY ISSUES A NEW ORDER

Banks Acting as Reserve Agents to Undergo Scrutiny

LAW HAS LONG BEEN INERT

Comptroller Himself Will Henceforth Give Approval Instead of Subordinates as Heretofore—Will Assume Genuine Responsibilities For Character of Reserve Agents—Law Calls For Discipline For Laxity

Washington, Sept. 2.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray signalized his return from vacation by putting into practice a provision of the national banking act which has been inert for years. This is the clause providing specifically for the approval by the comptroller of the currency of any national bank in a reserve city selected as a reserve agent by a bank outoutside.

Such approval has always been granted theoretically by the comptroller, but as a matter of fact the requests of country banks for the approval of a reserve agent has gone to the desk of a subordinate in the office and the approval been granted without knowledge of the comptroller or any investigation of the standing of the bank.

Comptroller Murray believes this to be a dangerous practice and henceforth will permit no bank to be designated as a reserve agent until his bureau has assured itself of its complete reliability. The act of approval is important also as inferentially guaranteeing to the business public a healthy condition of banks selected as reserve agents. Under the Murray policy, such approval will be an official attestation that the banks so honored are in good condition. It will be recalled that at the time of the Walsh affair in Chicago, which is a central reserve city, the Walsh bank was acting as a reserve agent with the O. K. of the treasury department as such.

This new order probably will lead to a scrutiny of all banks acting as reserve agents for other banks. New York city, Chicago and St. Louis are central reserve cities and forty-six other cities, including Boston, are reserve cities.

Banks in reserve cities of course deposit in central reserve banks only, but the so-called country banks are permitted to deposit in cities of either class, hence the action of Murray will apply to reserve banks everywhere.

Every national bank in a reserve city, under the law, is required to keep a reserve in lawful money of at least 25 percent of the aggregate amount of the deposits and banks located elsewhere 15 per cent in their own coffers, while banks in other reserve cities may deposit one-half of the required 25 per cent with the reserve agents approved by the comptroller in the central reserve cities.

On June 30 the amount of actual reserves of all national banks was $801,000,000. Of this enormous sum, $423,000,000 was deposited by country banks with approved reserve agents. While this immense amount of money is only theoretically affected as a whole by the comptroller's determination and all perhaps is as well placed as if his approval had been actual intead of nominal, the comptroller will now assume a genuine responsibility for the character of reserve agents which has not existed before.

It is understood that if as the result of examination reserve agents are found a little short in their own reserves, they will be given reasonable time in which to bring the fund up to the sum required by law. If action is not taken within thirty days, the law requires discipline. The general effect of the new policy will be, of course, to cause all reserve banks to maintain their own reserves at the legal standard.

It Would.

CARDINAL VANNUTELLI

Papal Delegate to Eucharistic Congress at Montreall Next Week

CHEERS FOR VANNUTELLI

Cardinal Greeted by Ten Thousand People Upon Reaching Quebec

Quebec, Sept. 2.—Cardinal Vincent Vannutelli, envoy extraordinary of Pope Pius X to the twenty-fifth international Eucharist congress, which will convene at Montreal on Sept. 6, for a session of five days, arrived at this port on the steamer Empress of Ireland.

Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, Father Vaughan, the English Jesuit, and many bishops and priests from France, England, Ireland, Scotland and Belgium traveled with the papal delegate.

Quebec gave the envoys a royal welcome. More than 10,000 persons assembled on the terrace of the Chateau Frontenac. French-Canadians who had journeyed from the interior towns and villages were especially enthusiastic and at times they interrupted the legate's brief address with cheers.

IS SECOND LARGEST CITY IN THE WORLD

Population of New York Has Reached 4,766,883.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Greater New York has a population of 4,766,883, under the thirteenth decennial census, according to figures issued last night by the director of the census. This makes New York the second largest city in the world, and as large as any two foreign cities, excepting London.

Concerning London, New York today is that city's greatest rival, and in gain of population gives reason to believe that it will yet wrest from England the honor of having the world's largest city.

While New York, according to the English census returns of 1909, is still 2,662,857 behind London in the race for the greatest city of the world, she is so far ahead of the other great cities of the globe that there is little likelihood of any of them catching her in many decades.

BOARD'S AWARD ACCEPTED

New Haven Road Trolley Men Will Have Wages Increased

New Haven, Sept. 2.—The New Haven railroad has lost its fight to prevent granting an increase in salary to its trolley men in Connecticut. The railroad agreed for the first time in its history to accept arbitration as a method for settling the demands for wage increases in Connecticut and Massachusetts. The arbitrators in Massachusetts reported last month in favor of a substantial increase.

Yesterday the Connecticut arbitrators reported in favor of an increase of 8 percent in wages dating from June 1. The increase will cost the railroad $300,000 a year and includes $20,000 in back pay. The railroad company last night issued a statement accepting the award of the board of arbitration.

SMITH HEADS STATE TICKET

Georgia Democrats Want Him Named For Presidency In 1912

Atlanta, Sept. 2.—The Democratic state convention nominated Hoke Smith for governor of Georgia. The platform is a practical reiteration of the one adopted when Smith was nominated in 1906.

The convention adopted a resolution offering the name of Smith to the national Democracy for the nomination for the presidency in 1912.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The figures of the attendance and receipts for the six seasons that "Quincy Adams Sawyer" has been upon the stage prove that nearly four million people have witnessed this great drama of New England rural life in that time. In view of this fact and because of the constantly growing prosperity of this attraction, it can be said with truth this is a "play in a thousand." For there have been so few similar instances in the history of the American stage that they can be recalled readily by all theatrical men of experience. "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is unique. Its telling qualities are found in its entire freedom from stage conventions. There is no erring girl, no mortgage on the farm, no mourning or wailing and no villian. Yet strength is by no means sacrificed by this abandonment of familiar stage expedients. For there are substituted characters ,there are motives that naturalize, and a development of interest that holds because it appeals by its strong humanity. When the famous drama is presented at Music Hall Tuesday night it will be found to be presented by an admirable company every member of which has been selected with special regard for his or her fitness for the role played. The scenic environments of the drama is in perfect accord with its spirit and the entire entertainment is natural and enjoyable.

ELSIE FERGUSON

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

The Hollis Street theatre, Boston, will begin its regular dramatic season on Monday night, Sept. 5th, when Henry B. Harris will present the talented little star, Elsie Ferguson, in a new four-act play by Paul Harness entitled "A Matter of Money. Miss Ferguson last year established her claim to stellar honors by a charming portrayal of the little Queen in that dainty, mythical romance "Such a Little Queen," in which she appeared so successfully at the Tremont theatre. This season Mr. Harris is putting her forward in a highly emotional role and in an entirely different type of character than she has heretofore been identified with. The theme of the play is the employment of child labor in many American mills and factories and the human interest is dominated by a rough and undeveloped girl forced to toil in the mills —the role assumed by Miss Ferguson. A notable cast of artists including Frank Mills, Paul Everton, Franklyn Hurleigh, Joseph Garry, Harrison Forbes, Charles D. Pitt, Helen Macbeth, Maggie Fielding, Rene Grau, Ida Glenn and Margaret Schayne, is supporting Miss Ferguson. The engagement is for two weeks with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Attention is called to the fact that Miss Ferguson in "A Matter of Money" will not be seen in any other city in New England.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The attraction at the Boston theatre beginning Labor Day matinee ,will be the return of Klaw & Erlanger's massive production "The Round Up." The theatrical annals of Boston do not record such a towering success as "The Round Up" It is the great American play of the hour. Every character and scene in the piece breathes the life of the great Southwest. The enthusiastic interest displayed by every audience is the most flattering endorsement this really great production can receive. The battle scene in the third act is a stupendous stage effect ,the like of which has never been seen before. The appearance of twenty mounted Indians riding along a ledge of rock far above the stage level is a thrill indeed, but it is far surpassed in the great incident at the end of the third act, when "Slim" Hoovey ,the sheriff, and a troop of cavalrymen are shown in an actual hand-to-hand fight with a band of Apache Indian marauders escaped from their reservation. There have been great thrills presented on the Boston stage in years past, but nothing that touches this in point of realism has ever been seen in any theatre in the world. In the last act a group of cowboys are shown riding bucking bronchos. This, too, is a novelty never before seen in what is termed an indoor attraction. The bracing, vigorous atmosphere of life in the open is preserved with startling fidelity and truth. Regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Eleanor Gordon and Theodore Friebus, who made one of the hits of their career at B. F. Keith's theatre during the past week in Frank Ferguson's new comedy "Sweet Widow Marie," have in rehearsal anothed comedy by the same author which it is said is equally bright if not better than that in which they are now appearing, and it will be given for the first time at B. F. Keith's theatre Monday afternoon. The engagement of these popular players is for two weeks only, and so great has been their success that they will probably stay in vaudeville for the rest of the season. Another strong feature for the week will be the first appearance here of Bothwell Browne, said to be one of the greatest impersonators that has appeared in years. He is a Westerner, well-known in San Francisco, where he made his first great hit and came East only a few months ago, with a splendid production. Still another feature will be Sam Chip and Mary Marble, in that always delightful Delft dialogue "In Old Edam." Others will be Amy Butler and her quartet of comedians in a singing and dancing number; the Lavine Cimarion Trio of fun makers; and the R. A. G. company of singers and musicians.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

"The Circus Girl" at the Castle Square next week for a third production within two years. What more need be said? For the second week of his season, Mr. Craig, is reviving this popular musical comedy because the public says that it wants it. From the very moment of its first performance on Christmas eve of 1908, it has triumphed as no other piece of its kind ever triumphed in Boston before. To describe it, and to give reasons for its success is unnecessary. "The Circus Girl" must be seen to be appreciated, and if seen once, it will be seen again and again. There has been nothing like it on the stage for many seasons. Its variety, its music, its humor, its brilliant costumes and picturesque make it a spectacle well worth the approval of all who want to be entertained. A new chorus of forty singers has been engaged for this revival, and others will be new stage settings and costumes. Miss Mary Young will be of course appear as the lively Lucille, the slack-wire walker, and Mr. Craig will be seen as the youthful Dick Capel. Donald Meek will have his old role as Biggs, and George Hassell as Sir Titus Wemyes, while for the remaining dramatis personne every member of the John Craig Stock Company will be called upon for overflowing humor All the favorite songs will be heard, including "A Little Piece of String," "Now You Know the Way," "A Wet, Wet Day," and "The Ring Master," and a number of new features will be added. The orchestra will be under the direction of Joseph Marr.

ON THE STAGE.

"The Merry Widow" continues her merry career at the Majestic.

That breezy western play "The Round Up" opens the season at the Boston on Labor day.

"A Matter of Money" is the attraction to open the season at the Hollis Street theatre on Sept. 5.

Crowded houses are assured at the Castle Square next week when Mary Young as Lucile in "The Circus Girl" will again captivate every one.

Frank Daniels, always a favorite, returns to Boston, next week for a two weeks' engagement in "The Belle of Brittany" at the Shubert.

The Park is already open "The Climax" being on the boards this week. It is a comedy of domestic and artistic life.

Quincy is to have a play all its own next week which will attract Quincy people as well as those from neighboring towns. Quincy Adams Sawyer is to be given on Tuesday evening at Quincy Music hall with a good cast and special scenery.

The new crop of plays is on the way. Charles Frohman announces fifty, most of which have the preliminary grace of clever titles. The other managers will soon follow with their announcements. Apparently the American stage is to be deluged with new material. There is little talk of "revivals." We must assume either that there is nothing to speak of worth reviving in all the limbo of past playwrighting, or that the public will not tolerate anything old. Out of all these original productions, mostly pieced from old stuff, may come something really new and even admirable—possibly that Great American Play. Let us hope that some of these plays, at least, shall be conspicuous from sheer merit, written with brains, and feeling, strong in thought and emotion, and possessing the rare quality of appeal to both sexes. In recent years there has been a lamentable dramatic cleavage. We have had musical shows for men, and plays for women. The musical pieces have been for the most part mere patuous entertainments, increasingly grotesque and tasteless, with no strength except that of sensual appeal. The "legitimate" productions, though written chiefly by men, have suffered the blight of the American novel. An infusion of honest virility would not do our plays any harm. Most of them are too ladylike. And an infusion of feminine taste would likewise help out musical comedies. There are plenty of suitable themes and emotions comprehensible to both sexes, if the playwrights would only use them.—Haverhill Gazette.

CANNOT SPEAK TO WIFE FOR 30 DAYS

Court's Plan For Making Couple Become Reconciled

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Despite the fact that he owns three farms in Connecticut, one in New York state and a fifth on the line between New York and Connecticut, the wife of James Turner wants to be separated from him and told Judge Morschauser in the supreme court that he and she quarrelled all the time.

Judge Morschauser said that he thought the couple could be brought to live happily together and proceeded to put in legal form his conceptions of a plan.

Stating that the principle of homoeopathy seemed to him to apply perfectly to the case in hand, he issued an injunction restraining Turner from speaking to his wife, going on her farm or in any other way molesting her for the term of one month.

"I think by that time," said he, "that Mr. and Mrs. Turner will make up their differences without any further assistance from the court."

IN PRESENCE OF BRIDE

Young Society Man of Manchester Kills Himself In Colorado

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 2.—Mystery surrounds the death of Fred W. Cheney, son of R. H. Cheney of this city, who shot himself in the head with a revolver in the presence of his bride while in a hotel in Grand Junction, Col. No reason can be assigned by relatives or friends for the act.

Cheney and his wife had just arrived in Grand Junction and had been at their hotel only a short time when Cheney, who was 23 years old, shot himself dead.

Mrs. Cheney, a bride of but a few months, fell fainting on the bed. Only $500 were found in Cheney's pockets, what was left, it is said, of $5000 the couple started west with.

Cheney was one of the best known young business and society men of this city. The marriage of Cheney and Miss May A. Morse, a woman several years his senior, was sudden, contracted outside the state. Miss Morse was employed in his father's office. The first intimation that the parents received of the wedding was in letters written by the couple saying that they were on ther way to the west on their honeymoon.

AS TO NOMINATION OF FOSS

Candidate Vahey Says That His Consent Must First Be Obtained

Boston, Sept. 2.—James H. Vahey broke silence yesterday afternoon in regard to Congressman Foss' speech last Saturday, in which the latter made it appear that he would be a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. Vahey was asked what, if anything, he had to say in regard to that speech and Foss' attitude toward him in view of the allegation of Vahey's friends that Foss had promised him not to be a candidate against him. Vahey answered:

"Mr. Foss' attitude toward me, notwithstanding his speech on Saturday and the construction placed upon it by some people, is exactly the same as it always has been—namely, that he will not be a candidate against me, that he will not take the nomination unless it comes with practical unanimity, and that he knows that practical unanimity cannot be brought about except with my consent."

ROOSEVELT A PROGRESSIVE

Defines His Political Status to Enthusiastic Kansas City People

Kansas City, Sept. 2.—The people of Missouri kept up with a vim the roar of enthusiastic welcome which is following Theodore Roosevelt everywhere in the west.

Crowds which blocked the streets of Kansas City cheered him wherever he made an appearance, and the three speeches he made here were received with shouts of approval.

The colonel was told that he was "insurgent through and through," in a song which was sung in his honor at a luncheon, but he said it would be better to call him a progressive.

The members of the Commercial club, who were entertaining him, cheered his definition of his political status.

UNCLE SAM MAY INTERVENE

Political Situation In Panama Has Become Decidedly Tangled

Panama, Sept. 2.—The political situation in this republic is grave. On account of certain irregularities in the appointment of electoral committees, it is claimed that the election of assemblymen recently may be null and void.

The American government, which, according to treaty, must see that constitutional order is maintained, therefore may intervene, and considering the contentious atttitude of certain assemblymen it is believed to be not impossible that American intervention may take place within the next month. The United States marines in the canal zone are ready for any emergency.

Root on the Way Home

Southampton, Sept. 2.—Senator Root, who headed the American counsel in the Newfoundland fisheries dispute before The Hague arbitration tribunal, sailed for New York aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

Italian Premier's Close Call

Rome, Sept. 2.—A shot was fired at an express train on board which Premier Luzzatti was a passenger. The bullet broke a window of the carriage in which he was riding.

Princess Tumbles With Monoplane

Paris, Sept. 2.—Princess Dolgorouki, while trying to qualify for an aerial pilot's license at Chartres, fell with her monoplane, which was smashed. The princess was not hurt.

BRIEFS

Special meeting of the City Council tonight.

Several public hearings before the City Council are advertised today.

Everybody has their eyes on the sky now in hopes to see some of the man birds flying about.

There was a good attendance at the whist party at the Quincy Yacht club house Thursday evening.

The season at Houghs Neck will practically be wound up tonight when a poverty party wil lbe held.

The School Committee visited the new parochial school on Phipps street this morning and inspected the building.

Dr. E. N. Hardy returned this morning from New Hampshire and will conduct the prayer meeting this evening at Bethany church.

The attention of those visiting the Aviation meet in automobiles is called to the advertisement in another column relative to a paring place near the boulevard.

Capt. John Evans and Harold Wescott were capsized on the club house Wednesday afternoon when the propellor of the Houghs Neck steamer fouled their mooring rope.

James A. R. Underwood of Summit avenue Winthrop passed away suddenly at his home on Wednesday of apoplexy. He was related to Dr. Clarence B. Underwood of this city and was a frequent visitor here.

A copy of the Providence Evening Bulletin received this morning from the Quincy delegates attending the waterways convention in that city, contains a fine snap-shot picture of Frank Fessenden Crane our genial commissioner and Loyed E. Chamberlain of Brockton. There is an interesting account also of the meeting.

TODAY'S COURT.

Robert L. DeNormandie, M. J. Driscoll, Arthur Black and Ale Herman were fined $10 each for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Quincy and William P. Finnerty and Moses H. Gulisian $10 each for exceeding the limit at Milton.

David Bennett was fined $10 for drunkenness at Braintree.

—Charles R. Flint, the American banker, has acquired the United States agencey for the Labeuf submarine boats. He intends to submit this type of boat to the United States government in connection with its demand for specifications, which will be issued Sept. 15—Monitor.

—If the air men do not make some new records in aero week we shall be much surprised. Conditions are perfect, and the stimulus of an open competition will increase the effort of the individual flyers.—Record.

Woman Representative Wanted

We want a reliable, energetic, well-known woman to represent us in Quincy, and take charge of our sub-station at her home; one who thoroughly understands our hand work on lace curtains, or one who will come to our factory and learn. To such a person, with proper references, we will make a most interesting salary offer. For particulars apply in person to our main office.

HAVERHILL MAN GRAND MASTER

Annual Meeting of Massachusetts Odd Fellows

Horace M. Sargent of Haverhill was elected as Grand Master of the grand lodge of Massachusetts Odd Fellows at the anual session of the grand lodge Thursday and Arthur W. Stetson of Quincy was made a member of the standing committee on Petitions.

The membership in Massachusetts is now 59,271 and 32,426 Rebekah members.

The finances were reported to be in excellent condition the general fund showing a balance of $10,145.32 and the Rebekah fund $659.73. During the past year $69,167.11 has been paid in weekly benefits, relief of widowed families $1,757.84, burials $22,972.26, special relief $13,215.69 making a total of $107,461.26 expended for relief.

FELL FROM CAR.

Mrs. I. G. Tarbox of Houghs Neck attempted to alight from a street car in City Square this morning before the car came to a full stop and as a result she tripped on her skirt and fell headlong into the street. She escaped with some minor bruises and muddy clothing.

SWEDISH BAPTIST Y. P. W. RALLY

At the Swedish Baptist church, Brewers corner, A. P. Hanson, pastor. The Swedish Baptist Young People's Union of New England will hold a rally on Sunday. The program is as follows: 9.30 A. M. Sunday school; 10.45 A. M. sermon by Rev. Robert Larson of New Bedford; 3.30 P. M. subject: Christ and the young people. (1) The fellowship of Christ. Rev. N. L. Miller of Hyde Park. (2) Co-workers with Christ, Rev. G. C. Norgren. (3) Growth through Christ, Rev. Alfred Lindblom; evening services at 7.30 with short addresses by several visitors.

On Labor day meetings will be held at Bethel beach at 2 o'clock session for delegates. A new constitution will be discussed and adopted. At 3 o'clock there will be a public meeting with address as follows:

(1) The young people and the church by Rev. E. Lagerstrom.

(2) The young people and missions by Rev. J. O. Backlund.

EVER GET BIT?

Did you ever go to make a purchase of a certain article because you had read about it, or had used it before and liked it, to find when you go home and compared it with the genuine, that it was a rank imitation? Imitation is a sincere form of flattery, and it is always goods of real merit that are imitated. This article is printed as a warning to our readers to be careful and see that they get the genuine when purchasing a well advertised article, like Cascarets, for instance, which is said to be imitated more than any other cathartic on the market. Never accept a substitute, of anything unless you want inferior goods.

Australia Has Marital Freaks.

Australia's statisticians have just published their matrimonial figures for last year. The youngest bride was a girl of thirteen, living in New South Wales, and the oldest was a spinster of eighty-nine. Twelve of the brides were only fourteen, fifty-four were fifteen, 207 were sixteen, and after that they ran into the thousands. Nine brides under twenty-one married men over fifty, the bridegroom in two cases being eighty.

OLD BUSINESS FIRM DISSOLVED

John Q. A. Field Retires from Granite Business

Tuesday one of the oldest granite firms in Quincy went out of existence when the firm of Field & Wild was dissolved by the retirement of John Q. A. Field senior member of the firm. The firm of Field & Wild is one of the oldest in the city having been actively engaged in the granite business since 1881.

Mr. Field was one of the pioneers in the granite business. After receiving his education in the public schools he passed his early manhood on a farm, at the same time dabbling some in granite and was the first to put into use the square granite paving blocks now universally used in paving streets.

Upon the death of John Q. A. Wild in 1881 who conducted the quarry on what now is known as Gass place he became a manufacturer under the firm name of Field & Wild.

This firm has been in continuous business since that time. Mr. Fields life has always been one of activity and he has held many positions of public trust. Way back in 1871 and 72 he was the surveyor of highways and a member of the Board of Selectmen.

He was also an assessor and Overseer o fthe Poor during the years 1872, '74, '75, and '76. He also served as a member of the County Commissioners for five years and previous to that was a special county commissioner for six years.

He also served the city as a member of the City Council of 1896 and 1897. In addition to his public duties he was for several years a member of the executive board of the Granite Manufacturers' Association and President of the New England Manufacturers' Association. He is also at the present time prominently identified with the Quincy Savings bank.

After so many years of active life Mr. Field believes he has earned a long vacation and the citizens of Quincy join in wishing that it may be a pleasant one for him. Possibly later after a thorough rest he may again enter active business life.

The quarry will be operated in the future by Reed & Vendret.

LABOR DAY SPORTS.

Some of the sporting events scheduled for the Labor Day picnic of the Quincy trades union are:

Base ball game. Fore River Apprentice. Cranch A. A. Game to start 11.30 A. M.

5 mile race between W. Hackett, Brookline Gym, Winner of Brockton marathon 1909 and William Gover Shamrock A. A. Canadian long distance runner of Montreal. Men to be on their marks at 1.30 P M.

Grand 5 a side Football Tournament between Boston Rangers, Quincy McGregors, Fore River & Boston American. Game to start about 3 o'clock P. M.

Come and see the pillow fight. Great amusement.

OPEN EVENTS.

100 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards, one mile run, 5 mile run.

Running Broad Jump and High Jump.

All the champion have entered and are sure starters. Marceau, Hackett, Horne, Brawley, Prout, Halfenstine, Gover, Burke, Cummings and a host of equally known men.

Over 100 entries.

When the Plague Raged.

Sir Walter Besant in one of his books says of the author of "Robinson Crusoe" and "Journal of the Plague:" "De Foe was born in the year 1661. His father lived in Cripplegate, where, as we know, he had a shop. The child, therefore, was four years of age in the plague year. A child of four observes a great deal and may remember a great deal. De Foe says: 'When any one bought a joint of meat he would not take it out of the butcher's hand, but took it off the hooks himself. On the other hand, the butcher would not touch the money, but put it into a pot full of vinegar which he kept for the purpose.' This must surely have been seen by the child and remembered. It happened in his father's shop before his eyes."

—The Squantum aviators must look alive. The Frenchmen are marking up the aero height record every 24 hours. Morane put it to 7000 ft. on Aug. 31 in France. If Brookins or any of the other climbers of aerial mountains beat that it will be the spectcle of the meet.—Boston Record.

SPORTING NOTES.

Only one more at home game is scheduled in the Old Colony league, on Labor day in the afternoon, with the Lincolns. The games for tomorrow are:

Quincy at Weymouth.
Lincoln at Randolph.
Stoughton at Rockland.

The Granite City league has no games scheduled for Saturday, but on Labor day the season will be closed.

The Makaria and Atlantic teams will meet again on Saturday on the Ward Six playground. The Ramblers and Cranch A. A. play at Merrymount park.

The Boston district football games will begin Saturday, when the Brocktons come to Quincy Point, and the McGregors go to Lynn.

The great event in the sporting world for Saturday, however, is the opening of the Quincy aviation field, and the sport will continue daily until Tuesday, Sept. 13.

The protest against the games of the Quincy team in which John Glaze pitched was not sustained by the Old Colony league directors, so Quincy has the championship well bottled up.

George A. Sullivan the Quincy sprinter, has entered the Labor Day games at New Downer Landing.

Quincy ball fans are overjoyed at the news that John Glaze was not under reserve with the Altona (Pa.) club and that the games in which he had pitched the Quincy club to victory in the Old Colony league would stand. This practically assures the championship for Quincy.

Announcement that Glaze was eligible was made by Secretary Alger of the league after investigating the assertion that Glaze was under reserve by Altoona. Both President Farrell of the National Association and Secretary Price of the national commission declared Glaze a free agent, saying that he had been released by Altoona May 13. Glaze will probably pitch for Quincy in one of the Labor day games.

NOW FOR FOOTBALL.

The Fore River Football club opens its season in the Boston league series Saturday on the Quincy Point grounds at 3 o'clock by playing the Brocktons. Quincy line up will be:

Goal—William Ridge.
R. B.—J. McDonald.
R. H. B.—P. Lait.
C. H.—J. Harkness.
O. R. W.—P. Boyle.
I. R. W.—R. Hughes.
L. B.—R. Lewis.
L. H. B.—R. Melville.
O. L. W.—R. Carruthers.
I. L. W.—R. Farrell.
C.—G. Elliot.
Reserve—S. Ritchie.

The following teams will take part in the 5 a side football games, at Caledonian Grove, Roxbury, and the grove at New Downer Landing under the auspices of the Quincy Central Labor Union, Labor Day:

Harkness	Goal	R. Melville
P. Lait	Backs	R. Lewis
J. McDonald	R. W.	W. McGregor
R. Hughs	Centre	G. Elliot
T. Ritchie	Left	R. Carruthers

Reserves, W. Ridge and R. H. Greive.

IS JOHNSON BEST PITCHER?

Many Ball Players In American League Claim He Is.

Is Walter Johnson, the star pitcher of the Washington Americans, the greatest twirler in the game today? Many ball players in the junior organization claim he is. The records will never show Johnson's superiority to "Big Six," because Mathewson has a fairly good team back of him, while Johnson is supported by a weak one.

If Johnson could pitch for a team like the Athletics, good fielders and good hitters, it would be hard for him to lose more than three games a year. His speed is so terrific that no Washington catcher but Street can hold him. His smoke ball has knocked out Beckendorf and Henry, young receivers.

WALTER JOHNSON, STAR PITCHER OF WASHINGTON AMERICANS.

There does not seem to be any question that Walter Johnson possesses more speed than any pitcher the game has ever developed. There have been those who believed that Amos Rusie, the famous New York pitcher of a few years ago, had more speed than Johnson, but the fact that no catcher found it difficult to handle Rusie's delivery, while Johnson is putting his catchers out of the game with bruised hands, would indicate that the Idaho wonder has more on his ball than did Rusie.

Dick Buckley caught Rusie in a large majority of his games, and he never found his hands giving out as a result, as have Street, Beckendorf and Henry in catching Johnson. It is pretty hard lines on a pitcher when he is forced to let up for the want of a catcher to hold him.

FIND BASEBALL IN BIBLE.

Hughey Jennings Finds Nebuchadnezzar Playing Game.

Historians of baseball say that the game is seventy years old. Hughey Jennings of the Detroit Tigers has dug up statistics to prove that it is 2,500 years old.

"It is not generally known," says Jennings, "that Nebuchadnezzar was the first pitcher mentioned in history. The Bible mentions in the last chapter of the second book of Kings, 'And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month and in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, came, he and all his hosts, against Jerusalem and pitched against them."

Vanderbilt Cup Race.

Great preparations are being made for the Vanderbilt cup race, which is to be held on Long Island, New York on Oct. 1 next, and the grand prize event on Oct. 15. Of the racing drivers who will compete for the $7,000 in cash offered for this race, in addition to the grand prize, the following drivers of international and worldwide fame will compete: Nazarro, Wagner, George Robertson, Ralph de Palma, Ray Harroun, Joe Dawson, Louis Chevrolet, Robert Burman and Barney Oldfield.

All intersecting roads and crossings will be guarded by flagmen, sworn in as deputy sheriffs, who will keep traffic from the highways during practice.

How "Sonder" Came Into Yachting.

Many who are not yachtsmen have wondered at the word "sonder," which has appeared in the public prints during the last five years in various news items in connection with yacht racing.

When the German emperor signified his willingness to give a prize to stimulate international yacht racing, about five years ago, his yachting advisers suggested that the trophy should be offered for small yachts of not over thirty-two feet racing length, and as this would constitute a new class a name or title seemed necessary for it. The word sonder was adopted as bearing the same relation to the English word special.

Covaleskie Coming Back.

Covaleskie is pitching grand ball in the Southern league, and it is about time Manager Griffith of the Cincinnati Reds pulls the string and gets him back, as he belongs to the Cincinnati club. If Burns goes wrong Griff will need the man that put the Giants out of the running in 1908.

SEWER EXTENSION.

Councilman Moir offered an order amending the order, appropriating $10,000 for extension of the sewer system. The original order provided that the appropriation was made under the Acts of 1902 and 1905.

The amendment which was to conform to a request of the bankers, provided that $6,000 of the amount was to be borrowed under the Act of 1905, and $4,000 under the act of 1902.

The amendment offered called for interest not exceeding four percent. Councilman Moir moved, and it was voted to amend by making the interest not to exceed four and one half percent. The order was then read and ordered to a second reading.

SUCCESSFUL FLIGHTS AT QUINCY'S AVIATION FIELD

TREMENDOUS BIG CROWD PRESENT ON THE OPENING DAY OF HARVARD AERO MEET

The first flights from the new Quincy aviation field took place late yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd that numbered upwards of 3000. It was anounced that the first airship would go up at 3 o'clock, but it was after 6 o'clock before Grahame-White sailed into the air in his big monoplane. By this time many had got tired of waiting and had gone home.

He started his engine and was pushed along the field for a hundred feet or more when he rose gracefully into the air. He ascended about 800 feet, and made a wide circle over Quincy bay, thrilling the spectators to a point of ecstasy. He went over Dorchester bay, almost to South Boston, then over Savin Hill and Neponset, and back to the field where he alighted as gracefully as a bird.

He was in the air four minutes, but in that time he had covered a wide territory, travelling at a speed of from 50 to 60 miles an hour. Nothing like this has ever been seen in the United States before, and it amazed those who witnessed it.

After the flight of the monoplane, Dixon ascended in his balloon, but weather conditions were such that he did not attempt his trip to the State House.

This morning saw a large crowd moving toward the field, but the man birds were there first. One ship went up for a brief try out shortly after 4 o'clock. The morning was given over to the amateur trials while the big fellows were getting ready for the professional flights which began at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

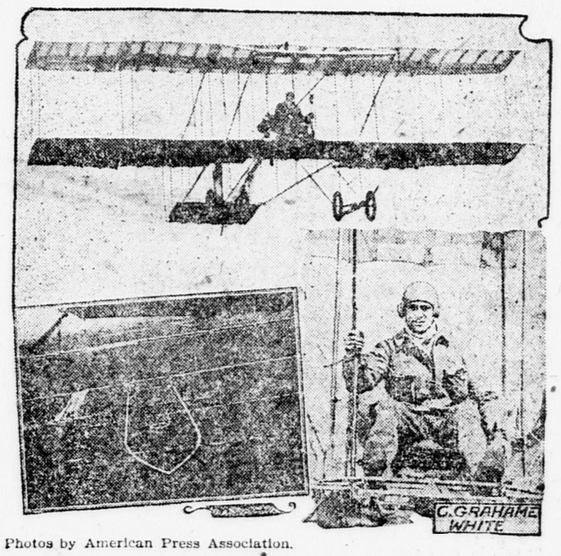

All the police and fire department arrangements for the big aviation meet at Atlantic were completed this morning. Chief Burrell was early on the scene, and as fast as out-of-town officers arrived they were sworn by a justice of the peace as constables. The out-of-town officers include a squad of twenty uniformed men from Newton, and a half dozen men from Weymouth, also some Milton officers. These with the Quincy force give the Chief a squad of 60 men.

Arrangements for protection in case of fire was also completed this morning. Chief Williams has installed a fire alarm box at the entrance to the field. This box is numbered 66. He also has a hose wagon with 800 feet of hose on duty at the field. This is in charge of a permanent fireman and in case of fire it will be manned by the volunteer fire crew on the field. There is a hydrant on the field, so that there will be no scarcity of water.

In the space reserved for the press a large number of desks have been set up, and there is a telephone on each desk. These telephone lines are largely private lines controlled by the big newspapers of Boston and New York.

There is a large corps of newspaper men on the ground representing the large newspapers of the world, and a small army of photographers.

British Aviator Comes For Flights In America.

Photos by American Press Association.

Claude Grahame White, the British aviator, has arrived in Boston preparatory for flights at the Harvard Aero club meeting and will go to San Francisco and several other cities for exhibition ascensions before taking part in the contests for the great trophies offered at the international aviation meeting to be held at Belmont track, Long Island, in October. White is probably the best known bird man of England and for several days before sailing for this country was engaged in a series of tests with imitation bombs which he successfully dropped on an imaginary battleship, the outline of which was painted on the ground. The pictures show White in the air and one of the "dummy" battleships.

NOT RESTELLI.

State Officer John C. Scott, who has been to Biddeford, Me., investigating the Restelli clew of Mr. Atkins, returned to Quincy this morning.

Officer Scott says that he saw Mr. Atkins. He found him to be a reliable man, but was convinced that the man he saw was not Restelli, although the resemblance was remarkable.

Mr. Atkins said the suspect was about 25 years of age, and was positive that he did not wear glasses. Officer Scott does not believe that it would be possible for Restelli to get about without glasses. A search was made for the suspect but he was not found. From Biddeford, Officer Scott took an automobile and went to Kennebunkport where another suspect was run down.

LATEST QUINCY POPULATION 32,253

This the Estimate of the Census Enumerator

A Washington dispatch gives the estimate of Census Enumerator Durand of Boston and other cities of New England.

Quincy's population is placed at 32,253, which is probably about right, but it is not "estimates" that Quincy people want. They want to know definitely; also whether Everett actually has 33,886, Wa'tham 25,083, Brookline 26,937, Fi rg 34,511, Gloucester 25,901, on, 30,898, Newton 40,067, Ch a 40,506, Salem 39,298, Haverhill 38,485, Malden 42,410 etc. These are the "estimates" for these cities.

QUINCY MEN AT WATERWAYS CONVENTION

City of Providence Certainly Royal Entertainers

The Quincy gentlemen who went to the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Convention at Providence yesterday were surprised at the enthusiasm there, the lavishness of the entertainment by the city of Providence, and the elaborate decorations of the business section of the city. The day was warm and pleasant, and the trip in Narragansett bay was one of the delightful features. Everyone too was talking about "water, more water and deeper water."

The committee of the Quincy Board of Trade had carefully arranged all details for the Quincy excursionists, and the prominence of Frank Fessenden Crane, Quincy's commissioner of water front, waterways and navigation, contributed to make the trip worth while for the 40 representative business men who attended and showed their interest in the movement.

Arriving at Providence at 10 A. M. a busy half hour was put in previous to the assemblage of the convention. Congressman Moore, the president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, gave a reception to the Quincy men in the parlors of the Narragansett Hotel, and greeted each gentleman personally. He also spoke briefly. Brief addresses were also made by Col. Donnelly, a New Jersey delegate; Senator Sanborn of Rhode Island and Mayor Shea of this city. The Quincy men went to the convention in a body, a section of the Opera House being reserved for them. The delegates and friends filled the house. Mayor Shea and Senator Hultman were among the notables on the platform, including Gov. Pothier of Rhode Island, Gov. Ansel of South Carolina, Gov. Prouty of Vermont, Gov. Draper of Massachusetts, Senators, congressmen, naval officers and others.

Aside from the business there were addresses by Gov. Pothier, Gov. Ansel, Capt. J. C. Contwell of the Revenue service, Commander Peary and Congressman Capron of Rhode Island. Explorer Peary illustrated with exceptionally good lantern slides his trip to the North Pole.

The report of progress made on the former survey made by Col. W. M. Blake, of the Engineer Corps was as follows: "The field work of the surveys for the waterways between Boston and Beaufort Inlet has been practically completed and almost entirely plotted. Estimates have been made for each of the sections for waterways varying widths and depths and the routes for the highways have been selected excepting for the section from Boston to Narragansett bay. The principal work remaining to be done is the collection of such information as will enable the Board to make an intelligent recommendation as to the commercial necessity for each section and as to the width and depth of the waterway required for each section. To assist the Board the various representative commercial bodies of the larger cities are being consulted and their views requested."

The entertainment of the day included a sail down the harbor in the Steamer Warwick to Vanity Fair where a $10,000 shore dinner was served to nearly 2,000. In order that the clams and other ingredients of the bake might be hot when served, five large bakes were run, each in charge of an experienced clambake maker. The amounts of the various articles of food that went into these bakes was astonishing. A crop of more than 250 waiters was required. The bake was what is known among Rhode Islanders as a straight bake, without any fancy dishes or frills of any kind, but it was sufficiently appetizing to tempt everybody gathered and the waiters were kept busy bringing on supplies.

In the evening there was an illumination of the water front and parade of steamers and other vessels. Again today the delegates will make a tour of Narragansett bay and land at Newport.

MAPLEIME.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

What is so rare as a day in June? One in September.

Every one is flying toward Squantum today to see the aviators fly from there.

How's your coal bin? Coal prices are said to be soaring going up 25 cents a ton recently and double that since spring.

Some of the difficulties encountered by the post office clerks at the Christmas season last year with the Red Cross stamps will be overcome this year, as insead of stamps the association for the relief of tuberculosis is to issue seals, which will be used as such and so not be confused with Uncle Sam's stamps.

If you are out in the woods during this dry spell be very careful about fire. The underbrush is as dry as tinder and a match carelessly thrown aside or the smouldering coals of a camp fire may cause untold damage to property and perhaps loss of life. Use a little precaution because it is better to be sure than sorry.

Soon the stars and stripes will be floating over the schoolhouses once more for Tuesday morning will see the streets and school yards full of sunburned youngsters back from country and seashore taking up school duties once more. To some it will be unwelcome at first but after a few weeks of routine work and regular hours it will seem not only natural but good.

It is not such a very long time now before the fall elections and the registrars of voters will be kept more or less busy as there are bound to be quite a number of new names. Some of these are transfers from other towns and others are the young voters who will cast their ballots for the first time. In later years they may become negligent and not go to the polls as often as they should but it is safe to assume that they will all be on hand to cast their first vote.

The fairs and cattle shows are now in full swing and every day a new poster is seen telling of the delights of some agricultural exhibition. This year the prize squashes have had a hard time to attain more than ordinary size owing to dry weather, bugs and other drawbacks but nevertheless the patrons will find plenty to interest and amuse, and what is lacking in one department will no doubt be made up in another. There is fun for all at these exhibitons and it is not a bad way to spend a day.

Among the different ones who have received benefit from their summer outings no doubt the children are the most grateful, especially those from the congested districts of the great cities. A great New York newspaper recently sent to the country two hundred and seventy-five of these little ones and the youngsters gained an aggregate of five hundred and twenty-five pounds in the short space of two weeks. This is surely a telling argument for the value of rural life and fresh air combined with good food.

This coming week there will no doubt be plenty of excitement at the aviation meet when all the flyers get together and in order to be in the swim you must be able to talk learnedly concerning aeroplanes, dirigibles, etc. There is a strong probability that some of the air men will be "in the swim" because they are quite likely to get spilled from their ticklish craft into the briny deep and before the meet is over there will be more than one record swim either to Boston Light or to the nearest rescuing boat.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

A distinct wail is heard from the German manufacturers of souvenir postcards, over the serious falling off in the volume of exports. Readers may the better judge of this decline when the statement is made that annual exportations are now at the rate of 250,000,000, compared with double that total only three years ago. Here certainly is a tremendous shrinkage, but is it fair to charge the falling off to popular disfavor with the cards? The wonderful expansion of the picture postcard business in Germany focussed attention in foreign countries to the possibilities of trade in this quarter. It would, therefore, be interesting to learn just what has been done in the way of pictorial card output in some of the other countries. We fancy that information on this point would materialy account for the changed conditions in the German industry, the while it would satisfactorily determine the continued favor in which these cards are held by the vast army of tourists, at home as well as abroad, who find in them a double boon, namely: an easy method of brief communication, oftentimes of moment where the personal remembrances take on any considerable proportions, and a source of pleasure to the recipients, who are aided by photography in seeing things that otherwise would be denied them.—Salem News.

OUTING.

On Wednesday at the invitation of Capt. James T. Stevens, chairman of the Braintree water board, Commissioners Kelley and Mayhew, Supt. Maybury and Secretary Gage together with their wives and ex-Secretary Monk, spent a very pleasant afternoon and evening at his delightful summer home on Roosevelt avenue, Sagamore hill, Nantasket. The party was met at the Nantasket station and taken in autos to the house where they were welcomed by Capt. and Mrs. Stevens. After a pleasant hour on the broad piazzas they were invited to the dining room where a bountiful dinner was served consisting of clams in all styles, salads, ices, frozen pudding, etc., to which ample justice was done. Dinner over the party adjourned to the piazzas where a social evening was spent enjoying the passing steamers and the brilliant electrical display and fireworks at Paragon park all in full sight. At 10 o'clock the party left for home after passing a vote of thanks to Capt. and Mrs. Stevens and declaring them royal entertainers.

On the previous Thursday the same party was entertained by Commissioner and Mrs. Mayhew at their Allerton summer home enjoying on that occasion a delightful auto ride over the Jerusalem road to Dreamwold the beautiful estate of Thomas W. Lawson. A daintily served dinner and an afternoon on the piazza watching old ocean and the passing shipping. Both occasions will be long remembered with much pleasure by those in attendance.

POVERTY PARTY.

The annual proverty party was held last evening at Brown's hall at Houghs Neck, and was largely attended.

Charles O'Brien and Miss Margaret S. Walsh led the march which opened the dancing. Prizes for the most poverty stricken costumes were awarded to Edward J. McCarthy and Thomas Mack.

The floor was in charge of Philip L. Kapels, Anthony Howrd, Frank McCarthy, James O'Brien, Thomas Haner, Walter Jacobs, Clement Rose, Miss Daisy McCarthy, Miss Emma Cannon, Miss Stella Burger, Miss Lenora McCarthy, Miss Mary Kapels, Miss May Howard, Miss Leah Crozier Miss Florence Brown, Miss Ida Wright and Miss Stella Bell.

HAS STOLEN BRYAN'S ROBE

What New England Republicans Now Think of Roosevelt

PROOF OF HIS RADICALISM

Straight Party Men See It In His Osawatomie Speech, With Its Declaration of Principles—Say That He Has Stolen Robe of Bryan and Has Laid Foundation For His Nomination In 1912 by Two Parties

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 3.—Study of the utterances of Theodore Roosevelt during his remarkable tour of the west is convincing those who will think along lines of straight Republicanism that his attitude is in consonance with that of the Democratic party. It is thought by many that he has already laid the foundation for his nomination by two parties in 1912—namely, the Republican "progressives" and the Democratic radicals.

New England observers who have studied the speeches of Roosevelt between the lines point out that he has already stolen the robe of William J. Bryan, who is now, temporarily at least, in eclipse as a political factor in his own state and in other quarters of the west where he was once most strongly supported.

Mr. Roosevelt has already denounced the supreme court of the United States in terms even as violent as those employed in the Chicago platform of 1896. He has indicated what makes a "reactionary" newspaper, in an informal reply to the New York Evening Post made at Cheyenne—support of Judge Parker in 1904 and opposition to William J. Bryan in 1908. Finally he has accepted the Democratic position on the tariff and the tariff board.

It will be recalled that the Democrats in congress voted against the $250,000 appropriation for the tariff board appointed by President Taft and declared in their speeches for a revision of the tariff. To such revision of the tariff, but a schedule at a time, is Roosevelt pledged. He has told more than one man that he was an agnostic on the tariff. But he declares the tariff wrong.

While President Taft's position is that he would favor revision of a certain schedule when the tariff board completes its work and when it has shown that the tariff is wrong, Roosevelt's position appears to be that it must be wrong.

But the significant thing is that Roosevelt has placed himself in opposition to the president in many ways. Several New York Republicans have recently said that they expected Roosevelt to indorse the president at the Saratoga convention, which is to begin on Sept. 27. But it is now evident that the Roosevelt supporters in New York are "between the devil and the deep sea."

They say that if Roosevelt makes many more speeches like that at Denver, where he denounced the supreme court of the United States, and like that at Osawatomie, where he laid down a new platform against property, it will be very difficult to elect him temporary chairman even though the delegates should be opposed to Vice President Sherman.

Indeed, one very prominent New Yorker says that while Roosevelt would get a majority of the delegates for temporary chairman, it would be not because of him but because the thinking Republicans of the state desired to see the "old guard" beaten in order that the state might go Republican and thus indorse the Taft administration.

SQUANTUM!?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY!?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred) overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

LOTS OF LAND

BRIEFS

Members of First church interested in the work of Morgan Memorial, Boston, are asked to send fruit, flowers, jellies, etc., to Miss Flora Underwood of 34 Fairmount way Presidents hill before Sept. 15, when they will be forwarded.

A two days' meeting of the New England Swedish Christian Endeavor societies is to be held in this city on Sunday and Labor day.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Protection hall Thursday, Sept. 8, at 3.00 P. M. All women interested are cordially invited.

First church which has been closed during July and August is to reopen on Sunday. Rev. Charles B. Ames, assistant pastor will preach at the morning service at half past ten and Mr. Weston organist and the church quartet will assist in the musical part of the service. Sunday school sessions will not be resumed for another week.

There will be union services at the Wollaston Baptist church on Sunday morning when the pastor Rev. Joseph Walther will preach. There wil lbe no Sunday school or evening service.

THE SUN-DIAL.

Edith S. Tillotson.

In a garden planned with care
In a day gone by,
Stands a sun-dial quaint and old,
Looking at the sky.
And around its gray old face—
There among the flowers,
Is this motto carved—"I count
None but sunny hours."

Like a sentinel it stands
While the hours run,
Marking out the message
Given by the sun.
Should there come a time of storm—
Cloudy days and drear,
Patient and serene it waits
Till the skies are clear.

Oh, you gray philosopher,
With your motto true!
Hear me make a solemn vow
To be brave as you—
Be life's weather what it may,
Sunny days or showers,
Memory shall register
"None but sunny hours!"

Curious Baths in Penang.

One of the many things that strike the tourist as curious at Penang is the type of baths with which the hotels are provided. Vessels is in the shape of a British crown colony in the Malay peninsula, deriving its name from the straits of Malacca, which form the great trade route between India and China. Even each of the first class rooms opens a dark, cement paved, damp smelling little room which serves as the bath. In it is an immense jar of porous brown earthenware about five feet high, nearly three feet in diameter in the middle and but one and a half feet in diameter at the top. It stands huge and ghostful of outline, but dark and unlovely, and is full to the brim with water, not, however, to get into. Near it are a supply of soft soap and a long handled quart dipper. The proper procedure is to soap the body well, then throw several dippers of water over it, repeating the process until satisfied. There is water enough to keep it up for an hour or so, and there is a huge crash towel as large as a sheet to wrap up in when the bath is over.—Detroit News-Tribune.

SMITH LEADS AS USUAL

Two Laffs and One Tear in New York City's Latest Directory

New York, Sept. 3.—One of the six best sellers, the city directory, is out again. The entertaining volume contains two Laffs and one Tear.

The original Mr. Smith has 3313 relatives this year. Brown runs second with 1600, and Jones has only 859.

Prohibitionists may be glad there are only 2 Drinkers, 1 Booz, 2 Boozers and 1 Drinkwine. Mr. Pickle may be included, but Mr. Drinkwater balances the account. Looking closer we find 20 Beers, 10 Schnapps and 16 Seltzers. There are 9 Batts.

Passing on to the next cage one sees 2 Beans in front of 2 Bears, 20 Beavers and 4 Mules. Near them are 130 Cranes, 4 Ravens, 15 Robins, 9 Ratts and 80 Fishes. They are surrounded by numerous Hoggs, Goats, Piggs and Wolfs, one Rabbitt and a Cow. The latter is a policeman, which is appropriate, as policemen in slang are "bulls."

There is just one Catt. There are five times as many Wilds as Wooleys. Out of 11 names there are 4 Losers, 6 Winners and 1 Even.

LAWYERS REGRET ATTACK

Charges Against Choate Are Dropped by the Bar Association

Chattanooga, Sept. 3.—George W. Chamlee, who presented a petition at a meeting of the American Bar association in this city said to contain charges against Joseph H. Choate of New York, asked leave to withdraw the petition.

This action followed the reading of resolutions adopted by the Chattanooga Bar association expressing regret at the alleged attack on Choate by a member of the local association. The request was referred to the grievance committee along with the petition. It is improbable that the matter will be brought up again.

The convention came to a close with a banquet. In an address by E. A. Farrar of New Orleans, the new president of the association, he severely arraigned Theodore Roosevelt for his policy of nationalism. He declared that the policies enunciated by Roosevelt in his Kansas City speech portend danger to the nation and urged the association to stand out against Roosevelt and Rooseveltism.

LOSS OF $110,000,000 IN CLOAK STRIKE

Struggle Is Ended After Contest Lasting Nine Weeks

New York, Sept. 3.—The cloakmakers' strike, one of the greatest industrial disturbances in the history of American labor, was settled last night. Seventy thousand garment workers, who have been idle for nine weeks, will shortly return to work.

Ten thousand of them and those dependent on them—50,000 souls in all—were on the point of eviction, and hundreds of them had already been forced into the streets.

Statistics of the strike, briefly summed up, follow: Length of strike, nine weeks; number of strikers, 70,000; persons affected, 150,000; estimated loss in wages, $10,000,000; estimated total loss to strikers and business interests, $110,000,000.

Points won by strikers: End of sweat shops and "preferential union shops," wherein all union standards and requirements as to wages, time, etc., shall be maintained.

Point won by employers: Open shop with freedom of selection of employes when necessary skilled union labor is not available.

PARADE IS CALLED OFF

Roosevelt Has a Day of Comparative Rest In Omaha

Omaha, Sept. 3.—All that Theodore Roosevelt did yesterday was to attend a breakfast given by the Roosevelt reception committee, a luncheon at the Field club, a dinner at the Omaha club, an entertainment given by the official boomers' club of Omaha, take an automobile ride and make three speeches.

Several other things had been planned, but in his behalf a telegram was sent from Kansas City saying that he was tired and needed a day of rest.

The people had little opportunity to see him, as the parade was called off to make it easier for him. He went to bed earlier than usual last night. This morning he breakfasted at the Omaha club, and then left for Sioux Falls, where he is to speak today.

"Lord Ashburton" and Pal Held

Boston, Sept. 3.—Charles E. Richards, who made quite an impression while traveling as "Lord Ashburton," was held, with George Nickerson, in thirteen counts of larceny in $1200 for the grand jury. Richards and Nickerson were charged with having obtained money from Mrs. Mary McLean by false representations.

SPEEDIER THAN COAL-BURNERS

IS FASTEST IN THE WORLD

Averages 32.8 Knots an Hour, Almost Equal to Thirty-Eight Land Miles, Exceeding Contract Requirements by 3.3 Knots in Four-Hour Run in Her Final Test—Able to Combat Heaviest of Seas, Say Officials

Bath, Me., Sept. 3.—Not only placing herself in the limelight as the fastest destroyer in the American navy, but the fastest naval vessel in the world not built especially for speed, the new oil burning torpedo boat destroyer Paulding, built by the Bath Iron Works, exceeded her contract requirements of 29.5 knots by 3.3 knots, maintaining an average of 32.8 knots an hour during her four-hour run at top speed.

This was the final test in her official trials. She already has proved herself an able sea boat, and members of the trial board declare that she is fully able to combat the heaviest of seas.

Comparisons with the coal-burning destroyers Flusser and Reid, built by the same concern and given their trials a year ago, are most interesting. They were in the 28-knot class, the Flusser exceeding it by making 30.46 knots and the Reid by making 31.86 knots. The only other oil-burning destroyer thus far given her official trials is the Roe, which made 29.6 knots. Reducing the record of the Paulding to statute figures, it reaches almost thirty-eight land miles an hour.

The destroyer left her dock here and steamed to Seguin island, at the mouth of the Kennebec river, and thence going about it to the westward she headed to the east, going as far down as Bluehill. Then she turned and ended her run three miles west of Seguin. There was almost no sea running and trial conditions were excellent.

The Paulding maintained an average of 903 revolutions per minute. Her average run for the first hour was 32.97 knots, for the second 32.75 knots, for the third 32.81 and for the final 32.93. Her fastest 15-minute speed was at the rate of 33 knots.

The Paulding will be ready for delivery to the navy department in about three weeks. At that time her sister ship, the Drayton, will be ready for trial.

WITHOUT KNOWN MOTIVE

Unknown Slugger Makes Attatck on Girl Which May Cost Her Life

Clinton, Mass., Sept. 3.—The same strange man, a haunter of dark lanes, who has approached solitary women, frightened young girls on their way to their homes after nightfall, and terrorized outlying housekeepers within the last few days, is charged with a brutal assault on Katherine A. Kelly, made shortly after midnight, and which may cost the girl's life.

The assault took place at a lonely spot half a mile from the girl's home, as she was returning from Worcester. At the hospital it is said she has only a small chance for recovery.

The police declare that the case offers some of the most baffling features which they have ever encountered in cases of the sort, as they have been unable up to the present to establish a motive for the crime.

$75,000 Fire at St. John

St. John, Sept. 3.—Fire, which started in a livery stable on Main street, destroyed a number of buildings in that vicinity, and sweeping before a high wind, burned several dwelling houses in Clarendon street, causing a loss of $75,000.

Owes $66,884—Has No Assets

Boston, Sept. 3.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed by Eli Darlow of this city, a builder. His liabilities amount to $66,884.72. The petitioner claims to have no assets. He was without the customary $30 to pay the bankruptcy fees.

SEES POLITICS IN CENSUS

Mayor of Boston Wires a Complaint to Director Durand

Boston, Sept. 3.—Charges that Boston's census figures are being withheld for political reasons were made by Mayor Fitzgerald in a telegram to Superintendent of Census Durand yesterday.

The mayor complained of alleged dilatory tactics of the Massachusetts census officials and asked Durand to take action in the matter.

Director Durand yesterday gave out that the 1910 census will show that Boston has gained approximately 11 percent in ten years, making the present population of the city about 629,868. He is not permitted to announce the population figures until the official count is given out, but his provisional estimate probably is within a few hundred of the exact figures.

BATTLE CLOSE AT HAND

Manila, Sept. 3.—Hard pressed by constabulary, Simeon Mandao, the bandit leader, is making a last stand in the hills of Nueva Viscaya, according to dispatches received here. It is believed that a lattle is a matter of a few hours.

The troops are aided by natives, who wish to throw off the yoke of the lawless leader. Four Belgian and one Aglypian priest have been freed by Mandao, so close are his pursuers.

Record Raspberry Crop

Spokane, Sept. 3.—Washington has just harvested the biggest raspberry crop on record. The net profit per crate averaged 80 cents to the grower. On the Paulhamas farm one acre yielded 1100 crates.

LAND COURT.

To Charles H. Wilson, Mary A. Harvey, Etta J. Moses, Gerda E. Nelson and Harriet E. Turner of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth; M. Josie Belcher, Helen A. Dearing and Frank H. Dearing, of Braintree, in said County of Norfolk, Trustees under instrument recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1017, Page 572; James D. Taber, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk and said Commonwealth, and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Carrie E. Darrow, of said Quincy, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Southerly by Bay View Avenue forty five (45) feet; Westerly by land now or late of Mary A. Harvey one hundred sixty eight and 67-100 (168.67) feet; Northeasterly by land now or late of Etta J. Moses fifty and 5-10 (50.5) feet; and Easterly by land now or late of Gerda E. Nelson one hundred forty six and 83-100 (146.83) feet. Containing 7099 square feet of land; and being shown on a plan by White & Wetherbee, C. E., dated Jan. 1906, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1017, Page 575.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land rights of way in Bay View Avenue (private way) in common with others entitled thereto.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twelfth day of September A. D. 1910, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear a said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, CHARLES THORNTON DAVIS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eighteenth day August in the year nineteen hundred and ten.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

PUBLIC SCHOOL A GREAT ASSET

In Promotion of Better Morals Among the Young

Tribute to High Character of Teachers In Sagamore Conference Resolutions—Dr. Pomeroy Denounces High School Dances—Says They Cause Pupils to Drop Down and Out and Are Responsible For Breakdowns

Sagamore Beach, Mass., Sept. 3.—Resolutions adopted at the closing session of the conference on the moral and religious training of the young declare that "religious and moral training is an essential part of education" and that it is "a great civic duty to stand for and be aggressive in securing what is called the better city, the better and cleaner town and village." The resolutions continue:

"As the seventeenth century discovered the place of woman in society, the morning of the twentieth century is discovering the place of the child. We welcome the new emphasis upon child life and training as one of the most hopeful signs of the day. After the home, which must, of course, be the first fountain of moral and religious training, we recognize the public school as a great asset to this end.

"We make public record of our particular satisfaction in the generally high character and purpose of the great body of our teachers in our public schools and in our colleges. We recognize the church and its auxiliary agencies as coworkers toward the best end.

"Religious and moral training is an essential part of education, without which no education is complete.

"As environment into which the young are thrust does so much to make or to mar, we believe it to be a great civic duty to stand for and be aggressive in securing what is called the better city, the better and cleaner town and village."

Resolutions of thanks to Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark for calling and entertaining the conference also were adopted.

In the last address of the conference here Dr. H. S. Pomeroy of Boston made a severe attack on high school dancing. He said:

"We are not considering the question of dancing and secret societies for those in adult life, but those of high school age, which is essentially another matter. It is pretty nearly the truth to say that the individual's ethical, moral and religious status is fixed during the four years of high school life. This is the time when nature, having completed the essential development of the young individual as a child, accomplishes the subtle and unspeakably important task of differentiating conscious sex, confirming temperament and offering the supreme choice of the soul, one path leading up, the other down.

"The high school young person is in a critical time highly susceptible to suggestion of every form. How supremely important that now the atmosphere in which the child-adult shall be calm, serene, pue and posi-shall be calm, serene, pure and posi-

"Ask the candid, experienced high school teacher what is the trouble in three cases out of four that the pupil gets poor marks or drops down and out, and the answer will be in just one word, 'dissipation.' Ask the candid family physician what is usually behind a nervous breakdown among the high school scholars and first and foremost he will tell you over-excitement, too little sleep, too much 'fudge.'

"As regards dancing, many parents approve of it on general principles. Few matters of intense human interest suffer more from hasty generalization than just this one of high school dancing. In general a high school dance means late hours, glaring lights, hot rooms, seductive music, great excitement, almost invariably the presence of some young men who are not fit to look upon your daughters, much less touch them. Very often what the parents believe to be a strictly high school dance is really a subscription dance to which almost any young man may gain entrance who has a gentlemanly deportment, an evening suit and the fee."

HELD FOR MURDER

Man and Wife Accused of Strangling a Four-Year-Old Boy

Kingston, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Vincenzo Crauso and his wife were arrested in connection with the murder of 4-year old Peter Fabian, whose body, from which life had been strangled with powerful hands, was found in an outbuilding of his parents' home in Porterville.

The child had been missing several days, and it was believed kidnappers were holding him for ransom.

EARL GREY OF CANADA

Governor General Who Explored a Wilderness

GREY'S TRIP COMPLETED

Traveled Nearly Three Thousand Miles Through Wilds of Canada

Montreal, Sept. 3.—A wireless was received here from Indian Harbor, Labrador, briefly stating that the government steamer Earl Grey with Earl Grey, the governor general of Canada, and his party on board, have arrived safely there after their long journey by canoe and portage through the wilds of northern Canada. All are well.

The governor general was away over a month and traveled a distance of nearly 3000 miles.

ECONOMY THE WATCHWORD

President Taft and General Wood Talk Over Army Estimates

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 3.—General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, U. S. A., was in conference with President Taft for several hours on the estimates for the next fiscal year. It is the announced intention of the general and the president to keep the army expenses to as low a figure as is compatible with the efficiency of the service.

At present more officers are needed, and to meet this added expense it is understood that great care will be taken to ask congress to appropriate for only the absolute necessities of the service.

WILL PAY MEXICO GREAT COMPLIMENT

Guild to Speak Spanish In Formal Address to Diaz

Washington, Sept. 3.—President Taft, in honoring former Governor Guild of Massachusetts with the appointment as his special representative in attendance upon the Mexican centenary celebration, selected a man who long ago demonstrated his tact and diplomacy in his relations with alien peoples.

The friends of Guild here predict that he will make a pronounced hit with the people of Mexico, for he has addressed the skill of his scholarship to the pleasant task of making himself persona grata with our virile neighbors on the southwest.

In other words Guild will pay President Diaz of Mexico the compliment, unusual for an American, of addressing him officially in the Spanish language. A formal address with which he will honor President Diaz at the luncheon he will give to that official during his sojourn will be couched in the tongue of Castile.

CRIPPEN DEFENSE FUND

Its Power Shown by the Engagement of Noted Counsellor

London, Sept. 3.—The power of the big defense fund provided for Dr. H. H. Crippen, accused of murdering his wife, Belle Elmore, was strikingly illustrated when it was made known that Crippen's counsel will probably be Edward M. Hall, K. C., one of the most prominent counsellors in England.

Hall has figured in as many big cases as counsellor as has Arthur Newton as solicitor. It is reported that Hall has been retained by the mysterious woman who has furnished the fund for Crippen's defense.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

An Esperantist's Praise of the American Anthens.—Hubbites to Hear Ex Shop Girl of London, Now One of World's Most Eloquent Orators—Sleep Loving Suburbanites Wonder if Aeroplanes Will Wear Mufflers—Football Players off for Maine, Excite Flutter in Feminine Hearts.

The Hub's all right. If you don't believe it, read what Miss Esther Riggs, a visiting Esperantist, says of it. "Mi tre s'atas vian belegan urbon. Le suno brilas nur la blua akvo kaj la blankaj, domoj, kay lacc'ielo estas tiel hela kaj blua, ke mi prekau pensas ke mi estas, en 'Venice'." This, freely translated, means that Boston, with its clear sun and blue waters, remind her of Venice.

The great aviation meet of the first days of September has set many Boston suburbanites thinking of a new menace impending over their nightly slumbers. How will Mr. and Mrs. Subbubs of Lonesomehurst get the benefit of their isolated residence if it happens to lie under one of the great air routes between centers of population. Long after the rumble of the last trolley has ceased the air right over the house will suddenly resound with the chug chug of a beyy of aeroplanes racing back to Providence or Springfield or Portland after making a near night of it in the Hub. Thereafter good-bye to sleep in the Subbub's residence—unless a law is passed to put mufflers on the exhausts of all flying machines. Perhaps next year's legislature will consider such a law.

Gentiles are no more imune than Hebrews from the questionable taste of wearing much jewelry in public places, according to an account brought back by a Boston girl on a conversation overheard at a seaside resort. Remarked one of a group of men: "What a lot of Jews there are and what a beastly lot of jewelry they are wearing. Said another member of the party; "Would you gentlemen mind holding out your hands?" They did so, and he continued; "There are five of us; four are wearing at least one ring each and a tiepin. The fifth has not a scrap of jewelry, not even a watch chain, upon him. Gentlemen, I, the fifth, am a Jew."

There was a flutter in the hearts of a few feminine onlookers as thirty five stout youths boarded one of the Maine steamers on September first. These young men, however, represented no belated importation to enliven the gayety of a summer resort. Small boys aboard the same steamer looked on admiringly when they learned that the big fellows were candidates for the Harvard football eleven, en route for their preliminary practice at Frazier's Island, off Deer Isle. This seasoning of veterans and promising new men on the Maine coast, it seems, is something of a departure from the custom of previous years. It is not under the direction of the Harvard Athletic committee. The players go to a camp on Frazier's island as guests of Dr. S. H. Blodgett, of the class of 1884, who has two sons in the squad, one a member of last year's first eleven, the other of the second eleven. Dr. Blodgett, who is a distinguished physician and head of a clinic at the Massachusetts Homeopathic hospital, has been keenly interested in football for several years. It was he, indeed, who back in Arthur Cumnock's day first suggested the employment of a physician to look after the physical welfare of the lads destined to meet the severe grilling of the gridiron field. This year he will gratuitously devote his time and skill to bringing the players as early as possible into the condition that makes for safety as well as confidence and brilliancy of playing. It is expected that the squad will devote a couple of hours in the morning to football practice and in the afternoon will play at tennis, baseball and other sports—always under the direction of competent specialists.

To have risen in a few years from a place as a shop girl to be one of the foremost women orators of the Anglo Saxon world is the achievement of an English visitor who has been fairly thrilling Bay State audiences these past few weeks. Miss Margaret Bondfield, one of the three young Britons who have been lined up with the suffragists in their summer campaign, served eleven years behind the counter prior to her discovery of the powers of oratory and organization which have since made her an international figure. It is worth making a journey of a hundred miles to hear her. In New Bedford, where she first made her appearance in this country, in Lawrence, Haverhill, Fitchburg and Worcester she everywhere electrified the street crowds with her spontaneous eloquence. Her associates, Miss Ward and Miss Gardner, also of the British Laborite party, have hardly been behind Miss Bondfield in power of stirring New England folk. Their coming has indeed added ginger to an already spicy campaign. And now Boston will have its chance to hear from these brilliant kinswomen from over seas, for the summer's suffrage work will end with four days of demonstration, beginning Sept. 6—two evenings of oratory on the Charles street mall of the historic Common and two of whirlwind tours through the outlying districts. The town will be full both of returning vacationists and of folke from every direction brought thither by the Aviation meet, so that the audiences in New England's largest city are likely to be even more gratifying than the excellent ones which have met the pleaders for "Votes for Women" in the other places. Everywhere and in every way the suffrage leaders have made a huge success of this vacation's activity, and one hears predictions, even from unsympathetic observers that the next legislature will be apt to take some notice of their movement.

ALASKA HAS GREAT FUTURE IN STORE

Coal Lands Must First Be Developed, Says Wickersham

Cordova, Alaska, Sept. 3.—Attorney General Wickersham and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel have sailed for Seattite on the government steamer Albatross on the last leg of a trip through Alaska that has occupied more than a month. The Albatross is due at Seattle Monday.

"We came to see a litttle place called Alaska but discovered an empire," said Wickersham. "I realize more and more the importance of opening the coal lands and after we have had a talk with the president he may have some recommendation that will result in straightening out the present tangle.

"The one great necessity of Alaska is railroad transportation, as upon it depends the adequate development of Alaska's mines and agricultural lands. It is evident that this transportation cannot be furnished until the coal lands are opened up, for cheap coal is required to operate a railroad. I am in hopes that something will be done in this matter this winter."

BANDIT LAID OUT

Hit by Stone Thrown at Him by Engineer Whom He Had Shot

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 3.—In a desperate attempt to hold up west-bound Colorado Midland train No. 3 four miles west of Divide an unknown bandit was instantly killed by a large stone thrown by Engineer Frank Stewart after he had shot the engineer in the leg.

Sterling and Charles Martin, two young men who were found near the scene of the holdup, are held for investigation.

Record Price For a Cent

New York, Sept. 3.—Henry Chapman, a numismatist, paid $340 for a 1-cent piece at an auction here. The price, according to dealers, is the largest ever paid for a penny. The coin was struck in the year 1793. It is of the "Liberty Cap" variety.

NOT AUTHORIZED.

People are warned against giving funds to solicitors who claim that they are soliciting for the new parochial school in Quincy, for the two alleged sisters are frauds. It was announced some weeks ago by Rev. F. Coan, that no one was authorized to solicit funds for the school. Two women dressed as sisters made their appearance at Quincy Point yesterday afternoon and began a canvass for funds. Just how much money they succeeded in collecting however is not known. One of the parties upon whom they called for funds became suspicious ,and called up Fr. Coan, who assured them that the women were frauds. The police were notified but the women evidently became alarmed and hastily left town.

MORE PRIZES FOR CHILDREN

Awarded for Flowers and Vegetable Gardens

The Children's Gardens Committee today send one hundred prizes to those children whose persevering effort met with some degree of success in raising flowers or vegetables in their home gardens this summer.

It is always a difficult matter to decide between the child who has every advantage in good soil, hose interested parents, and the one who has poor soil, no water and indifferent parents: to rightly balance the greater effort of the one with the better results of the other. It was also difficult to decide between the best gardens of the different schools. The first prize of $3 for the best vegetable garden is divided into three first prizes Fred Rasmussen of the Coddington school, Neil Doherty of the Washington school and Stanley Smith of Massachusetts Field school having the best vegetable gardens in the city. George McDonald of the Wollaston school, William Webber of Massachusetts Fields school and Paul Rasmussen of the Coddington winning second prizes. For flower gardens, Ethel Beal of the Coddington and Lydia Olilla of the Willard were awarded first prizes. Second prizes to Gertrude Ferguson and Gertrude McGrann of the Adams school; James, John and Annie Kennedy and Nettie Coombs of the Quincy school; Ardinia Davidson of Gridley Bryant; Florence Smith of the Lincoln; Ellen and Margaret Manning of the Gridley Bryant; Hilda Ekstrand of the Willard; Walter Saladine of the Massachusetts Fields; Naomi Comeau of the Coddington.

To encourage a larger number of gardens and increased effort next year forty-one third prizes and thirty-four gratuitus are awarded ed. The thanks of the Garden Committee are extended to the Civic Betterment Committee for $3 and to Mr. William Patterson for $2, contributed by them toward the prizes. Although this work has been carried on for eight years, started by Miss Elizabeth Johnson in the Home Scienee Association and continued by the Education Committee of the Quincy Women's club; it is hoped that the various Village Improvement Societies in the different wards may become interested to encourage the gardens in their respective wards, by having a representative visit the best gardens, by taking an interest in the exhibition at City Hall as representing their vast improvement, and by some special money, bulb or magazine prize in appreciation of the village improvement represented by a fine flower bed, by a good garden and by a more beautiful yard. The cooperation of Mr. Albert Barbour, the Superintendent of Schools whose knowledge and interest is here gratefully acknowledged and also the help given by principals and teachers in the distribution of seed. It is most gratifying to find a littered yard neatly swept on a second visit and to see French, Italian, Scotch, Irish, Swede, Finn, Hebrew and Armenian all working along the same lines. There is much more to be done, many localities to be improved, many discouraging conditions to be removed but by working together, for the best ,all things are possible.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Hanson was sent to the house of correction for one month for drunkenness at Quincy.

John J. Nelligan was fined $15 for violation of the automobile speed limit at Milton, and A. W. LaLime $20 for the same offence at Quincy.

The liquors seized from Frank A. Maan and Christine Zee were forfeitted.

Simoni Marchisiani was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on August Marchisiani at Quincy. He was sentenced to six months in the house of correction.

POLICE PATROL HERE.

The new police automobile arrived in town from Springfield this morning. The auto had received simply its priming coat of paint. She made good speed going through City Square.

"Why are they not speaking?"

"They quarreled about which loved the other the more.

"Well?"

"And now each is afraid to give in for fear of offending the other."

LARGE FLEET OF SUBMARINES

Salmon Delivered This Week Makes Sixteen

The submarine boat Salmon was delivered at the Boston Navy Yard on Thursday. This makes a total of sixteen submarines which have been completed at the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company under contracts reecived by the Electric Boat Company from the governments of the United States and Japan. No doubt as the Navy increases ,the number of these vessels it will mean that many more submarines will be built in Quincy, as we understand that the Fore River Shipbuilding Company has a contract to build all the Submarine Torpedo boats for a period of ten years taht are awarded for the Holland type of boat built on the Atlantic coast.

At the present time there are on the ways two of the latest type of submarines. The plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company is well equipped for the building of submarine vessels, as they have a large shed in which the vessels can be built under cover, and there has been fitted up, an engine testing house, especially for the purpose of testing submarine engines, which are all built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company for the vessels.

The submarine boats which are now in the service are only one of the many means of advertising Quincy which endnate from the Fore River plant.

SPORTING NOTES.

There will be another double header at the Water street grounds on the afternoon of the holiday when the Adams A. A. and the Bigelows of the Granite City league clash at 1.45, to be followed by the Old Colony game between the Lincolns and the Quincy which will close the schedule.

Other Old Colony games for the holiday are:

A. M.—Quincys at Randolph.
A. M.—Stoughtons at Weymouth.
A. M.—Rocklands at Lincoln.
P. M.—Weymouths at Rockland.
P. M.—Randolphs at Stoughton.

Labor Day will probably be the big day at the Quincy aviation field at Squantum. All parts of Ward Six will be crowded.

The Warren Stars defeated the Cranch A. A. Jrs. yesterday by a score of 5-3. Odoneil of the Stars held the Cranch boys down to one hit till the last inning, when they got 3 hits and 3 runs. Batteries for the Stars, Odonell and Leander; Cranch, Barsell Brown and Nelson.

STABBING AFFRAY.

There was a serious stabbing affray on Canal street near the corner of Washington street at 7 o'clock last night, and as a result August Marchisiani, aged 27 years, of 78 Union street, received six knife wounds, and his brother, Simon Marchisiani, aged 29 years, is under arrest for committing the assault.

The men are brothers as stated, and as far as could be learned a dispute arose over a younger brother Louis. August was to leave home Friday night and tried to discourage Louis from following him, but to no avail. It is then alleged that August slapped Louis on the face. This angered Simon, and it is alleged that he went for August with a knife. A fierce fight followed during which August received the knife wounds and fell exausted to the street.

Arthur B. Hultman, a constable, who was passing at the time, placed Simon under arrest and called the patrol wagon. Both were taken to the police station, when August's wounds were attended to by City Physician Hallowell. One of the wounds was back of the left ear, penetrating the mastoid bone. There were also four cuts on the left arm and one cut on the left leg below the hip. While his wounds are serious they are not considered dangerous.

The younger brother ran away during the fight, and the police were not able to locate him last night. Simon denied cutting his brother, but acknowledged that he hit him.

—The nomination of Judge Gaynor for governor would be the first sensible thing that the New York state democracy has done for a considerable number of years. It would be an act of patriotism as well as the wisest kind of politics.—Baltimore Sun.

SQUANTUM YACHT CLUB

Win Many Prizes and Have Successful Season

The present season of the Squantum Yacht club under Commodore Charles M. Bryant has been one of the most successful the club has ever had, both from a social as well as a racing point of view. Dances have been held every Saturday evening at the club house during the season, and they have been largely attended and have been successful social events.

The yachting end of the club's season has been equally as successful and gratifying to the members, for the reason that in the interclub race held under the auspices of the Wollaston club five of the prizes were awarded to boats of the Squantum club, namely:

Class A, first prize to the Marie.
Class S, first prize to the Waweenock.
Class S, second prize to the Ryggy.
Class S, third prize to the Zoe.
Class I, third prize to the Rena.
Class D, second prize to the Busy Bee.

This means that Squantum club received the largest percentage in the Interclub classes for the season.

At a largely attended meeting of the club held Thursday evening it was announced that all prizes had been paid for and that the club had reduced its indebtedness to the amount of $200 during the present year, leaving a very small debt to be liquidated.

Should Commodore Bryant be reelected for the coming year, as there is but little doubt, if he consents to accept, another season will see the club entirely free from debt.

UMPS TOO QUICK.

Baseball umpires like to give decisions as quickly as possible, and the fans like to have them just as quick, but according to Joe Cantillon, part owner and manager of the Minneapolis club, the umpires would save themselves much trouble if they would take their time and not announce their decision right off the reel.

"In calling balls and strikes," said Joseph, "the umpire usually makes his mistakes by calling out the instant the ball crosses the plate.

"They get the course of the ball and often call out before the ball is really lodged in the catcher's glove.

"Then, again, some will watch the ball as it nears the plate and call out, whereas the ball is liable to take a break just at the plate and go good or bad, and that is where the ump puts himself in bad.

"I have made the same mistake many times and have called balls when I know after calling them that they should have been strikes, but could not change my decision afterward, for that would never do.

"Of course, it is all evened up in the long run, but the fans do not look at it that way, and umpires ofter get roasts where they might have saved themselves.

"Umpires do not try to get even with players for alleged abuse or anything of that kind for they are too busy following the ball to think of getting even with any one. It is the same in giving base decisions.

"Very often a runner will get to second and slide away just far enough to be safe. The umpire gives his decision quickly, thinking at first that the man should have been out, and then may be forced to reverse it."—Boston Record.

AVIATION AT QUINCY GREAT SPORT

STARTED OFF WITH A RUSH

Ralph Johnstone in Air Over 80 Minutes and Willard 46 Minutes

A Speed Record of Less Than Seven Minutes

Quincy people had their first taste of aviation Saturday and it tasted so good that they want more of it. The early hours of the day gave promise of being ideal for the man-birds. The wind, what therewas of it, came from the southeasterly quarter, and there was not a sign of rain although there was rain enough before the day was over.

The eyes of the commonwealth as well as the eyes of the world were on the aviation field at Quincy where some of the world's greatest aviators were to fly, and thousands began to wend their way toward the field early in the day. There was but little doing in the way of flying in the forenoon but that made no difference. It was not until after 1 o'clock however that the rush came. Automobiles without number, carriages, tally hoes, taxi cabs and dozens of street cars and special trains on the New York, and New Haven brought a crowd that numbered

AT LEAST 20,000.

The street railway service considering the single track to the field was good. The Brockton cars which usually end their route in City Square ran through to Neponset and in addition to these and the regular line of cars to Neponset there were extras every few minutes. At Atlantic there was a line of cars in waiting for the field in addition to many public conveyances for those who desired to part with a quarter rather than take the slower street cars. It happened however that the street cars made the trip almost as quick as did the taxi cabs.

Arriving in the vicinity of the field the crowd spread itself out. Many who went, cheerfully paid their dollar and went into the field, while others sought vantage points without the grounds. Along the boulevard there was a double row of automobiles and there were others in the fields adjoining the boulevard. Still more automobiles were strung along Squantum street between the entrance and Squantum head while every promentory was black with humanity. Over on the Neponset side of the river the shores were black with people while a line of ferry yachts plying between Neponset bridge and Squantum brought hundreds of people.

Up on Third Hill, Wollaston, and Great Hill, Houghs Neck were other crowds and while they were not able to distinguish one aviator from an-

LABOR DAY PARADE

Trade Unions of Quincy Make a Good Showing

In spite of the threatening weather and muddy walking the Trade Unions of Quincy made a good showing Labor Day in their parade previous to the picnic at New Downer Landing. It was the first time that the labor unions of the city have ever participated in a local parade, and they turned out about 800 men.

The parade was to start at 9 o'clock but it was over an hour later before the line moved. There were two divisions in line the first forming on Upland road with right resting on Adams street, and the second division formed on Adams street with right resting at the head of Newport avenue. The line of march was over Adams, Hancock and Granite streets to Brewers Corner, thence over Water, Franklin, School, Hancock, Temple and Washington streets where cars were taken to the picnic grounds.

As the parade passed City Hall they were reviewed by Mayor Shea, Chief Engineer Williams, Chief of Police Burrell and a number of city officials. Five banners were given for the best floats and Mayor Shea, Chief Williams and Chief Burrell the judges awarded them as follows:

Local 762, Carpenters and Joiners Brotherhood.

Local, 773, Retail Clerks.

Local 214 Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers.

Local 52, Brick Masons and plasterers.

Ladies Auxiliary to the Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers.

Rounds of applause greeted the labor army all along the line and they received many compliments for the fine appearance that they made.

The formation of the line was as follows:

Officers Phillips and Whalan, Mounted
Chief Marshal—Charles H. Wilkins.
Assistant Marshal—Edward Brault.
Chief of Aids—James A. Harling.
Mounted Aids—Bernard Burke, Geo. F. Oster, James G. Frazier.
Aids—Theodore Parle, of Carpenters Union; Edward McGinty of Tool Sharpeners union; Joseph Reagan of Bailer Makers union; James McFadden of Hod Carriers union; Geo. McDonald of Polishers union; Geo. Loring of Machinists union; John D. Evans of Drillers and Tappers union.
Perkins Band, 25 pieces.
Granite Cutters union, 75 men.
Carpenters and Joiners union, 100 men with float.
Brick Masons and Bricklayers union, 25 men.
Plumbers and Steam Fitters union, 20 men.
Painters union, 20 men.
Lathers union, 15 men.
Hod carriers union, 20 men.

SECOND DIVISION.

Wollaston National Band, 25 men.
Machinists union, 50 men.
Quarrymens union, 50 men.
Retail Clerks union in auto, 50 men.
Boiler Makers and Sheet Metal workers, 25 men.
Iron Shipbuilders, 70 men.
Painters union 10 men.
Plumbers and Steam Fitters union 24 men.
Sheet Metal Workers union 25 men.

Some of the unions looked very attractive, some attempts being made to uniformity in dress. The Carpenters and Joiners Brotherhood wearing white caps, the bricklayers white caps, the plumbers and steam fitters white caps and shirts, the lathers white caps and blue shirts, each man carrying a lathe, the hod carriers white caps, the boiler makers blue shirts, iron shipbuilders blue shirts and plumbers and steam fitters white caps, shirts and trousers.

Some of the floats were particularly attractive. The sheet metal workers

WOMEN ACCOMPANY THE AVIATORS

Make Successful Flights Late on Afternoon of the Holiday

Possible 50,000 People on Field and Vicinity

If there was a crowd at the aviation meet Saturday there was a multitude on the holiday. Yet not as many as there would have been had the day been pleasant. At times the sun was out good and hot, but the sky looked threatening and many afraid of a ducking remained at home and saw the man flyers from a distant.

The newly made part of Squantum street leading from the boulevard to the entrance gate was one mass of yellow clay mud that caused the men to roll up the bottom of their trousers and the ladies to hold their skirts high. It was bad enough walking when the sun was out bright and clear, but when the rain came done in torrents it was fierce. Ladies forgetting their natural modesty hoisted their skirts high and there was a display of hosiery on Squantum street and on the road leading to the grand stand such as seldom seen. There were all shades colors and quality from the ordinary tan to hose made of the finest texture of silk.

On the boulevard the double line of automobiles extended from the Squantum Yacht club house nearly to Atlantic street, and there was just as many parked in the field off the boulevard. Every knoll on either side of Squantum street contained its group of sightseers and there was a long row of people who stood on the street on beach beyond the entrance.

Other crowds could be seen along the Neponset bridge and the Dorchester shores of the bay. While all these people had a view of the bird men while they were in the air, they were unable to distinguish who they were or what event they were competing in.

To thoroughly appreciate the meet one must necessarily be in the grand stand. Hhere the meet is grand and thrilling in the extreme.

OPENING OF SCHOOLS

The Buildings of Wards Five and Six Crowded

The opening day of school is always a busy one for those who are engaged in the educational work of our city, and today has been by no means an exception. The increase in population due to the manufactories of the city make repeated enlargement necessary and even now there is some congestion in different sections. The children of Ward One, are well cared for, although the Coddington will have to take care of the Houghs Neck scholars until the completion of the new building.

The new parochial school will take many from the Adams school and other schools, and thus that section can be handled all right.

At the Point there is a chance of overcrowding, but it cannot be said definitely that such is the case as yet.

The principal congestion is in the northern part of the city, in the Wollaston, Massachusetts Fields and Quincy school district, but we can have confidence in Superintendent Barbour and rest assured that all may be accommodated satisfactorily.

At the Woodward the entering class is about the same size as it has been in previous years, somewhere near sixty.

The new principal, Mr. Rice is hard at work arranging schedules and classes and judging from first appearances there can be no doubt but that Mr. Plummer's successor will do credit to the institution.

The new parochial school on Phipps street, connected with St. John's church opened its doors for school for the first time this morning. The attendance this morning was much larger than anticipated, as between 350 and 400 pupils presented themselves for enrollment.

This number is about equally divided between boys and girls. It was thought that six rooms would be sufficient to accommodate the pupils that would enter this month, so this number of rooms were all that were furnished with desks. Rev. Fr. Coan said this noon that the number that entered was so great that it would be necessary to put desks into two more rooms. This he said would be down immediately. The building is of ten rooms, all of which are completed with the exception of the installation of desks. From the appearance today it looks as though the whole of ten rooms would soon be necessary.

While the school is what is known as a mixed school, that is for boys and girls, they will be taught in separate rooms.

The building which was fully described in a recent issue of the Daily Ledger was thrown open for public inspection on Sunday. There were many visitors to the building, and all were loud in their praises of it. It is certainly a handsome building, and Fr. Coan is to be congratulated upon having undertaken and completed the task of erecting such a fine building.

The teaching force at the school will be the Sisters of St. Joseph who will occupy the convent adjoining, which is a newly remodelled building.

CROWD GETS MONEY'S WORTH

Spectacular Airship Flights by Grahame-White

HE ENTERS EVERY CONTEST

Not Only Thousands of Harvard-Boston Aviation Grounds Are Entertained, but Englishman Dromes Over Hillsides and Roads Outside and Performs Wonderful Tricks—Captures Many Points

Boston, Sept. 6.—Grahame-White outdid himself yesterday at the Harvard-Boston aero meet. Not only did he capture the points for the day, establishing a new world's record for bomb throwing, speed record for the course and duration record for the day, but he put himself out to entertain the crowds that braved the threatening weather to attend the meet.

He was brought to earth in the duration trial just a few minutes short of a new record for the course. That he landed on dry ground and not in the Neponset river, was due to his remarkable control and self-possession.

While he hovered over the river the magneto brush went wrong. The engine skipped, then stopped. He was over the river. By wonderful jockeying he glided along, alighting quietly and easily on the very edge of the river. His narrow escape, occurring in the mist, was not appreciated by the spectators.

He went into every contest anyone else entered, going some better every time. From the very outset he was spectacular. He took his rise from the lane between the hangars, tearing directly toward the main grand stand, rising into the air and shooting over the heads of entranced thousands.

For five minutes he performed stunts for the people in the main stands. Then he seemed to catch sight of the people away over in the island stands. Over there he dromed. For them, too, he went through his tricks. He doubled back and forth on his course, clipped out fancy circles, swooped perpendicularly down, to catch himself just above the ground and rise again, his dragon fly responding to his control like a spirited, trained horse.

Noticing then the great throngs of people outside the grounds, gathered in the roads and on the hillsies, he made a great detour toward them. For their special benefit he again went through his breath-catching feats.

All day long he was greeted with cheers. He never failed to acknowledge these demonstrations—he waved his hands in answer, sometimes both hands at once.

When Willard took up a woman passenger, carrying her around the course once, not very high in the air, Grahame-White, not to be outdone in gallantry, invited Miss Marie A. Campbell to go up with him. He jumped from his Farman, ran to meet her, picked her up in the air, carrying her to the machine and seating her in the extra seat.

Grahame-White took Miss Campbell, who is a New York society girl, around the course twice. He took her twice as high and swooped and whirled in his course, and then after alighting, rode her around the front of the auto park, and wheeling, stopped in front of the main stand.

Throughout his whole performance, remarkable especially because he was capturing first honors in every contest—bomb throwing, speed, duration, distance and getaway—he was his own gracious self, winning every heart the way he made fun of his work—fun for himself and fun for the spectators.

In short bursts of speed, both Willard and Curtiss in the Curtiss biplanes made the spectators catch their breaths. In the bomb throwing contests, in which both Willard and Curtiss participated, the short laps over the outlined battleship called forth exhibitions of sharp turns, although in the speed tests the Curtiss plane fell 29 seconds behind Grahame-White's record of 6 minutes 1 second for the five and one-half miles of the three-lap course.

During this contest, at the close of the day, Johnstone in the Wright, and Grahame-White in his Farman, were circling the course in the duration contest.

The Wright machine and the Farman raced neck and neck for several moments, and at nearly every lap, the Curtiss machine, on its short laps over the battleship target, slashed in under them.

The race between Grahame-White and Johnstone was a fitting climax for an exciting day of the meet. The two had made about five laps, when Grahame-White, in his speedier biplane, lapped Johnstone, who was using the Wright machine in which Brookins made his climbing record.

Jumped to Death In Crowd's Presence

New York, Sept. 6.—Pursued by his two sisters, with whom he had quarreled, Charles Young ran to the roof of a five-story tenement and jumped to the street in sight of 500 persons. He was instantly killed.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE

Wisconsin Representative Made a Strong Fight

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

WISCONSIN VOTING TODAY

La Follette Will Win, Doubt Being Confined to Governorship

Milwaukee, Sept. 6.—There seems to be little doubt on the day of the Wisconsin primary election that Senator La Follette will receive the popular vote. So certain is this apparent outcome that the real interest in the campaign which ends today is not in the senatorship but in the tangled fight for the governorship, in which the chief issue is a mixture of county option and the problem of which candidate is really La Follette's choice for the executive post.

La Follette may easily carry the state and the fight for the governorship nomination, for which there are five candidates, is really between three, William M. Lewis, a retired automobile manufacturer; F. E. McGovern, candidate for the United States senate against Stephenson two years ago, and E. T. Fairchild.

COMPOSER EDWARDS SUCCUMBS AT LAST

Author of Many Successful Operas Dies In Yonkers

New York, Sept. 6.—Julian Edwards, one of the foremost of American composers, died at his home in Yonkers after a long illness. For for than a year Edwards has been suffering from a complication of diseases, but heart trouble was the ultimate cause of death.

His death removes from the theatrical and musical world one of their best and most versatile composers. Grand opera, as well as the lighter compositions by which he is best known to Americans, oratorios and sacred cantatas were all among his compositions. He was born in Manchester, Eng., in 1855.

ATTITUDE OF GAYNOR

Friends Say He Would Accept the Nomination For Governor

New York, Sept. 6.—If the Rochester convention nominates Mayor William J. Gaynor for governor he will accept. He is not and will not be an active candidate. He will remain the silent, picturesque personality of power, declining to become involved in political discussions during his convalescing period—at least a month—until the convention has acted. Only a breakdown in health or a recurrence of throat trouble will cause him to change from this stand.

The mayor's disposition as to the nomination was conveyed to an Evening World reporter after two intimate friends of the mayor had returned from Deepwells. The convictions of both are recorded. Neither would quote the mayor.

SLAIN BY BLACK HAND

Policeman, Wife and Six Children Are Killed In Revenge

Reggio, Italy, Sept. 6.—To the vengeance of the Black Hand society in New York is ascribed the revolting murder of Policeman Rovolino and his wife and six children in the village of Pellero, eight miles south of Reggio.

Villagers were horrified to find the members of the family lying dead, all of them having been terribly mutilated by blows from an axe.

The Rovolinos suddenly returned from the United States a short time ago and since then, it is said, two attempts were made to poison them. Rovolino himself spoke of the possibility of vengeance being directed against him.

other or to determine just what they were doing, they had an excellent view of the air ships as they went sailing with bird-like grace over the course.

GOOD POLICE ARRANGEMENTS

At the entrance to the field stood Quincy's new auto patrol wagon ready for instant service. Fortunately, however, it was not called upon, for in all that vast crowd there was not an arrest. In fact for such a large gathering it was a jolly good-natured crowd, ready and willing to put up with any little inconveniences good naturedly.

Inside of the field there were scores of uniformed officers who were under the personal direction of Chief Burrell, while mingling with the crowd were scores of private detectives and plain clothed police inspectors who kept their eyes open for pickpockets. At the house at the further end of the grand stand the police had their headquarters. Here a reserve force was kept in waiting ready to cover any point that they might be needed. in a large automobile that was kept in waiting. In this house an improvised cell had been erected, so that in case of an arrest the prisoner could have been locked up until the patrol wagon arrived to take him to the police station. It can be said, therefore that the police arrangements were perfect.

MANY NEWSPAPER MEN.

At the Neponset end of the grandstand was an open space for the use of those who had admission tickets only, while further on was a grandstand for those who desired to pay fifty cents extra for a seat. Along the front of the grandstand where seats were $1 was a row of private boxes.

In the centre of this row was a small building used by the officials of the meet while extending along from this was a long table for the use of the half hundred newspaper men that had been sent to cover the meet. All of the large newspapers of the country were represented including a Chinese sporting paper which had three of its staff present. Along the reporters table were a dozen telephone instruments Some of these were special lines to Boston newspaper officers. Others were special lines to telegraph offices while still others were for the general use of the reporters. In addition to these telephones there were half a dozen pay station booths situated in the rear of the grandstand.

Across the gateway was the automobile park which accommodated several hundred automobiles, each with its own private party while near them were the hangars or white tents beneath which were the flying machines.

While the crowd were anxiously waiting for the flying to commence the Boston Cadet band gave a concert in front of the grand stand, but after the flying commenced the musicians were more interested in what was going on in the air than in playing.

It was expected that the professional events would commence at 2 o'clock and at that hour there were fully ten thousand people inside of the field. It was 3 o'clock however before the megaphone man announced that Ralph Johnstone would fly in a Wright biplane at 3-10 for duration and distance.

DARIUS GREEN.

One of the most interested spectators on the reporters stand was John T. Trowbridge, the venerable author who forty years ago wrote that famous poem "Darius Green and his flying machine." Mr. Trowbridge is now 83 years of age, but one to have seen him Saturday would hardly have thought him that old. It was evidently his first visit to Quincy for he asked a representative of the Daily Ledger many questions about what the points of land were at Squantum head, and when told that was where Myles Standish had landed, he replied "Oh yes."

FLYING BEGINS.

By this time however Johnstone was seen to be about ready to start, and all eyes were on his biplane on the getaway. Suddenly the two propellors were seen to whirl. The next instant the machine ran along front of the grandstand, then rose gracefully in the air while the band played "Hail Columbia," and the crowd in the grand stand cheered. As he proceeded to encircle the course he began to rise higher until he had reached an altitude that was estimated at about 900 feet. He then circled the course again and again keeping steadily at it until he had been in the air an hour and twenty minutes, and had covered a distance of about 38 miles the course being one and three quarters miles around.

TWO BIPLANES UP.

After he had been in the air for a time it was announced that Walter Brookins would also make a try for the duration and distance prize. A few minutes later he was in the air and then there was double interest, and all eyes are turned heavenward. Both these machines were Wright biplanes, one of the newer pattern, and one of the older pattern.

SPEED TRIAL.

Then it was announced that C. F. Willard would go up immediately for speed record in a Curtis biplane and would encircle the course three times. He was soon in the air making the sight even more interesting. Then two more biplanes were brought onto the field and interest had reached a fever heat. These two aviators proved to be Clifford B. Harmon with a Farman biplane, and Grahame-White in a Farman biplane. The Englishman had little difficulty in rising and he was also soon flying over the course for speed and bomb dropping.

A MISHAP.

Harmon however had more difficulty. At his first try he sped across the whole length of the getaway but for some reason his front plane did not respond and he failed to rise. His machine was brought back and another start made. When almost across the field he was seen to rise off of the ground but only for a short distance. It was noticed that something was wrong, as the biplane was pointed toward the ground. He swung around the corner where the automobiles were parked and his machine was ditched in a small creek. When he landed his machine was totally damaged, but fortunately he escaped without injury. A crowd rushed in that direction, but the main body retained their seats. In a few minutes the Megaphine man announced that Mr. Harmon was uninjured, but the machine was a total wreck.

BOMB THROWING.

In the meantime the flyers continued to go over the course, but shortly before 5 o'clock all had alighted with the exception of Grahame-White who as he encircled the field dropped bombs on an outline of a battleship on the getaway, with funnel in the centre. Had it been a battleship and the bombs dropped been filled with high explosive the battleship would have been a goner as one of the bombs droped squarely within the inner circle. All of the others dropped on a space that represented the deck of the battleship.

There had been a few sprinkles of rain during the afternoon, but by this time it was raining in earnest and the crowd started home. All of the man birds alighted.

Glenn Curtis however went up in a Curtis biplane for a brief tryout. Shortly before 6 o'clock Grahame-White went up in his Bleriot monoplane and made a few circles of the course.

During the first slight shower the crowd did not waver as they seemed not to care how much their finery got wet as long as they saw the flyers. When it begun to rain hard however there was a general scamper for the street. Newspapers, and any old thing was pressed into service to keep the ladies hats and shoulders from getting wet, but they afforded scant protection.

ALIGHTED GRACEFULLY.

The alighting was fully as interesting as was the rising. While the man-birds were in the air many were asking the question as to how they would get back to earth again. But they all did and did it as gracefully as a sea gull. Grahame-White had such perfect control of his machine that he ran it to the entrance to his tent. While it was interesting to see the biplanes in he air, it was much more interesting to see them start and finish.

STREET BLOCADE.

It was after the meet that the vexing part of the day came. About this time a driver of a two-horse team loaded with what looked like the machinery of a merry-go-round was coming down Squantum street and got stuck in the mud. In trying to get out his team was pulled across the street in such a manner as to completely block the street so that it was impossible to get cars or autos either way. A long string of empty cars became stalled between the boulevard and the entrance gate and there were several hundred automobiles stretched out from the field to the boulevard unable to move. In the meantime there was a crowd of men and women waiting in the rain near the entrance gate for the cars. The refreshment tents in that neighborhood were quickly filled up, but they were entirely inadequate to furnish shelter for the waiting crowd. The result was that many got wet through to the skin. Some said to themselves that they would get no wetter walking than they would standing still, and they therefore started to walk toward Atlantic. When the stalled cars were reached they pilled on and the dozen cars in waiting were quickly filled. As long as the cars were full it was useless to try and run them to Squantum, so the trolleys were shifted and they were run back to the depot. By the time they returned the blockade had been lifted and cars, automobiles, carriages, tally-hoes, etc., were moving in slow but sure order. It was after 7 o'clock however before some of the people reached Hancock street or the Atlantic depot.

SQUANTUM !?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY !?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

MOWEN ACCOMPANY

Then the aviator circles the field. If he is out for duration and distance he keeps steadily circling the one and three-fourts mile course. If he is trying for speed he makes three circles and then comes down. If he is trying in the bomb throwing event he sails back and forth dropping imaginary bombs on the outline of a battleship marked on the getaway. There are two large white spots denoting the battleship funnels and the trick is to drop a bomb from a hight of not less than 100 feet and have it enter this funnel. Grahame-White did it several times on the holiday, and the shout that went up showed that his work was appreciated. Several other aviators tried the trick, but none hit the funnel although their bombs struck what would be the unprotected part of a battleship.

If the aviator is trying for the fastest getaway he rises into the air and goes just far enough to turn about and come down.

If the start is thrilling, the alighting is much more so. Approaching from the Neponset shore the bird man is seen suddenly to head downward and to one who has not yet seen the alighting it looks as though the machine would be dashed to pieces. But no, when a few feet from earth, the plane changes from a downward course to a level course. The propellor blades begin to revolve less rapidly and the aeroplane settles gracefully on solid earth. Stricking the ground the machine bounds along a short distance, the engine stops and the aviator comes to a stop. So well did Grahame-White have his planes under control, that after striking the getaway he often runs along the ground, coming to a final stop exactly where he desired. With such a performance as this, is it any wonder that the thousands of spectators in the grand stand arose as one person and shouted their approval.

The events on the afternoon of the holiday had reached the interesting point when it began to rain, and rain it did good and hard for quite a few minutes. Many immediately made tracks for home. tOhers possessing more of the sporting spirit remained to see it out and those that did remain were not sorry. The sun came out again soon, and the Glenn Curtis went up in a biplane. As he rose it was seen that he had a lady on the seat with him. This immediately caught the crowd. The lady represented the Boston Traveller Miss Phoebe Dwight. Not to be outdone Grahame-White quickly walked to the press stand, and the next minute he had a young lady on his arm. This was Miss Marie Campbell. Placing her on the seat at his side he quickly arose into the air. Instead of making the course at first he headed for the grand stand going directly over it for its entire length. If the feat of Glenn Curtis caught the crowd Grahame-White did, and as one person the crowd arose and cheered to the echo. It was the crowning event of the day and the crowd were hypnotized.

Saturday Mayor Shea secured a bunch of tickets from the management for the city officials and councilmen, and Sunday evening these were sent to the homes of the members of the City Council and city officials by police officers, so that many of the city government and their ladies were present. The summary of the days work will be found elsewhere.

While it was raining hard the people tried to seek shelter everywhere but without much success. A large number entered the Aero pavilion just outside the entrance, a large tent with a wooden floor. The proprietor found he was doing little business so he crowded them into one corner. The foundation was weak, however, and the floor settled two feet with a crash. It was amusing to see the people scramble out.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

James F. Moran a veteran of the Grand Army was killed shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday night by being run over by an electric car at the corner of Washington and Union streets. The car was a trailer to a East Weymouth car and left City Square at 7.20. It was in charge of Conductor Richard Coughlin and Motorman John S. Pitts. The motorman who was arrested by Chief Burrell, said that as he approached the crossing he saw a man standing at the corner and supposed that he wanted to take the car. He therefore slowed down to stop, and that just as the car reached the man he fell over onto the track. He was rolled under the fender but the car was stopped before the body reached the wheels. It was necessary, however, to lift the car to get the body out.

The police ambulance was summoned, but Mr. Moran died before it arrived. The body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms, and the motorman taken to the police station where he was later bailed out under $2,000 bonds.

Mr. Moran formerly lived in Weymouth, and was a shoemaker by trade, althought he had not worked at that trade for some time, but had been at work for the Street department of the city. He resided with his daughter, Mrs. Timothy Dolan, at 74 Union street:. He leaves a son and daughter.

NEW PATROL SERVICE.

The new auto patrol wagon did good service Monday morning when it made a quick run toward Houghs Neck. There was a dance there which started in at midnight, and the gang came up in the first morning car about 6 o'clock. On the way up they amused themselves by ringing in fares and pulling the bell ropes. Word was telephoned to the police station and the patrol auto met the car near the Adams farm. It was run up along side of the car, and five young men taken off. They gave their names as Cornelius Driscoll, 86 B street, South Boston; Ambrose Mullaney, 7 Willett street, Wollaston; Edward, Bryan, 13 Cross street, West Quincy; John Mulkean and Michael Mulkean of 112 8th street, South Boston.

State Officer John C. Scott and Detective Levinson arrested three young men at the Aviation field, Monday afternoon, for larceny. It is alleged that the three men were selling grand stand tickets at reduced prices. It is thought that men were in league with one of the ticket takers and obtained possession of them in that way. The men arrested gave their names as William Shea of 31 Gayland street, Boston; Walter J. Hart, of 27 Bell street, Houghs Neck and George Edwards, of 119 Warren avenue, Boston. They were taken to the police station on the field and sent to the police station in the patrol auto.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Miss Lucretia A. Pierce of Revere road died suddenly on Monday at the City Hospital. She developed pleural pneumonia on Sunday and was taken to the hospital, but there was no chance. Her brother Charles E. Pierce of Boston was with her druing the night and speaks highly of our hospital. She lived alone, and leaves another brother George L. Pierce, also of Boston. Miss Pierce was in the first class to enter the Quincy High school in 1855. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at Bethany chapel.

SHOULD LEND A HAND.

At Bethany church Sunday evening Dr. Hardy gave an excellent address on "The relation of the church to the wage earner." Taking for his hypothesis the fact that there is a great need of help in the solution of the Labor problem, he proved, quite conclusively that the church could and should lend a hand. As the most democratic of organizations she should do much in breaking down prejudice and class distinction and elevate public opinion to such a high plane that a square deal for both labor and capital would be the only possible outcome. And in order to bring this to pass the brotherhood idea, which was one of the great doctrines given to the world by the head of the church must be made to prevail. Thus the mission of the church is to work for this ideal, and thus make possible a just distribution of the wealth of the nation. The outlook is optimistic and the rapid growth of the third party, which stands for fair play, and takes its standards from the Christian principles, assures us of the ultimate triumph of the ideal.

AT FIRST CHURCH.

Services were resumed Sunday morning at First church. The attendance was good though many are still away on vacations. The pastor Rev. E. C. Butler is traveling in Europe, going over to attend the World's congress in Berlin, and the assistant pastor Rev. C. B. Ames was in the pulpit, and in response to a request from organized labor made labor the subject of his sermon, treating it in a liberal and comprehensive way. The music by the church quartet with Mr. Weston at the organ rounded out a most harmonious and reverent service.

SWEDISH BAPTISTS.

A convention of the Yuong People's union of the New England Swedish Baptist church was held in Quincy on Sunday and Monday with the Swedish Baptist church at Brewers corner. A special service for the Sunday school children was held at 9 o'clock, and at 10.30 the regular service was held, at which Rev. Robert Larson preached the sermon. At the afternoon service there were addresses by N. J. Miller of Hyde Park, Rev. G. C. Nordgren of Boston, and Rev. Alfred S. Lindbloom of Norwood. A general conference was held in the evening. On the holiday the delegates held an outing at Bethel beach when addresses were made by Rev. D. L. Langerstrom and Rev. J. O. Buckland of Boston.

BRIEFS

The Charles R . Saffords returned Labor day from South Royalston where they have been passing the summer.

John Curtis was a guest on Friday evening at Brockton at the silver wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Boyden. Over 250 guests extended congratulations.

Quite a delegation of G. A. R. men and the Woman's Relief corps plan to attend the meeting of the Norfolk County association at Stoughton tomorrow.

Mrs. Clara Redding Whiton and daughter Ruth of Quincy Point have returned from Long pond, Plymouth where they were guests at the summer home of Walter Redding.

Gamecocks In Panama.

The color line is not very distinctly drawn in the Latin republics. The San Blas Indians are found in and around Panama. Like the Seminoles of Florida, they never were conquered. A curious feature of native life in Panama is the cockfighting, which, like baseball in the United States, is more attractive to the public than any other form of recreation. Even the workmen on the streets have favorite birds tethered near by and seize every opportunity to test their prowess. The click-click of steel spurs as the birds strike each other, the spurting of blood and the clamor of men indulging in small wagers seem to supply the mental excitement that Spaniards find in bullfights and that English speaking races derive from less brutal contests. The backer of each gamecock stands behind it, and if his bird shows signs of exhaustion he takes it up and puts its bill into his mouth while he inflates its exhausted lungs. One gamecock in a fight witnessed by the writer, appearing almost dead, was thus revived, went back into the pit and finally killed its opponent.—National Magazine.

A German Legend.

The Germans have a legend of Frederick Barbarossa that he is not dead, but in an enchanted sleep, sitting with his knights at a marble table in the cavern of Kyffhausen, in the Harz mountains. His long red beard has grown during this long enchantment and, covering the table, descends to the floor, and he sits thus waiting the moment that will set him free. There he has been kept for long centuries. There he must stay for ages.

The Soft Answer.

He—Ugh. I'm going out of this, and you won't see me again until the day of judgment.

She (sweetly, getting the last word, as usual)—All right, dear, and if you aren't feeling in a better temper please let it be well on in the afternoon.—London Saturday Review.

THOUSANDS IN GREAT TERROR

When Shrine at Religious Celebration Catches Fire

AN "ANGEL" SUSPENDED IN AIR

Magical Effect on Maddened Mob When She Recites Words of Benediction Which Was to Have Brought Sicilian Fete of Immaculate Conception to an End—Youthful Heroine Unmoved by Proximity of Flames

Boston, Sept. 6.—The presence of mind of a little Sicilian girl who, suspended from a wire strung from house top to house top across South Margin street, was saying the "Angel's Benediction," that was to have brought to a close the Sicilian fete of the Immaculate Conception was all that saved a crowd of more than 10,000 persons from a disastrous panic, as row after row of decorations on houses on one side of the street burst into flame.

The heroine was Josephine Sansone, 10 years old. She had been swung out on the wire and drawn to the middle, a picturesque little figure in a flowing robe of white, just as one spectator, too eager, upset one of the thousands of candles that flickered along South Margin street in honor of the day, and the first words she said were drowned out in a roar of terror from those below, as yards of gauzy decorations above the grandstand, on which there sat 300 men, women and children, caught and flamed.

The occupants of the stand went wild as the flames swathed the front of the building in a sheet of fire. Those in the front rows leaped ten feet to the pavements; men, women and children fought and struggled to free themselves from the press. And then, in the tongue of their fathers, the "Angel's Benediction" came down to the maddened mob. The Sansone girl, forgetful of her task for the moment, as she had been forgotten, had remembered and found her tongue.

The effect was something more than magical. The words, associated with the Sicilian celebration of this particular fete since time immemorial, brought the cooler heads in the mob below to their senses. The flames were not twenty feet away from the Sansone girl, yet she continued in calm, childish treble, and from her the crowd caught courage. And as they watched and listened, many forgot their fears. The result was that not a single person was injured, although it seemed at the first as if many must be.

The fete of the Immaculate Conception means much to the Sicilians in the way of preparation, decoration and celebration. The celebration attracted Sicilians from all parts of the state. The decorations made dingy South Margin street blossom with color. There were banners and flags, sacred images and candles. There was a band, a grandstand, the crowd and the wire that was to add illusion to the "Angel's Benediction."

It was not until after the flames had been extinguished by the fire apparatus that the little girl was drawn back from her position in mid-air. This is what she said, when she was asked if she wasn't frightened:

"I wasn't frightened. I knew that I better say the 'Angel's Benediction,' because it's really a prayer, you know, and when the fire started there was more reason than ever to pray, wasn't there? I will have to say it again tomorrow."

The decorations which caught fire were outside the tenement occupied by Mrs. Mary M. C. DeAngelis, who at the time was in the street below, in charge of one of the divisions of little girls in the fete processional. She ran up into her house, and with several of the policemen tried to beat out the flames before the arrival of the fire apparatus.

IN THE BAY STATE

Hamlin Willing to Be Nominated For Governor by Democrats

Boston, Sept. 6.—Charles S. Hamlin announces that he will accept the nomination for governor of Massachusetts if the Democratic state convention should name him to head the ticket.

Mr. Hamlin has for a long time been discussed as a desirable candidate by many Democrats of prominence in Massachusetts. This is the first time that the people have learned that he is ready to be the standard bearer, if his party wants him at the head of the ticket.

James H. Vahey is an avowed aspirant for the nomination; Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston is a tentative candidate and Congressman Foss is another. The prospects are that there will be an ample field from which the convention is privileged to make a choice.

TIME TO DISCARD "GENERALITIES"

Taft Wants Conservationists to Come Down to Details

Minneapolis, Sept. 6.—In a speech before the conservation congress in St. Paul President Taft won a quick response from his thousands of hearers by an appeal to practical common sense in dealing with conservation problems.

In the opinion of many who heard him he also made answer to the recent agitation for a "new nationalism," of a federal centralization of power, by declaring that the only safe course to pursue was to hold fast to the limitations of the constitution and to regard as sacred the power of the states.

Mr. Taft made frequent references to the services of Theodore Roosevelt in the cause of conservation, but declared that the time for rhapsodies and glittering generalities had passed. He suggested to the congress that it should invite its speakers to come down to details, to specific evils and specific remedies.

At the fair grounds the president delivered a Labor Day address, the most notable utterance of which was a statement that he knew of no intention on the part of the government to prosecute labor leaders under the anti-trust law.

SAILORS SUFFER HORRORS

Six Days In Small Boat Without Either Food or Water

Fishguard, Wales, Sept. 6.—The steamer Mauretania arrived here, having on board Captain Pinkham and fifteen of his crew, who were picked up by the Cunarder after they had been at sea in a small boat for six days without food or water, following the burning of their vessel, the British tramp steamer West Point.

The rescued captain and his men suffered severely and only by dint of hard work saved their little boat from sinking.

"We suffered horrors," said Pinkham, in telling his story. "We were without food or water and were very cold. The men had to bail the boat incessantly to keep it afloat."

BOYS ROCK GRANDSTAND

It Collapses and Crushes Out the Life of a Little Boy

Boston, Sept. 6.—As a toll to the prank of several young men, the life of Morris Sweet, aged 11, was crushed out, three other boys were injured and 200 barely escaped serious injury at the Boston college athletic field, when the grandstand, rocked by a number of boys, collapsed.

The stand fell with a crash that could be heard several blocks, carrying with it 200 men, women and children, who had gathered to witness a ball game.

THE NEW TELEPHONE RATES

BULLETIN No. 1

We have accepted the recommendations of the Massachusetts Highway Commission relative to rates and service in the Boston and Suburban Districts and will make them effective as soon as practicable.

It is impossible at this time, because of the extensive preparation required, to fix a date for the complete application of the new schedule in all parts of the territory, but BY NOVEMBER 1 we expect to be able to offer service under the provisions of this schedule TO THOSE WHO DESIRE IT.

New subscribers desiring immediate service will be taken subject to present rates until facilities for operation under the new schedule are supplied, at which time, after due notice, they will be transferred to the new schedule.

In some of our exchanges these facilities can be furnished within a few weeks; in others it will be a matter of months.

It is our desire to apply these new rates without unnecessary delay and to give them a complete and impartial trial.

The rewriting of upwards of one hundred thousand contracts, the rearrangement of subscribers' lines and numbers to conform thereto, the reconstruction of switchboards, and the building of the large number of additional lines required, is a large task and one to be carried out under careful plans providing both for the doing of the work and for the least possible disturbance of the service.

We ask the indulgence of our subscribers, therefore, while planning and executing these changes. Before inviting their acceptance of this new schedule we shall issue a series of bulletins giving the fullest publicity to the various rates quoted and such explanation as may seem necessary to a clear understanding of them. We shall also supply such detailed information or advice as they may request regarding their individual telephone requirements, in order that they may select the particular class of service best suited to their needs.

The following recapitulation may anticipate many inquiries:

1. We expect by November 1 to be able to offer service in any exchange, in accordance with the new schedule, to those who desire it.

2. The changes necessary for complete operation under the new schedule cannot be made for several months.

3. Until the Company can furnish service under the new schedule, present rates may be retained by those having existing contracts thereunder. Before any change in schedules is made due notice will be given.

Hard to attend to household duties
With a constantly aching back.
A woman should not have a bad back,
And she wouldn't if the kidneys were well.
Doan's Kidney Pills make well Kidneys.

Here is a Quincy woman who endorses this claim:

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, 39 Quincy avenue, Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement or an attempt to stoop, sent sharp pains through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I had known so many people who had used them with benefit, that I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. The use of three boxes convinced me that they were the best kidney remedy to be had. I am now in good health."

EYES FIXED ON VERMONT FIGHT

NO DOUBT REGARDING RESULT

Size of Republican Plurality, However, Expected to Indicate Party's Strength in November—New Hampshire Testing Its Direct Primary Law—Maine Democrats Expect to Elect Governor and Half the Congressmen

Boston, Sept. 6.—Turning from California and Kansas and Iowa, where progressive Republicans seem to have swept everything before them in the recent primaries, American statesmen and politicians are watching for the returns from Vermont and New Hampshire.

Vermont today holds the first of the state elections. New Hampshire today is the scene of the first state-wide primary election to be held in one of the states of the east. Then, on Monday of next week, the voters of Maine go to the polls.

No doubt enters into the situation in Vermont. The question in the Green Mountain State concerns merely the size of the plurality of John A. Mead of Rutland, Republican, over Charles D. Watson of St. Albans, Democrat. Two years ago Governor Prouty was elected over James E. Burke by 29,645.

Nobody looks for a plurality of that size for Mead, but the Republican managers hope to keep the figures above 20,000. This is the "normal" plurality. If it falls below 20,000 the indication is said to be for Republican reverses throughout the country. As a matter of fact there is a purely local element in the Vermont situation that outsiders may not know about. Mead's candidacy was distasteful to some of the Republican war horses. These men have not forgiven him for winning the nomination and Watson is likely to run better than any Democrat has run for years.

In New Hampshire it is really a question of "Roosevelt." The men who are steering the Republican progressive fight up there are Winston Churchill, William E. Chandler, Robert P. Bass and others of the colonel's intimate friends. Bass is the progressive candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. His campaign was essentially anti-Boston and Maine railroad.

The candidate of the regular Republicans, or old guard, is Bertram Ellis of Keene. All the captains of politics are with Ellis. It is not unlikely that the progressive-regular split in New Hampshire will result in the election of Carr, Democrat, in November, but it wants to be remembered that while the Republican candidate for governor two years ago, a regular, won at the polls by only 3344, President Taft carried the state on the same day by 18,000 over Bryan.

Scarcely of secondary importance in New Hampshire is the contest between Sherman E. Burroughs and Cyrus A. Sulloway for the congressional nomination in the First district. Burroughs is of the progressives. Sulloway has been in congress sixteen years—holding the New Hampshire record in this regard—and is an intimate friend and warm supporter of Cannon. The election in New Hampshire takes place in November.

Advices from Maine, which holds its election on Monday of next week, indicate the election of Frederick W. Plaisted of Augusta by the Democrats, over Governor Fernald of West Poland. Fernald was elected two years ago by a plurality of 7263, the smallest since the Democrats carried the state in 1882.

Maine Democrats say they will also carry one and probably two, of the four congressional districts. The late advices from the west told of the supremacy of insurgents, or progressives, over regular Republicans. Here, for the first time since the Democratic successes last spring in the Fourteenth Massachusetts and Thirty-second New York districts, there will be a measure on the feeling of the people as between Republicans and Democrats.

MENAGERIE FROM THE POLE

Whitney and Rainey Return From Their Arctic Hunting Trip

Bristol, R. I., Sept. 6.—Two polar bears, two walrusses, six musk-ox calves and a great variety of birds are among the living trophies brought back from the far north by Harry Whitney and Paul J. Rainey, the wealthy sportsmen who made this port after a summer's hunting beyond the Arctic circle.

In addition to the living specimens brought back from the Arctic, the Beothic is laden with skins, furs, hides, horns, tusks and other souvenirs valuable both to the curio hunter and the naturalist.

Dynamiters Wreck Bridge Plant

Peoria, Ills., Sept. 6.—Dynamiters demolished the Lucas Bridge and Iron company's plant. Night Watchman Gebbardt was seriously injured. Four nearby buildings were damaged.

GIVES ROOSEVELT THE LIE

Unknown Man Is Bounced From the Platform at Fargo

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 6.—A man who fought his way to ex-President Roosevelt and called him a liar gave a bad scare at Island Park in this city. Roosevelt seized the man and helped to eject him from the platform. The colonel had just finished his Labor Day address, following a labor parade.

The man had fought his way to the platform and shouted:

"I want to know who is paying the expenses of this trip of yours about the country? Your expenses are being paid by the people of the United States."

"I consider that to be an impertinent question," said Roosevelt. "However, I have no objection to telling you," he added, "that the expenses of the party are being paid by the magazine of which I am one of the editors."

"You lie," the man shouted so loudly that hundreds of persons in the crowd could hear him.

As he spoke the words Roosevelt stepped forward quickly and seized his arm above the elbow. He pushed the arm forward, turning the man half around so that he was powerless to use the arm. The stranger quickly disappeared in the crowd.

IN MEMORY OF ALTGELD

Former Governor Is Eulogized at Unveiling of Tablets

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The late John P. Altgeld, formerly governor of Illinois, received the name of "first insurgent" here at the unveiling of four bronze memorial tablets under the direction of the John P. Altgeld Memorial association.

The former state executive was denominated as among the first officials to take up a fight against special privileges, in an address by George F. Williams of Massachusetts. The dedication was attended by members of Chicago labor organizations.

The tablets, which will be placed in Graceland cemetery, are dedicated to "John Peter Altgeld, citizen, volunteer, soldier, lawyer, judge, orator and governor of Illinois, who died March 12, 1902." Each contains selections from his public utterances.

MANDAC IS GIVEN UP BY HIS OWN PEOPLE

They Aid In Putting Down the Revolt In the Philippines

Manila, Sept. 6.—The uprising in Nueva Vizceya led by Simeon Mandac, the former governor of Ilocos Norte, came to an inglorious end when Mandac fell into the hands of the constabulary, having been seized and surrendered by the people of the province among whom he had sought to stir up trouble.

A few of Mandac's right hand men were also arrested and his other followers dispersed. It is estimated that the outlaws originally numbered 500.

A feature of the short-lived uprising was the co-operation of the natives in running down the disturbers.

Mandac will now have a chance to serve the fourteen years imprisonment which has been hanging over him since his conviction for killing a prisoner while he was governor, unless he gets more severe punishment for his recent escapade.

Mandac jumped his bail while an appeal from the sentence of imprisonment was pending.

PARENTS ARE SATISFIED

Youthful Couple Granted a Wedding License by Superior Court

Medford, Mass., Sept. 6.—Charlotte M. Silliker, 17 years old, and Robert S. Scott, 16 years old, both of Medford, applied to the superior court of Middlesex county for a license to marry. They were granted the license after Scott proved to the court that he was capable of supporting a wife.

It is declared they are the first couple in Massachusetts to secure a license before the courts owing to youth.

The wedding was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Susie E. Enos, last night, Rev. Edward Vandermark performing the ceremony. The parents of both are perfectly satisfied with the match.

PARACHUTE FAILS HIM

Balloonist Drops a Hundred Feet and Is Fatally Injured

Keene, N. H., Sept. 6.—With hundreds of people looking on in awful suspense, Emile F. Hess, a Boston balloonist, who has performed under the name of "Professor Miller," was fatally injured when his second parachute failed to open in time and he plunged to earth.

The parachute opened only twenty-five feet from the ground and Hess' drop was practically unrelieved.

Hess is 30 years old. He traveled all over the country as a balloonist and has made in career some 500 ascensions.

Miss Alice Sargent, the richest woman skipper in American waters, if not in the world, asked and expected no quarter from male competitors when she sailed her sonder boat Wolf in the regattas off Marblehead. She entered the elimination trials this year for the right to race against the Spanish sonder boats which came over to America, representing the Royal Spanish Yacht club, to race for the Taft cup.

Miss Sargent has won several prizes in yachting regattas and is no fair weather yachtswoman, but is as daring as a man, driving her boat out in rough wind and water and delighting in a stiff breeze. She scorns the peaceful monotony of an open harbor so long as her boat can stick outside in open water. Miss Sargent, with her parents, Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of Holm Lea, Brookline, Mass., is spending the summer at Marblehead Neck, where she is convenient to the yacht clubs.

In addition to being a skilled yachting sailor, Miss Sargent is an expert golfer, tennis player and horsewoman and has a considerable reputation as a pedestrian. Her favorite methods of exercise outdoors, besides yachting, are walking and horseback riding.

"The real secret of health, strength and beauty of form and face," she says, "lies in restriction of the diet to simple fare and in the consistent following of such recreative exercises as walking, running, playing tennis, golf or other forms of sport which bring into play both the physical and mental activities of a person." Miss Sargent practices what she preaches and follows outdoor life and sports almost to the entire exclusion of social functions and indoor life commonly entailed upon society women and women of wealth. She advocates all manner of simple outdoor sports for the recuperation of health; but, in addition, she decrees that the simple food regime must likewise be put into effect if one would be ultimately successful in gaining perfect health.

"When one is searching for health," she says, "there are many things to be considered. Constitutionally we are many of us quite unlike. I think each woman should study herself and experiment with different recreations before going ahead with systematic programs of exercise. It is sometimes not the things we like to do best that are the best for us. In my own case I feel that I have won and kept my own good health by consistent and constant recreative walking.

"Each morning I take a brisk walk of some length, perhaps several miles. There is no lagging on the way, and I make it a practice not to have all the distance covered lie over level walks, but rather up some of our steep hills and, if possible, along the rougher streets of the outlying districts."

Impressions of Polaire.

Mlle. Polaire, the French actress, celebrated for being the "ugliest woman in the world," has recently returned to Paris, and this is what she says about American women: "American women are charming, but they certainly have a sense of modesty that is purely their own. Would you believe, they even pulled up my skirts to see my legs! I like the American man immensely. He is always well groomed, smart and elegant. Everything about him suggests that he has a daily bath. In dealing with women he may not have the Frenchman's esprit, charm and delicate little ways, but he is 'all right.'"

In answer to a question as to what she thought of the appearance of the American woman she replied:

"She is too slack in her appearance. She does not make as good an impression as the American man. She dresses horribly. She copies the Parisienne, but does it badly. She sticks an immense hat on her head without knowing whether it will suit her or not. It is a fine hat, she thinks, so long as it is adorned with immense feathers. They are mad for feathers over there. If they were not afraid of stepping on them they would have them sweeping to their feet.

"I am speaking of the American woman now solely as a woman. As audiences both men and women in America are charming. They have great taste for the theater. They know music well and are quick to recognize and appreciate the efforts of an artist to please them. In a word, they love art."

What Is an Element?

In his little book called "The Elements" Sir William A. Tilden defines an element as "a substance from which by the operation of ordinary chemical processes only one kind of matter can be obtained." This is something quite different from the four elements of Aristotle—fire, water, earth and air—or the salt, sulphur and mercury of the alchemists. Even in modern times the conception of what an element really is has changed somewhat. Sir William adds: "Until quite recently the elements of the inorganic world were supposed to be fixed, immutable with the lapse of ages or under the mighty forces concerned in the making of worlds. But within a few years we have learned that the atoms at least are continually crumbling away. It is impossible to say whether all may not be suffering a slow waste which in the long run may lead back to the primal chaos."

LAND COURT

To George A. Litchfield of Braintree, in the County of Norfolk; Willard Welch of Malden, in the County of Middlesex; the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of Boston, in the County of Suffolk; the Trustees of Amherst College of Amherst, in the County of Hampshire; the Ladies City Mission in New Bedford, the New Bedford City Mission, the New Bedford Port Society and the Trinitarian Church of New Bedford, all of New Bedford, in the County of Bristol; all in said Commonwealth; Alfred L. Goodrich of Oneida, in the State of New York; the American Missionary Association of New York, in the County and State of New York; the Spelman Seminary of Atlanta, in the State of Georgia; the heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Hattie E. Giles formerly of said Atlanta, and of Ivory H. Bartlett, Jr., formerly of said New Bedford, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Lelia M. Rollins of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of said Quincy, called Wollaston, and being the lot marked "Heirs of Ivory H. Bartlett, No. 17" on a plan entitled "Plan of Lots in Block 1, Section 2, Wollaston Heights, Quincy, Mass." drawn by Ernest W. Branch, C. E., dated May 1906 and filed with said petition. Said lot is bounded, as shown on said plan, Northeasterly by Highland Avenue sixty six and 5-10 ((66.6) feet; Southeasterly by land now of Alfred L. Goodrich and George A. Litchfield, formerly of Cannie Z. Rippey, one hundred seventy five (175) feet; Southwesterly by land now or formerly of Willard Welsh sixty six and 6-10 (66.6) feet; and Northwesterly by land now or formerly of Hattie E. Giles one hundred seventy five (175) feet.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twelfth day of September A. D. 1910, at ten o'clock in the forenoon to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty second day of August in the year nineteen hundred and ten.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

BRIEFS

Considerable local news intended for today's paper will appear tomorrow.

Roy L. Sidelinger of Presidents hill left this week for a three weeks' vacation in Nobleboro, Maine.

A regular regular meeting of the Quincy Board of Trade will be held tomorrow evening, when the special topic will be "Telephone rates."

Mr. and Mrs. Hannant of West Townsend, formerly of Quincy, have moved into the house of Robert Newcomb on Hall place.

Miss Ardis Raupach of 12 Hall place returned Saturday from Eastport, Maine where she has been spending the past month with relatives.

Miss Pauletta Kristofferson of Crescent street returned Friday after a pleasant stay of nine weeks at St. Luke's home, Roxbury.

William Williams of West Quincy, who has been spending the summer at the home of his parents on Barry street returned Saturday to Stafford Springs, Conn.

Walter H. Barnard a conductor on the Old Colony Street Railway has returned from the Fenway hospital, Boston, where he underwent a successful operation, and is resting comfortably at his home No. 87 Granite street.

F. W. Suitor of Barre, Vt., was elected to the position of secretary and treasurer of the quarry workers' international union on Saturday by a vote of 1125 against 429 for P. J. Dacey.

There were a large number of cases from all towns of the district at court this morning. They included cases for drunkenness, assault, larceny, disturbance on a public conveyance and idle and disorderly women.

West Quincy people will have a continuous concrete sidewalk from the depot to City Hall in two ways after the new sidewalks are laid on Water, Coepland and Granite streets.

At the Hall Place church Sunday morning Carl H. Raupach spoke on the subject, "The dignity of labor, taking his text from Isaiah 41-6-7. The Epworth League devotional service was lead by Miss Ada Williams. The evening subject was "Mended lives," the text being found in Hosea 11-8-9.

QUINCY—LINCOLN.

The game between the Quincys and the Lincolns of the Old Colony League was postponed on account of rain.

OTHER GAMES.

At Watertown on the holiday the Beacons defeated the St. Marys 8 to 7.

The Cranch A. A. Juniors defeated the Warren Stars on the holiday by a score of 16 to 6.

BASKET BALL LEAGUE.

Some good basket ball may be expected in Quincy the coming winter for this city will have a team in the professional Bay State league, which was organized at Brockton last evening, with teams from Brockton, Charlestown, Hyde Park, Randolph Stoughton and Quincy.

The league members will meet again next week to consider an application from Attleboro.

Players will be under contract and will not be allowed to jump from one team to another. Games will be played two or three nights a week, the schedule to start Nov. 22. A schedule committee was appointed consisting of Patrick Stack of Brockton, James H. Rudderham of Randolph, and Thomas S. Lawrence of Charlestown.

games and scores

ADAMS VICTORY.

The Adams A. A. defeated the Bigelaws 3 to 1 in a well played game on the holiday. Both pitchers were effective and the fielding of Saunders of the igelows was exceptionally good. Both teams did creditable work conside ng the poor condition of the grounds. The game was stopped at the end of the seventh inning since the Old Colony leaguers claimed the field.

ATLANTICS WIN AGAIN

Defeat Makaria Boys in Big Score Game

In rather a listless exhibition of ball playing, Atlantic defeated the Makarias in the last game of the season. Mitchell started the game for the Makarias but was hit so freely that Tupper was put in the box in the fourth inning. He was slightly more effective. Hoyt did some good hitting for the Atlantics. Curtis contributed the only feature of the game by making a difficult catch of a fly in deep center field. Errors were frequent and were responsible for the majority of the runs.

HOLIDAY FOOTBALL.

The Fore Rivers were very successful on Labor Day. At the Scottish Clans picnic at Caledonian Grove, Roxbury, they defeated the Lynn Fosse aggregation by a score of two goals to one. This game was followed by one with the Boston Americans in which the Quincy team was again victorious taking their opponents into camp to the tune of one goal to nothing. Fore River was represented by the following players: P. Tait, J. McDonald, T. Richie, R. Hughes and R. Farrell.

At the Labor picnic at New Downer Landing they continued their winning streak and first medals were awarded to the team. In the first game the McGregors were defeated by two goals to one corner, and the final contest of the day gave Fore River victory over the Boston Rangers whom they defeated by two goals and one corner to nothing. McGregor Melville, R. Lewis, Elliot and Carruthers were awarded medals for these victories.

MCGREGORS WIN.

The soccer season opened successfully for the McGregors of the Boston District League on Saturday. The Lynn Fosse team met defeat on their home grounds by a score of 4 to 2. Rennie scored all four goals for the Quincy team. The McGregors played good football, and the outlook is bright for a successful season.

To Renovate Old Curtains.

If in getting your window draperies ready for fall you find them in a very worn condition they can be made to look like new in the following way: Cut the lower and side borders from a full length curtain, following the designs instead of a straight line, and lift up on the net a half yard or until they measure a window sill length. Pin or baste to position and sew around on the machine, afterward cutting away the torn net beneath. Launder in the usual way and you will be pleased with the result, no seams being visible.

Sympathetic Admiration.

Dinks—So you enjoyed the circus? Winks—Yes; I was particularly interested in the juggler. I'll bet that man could get any number of bundles from a street car to the train without dropping one of them.—St. Louis Times.

Counting the Cost.

"So you want to marry my daughter, do you, young man?"

"Y-e-s, s-i-r."

"Well, can you support a family?"

"H-how many are there of you, s-sir?"—St. Louis Star.

W. Y. C. ANNUAL RUN.

The annual club run of the Wollaston Yacht club to Marblehead was made on Sunday, and a more delightful day for a sail would have been hard to find. The yachts to participate in the run were:

Corneta—Commodore L. F. Crosscup.

Thordis—Capt. Frank E. Dawes.

Leda—Vice Commodore F. T. Taylor.

Busy Bee—Capt. W. J. Coombs.

Claytonia—Capt. Frank Lombard.

Aspinquid—Capt. Frank Lombard.

Creole—Capt. S. D. Elmer.

Eleanor—Capt. W. L. Jefferson.

Monday morning the fleet put into Lynn harbor where they took part in the interclub races of Labor day.

WON BY DOLLY.

The postponed open race of the Boston Yacht club and of the one-design boats of the Hull club was sailed Saturday afternoon off Hull in a smooth sea. In Class D several of the Quincy flyers participated including the prize winner Dolly III which won the race with the Dartwell a good second being only 22 seconds behind. The Mudjekeewis was the third boat in and the Josephine, Busy Bee and Emeline next.

Q. Y. C. RACE.

A race for Class B and special boats was sailed Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club in a light breeze. The race was won by the Polaris in Class B and by the Notornis in the special class.

Grahame-White Almost Cuts in Half the Distance for the Best Getaway

Curtiss, Willard and Brookins Also Do Several Stunts

One wants to see the birdmen in all kinds of weather, and the novelty on Tuesday was a flight in a fog at the Quincy Aviation field. It was surprising, however, that 4000 to 5000 people should have passed the gates on such a day. Especially after the experience of two days when the crowds were driven from the field by the rain.

It did not rain on Tuesday until about 6 P. M. but it was so foggy that one could not see the Aviation field from Squantum street. There was flying all the afternoon, but even the people on the grand stand had but a limited view, and there was little attempt on the part of the aviators to secure records.

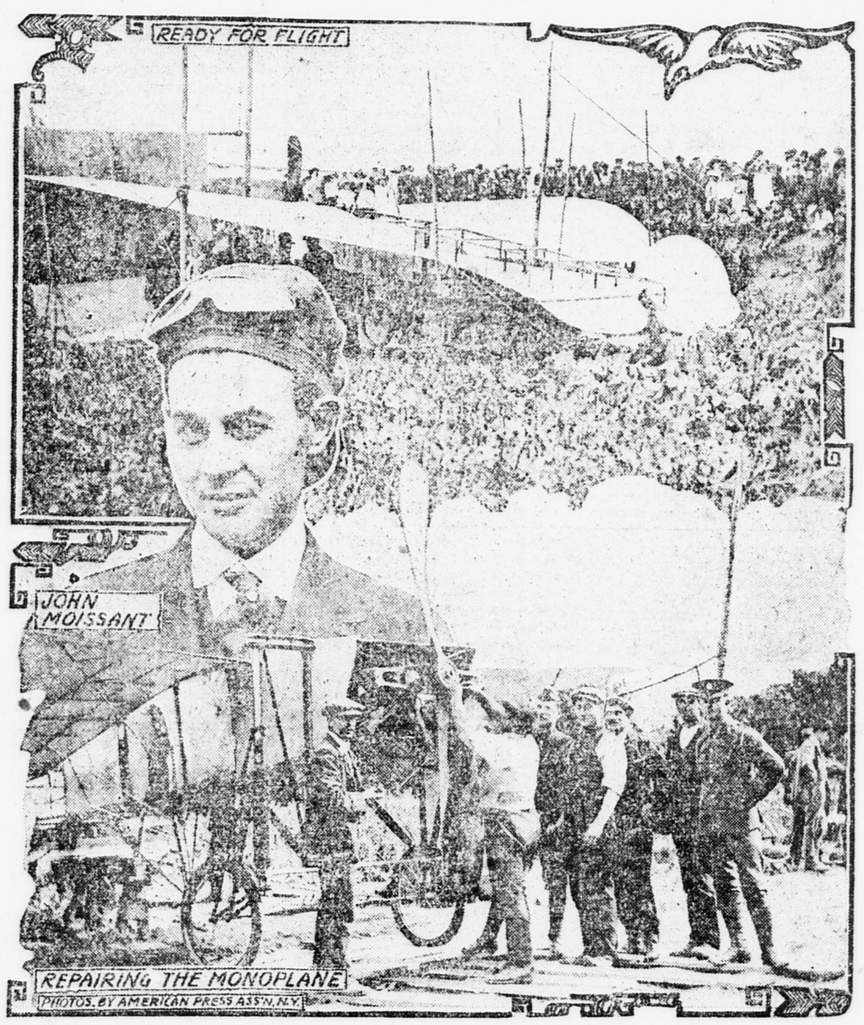

Grahame-White was very obliging, however, and did much to entertain the crowd. He went into the air several times, but the longest period was less than ten minutes, as there was danger of being lost in the fog. Oftentimes, as it was, he was out of sight of the people of the grandstand. But he circled about in the vicinity of the grandstand and auto park showing a complete mastery of his machine. He made dips and dives that pleased the people and almost caused them to duck involuntary as he flew near the ground over their heads. He also alighted and run around the getaway, and ascended unassisted to the delight of all.

Aviators Curtiss, Brookins and Willard also did several stunts, showing how quick they could rise from the getaway and with what accuracy they could land at a designated spot and scored successes.

Grahame-White broke the record for best getaway, reducing his own distance from 110 ft. 8 in., to 66 ft., 10 in. Mr. White also scored two points on Tuesday for duration, and now leads in points in that event, as well as speed, getaway and bomb throwing. Johnstone continues in the lead for distance.

Today promises to be the first fair day of the Harvard meet, and thousands who have been disappointed by the rain will rush to the Aviation field. It is possible that the first attempt will be made today for the Globe $10,000 prize, twice around the course from the Quincy field to Boston lighthouse in the harbor, a distance of just 30 miles. Everybody will want to see this great event. many will not wait for Saturday because they will want to take advantage of the pleasant weather. A crowd of 20,000 to 30,000 is expected today ,and on Saturday over 50,000.

John Moissant, the young American aviator who recently flew from Paris to within a few miles of London, England, alighting but once on French soil after he left the capital, now has a plan for the construction of an aluminium flying machine, which, he declares, will be superior to all others now in use. Moissant uses the monoplane instead of the biplane style of air craft, and his success in reaching England tends to prove that the less planes there are to manipulate the less trouble there is for the aviator.

CUP NIGHT.

The date for the cup presentation night at the Quincy Yacht club has not been fixed as yet for there are several things to be considered. The most important is the selection of a night when all parties interested can attend. It was thought this morning however that some date about Sept. 22 would be selected.

PRIZE WALTZERS.

The prizes for waltzing at the Trades Union picnic at New Downer Landing were awarded to Miss Veranica Burke, a member of the Retail Clerk's union, and John McDonald of the Boiler Makers' union. The prizes which were valued at $5 each, were a pair of cuff buttons for the gentleman and a lady's purse for the lady.

ACCIDENT TO SOMNAMBULIST

Fall Down Cellar Stairs In a Midnight Walk

Reese S. Blades of 112 Upland road is seriously ill at the City Hospital as the result of a fall received while walking in his sleep at his home Monday morning. As near as can be learned, Mr. Blades arose from his bed about 2 A. M. and went down stairs. In some way he opened the door leading the the cellar and fell headlong to the bottom. His fall awakened the family who found him lying unconcious on the cellar floor. A physician was summoned and he was removed to the City Hospital, where he is in a serious condition not having as yet regained consciousness. Mr. Blades is about 45 years of age and is employed in Siegel's Boston store.

A large block of granite which evidently fell from a truck was lying under the Granite street bridge Tuesday. Although not in the middle of the street it was a menace to vehicles passing that way.

BRAVE ACT AT DEPOT

Little Boy Rescued from in Front of Express

Cornelius D. Austin, the well known Ward Three politician, proved himself a hero on Tuesday, when at the risk of his own life he pulled a little boy from in front of an inward express train at the Quincy depot. There was the usual crowd of people on the depot platform waiting to take the regular inward train when the express which precedes it came around the curve at the Granite street bridge. Just then it was noticed that a little boy who had wandered from his mothers' side stood in the middle of the track on which the express train was approaching. When noticed the train was almost upon him, and he evidently did not see the train or if he did he was spellbound. No one seemed to make a move toward the boy until Austin jumped onto the track, and grabbing the boy pulled him onto the platform just as the locomotive rushed by. A great sigh of relief went up fro mthe waiting passengers who had expected to see him dashed to pieces. Austin modestly disclaimed any credit for his act, and at first refused to give his name. He was recognized by others on the depot platform however. The woman and boy took the next train for Boston.

REAR ADMIRAL EXPECTED

Comes from Argentina to Reside in this City

A New York dispatch of Tuesday to the Herald says:

Rear Admiral Benitez chief of the bureau of engineering of the Argentine navy, reached here yesterday aboard the liner Voltaire. The admiral, who was accompanied by his wife, will spend two years in Quincy, Mass., to watch the building of two Dreadnoughts to be constructed there by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company for the Argentine Republic.

The admiral said that, besides the Dreadnoughts, 12 torpedo boat destroyers are now being built in Europe These are under construction in French, English and German shipbuilding yards, each country having the construction of four. The destroyers are to be of 1100 tons each, with a guaranteed speed of 32 knots.

—There was a slight frost at Plympton and vicinity last week that touched some of the gardens.

William J. Patterson of South Central avenue and William Smith of School street spent the week end and holiday at Hancock, N. H.

Rachel's Onion.

I was amused by the observations of a retired actress who sat beside me at the Conservatoire examinations and in an undertone thought aloud as the recitations went on.

"Why so much weeping and wringing of the hands?" she said of a candidate attempting Andromaque. "How she spoils her nice young face in attempting to force tears from her eyes! At this distance nobody could scent an onion in her pocket handkerchief. Rachel resorted to that trick in 'Adrienne Lecouvreur,' and the tears flowed freely without facial contortions. I heard it said that as she left the stage she gave the onion she held to Prince Napoleon to eat in salad and that he did so."—Paris Letter to London Truth.

CRASH IN HEAVY FOG

Passengers on Two Steamers Badly Scared, but No One Is Hurt

Boston, Sept. 7.—The coast steamer Governor Cobb, inward bound, of the Eastern Steamship company, and the City of Gloucester, of the Boston and Gloucester Steamship company, en route for Gloucester, crashed together in a dense fog in the narrow channel off Deer island light. The passengers on both steamers were badly frightened. Some of the women fainted and others were on the verge of hysteria. No one was hurt.

Just after the two boats came together the big steamer Prince George came into the channel and came near running into the Governor Cobb.

The greatest damage was done to the City of Gloucester, which has a hole about ten feet square broken into the starboard bow. The Gloucester boat was compelled to return to Boston.

When the Governor Cobb reached her dock many of the women and children were so badly frightened that they could hardly talk.

OFFICERS ARE CRITICISED

Depositors In York County Bank Want to Know What Will Be Done

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 7.—Repeated criticism of the action taken by the officials of the York County Savings bank since its closing, following a discovery of a shortage in the accounts, and their failure to place the former treasurer, Richmond H. Ingersoll, under police guard, were made at a meeting of the depositors held here last night.

The meeting was attended by nearly 300 depositors, of whom many were women, and after discussing the case at some length, a committee of five were appointed to confer with the bank officials in regard to the future of the bank.

KING AND CARDINAL EXCHANGE GREETINGS

George V. Thanked For Concession to Roman Catholics

Montreal, Sept. 7.—With the inspiration of the largest and most distinguished assemblage of the Catholic clergy ever known in America the twenty-first international Eucharistic congress last night opened in St. James' cathedral.

Aside from the grandeur of the inauguration of the congressional ceremonies, the day was notable for an exchange of telegrams between the papal legate and the pope and the papal legate and King George V, who was thanked for the removal from the royal declaration of the anti-Catholic clause so obnoxious to Romanists. The king replied most cordially.

It will be remembered that two years ago the Eucharistic congress was held in London and that anti-Catholic feeling was so demonstrative that the Asquith government forbade the carrying of the host in the great procession with which all congresses conclude.

Athens, Ga., Sept. 7.—Messages from Charlton, where five negroes were reported to have been killed after attempting to assault the daughter of Robert Huff, a planter, and rob and murder the other members of the Huff family, indicate that two of the accused negroes are still at liberty.

Cliff Bolton, one of the negroes, resisted arrest when captured by Marshal Johnson, it is said, and was probably fatally shot.

Two others are reported to have been captured by posses and summarily dealt with, while the remaining two made their escape.

Two Mistakes

One Corrected the Other After a Long Interval.

By SHEELAH ESTHER DUNN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Returning from shopping, I opened my reticule to take out some samples when, to my surprise, I found entirely different contents from what I had expected. In short, I had laid my own reticule down on a counter and picked up one belonging to some one else.

Among the articles I found inside was a slip of paper, on which was written:

Dearest Little Mary—Meet me at the fountain tomorrow at 5 o'clock. I have made all arrangements. We will be married at the rectory and take the evening train for B. Don't let your fears get the better of you. Remember, 5 o'clock sharp. I will be there half an hour earlier. If you think you had better come veiled carry violets. Your loving J.
Tuesday.

Fifteen years before I had received just such a note. Indeed, there was something similar in the handwriting of the two missives. Then I had married a man whom I had been obliged to leave before the honeymoon was over.

A sudden thought struck me. How would it do for me to keep this girl's appointment a trifle ahead of time, impersonate her, veiled and with violets? I could find out whether she was about to wreck her future or marry a true man. If the former, I might save her.

At half past 4 I sallied forth, bought the violets of a street flower vender on the way and at a quarter to 5 entered the square. I knew well how to assume a hesitating step, for I had "been there" before. On nearing the fountain, looking out for J., I saw a man looking eagerly at the violets in my hand, but of an age more suitable to an elopement with me than a young girl. As I drew nearer something in his face and figure appeared familiar to me. Then I stopped, overpowered with astonishment.

No, I was not mistaken. He was the man who had been my husband. Fifteen years make a marked difference in one's appearance, and they had changed him more than they usually change men.

I was now more than ever bent on playing the part. He joined me, and in a whisper, as though I had lost my voice through excitement, I said: "Take me where we can talk. I have something to say to you." He replied that his auto was waiting on the street and led the way there. I got in the auto, and he ran it out of the town.

"I am not satisfied about this previous marriage of yours," I said.

"Great heavens! Haven't we gone over that sufficiently? You have heard my explanation, and the last time we met you expressed yourself entirely satisfied."

"I don't like your laying the blame on your wife. If we were to have trouble and separate I suppose you would lay all the blame on me."

He turned to look at me as though taken aback at my words. He could not see my face for my veil, but his eyes were fixed on that as if they would pierce it.

"You women are all alike," he said presently. "We men no sooner stand you on your feet than you fall down again. Here at the last minute you are bringing up what I have been at such infinite pains to settle."

"But, tell me, don't you blame her?"

"No, I don't. I blame myself rather than her. A newly wedded pair are like two persons floating down a tortuous channel full of rocks and snags. It is the man's part to keep his head and steer the boat. I supposed that honeymoons were always what the name implies. I found my wife a prey to all sorts of temporary emotions—one moment loving, the next irritable, the next hesitating, the next despondent. I should have known that this, at least to some temperaments, is a condition to be expected—a reaction upon realizing that one's fate is irrevocably linked with another personality. Besides, she was very young. You are ten years older than she was at that time, and I confess I have looked to you for more steadiness. I am much disappointed."

"A woman of my age should have more sense than to elope."

"You know the reason for that. If your father and mother had not an absurd prejudice against your marrying a divorced man we might be married sensibly, as becomes our age."

"Your first marriage having been a case of elopement, I should suppose, considering that it resulted disastrously, you would not care to try it again."

"The elopement has nothing to do with either case. Two people elect to unite. The method of their doing so is a mere matter of sentiment."

There was a silence for a time—at least nothing but the chugging of the auto. We were both thinking, he probably of the fickleness of woman, I of how a trifle may turn the whole current of two lives. For years I had considered that I had married a brute. True, I had mourned that he had turned out to be such, but I had not doubted that my interpretation of him was correct. And now I found him accusing himself of a want of tact in his former treatment of me, his bride, and laying no blame on me whatever.

I believe that feelings may be conveyed without outward signs. I felt that his heart was not in this second marriage. Possibly I may have judged by something in his tone, possibly by an absence of desire in his words. He was too rational for a lover. I wondered if he were not bent on marriage to escape loneliness or to help him to bury a melancholy memory. I determined to apply a test.

"You have been considering me vacillating," I said. "Now you seem to be undecided yourself. And I am not quite sure but you are right. Suppose after we are married you should meet your former bride. Suppose she should admit that in a condition new to her, a very young girl, she had tried your patience severely; that she had mistaken you; that she deplored the break between you and her and would give years of her life to undo what she had done. You would then look upon your marriage with me as a chain of slavery."

He said nothing for some time. When he did his words thrilled me:

"Candor compels me to admit that I would."

I leaned back on the cushion as though much disappointed. I am not sure, but I practiced the deception of a sigh. His mood was indicated by the speed he was driving the machine. I was tempted to tear off my veil and throw my arms about his neck. But I dared not. As his bride I had been a girl. Now I was approaching middle age. Another denouement to this singular freak of fate occurred to me. I would go with him to the church, then reveal myself.

"Well," I said, "it is time that we stop this backing and filling. I shall show you that I have more steadiness than you suppose. Come; turn about. Let us go to the rectory."

Without a word he turned his machine, and we were soon speeding in the opposite direction. Neither spoke for some time. I wondered of what he was thinking. Perhaps that loneliness which comes over a single man after he has passed the heyday of youth would now be ended. Or was he thinking of his bride of fifteen years before? When we drew up at the rectory, before alighting he said:

"There is yet time to reconsider this most important step in your life. If you have not perfect confidence in me I beg of you to withdraw before it is too late."

"If there is vacillation now it is in you, not in me."

He got out of the auto, but not with the springy step of a groom. I knew he was swayed by two opposite currents. Whatever were his feelings, he would not recede from the position he had taken.

We were received by the rector, who had been expecting us for some time. He placed us before a mantel, took up his prayer book and waited for me to take off my veil. Slowly I unwound it and when removing the last fold turned and looked at the groom.

He had not seen me since I was eighteen. Now I was thirty-three, but he knew me at once—that is, he knew me as soon as he could recover from his astonishment. And the fact that his bride was the same as he had stood by years before rendered that astonishment rather a confusion of ideas than a natural impression. He stood looking at me, dazed.

"Gwen!" he exclaimed at last.

With the two men looking at me, the one waiting to know what the scene meant, the other how I came to be there in place of the woman he expected, it was incumbent on me to make an explanation. I did so to the rector, telling him briefly the circumstances. When I had finished I turned to my groom, wondering what expression I would find there. I saw at once that he was eager to know what would be the outcome of this contretemps. Did it mean punishment, revenge, or would it lead to a reconciliation? I replied to the question asked by his eyes with my lips. I gave him a smile. With a profound sigh of relief he turned to the clergyman and said:

"Proceed!"

The rector seemed puzzled. Evidently the situation flustered him; but, being in holy orders, with a churchman's antagonism toward marrying divorced people and a churchman's pleasure in reuniting those who have been separated, he was not long in recovering his equanimity. He looked at me for my assent. But he looked in vain. I gave no assent. Neither did I express dissent. He looked to the groom for instructions and doubtless received them, for without further delay he began the ceremony.

Neither man was quite sure what would be the outcome until the question was asked me, "Will you take this man to be your wedded husband?" I hesitated for a moment, then said firmly, "I will."

Both men gave a sigh of relief.

And so it was that, while I was separated for fifteen years from the man I loved and who loved me, by a senseless tiff, I was reunited to him by a marvelous coincidence. Had not the woman he was to have made his second wife put his note in her reticule and left it on a counter, had I not taken it up by mistake, I would not have been in the nick of time in a position to take what belonged to me and appropriate it to myself. The reticule was hers; the man was mine.

I never asked my husband how he explained matters to the woman with whom he had intended to elope. I considered it none of my business. Moreover, I was not interested in it. But I did ask him if he did not suspect that the woman beside him in the auto was not the one he expected to meet. He told me that, while he did not suspect me, he felt that there was something in the situation foreign to what was intended. My voice, he said, was the only real difficulty in the way of a perfect deception.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the Baptist church, preached at the union service at Wollaston Sunday morning. His text was taken from I Cor. 3:21-3. "For all things are your's; whether Paul, or Apollas, or Cephas, or the world, so life or death, so things present, or things to come; all are your's; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."

Mr. Walther told of the great Christian teachers God has given to the churches and humanity, that they might profit. They belonged not to one class, but to all classes; not to one denomination, but to all denominations.

"The world is your's." It is your Father's. The world is Jesus Christ and the world belongs to the children of God."

"Life is your's." We don't take in half of our inheritance. God is not seeking your life or mine. He could get along without you or me, but He gives us the loving opportunity of coming to Him and of being rich with life, blessings and power and of serving Him and His cause.

"Death." There is no sting in death for the children of God. Jesus went through the valley of the shadow of death, and he put a light there for the children of God forever more passing through. In closing, Mr. Walther said "Ye belong to God. Are you living as though you belonged to him?"

Insurance Gambling.

The Britisher's favorite gambling is insurance gambling. He will take out a policy against anything, from the death of the king to the loss of a horse race by a thoroughbred. Marine insurance gambling by those who have no direct interest in the safety of a ship or its cargo grew into such abuses that parliament was compelled to pass a drastic act to prevent such gambling on marine accidents and losses by those not otherwise concerned.

SQUANTUM !?

(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)

IS A PART OF QUINCY !?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

LOTS OF LAND

overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

Officers of the Quincy Women's club are preparing for the opening of the club season, a special meeting of the executive board being called for Thursday morning, Sept. 8 at ten o'clock at the clubhouse. The new books of by-laws have been printed and the year books are in preparation ready to mail before the first meeting of the club.

Junior Friday club is to continue its study of French history this season, the committee being at work preparing for the opening meeting in October and arranging for the year books.

Members of the Woman's club of Chelsea are planning for an exhibit which promises to be one of the best features of the exposition in which all Chelsea is interested.

QUINCY DAY NURSERY.

The Quincy Day Nursery association enters upon another season of meetings with much enthusiasm a largely attended meeting being held Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. Wadsworth, president presiding. It was voted to have the annual tag day for the benefit of the Nursery on the second Saturday in October, the 8th.

The Nursery is very comfortably situated in its new quarters, now occupying the Joss House at the corner of Granite and Garfield streets where visitors are welcome. One has only to visit the Nursery and see the good work being done to become interested. Twenty-five children a day are being cared for, which means that a good many mothers have the opportunity to go out to work and earn money for the support of the family.

TUBERCULOSIS WAR

What women have done in the last four years in the campaign against tuberculosis, is discussed in an interesting report today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Four years ago the only active women workers in the anti-tuberculosis movement were a little group of about thirty women's clubs. Today 800,000 women under the health department of the General Federation of Women's clubs in every state and territory of the United States are banded together against this disease, and more than 2,000 clubs are taking a special interest in the crusade. Not less than $500,000 is raised annually by them for tuberculosis work, besides millions that are secured through their efforts in state and municipal appropriations. Mrs. Rufus P. Williams is the chairman of the department that directs this work. In addition to the work of the General Federation of Women's clubs, the public health education committee of the American Medical association, composed largely of women physicians has carried on an educational campaign of lectures during the past year in which thousands have been reached. The Mothers' Congress, the Young Women's Christian association, and many unattached clubs bring the number of women united in the tuberculosis war to well over a million.

There is not a state in the union where some work has not been done. Through the altivity of women, sanatoria and hospitals for the treatment of tuberculosis have been erected; travelling libraries have been circulated, posters, circulars and other kinds of literature have been distributed to the number of millions of pieces; thousands of lectures have been given, large sums of money have been secured, hundreds of needy cases have been helped; tuberculosis work has been started in many communities where no movement had existed; and millions of women have learned the dangers and methods of prevention of tuberculosis. The work of the women extends from the drawing room of the rich to the homes of the poor, and embraces all classes, including the factory girl and millionaire. During the coming year a special campaign of lectures to women will be carried on in all parts of the United States.—Framingham News.

APPRECIATED AS ORGANIST.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Miss Annie Russell Friday evening, Sept. 2, by the members of the choir, Christian Endeavor Society, and the Sunday school teachers of the United Presbyterian church, at the home of Mrs. Malcolm McKenzie, 20 Albertina street.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by all present. Several games were played in which everybody entered, and several selections were sung by Thomas Melrose and Mr. Tregaskis.

As Miss Russell is leaving Quincy to go to Rochester, Mass., where she is to teach school, her friends presented her with a leather purse which contained three $5 gold pieces and some loose bills. Rev. A. M. Thompson presented the purse, expressing appreciation of Miss Russell's services as organist for five years.

Those present were: Rev. Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Misses Jessie McLean, Florrie McPherson, Mary Melrose, Barbara Ross, Annie McNaughton, Arabella McDougall, Gertrude Campbell, Mamie McKay, Jeannie Russell, Anna McLeod, Katie McKinnon, Margaret McQueen, Marion Russell, Grace McKinnon, Annie Wadman, Annie Russell, Catherine McKenzie, Evelyn McKenzie, Muriel Tregaskis, Mrs. Neil McLeod, Mrs. Robert McLean, Mrs. John McKinnon. Messrs. John McPhee, Alex Ross, Thomas Melrose, Albert Robertson, John Goodfellow, Claude Goodfellow, James Smith, Charles Ross, Roderick McPherson, John McLean, Harry Campbell, Courtney Hocking, Dan Matheson, Hector Stewart, Dan McLeod.

Mr. and Mrs. MaKella, Mr. and Mrs. Halcolm McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Tregaskis, Mr. and Mrs. John McLean.

QUINCY MAUSOLEUM.

The new mausoleum which has been in course of construction in the Hudson City cemetery for some time is now practically completed, and adds another to the many handsome adornments of nature and art which are to be seen in the local cemetery. The mausoleum has been built for Dr. George W. Rossman, of Ancram, the father of Dr. Clark G. Rossman, of thic city. While simple in design, it presents a very artistic exterior, being of Quincy granite, partially polished, the rest hammered. The interior walls are of white polished marble, with ceiling of Quincy granite. It contains four crypts.

The front contains pilasters and in the pediment there appears the name Rossman in polished black lettering in a panel. Between pilasters there are polished panels. Surmounting the gable roof is a granite sphere weighing about 600 pounds. The roof is one piece of stone, and weighs in the neighborhood of seven tons. The door is of bronze.

The mausoleum not alone is a creditable addition to the cemetery, but it reflects credit on the builder, J. L. Miller, of Quincy, Mass. It is understood that the cost of the structure is about $7,500. It is situated between the Evans and Currie vaults.

TO MAKE IMPROVEMENT.

Henry M. Faxon who has recently come into possession of the "Nancy Brackett estate" on Hancock street opposite the residence of Dr. Gordon, will make a number of improvements to the estate which will add much to the appearance of the estate which has been neglected for a number of years. These improvements are already under way. The old house is to be moved from its present site on the rear of the lot to the front corner near the John Whitney Hall estate, where it will be remodelled into a modern house. Mr. Faxon also plans to remove some of the smaller trees on the premises which have become too thick. It is not his intention to remove the large trees on the front of the lot, but he will put fresh earth about them and furnish the roots with some nourishment, so that they may be preserved. Just what other improvements he will make on the estate has not been determined as yet.

Readers will be glad to know that the new serial story to appear in the Ledger will be by that favorite writer Gen. Charles King and the story, "Lanier of the Cavalry." It is absorbingly interesting and the opening chapters should not be missed.

SPECIAL OF COUNCIL.

Mayor Shea has called a special meeting of the City Council for Friday evening. There are but two matters in the call. These are to confirm the appointment of election officers by the Mayor, and to take action on Order No. 287, which amends Order No. 264 appropriating $10,000 for sewer construction.

MAPLEINE.

Used with granulated sugar and water makes a delicious syrup at a cost of only 14 cents a quart. Use Mapleine to flavor your cake frostings custards, puddings, ice cream, fudge, etc. While it contains no maple sugar syrup or sap it gives a perfect maple flavor. Ask your grocer for it.

Choose Wisely For The Bride Of September

Singularly enough the thought of furniture as a gift for the bride seldom occurs, for the mind concentrates upon silver and glass in a supreme effort to give something of enduring worth, yet Kincaide's gift pieces embody every good point that makes the rememberance worth while.

The novelty of a genuine surprise is a further incentive for one to look over the beautiful, inexpensive and everlasting examples in Mahogany, Mission and Oak at our ware rooms—ranging in price from $5.00 to $15.00.

SETBACK FOR "REGULARS"

Loss of Strength In Vermont and New Hampshire

MEAD IS ELECTED GOVERNOR

Carries Entire State Ticket With Him, but Party Loss Is Over 24 Percent, Compared With Vote Given Prouty In 1908—Bass, an "Insurgent," Wins Fight For Nomination For Governor In Granite State

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 7.—In the smallest vote cast in twenty-five years the Republican vote shrank 24 percent while the Democrats held their own in the election yesterday.

The Republicans elected the entire state ticket, both members of congress and a legislature that will probably re-elect United States Senator Page for a second term.

The following state officers were chosen: Governor, John A. Mead of Rutland; lieutenant governor, Leighton P. Stack of St. Johnsbury; secretary of state, Guy B. Bailey of Essex; treasurer, Edward H. Devitt of Montpelier; auditor, Horace E. Graham of Craftsbury; attorney general, John G. Sargent of Ludlow; Republican congressmen re-elected, First district, David Foster of Burlington; Second district, Frank Plumley of Northfield.

Lieutenant Governor John A. Mead of Rutland, a retired physician, was elected by a plurality of about 17,000 over Charles D. Watson, a lawyer, of St. Albans, his Democratic opponent. The Democrats made gains in the legislature.

The Republican plurality was the smallest, with two exceptions, since 1870, but Chairman Williams of the state committee declares that the rain storm was the principal cause for the drop of 12,000 in the party plurality in two years.

Chairman Harris of the Democratic state committee expresses himself as satisfied with the results. Watson not only carried his own city, but Montpelier, the state capital, as well, a feat unheard of in Vermont politics.

Watson also ran well in the other cities, but the little hill towns stood loyally by Mead. The returns were unusually slow in coming in.

There was a decided falling off in the number of Republican voters at the polls, due, it is said by politicians, to a listless campaign, some party dissatisfaction with the candidate for governor and to the fact that rain fell throughout the day.

The Democrats did better than the Republicans, the early returns showing that the party vote for Watson equalled, and in some towns exceeded, that given Burke, the leader of two years ago.

Only five small towns went Democratic two years ago, but yesterday more than a dozen were recorded in that column. It was an election in which the Republicans saw a plurality of 30,000 two years ago sink to nearly 20,000, while the Democrats held the party vote firm.

IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

"Insurgent" Bass Receives an Unexpectedly Large Vote

Concord, N. H., Sept. 7.—New Hampshire's first state wide primaries were featured by the victory of the "progressive" Republicans over the so-called "regulars," State Senator Robert P. Bass of Peterborough, the progressive leader, receiving the Republican nomination for governor over Bertram Ellis of Keene, the regular standard bearer, by almost two to one.

With half the state counted Bass leads Ellis by 8757 votes, showing unexpected strength in cities where Ellis was supposed to be the stronger and maintaining his strength in the country districts. All the interest in the primaries was centred on the Republican struggle, as there was no contest in the Democratic ranks.

The "progressives" received one setback in the congressional fight, Congressman Sulloway of Manchester, generally rated as a "regular," securing the congressional renomination in the First district over Sherman E. Burroughs, "progressive," by a substantial margin.

Congressman Currier had no party opposition to the Republican renomination in the Second congressional district. Despite a heavy rain, the Republican vote was large.

The Democratic vote for Clarence E. Carr of Andover for governor and for Eugene E. Reed of Manchester for the congressional nomination in the First district and Henry H. Metcalf of Concord in the Second district, all of whom were unopposed, was light.

Thirty-Four Years In "Solitary"

Boston, Sept. 7.—Jesse Pomeroy today began his thirty-fifth year in prison. He was convicted of two murders in South Boston in 1874. At that time he was 16 years of age. He was sentenced to be hanged, but in 1876 Governor Rice commuted the sentence to life imprisonment in solitary confinement.

TO AUTHORIZED STRENGTH

Army Will Be Recruited Until It Has Necessary 87,000 Men

Washington, Sept. 7.—General Wood, chief of staff of the army, has just returned from his conference with President Taft at Beverly, and announces that the army will be recruited to the authorized strength of 87,000 men. At present, the general says, the strength of the standing army is only 82,000 officers and men. The reinforcements, therefore, will have to be enlisted. Work on this will start at once in order that the armed force of the country will reach its maximum by next year.

The reduction in the army's strength to the present figure was the result of short appropriations. Five thousand men have been allowed to leave the service without the enlistment of other men to fill their places. Now, however, the money is available, and the president's approval of the plan of increasing the force has been secured.

ALBANO DIES SUDDENLY

Had Acted as President of Chile Since Death of Montt

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 7.—Vice President Elias F. Albano, acting President of Chile since the death of President Montt, died suddenly from an attack of heart failure.

On the eve of its centennial celebration of its independence the republic of Chile is in mourning for two executives whose deaths occurred within the past three weeks. President Montt had been ill for some time and going abroad for his health died immediately after his arrival at Bremen on Aug. 16.

Upon the departure of Montt, Albano temporarily took up the duties of acting president. He continued in that office after Montt died, pending the election of a president.

HAS RENDERED AID TO SECRET SERVICE

Well Educated Counterfeiter Has Sentence Commuted

Washington, Sept. 7.—President Taft has commuted to four years the sentence of Joseph A. Haas, who was caught in 1908 by the secret service men in a raid on a counterfeiters' plant at Braddock, Pa. Haas was sentenced to five years and is now in Leavenworth pentitentiary.

Haas is a college man and a scientist. His sentence has been shortened because of his aid to the secret service. While in prison he gave information upon which counterfeiters now serving sentences will be rearrested when they are released.

He has offered to the secretary of the treasury a method of refining gold and silver bullion, said to be the cheapest and most effective yet discovered, and has written a treatise on isomeric theoretical organic chemistry which is to be published and offered to the Smithsonian institute. A job is waiting for Haas in Pittsburg.

REACHES LONDON AT LAST

Moissant, After Long Delay, Completes His Flight From Paris

London, Sept. 7.—John B. Moissant, the American aviator, reached Crystal palace last evening, completing his flight from Paris to London in exactly three weeks.

Moissant did the few remaining miles in two stages. On the first attempt he encountered adverse winds and was forced to descend at Oxford. There he awaited better weather, again ascending with his machine at 5 o'clock. He reached the palace twenty-five minutes later.

KILLS BABE AND SELF

Mother Had Been Despondent Since Birth of Little One

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 7.—Mrs. William Vimmer killed her 2-weeks-old daughter and herself with carbolic acid. She had been despondent since the birth of the child.

Another little daughter, playing in the house, found her mother on the floor. She called her father, and the latter, thinking the mother was ill, sent for an ambulance. The physician found both the mother and the child, beside her, dead.

NOMINATION CONCEDED

La Follette Wins In Senatorial Primaries In Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Sept. 7.—The vote for the United States senatorial nomination on the Republican ticket in twelve out of twenty precincts in Washington county give La Follette 465 and Cook 349. Political managers generally concede La Follette's nomination.

Twenty-seven precincts in the state outside of Milwaukee give Fairchild, anti-La Follette Republican, 966; McGovern, La Follette Republican, 652, and Lewis, county option, 235.

For the Children

King George's Only Daughter.

Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary is the full name of the little lady whose picture is shown above. She is the only daughter of King George V. of England and has just passed her thirteenth birthday. Princess Mary, as she is commonly called, is just a little girl, despite her high sounding title, and is being educated according to the simple rules that prevail in the English royal household. Her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, believed that her children should be reared in strict simplicity, and this system has been followed in succeeding generations. Princess Mary has been taught, among other things, the value of thrift and is sometimes seen at the postoffice near the palace depositing savings on her own account.

Little Things.

In a small building which was once Peter the Great's workshop in Holland is the inscription, "Nothing Is Too Little For the Attention of a Great Man."

It is curious to note that many things which have turned out most useful for man owe their beginnings to some slight accident. For instance, the telescope we owe to some children of a spectacle maker placing two or more pairs of spectacles before each other and looking through them at the distant sky. Their idea was followed up by older heads. Pendulum clocks were invented after Galilei stood observing the lamp in a church swinging to and fro. Gunpowder was discovered from the falling of a spark on some materials mixed in a mortar. The great results of a steam engine may all be traced to the boy who sat watching the steam which came from the nose of a teakettle. Electricity was discovered by a person observing that a piece of rubbed glass attracted small bits of paper.

The art of printing took its origin from some rude impressions taken for the amusement of children from letters carved on the bark of a beech tree.

The laws of gravitation were discovered by the falling of an apple to the ground.

A Harmless Ghost.

A stonecutter in the days when men wore knee breeches and wigs one evening wished to add a few letters to an epitaph on a gravestone recently set up. He obtained permission and went with his tools and lantern to complete his task. The churchyard was cold and gloomy, and very soon he lighted an extra candle to give more light.

Suddenly, as he stooped over the work, he heard a curious rustling biss—"Hush!" He lifted his head and looked around, but saw nothing. He fell to his work again, but no sooner was his head bowed over the stone than the same faint, mysterious "Hush!" was heard again. He could stand it no more, but got up and fled for his life and was not consoled till he was in bed and fast asleep.

The next morning he was sitting with his wife at breakfast when his wife said suddenly: "Peter, what is the matter with your wig? It is all burnt on one side!"

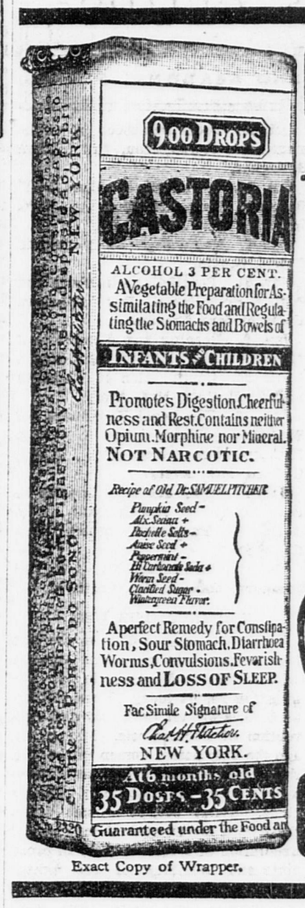

He gave a cry of joy, to his wife's surprise. The mystery was explained. The strange "Hush!" was nothing more than the sound of his hair frizzing as he bent over the candle!"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Twisted Animals.

When your friends assemble on the porch or on your front doorstep you can play games and so while away the hours. Provide them with pencils and then give each one a neatly written list of these words numbered. The game is to arrange the letters in each word so as to spell an animal. It is a "twisty" game and lots of fun:

1. Peesh.
2. Duggop.
3. Roastslab.
4. Leapthen.
5. Firfage.
6. Torte.
7. Rugaja.
8. Almcosh.
9. Grabed.
10. Retirer.
11. Parti.
12. Kacopec.
13. Somsoup.
14. Unnepig.

Untwisted the animals are sheep, pugdog, albatross, elephant, giraffe, otter, jaguar, chamois, badger, terrier, tapir, peacock, opossum, penguin.

AT CONSERVATION CONGRESS

Department of Agriculture Has Sent Men Broadcast Into the World to Glean Information on How to Make the Land More Productive—Volume of Crops Being Increased In All Sections of the Country

St. Paul, Sept. 7.—The most important feature of farm conservation is the soil, said Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in an address at the conservation congress. The farmer prospers while the soil responds to his work and yields good crops; he ceases to do well when the soil refuses to respond to his labor.

The people of the older nations take care of soil fertility as a matter of prime necessity and long ago ascertained the proper succession of crops, their relation to the soil and feeding of man and animals. They knew the soil must be fed and the proper physical conditions to maintain and learned from experience how to do it.

During the short history of our country we have had new soils to draw upon when exhaustion resulted from the robbing process, and much of the nation's prosperity is the equivalent of what the soil has lost. Our people have been well fed, and until recently they have been cheaply fed. This has been due in part no doubt to the occupancy of land easily obtainable as soon as the older refused to yield abundantly and is one of the prime causes of farm desertion that are now attracting so much attention.

The federal government is expending large sums to irrigate more land, which is wise, but the amount of water impounded is small compared with the volume that flows to waste. In a recent visit to the mountain states I saw that the most advanced localities are every year making more reservoirs to hold winter and spring flows of waters that go free of man's restraint to the ocean. The nation, the states and private enterprises have ample fields in which to work toward greater crop production in this direction.

The department of agriculture, in obedience to congressional requirement, is exploring similar lands that exist under similar conditions throughout the old world. Some success is being had. A wheat from Africa and Asia gives us 60,000,000 bushels a year from the high lying light rainfall states; a grass and alfalfa from Turkestan, alfalfa, clovers and vetches from Siberia, oats from northern Sweden, millets from the orient, sorghum from Africa, are samples of what are being found by our explorers that thrive on our highlands of the west.

At thirteen stations in sevent states we have parties of scientists studying methods of plant management on our dry lands. If our growth in population is to continue we must look to the soil and conserve moisture, which is the transportation system of the plant.

We furnish nitrogenous mill feeds to thrifty foreigners who know their value to feed their cattle to make meats and dairy products and keep up the fertility of their soils. These should be fed on the farms that grow the grain from which they are made.

New lands are not to be had for the asking in the thirty inch rainfall districts of the country. If we are to prosper as a people we must give close attention to our soils and conserve their fertility by all the means in our power.

Increasing Crop Volume

Something is being done to increase the volume of our crops in all sections of our country. The cattle fever tick of the south has prevented the profitable production of beef in that section of the country. Congress has provided for the extermination of the pest, which is being done; 140,000 square miles is now free from it. This will bring into active production within a few years all of the southern states. Pastures will be prepared, the prime element in a system of rotation of crops; cottonseed will be fed where it is produced, and southern fields will become much more productive, helping to feed our growing population, while more cotton will be grown on fewer acres.

The advent of the cotton boll weevil called for prompt federal action to help southern farmers to deal with this invasion from Central America. Scientists were called upon to make research and conduct demonstrations of well known methods on many thousand farms. One of the most interesting was the growing of an acre of corn by each of 12,500 boys under 16 years of age. The result was very gratifying, over 150 bushels being grown on an acre by some of the boys. The southern states grew the largest corn crop in their history. Upon this foundation steps were promptly taken to breed hogs extensively so that the people might produce their meats.

The grazing lands of the public domain are being steadily reduced to unproductiveness by overstocking, which results in reduced production of meats and animal products.

CHARGES OF THE PROSECUTOR

Points Out That Crippen Benefited Financially by Death of Wife, of Whom Miss Leneve Was Jealous—Charge Against Latter Changed From Principal to That of Accessory—Trial to Begin In London

London, Sept. 7.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, as principal, and Ethel C. Leneve, as an accessory after the fact, were placed on trial Tuesday for the murder of the former's wife, Cora Belle Crippen, known on the stage as Belle Elmore.

The mysterious case, with its mingling of tragedy and romance, tightens its hold on the public imagination as the story is unfolded little by little, and Bow street police court was congested with a curious, fascinated crowd, including a few smartly dressed women and some Americans.

Prosecutor Humphreys set forth that Crippen and his wife were unhappily married; that her death was of monetary advantage to him, in addition to the fact that his relations with his typist were such that Miss Leneve was unpleasantly jealous of the wife. The death of Mrs. Crippen would relieve the situation, from the standpoint of the man who loved one woman and was tied to another.

Crippen needed money and pawned jewelry later identified as the property of his wife. When his wife disappeared he made an explanation that he later admitted was untrue. The prosecutor told of the admitted quarrel between the Crippens, the elopement of Crippen and Miss Leneve and the finding of the body alleged to be that of the doctor's wife in the cellar of the Crippen home.

Mr. Humphreys announced for the first time that poison, more than sufficient to kill, had been found in the body, which also showed traces of an operation. Humphreys said that the crown had decided to change the charge against Miss Leneve from that of a principal to that of an accessory after the fact. In conclusion, he stated that he questioned whether the girl could have believed the extraordinary story told her by Crippen in explanation of his wife's disappearance.

At the conclusion of the prosecutor's address a few witnesses were called for the crown. In cross examining these Solicitor Newton confined himself to a few questions designed to show that Crippen was amiable and kind hearted and seemed to be on the best of terms with his wife.

An application to admit the prisoner to bail was refused and an adjournment was taken until Thursday.

DEEP SEA TRAGEDY WILL RIVAL BARNYARD DRAMA.

D'Annunzio Threatens to Wet Feathers of Rostand's "Chantecler."

"Chantecler" may have its nose put out of joint by the play which Gabriele d'Annunzio threatens to write. Instead of a barnyard drama the poet means to have a deep sea tragedy, with mermaids and tritons and fishes that swim in the depths of the ocean. Crabs, lobsters, starfish, octopuses and whales may be leading characters.

At any rate, D'Annunzio is full of his new idea and means to get to work on it at once.

D'Annunzio's idea had its origin in his strong belief in Gordon Craig's theories and inventions for stage lighting and effects. The poet and the son of Ellen Terry are intimate friends, and both believe in a great future for the theater when stage lighting shall have been perfected.

Recently D'Annunzio gave a performance at the private playhouse of a friend of his in Paris to show what could be done in the way of scenic effects. The theater was converted into an open air playhouse, with closed walls and ceiling. This paradoxical result was obtained by substituting for the ordinary back cloth a hemisphere concave toward the audience.

Upon its surface colored lights were thrown by the poet himself, who sat at a sort of typewriter and successively turned on a moonlight, a starry night, a red sunset and a pink daybreak, to say nothing of a violent storm with blue, purple and black clouds, streaks of furious red and yellow and flashes of lightning.

This same hemisphere, D'Annunzio explained, could be used for representing the sea, with all the effects of light and shade to be obtained in its depths; hence his plan to write a play on these lines.

Abruzzi Brings Joy to Girl Who Sold Him Winning Lottery Ticket

Rome, Sept. 7.—The Duke of the Abruzzi has had a stroke of good luck which can be attributed directly to an act of generosity.

Attracted by a little girl who was begging in the streets and desirous of helping without making her an object of charity, the duke purchased from the child a lottery ticket, which at the next drawing was cashed in for a prize of $18,000.

Believing that one good turn deserves another, the duke announces that he will give the money to the girl.

Important Agricultural Discovery

Audible Sleep.

"Is Mrs. Schnorer in?" asked the caller.

"Yes, ma'am," answered the maid of all work in the boarding house. "She's at present in her room."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, ma'am. I just overheard her taking a nap."

His Defense.

"What defense," asked the grafter's wife, "did you make when you faced the investigating committee?"

"I vehemently called the man who had brought the charges a liar."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Nothing is more disgraceful than insincerity.—Cicero.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES OUTLINED

Changes Calculated to Minimize Danger of Fatalities.

FLYING TACKLE IS BARRED.

One of Most Brilliant Features of Game Passes With Abolition of This Play. Many of Revisions Are Revolutionary In Character.

The football world is now in a quandary, and for weeks the one question on the minds and lips of the followers of the greatest of all college games will be, "What will be the effect of the changes in rules which were announced recently?"

The seven main changes can be briefly summarized as follows: The abolition of the flying tackle; interlocked interference as well as pushing and pulling the man with the ball and the longitudinal lines on the field; the division of the time into four fifteen minute periods; the limitation of the forward pass to twenty yards; giving the ends right of way in the twenty yard zone in getting under punts; allowing players taken from the game for slight injuries to re-enter.

Coaches generally are disposed to be liberal. Some are of the opinion the games will be benefited. Others favor some of the changes, but refuse to condemn the new rules as a whole until they have been given a trial.

The old guard—warriors of the gridiron of several years ago—look upon the game as a cross between Canadian Rugby, cricket and basketball. To these it appears that every element of the old game has been destroyed. The brilliant features that were worked into sensational plays, the factors that thrilled millions and became college history, have been done away with in one grand sweep.

What has been given in return only the future can tell. Doubtless the new game will appeal to an entirely new element. There are those, too, who delight in any college sport, so that reformed football will doubtless find its followers.

The changes are an answer for the country wide demand for a modification of the sport. There is no one but who hopes for the success of the game as it will be played this fall.

One thing is certain—it will put a premium on coaches. The days of line bucking have passed. The coach with ingenuity, foresight and power to adapt his plays to the new conditions will wear the laurels. Never have the rules left such a wide scope to the man at the helm.

The passing of the flying tackle, while generally anticipated, will be received with greater regret than probably any other change. The flying tackle was the very rudiment of the old game. There was no one play in the football curriculum by which a real player could be picked so quickly as by the flying tackle. The man that got his feet off the ground was the choice of the coach.

This one change favors the offense, but whether it makes up for the changes in favor of the defense is an open question. Many football critics are of the opinion that it will be next to impossible to make ten yards if the teams are anywhere near evenly matched.

Ed Corrigan Racing For Little Purses.

Edward Corrigan is chasing the $200 overnight purses in Utah and Montana as seriously these days as he did the derbies, stakes and handicaps a dozen or more years ago. It is strange what a difference a few years will make. Corrigan at one time was one of the strongest factors on the American turf. He was interested in more race tracks than any other individual, raced one of the biggest stables of horses conducted and had a breeding farm of his own. He was worth more than $1,000,000 if one cent. He was in more turf wars than any other turf magnate and generally came out best.

His start down the toboggan slide of financial ruin was when racing was closed in Chicago in 1904. Then followed the war between the American Turf association and the Western Jockey club at New Orleans over the entrance of his new track, City park. That last turf war practically broke Corrigan.

Corrigan is no longer a factor, but a plain, ordinary turfman, and no one is happier of the fact than he. The former "master of Hawthorne," as he was referred to in the old days, made many enemies through his domineering tactics, but today they are the first to show him sympathy.

Chivington Made Queer Ruling.

President Thomas Chivington of the American association recently promulgated one of the strangest decisions in baseball history, ordering the second game of the double header between Columbus and Minneapolis on June 30, which went only seven and one-half innings, to be finished after the regular game on Monday, Aug. 8.

On June 30 Umpire Guthrie called the game with Minneapolis ahead, 8 to 4, on account of darkness. Manager Friel of Columbus protested the contest, and it was established that it was light enough to continue play.

BRIEFS

Vegetation has certainly got a good soaking.

The bright sun this morning was appreciated.

Nicholas A. Gallagher formerly of Quincy, is about town this week. He si now a physician in Malden and is building up a good practice there.

Secretary Gay of the Y. M. C. A. and family returned Tuesday to their home on Spear street from a few weeks' stay at Sagamore beach.

W. G. Shaw and family of Butler road have returned from North Sebago, Maine, where they passed their vacation.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank S. Davis of Elm street are at home again after a month's stay at Thornton lodge, Thornton, N. H.

The cabinet meeting of the East Norfolk C. E. union will be held in the Bethany chapel next Monday evening at 7.45.

At the rally of the Swedish Baptist young peoples societies of New England which was held here this week, a new constitution was adopted.

The Ledger is to run a new serial story "Lanier of the Cavalry" by General Charles King whose stories of fort life on the plains are always interesting.

Maurice E. Bumpus has returned from Windsor to spend a week or two at his home on Presidents hill before going back to Williams college.

H. Everett Hayden, formerly of this city, is now located in Minneapolis, where he holds the position of manager of the Majestic quintet, a mandolin banjo and piano club.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Winslow and son Gilbert of Cleveland, Ohio, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Prescott of Bigelow street, on their return from Nova Scotia and Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane of Elm street have returned from a most enjoyable trip to Burmuda and have gone to Harwich on the Cape where they will be registered at Hotel Belmont for a week.

The first meeting of the Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion after the vacation will be held in Protection hall, Thursday afternoon at 4.15. It is especially desired that all members be present.

Rev. John Garland, pastor of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church, begins a series of sermons Sunday. The first "Why do people stay away from church?" and the second "Why do people go to church?" The others will be announced later. The public are cordially invited to all the services.

Master Walter Bevis of Bridgewater, while playing on Squantum street, Monday, was run over by an automobile on its way to the Aviation meet. The little boy's leg was badly broken and it is not yet known but he may have received other injuries. It is a wonder that there have not been more accidents, because several automobiles pass down Squantum street every hour and a large number of them go a good deal faster than the speed laws allow.

The funeral of Mrs. Alexander Kantrowits of East Milton took place Monday at the Sacred Heart church Atlantic. Mrs. Kantrowits was the only daughter of Mrs. William Hayes of that section. She has been ill for several months and broke up housekeeping some time ago in order to regain her health if possible at her mother's home. She will be greatly missed by her many friends who testify to her loving disposition and cheerfulness throughout her sickness. Out of a family of four daughters and one son there is one left, Willim H. Hayes. The burial was in the Milton cemetery.

FOREIGN GOLFERS COMING.

Australia Will Send Players to Win Honors In This Country.

International golf of a nature hitherto unknown in this country, unless the visit of the Oxford-Cambridge team in 1903 be excepted, is practically a certainty for next season. This time the invading forces will represent Australia, and they will be headed by Dr. F. G. Brathwaite, the American vice consul, who will act as manager.

The plan thus far mapped out is for a team to arrive in this country early next summer and to tour America from coast to coast. The Australian team as made up at present consists of eight golfers and two lawn tennis players, but it is possible that this number may be increased.

Prominent among the visitors will be Michael Scott, the amateur champion of Australia and open champion of New South Wales and Victoria. Next on the list is Clyde Pearce, who has been both open and amateur title holder of Australia. Then there is Felstead, a left handed golfer, who recently broke the record for the course at the Royal Melbourne club. Last year Felstead won the open championship tournament of Australia, beating all the professionals.

Another equally well known golfer booked for the trip is Duncan, five times champion of New Zealand and runner up in the Australian amateur tournament in 1908.

Bruce Pearce, youthful phenomenon of many titles, also enjoys an international reputation. This eighteen-year-old lad, who will be a member of the team, is champion of Tasmania and South Australia, and altogether he holds no fewer than thirteen minor championship titles.

WON'T TRAIN; CAN'T WIN.

Touchard, Crack Player, Too Temperamental For Tennis.

Gustave Touchard is by temperament one of the most interesting of the tennis players of national celebrity. His admirers say that if he had eaten and taken care of himself he would surely have been a big factor in the Newport all comers tournament. But, as a rule, the California born Touchard is governed by his whims.

At the Longwood tournament in Philadelphia recently Touchard, who breakfasts on a cigarette and will not eat luncheon unless he happens to like the luncheon, "fell down" through sheer physical weakness.

Aged twenty-two and five feet nine inches tall, Touchard weighs but 110 pounds.

But he has wonderful ability as a player if only he would accumulate a little physical strength to express it.

BENDER FEELS FOR UMP.

His Experience Officiating at Football Game Raised His Sympathy.

No one has ever been known to accuse Chief Bender, the Philadelphia Athletics' crafty and expert Indian pitcher, of being foolish. His work on the diamond and in other branches of athletics has always indicated that he knew what he was about. As a trap shooter the redskin is a tough man to beat.

But it remained for the chief to run amuck athletically when he grew careless a few years ago while among friends in the Osage Nation. A lot of Carlisle and Haskell Indian football stars had organized a team, and they thought it would be a fine thing to have Bender referee a post season game with the Oklahoma university eleven.

Chief tried his best, but he didn't know the rules. His own people kicked as hard as the collegians, and both teams felt that they were lucky to get through with a tie score.

"I've always had a great deal of sympathy for umpires since that football game, but I would rather umpire baseball games forever than take a chance of mixing up with twenty-two excited football players again," said Bender.

Artie Hofman In Good Form.

This seems to be Artie Hofman's best season. The Cubs' center fielder is stinging them harder than ever in his career and playing a swell fielding game.

BASEBALL POINTERS

"Shoeless" Jackson, champion batter of the Southern league, Cleveland recruit, used to play ball in his bare feet.

Elmer Flick is the only big league player who "ate" himself out of baseball, but there are several hundred classy diamond athletes who "drank" themselves out of fast company.

Bobby Wallace, St. Louis Browns, is the oldest player in the American league. He has been a big league star for sixteen seasons. Wallace began with Cleveland in 1894 as a pitcher. He is not over thirty-five years old.

Much of the credit for the good showing of the Boston team in the present race is undoubtedly due to the good work Jake Stahl has been doing this season. Stahl has developed into one of the best hitters in the league.

SPORTING NOTES.

O'Brien of the Ramblers deserves credit for his fielding in Saturday's game. The amount of territory this lad can cover is a thing to be wondered at and we may expect to hear great things of him later.

Stanley Bates on Labor day again pitched the Deweys to victory by putting the Kibosh on the Stoughtons 6 to 1. Not a Stoughtonite saw third base until the ninth inning. When Elcock made a punky hit into the bushes and lost the ball for a home run.

Honey Artis of the Makarias brought everyone to their feet by that catch of his in Monday's game. He was playing close to second when the long fly was hit. No one thought he could get within twenty feet of it, but cattle boat memories gave wings to his feet, and he caught it on the bare hand thereby breaking a ring he was wearing.

Dackers of the Adams A. A. is a comer. In the game against the Bigelows on the holiday he struck out nine men ,and gave but one base on balls. He fielded his position faultlessly also, and made one assist which called forth much applause. The ball was bunted up the first base line which was slippery from the mud and water. In fielding the ball, Dackers fell flat on his back, but raising himself to sitting position, he winged the ball over his shoulder and the runner was put out at first.

BRIEFS

Mrs. E. E. Jameson of Wolalston Park has the sympathy of friends in the death of her niece Lucy Sage, daughter of Mr. Frederick H., and Mrs. Isabel Sage Sloan of Hartford, Connecticut.

A special electric parlor car went through City Square this morning. Once a year the chief officials of the Old Colony street railway company make a tour of inspection over the whole system. They looked comfortable as they passed through town this morning. The car has a large observation platform at each end, and a dining room in the middle.

Flies 33 Miles in 40 Minutes

NEW RECORDS ALSO AT THE FIELD

The Record for Altitude is 3,440 Feet

Wednesday was the best day yet at at the Quincy aviation meet. Not on'y was the weather all that could be desired, the crowd inside the grounds the largest of any day of the meet, but the flying was best. Nearly every event on the calendar was tried. Grahame-White and Glenn Curtiss made speed trials; Grahame-White, Johnstone and Brookins altitude trials; Johnstone White and Brookins, duration trials, White and Johnstone distance trials; Brookins a slow lap; Curtis and White, Accuracy trials; and lastly Grahame-White the flight to Boston Light for the Globe prize of $10,000.

The crowd of the day begun to arrive early in the afternoon. They found the mud in the streets well dried up, and that the street railway had been at work all the night before carting ashes which had been spread about near the entrance gate, making walking there much more pleasant.

Inside the grounds the crowd was immense. There were but few vacant seats in the immense grand stand, and the space between the grand stand and boxes was also filled with humanity, while the auto parking section was occupied by many cars. About the crowd there were scores of fakirs crying their wares including tonic, confectionery, opera glasses, high-flyers, peanuts, Japanese fans and sunshades and scores of other things. Each one of these fakirs were crying their wares at the top of their voice, reminding one of the Brockton fair, but the Brockton fair was not in it.

Estimates of the crowd on the field places the number at 25,000 and that number is surely not under-estimated.

Outside on the Squantum street and the hills of Squantum, Atlantic, Wollaston and Houghs Neck, and the shores of Neponset river, there were a hundred thousand more.

Those who witnessed the flights from without the inclosure were particularly favored on Wednesday for Johnstone and White in making their altitude flights were at times directly over Wollaston and then when White made his trip to Boston light at a speed of more than a mile a minute he flew directly over Squantum and was si high that he could be seen for miles and miles. He made the flight in his monoplane.

The crowd was a happy one and free with its applause to every aviator no matter what his event or who he was, althought Grahame-White was clearly the favorite, and it seemed to be the impression that unless something new turns up during the remaining days of the meet that he will go away with most of the money tucked away in his inside pocket.

Of course the one great event of the day was the fight to Boston Light. It was a little after 4.30 when the megaphone man announced that Grahame-White would circle the Quincy course in his monoplane three times for speed, then make another circuit of the course and go to Boston Light.

This announcement was received with shouts and cheers, and many a hat sailed into the air as evidence of delight of the owner that at last the day was favorable for the great event of the meet. Then White was seen to run across the field clad in a brown suit with hood over his head to deaden the noise of his engine and whirling propellor which is deafening. A second later he rose into the air.

The three circles of the course were quickly made and the megaphone man said his time was 6 minutes 15-3-5 seconds; not quite as quick as on Monday. Then he headed toward Squantum and Boston Light and the cheers of 25,000 sent him on his way rejoicing. When the light was reached the fact was announced by the megaphone man, as was also the fact that he had turned and was on the way home.

In an interview with the Globe, Mr. White said he lost his bearings on his outward trip, and on the fly home the sun was so blinding that he could not see anything. Yet he made the course of 33 miles in 40 minutes 1 3-5 seconds. As 33 miles is the air line course, which it was impossible for him to keep, he must have travelled a few more miles than that, and he says himself that he at times developed a speed of 70 miles an hour. As his trial came to an end the band played "God Save the King" and everybody shouted.

But this was not the only interesting event of the afternoon, for previous to the Boston Light flight, Ralph Johnstone was trying for the altitude prize and duration. He rose gracefully from the field in a Wright biplane. As he circled about the field he arose higher and higher until he seemed little more than a speck in the sky. At that time he was over Atlantic and Wolaston. The wind and sun were doubtless the reason for his position. He reached a hight of 2,875 feet, then came down to 200 feet and begun to circle the field for the duration and distance events.

He did a number of stunts during this event which caught the crowd, and showed some of the possibilities of the flying machine. These included graceful dips during which it looked as though he would land on the automobiles, also cutting the figure 8.

Johnstone was not the only aviator to try for elevation for White and Brookins also tried it the former attaining a highth of 3,440 feet and the latter 2670 feet.

A. V. Roe had his triplane on the field, and made several unsuccessful attempts to fly, but at no time did he reach a greater hight than twenty feet. He may succeed, however, before carting ashes which had been spread about near the entrance gate, making walking there much more pleasant.

Then there were the other events, as mentioned above, all of which held the crowd spellbound until darkness came.

There is something very facinating about the man flying, and the more that one sees of it the more they want to see. The crowd on the grandstand sat there under the glare of the hot afternoon sun and baked without a murmur until at 6.30 when the last event of the day was over. It is a question how much longer they would have staid had there been any events to be tried.

And with all this great crowd of people, it was very orderly, so that the scores of police on duty had little more to do than to acquire the aviation look with the rest of the thousands. Outside of the field was the place where the crooks might be looked for, but even there the crowds were well guarded. At the Atlantic depot Officer Goodhue and Inspector Sherlock of the Boston police were on duty. No man is more familiar or knows more of the pickpockets of the country than does this same Sherlock and if he does not know them his practiced eye can pick them out in the crowd. There it was when four

THE FIGHT IS ON FOR NOMINATIONS

Democrats Have Contests for Congress and Also In Both Representative Districts

Time Has Not Expired for Filing Republican Papers

Contests among Democrats for nominations have not been common of late especially for Representatives to the General Court, but this year there will be contests in both the Quincy districts as well as for the nominee for Congress.

For Joseph F. O'Connell, issued to Cornelius D. Austin.

For James M. Curley, issued to Francis L. Daley of Ward 17, Boston.

FOR REPRESENTATIVES.

For Representative to the General Court from the Fifth Norfolk district, papers for Archie Thayer of Ward One, were issued to Archie Thayer.

Papers for Michael T. Sullivan of Ward One were issued to Michael T. Sullivan.

Papers for Rednor P. Coombs of Ward Six were isued to Rednor P. Coombs.

Papers for the nomination of delegates to the several Democratic conventions were taken out by Thomas E. Connelley of Ward One. William A. Carey of Ward Two, and Richard H. Joyce of Ward Four.

Papers for the Republican nominations may now be obtained of the secretary, Louis F. R. Langelier, and must be filed at headquarters, Sept. 14 or 15.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Vermont is said to be a census back slider.

Who ever knew a man who had a lot of money that he saved by not smoking?

"The great Way" murmured the grafter as he took another million from the Indians.

Kaiser William is indulging in a bit of rough riding, too-and he is riding to a fall, most likely.

"Who is running this country, anyhow" asks the Birmingham News. Is this country on the run really.

"Japan made no noise about the annexation of Korea" noted the Pittsburg Dispatch. And Korea did not dare make any.

By not marrying, a Cincinnati man has secured a legacy of $850,000. Still he may marry yet if he is not careful and wary.

Pennsylivania candidates for Congress every now and then are required to retire from the race to stand trial for bribery or larceny.

"Uncle Joe" says his ancestors were named O'Cannon. Arrah, bedad no wonder he wields the gavel as if if it were a shillalah!

Mayor Gaynor's vitality is remarkable. He survived an assassin's bullet and an indorsement by Tammany hall all within one year.

Mr. Roosevelt's defiance of the lightning is picturesque, of course, it has precious little to do with the price of meat, flour and so forth, however.

Because her "hobble" skirt would not permit her to struggle, a Cleveland woman was easily rescured from drowning recently. It is true, say what one may to the contrary, that nothing in this world is absolutely without its good points.

DRIFT OF OPINION

An army chaplain, speaking at the recent total abstinence convention in Boston, complained that enlisted men were virtually boycotted because of their uniform and kept out of places of public resort. He properly pleaded for better treatment of the nation's defenders, to which they surely are entitled. But to secure such treatment the men on their part should deserve it. As a rule they do, and when large numbers of them, either from the army or navy, are at liberty their behavior is unexceptionable. Occasionally however, individuals are guilty of unseemly conduct and when they are they can expect the same treatment as civilians. So special Justice Lovatt of Fall River remarked when he sent three of the crew of the Nebraska to the house of correction for making a "rough house" in a restaurant. The law and the rule should be the same in all cases, but at the same time it can be wished that more honor were paid to the country's livery and those who wear it.—Framingham News.

A citizen applauding the work of Bostons' floating hospital, says he knows of two men willing to give $1,000 each, provided 98 others pledge themselves in a similar way to secure a $100,000 endowment fund. The suggestion is admirable. Wealthy men of Boston should esteem it a privilege to contribute towards the nucleus of a fund for permanent support o fone of the city's most valuable charities, thus far dependent upon annual subscriptions.—Boston Record.

LOST HIS WAY ON FIRST TRIP

Grahame-White Flies Twice to Boston Light and Return

MAKES 33 MILES IN 40:13-5

Receives Great Ovation Upon Returning From First Try For $10,000 Prize—Completes Spectacular Work by Flying High Above Rivals In Altitude Flight, Ascending to Height of 3440 Feet

Boston, Sept. 8.—Claude Grahame-White in his speedy, graceful monoplane, made the first try for the $10,000 prize race around Boston light yesterday afternoon, covering the thirty-three miles of the prescribed course in 40 minutes 1 3-5 seconds.

The flight was made under almost perfect conditions. At no time did the dragon fly Blerlot, with the English aviator at the helm, falter.

At no time were the relays of torpedo boats called on during the trip, and but for the detour Grahame-White made in his first straight-away lap toward the light, swinging off toward Deer island to the north of his course, his time would be very nearly a standard for the Curtiss racer to match.

This detour, bringing him some miles from his course, added time to his total, and with the experience of going over the course once, he will be able to better the time in another try, with weather conditions as good as they were yesterday.

Before darting out over the water Grahame-White made three trips around the field course in 6 minutes 15 3-5 seconds. Then in getting his altitude for the long flight he circled the field again.

The aviator flew straight for the big light, going at a tremendous rate of speed. Soon he looked a mere speck in the sky to those in the aviation field.

On the return trip Grahame-White took a much higher course and he looked to be fully 1000 feet in the air as he flew back over the harbor. As the man neared the field he was greeted with a tremendous outburst of cheering and blowing of automobile horns.

Grahame-White reached the aviation field at 4:57. He made one circle of the course with a wide circle in the air and then headed a second time for Boston light, it requiring two trips to meet the requirements for the big prize. It was estimated that the flyer made a good deal better than a mile a minute part of the time in his spectacular flight.

The great crowd were all on their feet awaiting the coming of the man to first fly around Boston light. As the monoplane came into view high in the air it looked like a great dragon fly winging its flight in from the sea.

When the flyer came back on the second trip he flew over Squantum Head. From all over the harbor the aviator was cheered with the continuous whistling of all sorts of craft. It was the greatest din ever heard down the harbor.

At last the great air bug shot across the starting line, making the thirty-three miles in 40 minutes 1 3-5 seconds. The band struck up the national air of England, but the strains were drowned out by the noise. The stands went wild.

The monoplane was run off to one side and Grahame-White returned toward the judges' house. As he stood in conference there, Johnstone came into sight. The American swooped low, skimming the grounnd. As he came across the line, in front of Grahame-White, he dipped his machine. As he passed he touched his cap to the Englishman, and then swooped up into the air again.

Finally it was announced that Grahame-White would make a try for altitude, and Wilbur Wright, when Johnstone again swooped down to salute White, called him. It was announced that Brookins, the greatest American climber, would compete with Grahame-White in a climb.

In the climb up into the sunlight, Grahame-White was the victor. He rose to an altitude of 3440 feet, the record for the course, to Brookins' 2670 feet, and the earlier altitude of Johnstone of 2875 feet.

In the totalled points for the meet so far, Grahame-White still holds a big lead over the other aviators, although they are all commencing to push him for records.

VICTORY FOR ENGLAND

Important Points In Fisheries Dispute Decided In Her Favor

Washington, Sept. 8.—A substantial victory for Great Britain on perhaps the two most important points, a consolatory triumph for the United States in the other five points, with the prospect of another arbitration later at the instance of the United States government, is the way the decision of The Hague tribunal in the Newfoundland fisheries case is viewed here.

The decision eliminates the right of the United States to share in making and enforcing "reasonable regulations" governing the fisheries in the disputed territory and it is that qualification "reasonable" that may permit this government some time to reopen the question of joint action as to the regulations. The state department has not been officially advised of the decision and therefore declines to comment upon it.

ETHEL LENEVE CONFESSES

Eloping Typist Reported Ready to Give Evidence Against Crippen

London, Sept. 8.—Ethel Leneve has confessed to all that she knows concerning the fate of Belle Elmore, the wife of Dr. H. H. Crippen, whom he is charged with slaying, and the girl for love of whom the physician is said to have committed the crime will be the chief witness against him, according to a report that is gaining credence.

When the preliminary hearing of the prisoners is continued, this report says, Miss Leneve's confession, which is in affidavit form, will be presented as the principal evidence of the prosecution.

The powerful influence brought to bear upon the young woman by her family and the king's prosecutors has finally broken down the girl's resolution to stand by the physician and she has turned upon him.

WEYMOUTH KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Two Friends of Former Congressman Are Badly Injured

Bingham, Me., Sept. 8.—Pinned beneath the wreckage of a big touring car when it turned turtle at the foot of a steep hill, former Congressman George W. Weymouth of Fairhaven, Mass., general manager of the Atlas Tack company and also president of the American Shoe Finding company and other large financial interests, was instantly killed.

Two of his three companions, Perley R. Glass and F. A. Dinsmore of Boston, the former prominent in machine circles in Boston, were seriously and possibly fatally injured. The fourth member of the party, J. J. Landers of this town, who was operating the machine, escaped without injury.

Weymouth came here a few days ago on a business trip, one of the factories of the American Shoe Finding company being located here. He was 60 years old and had acquired a fortune since retiring from politics.

GUARDING AGAINST CHOLERA

Surgeon Carter Going Abroad to Report on General Situation

Washington, Sept. 8.—Treasury department officials have taken cognizance of the fears of the New York and Boston immigration officials that the immigrants from Europe might bring cholera to the ports from several European countries.

Assistant Secretary Hiller announces that Surgeon Carter of the public health service has been detailed to visit Russia, Germany and Italy to report on the prevalence of Asiatic cholera, particularly as the danger connected with the departure from infected districts of emigrants and other passengers.

"ADJOURNED FOREVER"

Mexican War Veterans Have Become Too Old to Keep Up Organization

Indianapolis, Sept. 8.—"It now becomes my sacred duty to adjourn the National Association of Mexican War Veterans to meet again on that beautiful shore. I ask you to rise and declare the National association adjourned forever."

With these words Secretary Murdock of the association disbanded it at the close of its final convention. The twenty-eight survivors were too old, it was felt, to keep the organization together. None of the delegates present was under 79 years of age.

THIRTY SKELETONS FOUND

Skulls of Prehistoric Human Bones Are Adorned With Horns

Los Angeles, Sept. 8.—Anthropologists of coast universities are endeavoring to discover to what age the prehistoric human bones that have recently been unearthed in Topango canyon should be ascribed.

Thirty complete skeletons have been unearthed. The foreheads are low and retreating, the jawbones prominent and the cheek bones high. Just above and in front of the ears each had a hornlike development three inches long.

SQUANTUM !?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY !?
¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.
¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.
¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?
¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.
¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)
LOTS OF LAND
overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

The teaching staff of the city schools met with Supt. Barbour Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of organization. All reported a successful start and then plans and prospects for the year were discussed.

The total enrollment on the opening day was 5,334 as compared with 6,087 last year. This decrease is the result of two new factors, first the parochial school which has an enrollment of nearly five hundred, and secondly the raising of the age limit from five to six years. It will be observed that there are only 178 beginners as against 619 last year which of itself is a reduction of 441 out of a total loss of 753. The totals for the two years compare as follows:

Adams	523	321
Coddington	602	396
Atherton Hough	—	130
Cranch	373	319
Gridley Bryant	272	268
John Hancock	383	323
Lincoln	501	431
Mass. Fields	398	369
Quincy	610	569
Washington	522	428
Willard	838	737
Wollaston	359	348
	6087	5334

The largest losses come at the Adams, Willard and Washington schools, the total losses by buildings being as follows: Adams 202; Willard 101; Washington 94; Coddington (including Atherton Hough) 76; Lincoln 70; John Hancock 60; Cranch 54; Quincy 41; Masachusetts Fields 29; Wollaston 11; Gridley Bryant 4.

	1909	1910
Adams	74	8
Coddington	60	24
Atherton Hough	—	7
Cranch	38	11
Gridley Bryant	17	1
John Hancock	49	10
Lincoln	65	19
Mass. Fields	38	8
Quincy	68	18
Washington	63	15
Willard	102	42
Wollaston	45	15
	619	178

Because of the new factors the Willard has only 42 beginners in the primary department while last year it had 102, the Adams has 8 whereas last year it had 74, the Quincy has 18 where it had 68, the Washington has 15 where it had 63 a year ago. The Gridley Bryant has but one new pupil entering the first grade this year.

The first day at the schools was given over almost entirely to organization. At the graded schools there was some confusion, owing to the fact that many of the scholars are to enter the new parochial school and must have discharge cards before they can do so.

All who appeared Tuesday were accommodated but it is believed that there are still some who have not yet put in an appearance.

Wednesday they were launched into the work of the year, which goes to show the superiority of the Quincy system. After the seating arrangements were made, lessons were assigned and everything was in readiness for the routine work.

HIGH SCHOOL.

At the High school all the work is in full swing. Mr. Howlett the principal spent practically the whole of his summer vacation in systematizing courses, and in arranging the schedules, so that all could get a study hour or two during the morning. This has been nine weeks' work, and great credit is due him for perfecting the mechanism of the school.

The entering class numbers somewhere in the vicinity of 300. Not quite that number have appeared yet but about fifty more are expected within the next few days. The majority of the freshman will take the commercial course. The rest are divided about equally among the other courses which are offered, namely: technical, normal, modern language, manual arts, household arts and college preparatory. The same thing is true in nearly all the High schools of the country, that is the tendency toward vocational studies.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

At the Woodward the situation remains unchanged. Mr. Rice will carry on the work in the same capable manner in which Mr. Plummer conducted it, making improvements where it is possible and keeping an eye out for future. The scholars of the three upper classes are attending the regular recitations today but the freshmen will not start in until tomorrow owing to confusion in mapping out courses.

ST. JOHNS SCHOOL.

Many of the very latest modern hygienic and sanitary ideas have been utilized in the new parochial school. At the rear of each recitation room there is a cloak room which is thoroughly heated so that if the wraps should be damp at the opening of the school session, by the time it lets out they would be warm and dray.

Another excellent thing is the bubbling fountain. This does away with the common drinking cup, which is notably the great germ carrier. The fountains at the parochial school are a very recent improvement which is an excellent precautionary scheme.

The first fountains consisted merely of a pipe with the water bubbling out, but people would get their mouths down around the pipe and thus defeat the purpose of the fountain. The newest ones have a ring of perhaps three inches diameter built up far enough above the pipe so that one cannot touch it with his mouth.

A state law has been passed recently which forces all towns and cities to equip their public drinking fountains in this fashion, and the time will soon come when all those of our city must meet this requirement. To many this seems like a trivial thing, but those who have studied into the matter tell us that much of the sickness among our people is due to the use of the common drinking cup.

The new school is thoroughly up-to-date, not only with reference to the fountain but in many other respects and Father Coan is to be congratulated for his persistency in keeping abreast of the times.

GOING TO COLLEGE.

Of those who graduated from our High school by far the greater number will go into business directly or will attend some business college. A few will stay for another year to pursue post-graduate studies. Below is a partial list of those who will attend various schools of higher education:

Dana Hall — Lillian Mead and Gladys Bain.

Wellesley College— Bertha Given and Ruth Epes.

Simmons College—Helen Atkins and Grace DeWolf.

Tufts College—Thomas Veale.

Normal Art School—William Northrup.

Worcester Polytechnic Institute—Charles A. Kendall.

Boston Universtiy—Mary Cleveland and Hary Levorich.

Colgate Universtiy—Theodore Corey and Enor Lundin.

Norwich University — Reginald Sprague.

Annapolis Naval School—Forrest Royal.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology—Gordon Jameson, Alfred Hanson, Richard Favorite and Stanley Churchill.

A number of the girls will go to Bridgewater Normal school. The Ledger would be glad to get the names of these and of any others who intend to enter educational institutions this fall, so that a complete list may be made.

BLAKE—KNOWLES.

Arthur Blake, son of Dr. John G. Blake of Beacon street, oston, and Miss Leslie Appleton Knowles were married on Wednesday at the home of the bride's sister Mrs. Charles Harding in Dedham. Only the two families were present. Barbara Blake, the young daughter of Dr. Blake was the bride's only attendant and John Appleton Knowles gave his sister away. Upon returning from their honeymoon the young couple will make their home in Dedham.

—The skill of the air men in dropping "bombs" from 200 ft. in height on a battleship is enough proof of the steady eye and trained judgment of the aeroplanist. As a demonstration of danger in actual marine warfare it seems to us absurd. It would mean vastly more to a city to have an aeroplanist steal above it in his machine and drop dynamite. But to drop a bomb on a warship successfully from height of 1300 ft. even is very different from 300 ft. And unless the bomb thrower was at least half a mile in the air his chances of survival would be slim indeed.—Boston Record.

ANNUAL OUTING OF BIRD CLUB

Enjoy Fishing, a Clambake and Aviation

The "Bird Club" held their annual outing Wednesday. Commodore Williams commanded the flagship Firefly, followed by the Edith in command of Captain Eugene R. Stone. The first run was for the fishing grounds off Boston light.

First mate Albert L. Whitman of the good ship Edith was high line for fish landed. There were many on both ships who had large ones hooked but only those were counted that were landed safely.

The whale that First Mate Piper of the flagship hooked went off with hook, line, sinker and harpoon, scoring several points against his record of the catch.

Commodore Williams secured several salt water horn pouts. He claims that they suit his epicurean taste, so he was credited on a basis of "sixteen to one."

Capt. Stone secured second honors as high line, and first on story of those hooked but not landed.

The helmsman John R. Richards of the flagship was high line on the auxiliary of the fleet. He reported having a hard time with a devil-fish, finally subduing the monster and chucking him overboard.

Pilot Foster, assisted by Second Mates Walter Piper, Jr., and J. Harold Richards prepared a bountiful spread, which was enjoyed by the King birds to their utmost capacity. While the banquet was being enjoyed the aviator Grahame-White came along and would have been welcome to the Brds' feast, but owing to lack of time was obliged to forego the pleasure but the Birds hope at some future time to have the pleasure of his company.

The return trip was made with the fish on the inside and every Bird expressed his appreciation of the day of pleasure and sincere thanks to the Stone bird, who did the honors of the occasion. To the Birds it is the annual event.

NORFOLK COUNTY G. A. R.

Braintree and Quincy now have the first two officers of the Norfolk county G. A. R. association. At the convention at Stoughton on Wednesday Henry A. Monk of Post 87 of Braintree was elected commander, and George L. Phillips of Post 88 of Quincy senior vice commander. The other officers elected are Junior vice-commander, G. W. Pratt of Post 72 of Stoughton, surgeon, H. N. Fales of Post 169 of Norwood, chaplain, E. O. Pierson of Post 87 of Braintree; quarter-master, J. F. Whitehall of Post 121 of Hyde Park; officer of the day, James Q. Spear of Post 58 of Weymouth; officer of the guard, Hiram S. Faunce of Post 110 of Randolph; adjutant, W. B. Gould of Post 144 of Dedham; sergeant-major, C. E. Lewis of Post 144 of Dedham .

James T. Stevens, commander of the county association, the past term called the convention to order. Dept. Commander J. Willard Brown and Senior Vice Dept. Commander Granville C. Fiske were among the leading speakers of the forenoon. Members of the W. R. C. also spoke. At noon dinner was served, the women of the W. R. C. being hosts. In the afternoon there was a reception and more speechmaking.

ACCIDENT WAS FATAL.

A. Reese Blades of 112 Upland road who was mortally injured by a fall while walking in his sleep, died at the City Hospital on Wednesday afternoon, without having regained consciousness his fall having fractured his skull. Mr. Blades, who was 48 years of age, held a responsible position in the furniture department of Henry Siegel's store in Boston. He was a native of Baltimore, and was a member of a Masonic lodge at Rochester, N. Y. The body will be taken to Baltimore for burial.

—"It is even now possible to obtain quicker deliveries by water than by rail," declared a speaker before the recent Atlantic deeper waterways convention. Remembering that last year statistics showed an average freight haul of only 27 miles a day on over 400 railroads ,this is not much of a boast.—Boston Record.

RINGER—FRANCIS.

A wedding of interest to many people in this vicinity was solemnized Wednesday evening at North Weymouth at the Pilgrim Congregational church, the young people who plighted their troth being Miss Marion Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis of North Weymouth and Wilfred Harvey Ringer son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden J. Ringer of Charlestown.

A large audience gathered, the young people being great favorites and having many friends, the bride having been a resident of the town for several years and the groom's people former summer residents.

Herbert Hayden of Quincy was the organist, playing while awaiting the coming of the bride. To the strains of the wedding march the bride went down the aisle of the church accompanied by her uncle Edward F. Newell of North Weymouth and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man Walter M. Stone of Winter Hill, and the officiating clergymen, Rev. Edward W. Virgin of Dedham and the pastor of church Rev. Frederick G. Merrill. The wedding party made a pretty grouping of colors at the altar. The bride's gown was of white messaline, with princess lace yoke and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. Miss Emily N. Francis, sister of the bride was maid of honor and wore a gown of pale blue liberty silk; the four bridesmaids, Miss Eva Francis of New York City cousin of the bride, Miss Alice C. Ringer sister of the groom, Miss Ethel Evans of North Weymouth and Miss Alice Burnham of Dorchester were gowned alike in pale pink liberty silk and carried baskets of pink sweet peas. Miss Ruth MacBrine was ring bearer and the garland bearers were Masters Donald and Warren Francis brothers of the bride and Miss Mildred MacBrine. The head ushers were Paul Newell of Woonsocket, R. I., and Charles Dodge of Charlestown, and the assisting ushers Louis Carter of East Weymouth and Edwin Proctor of Northboro.

Rev. Mr. Virgin who christened and married the bride's mother and christened the bride, also, as was fitting marriedl her, being assisted in the ceremony by the pastor of the church.

A pretty feature at the end of the ceremony was when seven young ladies, friends of the bride and groom sang the wedding hymn accompanied on the violin by Mrs. Ray Blanchard. They were Misses Ruth Merrill, Maud Merrill, Bertha Dunbar, Mildred Alden, Anna Alden, Velma Collyer and Mrs. Ray Blanchard all of North Weymouth. The artistic church decorations were also the work of these young friends.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church vestry the happy couple being assisted in receiving by their parents, the maid of honor and best man, and the bride's aunt Miss Julia M. Newell.

Mr. and Mrs. Ringer had a merry send off. They are to make their home in Detroit, Michigan, where they will receive their friends after October first.

The bride's aunt and mother are well known especially in Quincy where they have modiste parlors in the Adams building and whose father the late Thomas Newell was also well known in Boston where he was for many years private secretary for J. Pierpont Morgan of New York.

GAGNON—McNEALY.

A pretty weding took place in Roxbury Wednesday evening when a Quincy groom, Mr. Theophilus E. Gagnon, was married to Miss Annie J. McNealy of 27 Albion street, Roxbury. The ceremony was performed by Father Allshun of St. Paul's church in Roxbury. It was a home wedding and the house was filled to overflowing by the numerous friends of the bride and groom.

The bride was accompanied by her cousin, Mary McNealy as maid of honor, and by her father, P. J. McNealy, who gave her away. The bride was attired in a gown of white silk trimmed with duchess lace and applique. The maid if honor wore blue silk.

The groom was attended by Charles Kane of West Quincy who acted as best man. Mr. Gagnon, the groom, is well known about town and has been remembered very handsomely by his host of friends. He has been in the ploy of the F. W. Whitcher Co., 14 Albany street, Boston, for the past ten years, and from them he received a very handsome present.

The wedding was followed by a reception from 8 to 11 o'clock, after which the happy pair left for their honeymoon trip, which will be in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Gagnon will be at home after October first in their newly finished appartment on Carruth street, Quincy.

BRIEFS

A meeting of the Ward Four Improvement society will be held tonight.

Ralph Marden has entered the employ of Mayor Howard of Salem, who publishes a paper in that city.

City Treasurer Curtis received but one bid for the city bonds aggregating $18,900, and awarded them to Blodget & Co., at 100,034.

The new building directly opposite Hotel Des Moines, which has just been completed is a big improvement at Quincy Point. Mr. Cook has already taken possession of half of it and has fitted it up very nicely. The other half will be ocupied by the Boston dry goods store which is owned by A. L. Whitman.

Quincy Point people were aroused by a terrible crash from a bolt of lightning Tuesday. The house of Mr. Barrows on Charles stret was struck, but fortunately suffered very little damage. A few shingles were ripped off along the ridgepole but nothing took fire. The signal box in front of the Boston dry goods store was struck by the same bolt, and blazed away for some time before it was extinguished.

A little progress is being made on the new street between Broadway and Chubbuck street. There are already five or six houses on it and it is reported that the ground will be broken for others before very long. At the end toward Broadway it is high ground but much filling will be needed at the other end before the street can be opened. At the extremity on Chubbuck street the filling is pretty well under way but it will mean several weeks work before the hollow beneath the knoll can be leveled up with rest of the street. Men have been on the job for about three weeks.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Residents of this vicinity are constantly testifying to permanent cures.

Richard Smith, South Central avenue, Wollaston, Mass. ,says: "I suffered from backache and kidney trouble for a long time. I had dull pains through the small of my back and on arising in the morning, I was so stiff and lame that I could hardly dress myself. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and in a short time after beginning their use, I was relieved. After I had taken the contents of two boxes of this remedy, I was in good health and I have had no kidney trouble since. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for this change for the better and I gladly recommend them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WITH HIMSELF AND MANKIND

Professor James Is at Peace In "Plane of Life"

A MESSAGE TO SPIRITUALISTS

Transmitted Through Mouthpiece For Temple Band—Has Awakened to Life Far Beyond Highest Conception While a Denizen of Earth—Will Yet Enlighten World In Matter of Spiritualism, Says a Close Friend

Boston, Sept. 8.—M. S. Ayer, a Boston business man, founder of the First Spiritual Temple, and a friend of the late Professor William James, who was a Harvard professor and distinguished scientist and psychic exprt, announces that a message was received from James at a private seance held at the Ayer country home in Harwichport.

The particular medium employed for this sitting was one who has served with the Ayer's Temple Band of Spirits for years. Some of the foremost spiritualists of the world were present at the seance.

"The medium is a healthy, splendidly trained intellectual woman," said Ayer. "She has devoted much of her life to the art of attuning herself mentally and spiritually to the lives of the Temple Band of Spirits.

"The medium went under control a few moments after 8 o'clock, whereupon a young member of the Temple Band of Spirits opened communication with us and chatted with me about numberless things of common knowledge between us.

"Perhaps ten minutes had elapsed and no mention had been made of Professor James, when the medium suddenly underwent a complete change, indicating that another member of the Temple Band of Spirits had assumed control of her.

"We recognized the new control at once as an old friend and familiar spirit who was in close touch with Professor James in life. Acting as a mouthpiece for the Temple Band, he said, through the medium:

"We realize how anxious many are to hear from the lately arisen brother, with whom we are in communication. At this time it will not be possibe for William James to express himself as he would like to. The higher life is to him so vast in comparison to his preconceived opinion of what it would be that he has occupied the limited time since his transition in viewing its grandeur. He bids us to say:

"'I am at peace, at peace (here followed some words that could not be distinguished) with myself and all mankind. I have awakened to a life far beyond my highest conception while a denizen of the earth. Tell my brothers that I will transmit a message through this instrument that will prove my individuality when I can manifest more clearly than at this time. I did not realize how difficult it would be to manifest from this plane of life to the mortal plane. There is much, very much, for me to learn, and many conditions to overcome.'

"The above," said Ayer, "is the message given to us through the Temple Band of Spirits and the most expert and conscientious intellectual medium possible to employ. To us it means that in a short time Professor James will be able to accustom himself to his surroundings to the extent that he will be able to give the world a much longer, clearer and more satisfying message. Like all who pass out, Professor James was bewildered upon his awakening to the higher consciousness and he has not yet regained the condition necessary to the execution of his clear purpose to enlighten the world in the matter of spiritualism. But this will come."

TWO STILL AT LIBERTY

Sixteen Girls In Industrial School Escape After Attacking Matron

Middletown, Conn., Sept. 8.—Sixteen girls, inmates of the Connecticut industrial school for girls in this city, made a successful break for liberty by making an organized attack on the matron, Mrs. Cole.

The girls tried to steal her keys, but were unsuccessful in the attempt, owing to the pluckiness of the matron. Foiled in this the girls broke a window and escaped.

Within an hour the majority of the girls were recaptured and brought back. All but two have now been caught. Superintendent Fairbanks is very reticent over the matter.

Civil Trial For Alleged Spy

Portsmouth, Eng., Sept. 8.—According to a semi-official report the army chiefs have decided to turn Lieutenant Helm, the German held as a spy, over to the civil authorities, under the official secrets act.

JOHN A. MEAD

Is Elected to Become Governor of Vermont

MEAD'S PLURALITY 17,986

Next Session of Vermont House Will Contain Forty Democrats

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 8.—John A. Mead of Rutland, by the comparatively small plurality of 17,986 votes, was promoted by the voters of the state in Tuesday's election from lieutenant governor to governor.

Unofficial returns, completed only at a late hour last night, show that Mead received 35,206 votes to 17,220 votes for Charles B. Watson of St. Albans, his Democratic opponent. The plurality of 29,645 was received by Governor Prouty at the last state election in 1908.

The senate, as usual, will be solidly Republican, but the house next session will contain forty Democrats, double the number in the last session.

CHANLER LEAVES CAVALIERI BEHIND

Solitary Bridegroom Is Returning to New York

New York, Sept. 8.—The publication in The American of Robert Chanler leaving Paris for New York without his bride, Lina Cavalieri, led the friends of both to watch the incoming steamers for the solitary bridegroom. They did not find him, and the reason is given in the following pertinent dispatch sent by Mrs. Chanler, although she does not so sign herself:

Editor New York American: Bob Chanler left Paris for London last Tuesday, thence went to Bristol, whence he sailed on Wednesday by the Canadian line. His sister-in-law, Mrs. Willie Chanler, went with him. Chanler is going to New York, I go to Cabourg. Cavalieri.

PRIZES FOR BRONX ZOO

Herd of Musk Oxen and Biggest Polar Bear In Captivity

Glen Cove, L. I., Sept. 8.—The most valuable herd of musk oxen, and what is said to be the biggest polar bear in captivity, will shortly become the property of the Bronx Zoological Gardens.

The herd contains six musk oxen, and the only one now in the Bronx is valued at $2000. The bear weighs 800 pounds.

FIGUEROA MOVES UP

Chilean Minister of Justice Assumes Duties of President

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 8.—Acting President Figueroa, minister of justice, has actually assumed the duties of president following his appointment on the death of Vice President Albano.

Throughout the country flags are displayed at half-mast, and the death of Albano within a few weeks of the demise of his predecessor, President Montt, has plunged the nation into gloom and may alter the plans for the coming centennial celebration.

Figueroa will continue in office till Sept. 18, 1911, the general election being held on June 25 next.

"SKIN THE GOAT" IS DEAD

Cabman Who Figured In Notable Irish Tragedy Dies In Workhouse

Dublin, Sept. 8.—James Fitzharris, better known by the name of "Skin the Goat," who drove the cab containing the assassins of Lord Frederick Cavendish, chief secretary for Ireland, and T. H. Burke, the permanent under secretary, to the scene of the crime in Phoenix park, May 6, 1882, died Wednesday in the workhouse.

Fitzharris was released in 1903 after serving twenty years of a life sentence for his share in the tragedy.

DIRECT PRIMARY GROWS IN FAVOR, SAYS WADHAMS.

Conventions Shams, Asserts Head of Movement In New York.

The political battles within the Republican party of New York have drawn attention to the progress made by the direct nomination movement throughout the United States.

William H. Wadhams, president of the Direct Primaries association of New York, asserts the greater part of the nation has adopted the idea, saying:

"This system is in force in some form in more than two-thirds of the states whose population numbers more than half the population of the entire nation. Fifteen states—Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin (to which Michigan, California and some other states have since been added), with a population of more than 25,000,000—have mandatory laws adopting this system of nominating candidates for practically all offices. Minnesota, Ohio and Pennsylvania have mandatory laws covering nominations for all but state offices.

"In Indiana, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Tennessee mandatory direct primaries are held for certain offices or in certain localities, and in Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Michigan the laws permit the use of this system in nominating practically all officers. Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Maine, North Carolina and Rhode Island have certain provisions for optional direct primaries; also in many other states, notably the southern states not specified, party rules have been adopted providing for state wide mandatory direct primaries. No state after adopting the mandatory direct primary has gone back to the convention system.

"The reason the convention was abandoned in those states was that it had become a sham and merely expressed the will of the few instead of the party. The American method of nominating directly by choice of the party members has taken its place."

POLLY HAS AGED RIVALS.

British Produce Schooner Jenny of 122 Years Still at Sea.

Some ancient ships that rival even the celebrated American schooner Polly must be placed to the credit of Great Britain. First in order of age is the Jenny of Carnarvon, 122 years old. The next is the May of Whitehaven, sometimes called the Molly Ashcroft to distinguish her from other Mays. The May was built at Cowes in 1798, so that she is 112 years old, six years older than the Polly.

Her present owner regularly fishes in her with a crew of three or four. She is a jigger smack. She was dismasted in a gale last winter, but she is in first class trim today, and her owner speaks highly of her seagoing qualities.

Eighteen years ago the May was practically rebuilt, but a boat must be essentially sound to stand extensive repairs, and the fact therefore does not really detract so much as one might think from the wonder of her immense age.

WALKS 25 MILES DAILY.

Munich Waitress Finds Labor Is Strenuous Exercise.

One of the waitresses at a large restaurant and beer garden in Munich became curious as to the distance she was obliged to walk every day in serving the customers seated at her tables.

To find out she counted the number of steps she took from 10 o'clock in the morning until midnight, when she went off duty. Her stride is twenty-seven and a half inches, and during her hours of duty she was compelled to take no less than 58,000 steps, or a distance of some twenty-five miles.

Commenting upon this fact, a German newspaper says that this represents an eight hour march and that it shows what hard tasks are now being performed by women when obliged to earn their own living.

ABORIGINAL RACE DWINDLES.

New South Wales Natives Are Rapidly Disappearing.

According to a return laid before parliament, the aborigines of New South Wales continue to decline in numbers. The aboriginal population in September last numbered 7,370 as against 8,919 in 1882, when a census of the native population was first taken.

The number of full bloods has declined from 6,540 to 2,123, while the half castes show an increase, there being now 5,247 as against 2,379 in 1882. The present population consists of 880 male and 589 female full blooded adults, with 648 full blooded children.

SOCIETY PLANS ADAMLESS EDEN

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR 1,000

Ballroom, Amateur Theater, Roof Tennis Courts, Dozen "Beau Parlors" and Free Typewriters Among Features of $300,000 Residential Home For Bachelor Maids Soon to Be Erected.

A whole city block of women, with not a man in sight, will become an interesting reality in the "improved mode of living" in New York city early next year. Prominent New York men and women who are keenly interested in the housing problem say the new arrangement will offer accommodations for many hundreds of New York's business and professional women and students who represent the bachelor maid population of the city.

The members of the woman colony, which it is declared will be the only one of its kind in the world, will be housed in two separate buildings. The first building, which it is expected will be ready for occupancy next February, will be known as the Junior League Residential club. The second building, for which plans are now being made, will be known as the Model Kitchenette Apartments For Women.

Will House 1,000 Women.

The buildings when completed will accommodate nearly 1,000 women. The only men to be allowed on the premises will be those received socially by the young women guests. Men will be encouraged to make social calls, and provision has been made for this social feature of the club by providing a few dozen of what will be known as "beau parlors."

In the new order of things, where women will live under the same unrestrained liberty as the men and women of wealthy clubs, there will be no interfering janitress, no elevator maid, no woman superintendent or lady night watchman tiptoeing about the halls turning out the gas as a gentle hint to the young man that he had better be moving.

Miss Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the late William C. Whitney, and other well known society women who have given much time and money to philanthropy, including Mrs. Charles Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman; Miss Harriet Alexander, Miss Lorraine Roosevelt, Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes and Mrs. Frederick R. Swift, with the assistance of William D. Sloane, raised about $300,000 to erect and furnish the building.

The managers of the new enterprise say the club will not be in any way a charity, although they hope to give girls a pleasant room and good board for $6 a week and perhaps a little less, with the additional educational, social and recreation features, for which there will be no charge.

Liberty Is Principle.

"Liberty will be the keynote of life at the new Residential club," said one of the promoters. "Young women who have the courage to come to New York to try to better their circumstances, whether to earn their own living or to study, should be given every encouragement. The social side of a girl's life has been as carefully provided for in the club as the economic one. I think the recreation one a most important feature. We will have a ballroom to accommodate as many as 600 persons. We will have tennis courts on the roof garden, and we will have a clubroom where amateur plays may be given, and we hope to interest the girls in these.

"The utility features will consist of an office room where girls may typewrite any work they have to do. There will be a sewing room where the girls may make their own gowns and hats if they wish, and there will be a laundry room for their special use.

"I think one nice feature which the girls will like very much is the little pantry at the end of each hall. These will be provided with dumb waiters. If a girl wishes to make a cup of tea or a cup of chocolate all she will need to do will be to drop a coin in the slot for the gas used and she can have a cup of something warm for a small cost."

ARMY RECOGNIZES AVIATION.

France Appoints Commander In Chief of Sky Fleet.

France is the first country to appoint a commander in chief of aeroplanes. The minister of war has just appointed General Roque to that office. It is said that the minister has also decided to ask for an appropriation of $400,000 for the aeroplane department.

The minister intends to order fifty aeroplanes this fall, and he is also going to offer a prize to army officers for a new military aeroplane that shall be an improvement upon all existing types.

THE RETURNS FROM VERMONT

Big Cut In Republican Vote Causes Surprise—Power of Old State Organization In New Hampshire Is on the Wane—Victory of La Follette Regarded as Very Significant From Standpoint of National Insurgency

Washington, Sept. 8.—Only one interpretation is placed upon the Republican elections and primaries of Tuesday in political circles in Washington, and that is that the insurgents have scored a victory all along the line. There is a wide difference of opinion among officers of the administration as to what the moral effect will be when the general elections are held in November.

At the Democratic congressional campaign headquarters the opinion is expressed that the results of Tuesday are but a forerunner of Democratic victory in the fall.

Republican leaders in Washington do not subscribe to this view, but it is admitted that the votes of Tuesday, following on the heels of the recent events in Iowa, California and Kansas, indicate very clearly that insurgency is in the ascendency.

Democratic campaign managers at the headquarters here are jubilant over the returns from Vermont, one of the safest Republican states in the union, where the Republican vote on the state ticket came through with a plurality of only 17,986, one of the smallest votes ever given the party since its organization. The election of John A. Mead as governor over Charles D. Watson, the Democratic candidate, had been conceded by the Democratic managers, but there had been little hope that there would be such a cut in the Republican vote. The Democratic congressional campaign committee had no hope of defeating Representatives Foster and Plumley.

While the primaries in New Hampshire have no direct bearing on national politics, the sweeping victory of the insurgent state ticket is hailed with delight by the insurgent element in Washington as indicating the growing strength of the movement. The nomination of Robert P. Bass, insurgent candidate for governor, over Bertram Ellis, regular candidate, is interpreted here as indicating that the fight within the Republican party which was started six years ago, when Winston Churchill was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, has at last been won by the insurgents and that the power of the old state organization is on the wane.

From the standpoint of national insurgency the victory of Senator La Follette in Wisconsin is regarded as extremely significant. The senator admittedly was engaged in the most desperate struggle of his career. The stand-pat element in Wisconsin, backed by Senator Stephenson, was believed to be in a better position to retire La Follette to private life than ever before.

Before he left Washington La Follette admitted to friends that he had a tremendous struggle on hand and more than one of his fellow insurgents in the senate were fearful that he would be defeated in the primaries.

The defeat of United States Senator Burrows by Representative Townsend in the Michigan primaries is claimed as an insurgent victory, although Townsend has allied himself with the insurgent element in the house only on rare occasions. When he did so it was usually in matters of progressive legislation, rather than against the house organization. It is understood, however, that Townsend's platform in his senatorial campaign was sufficiently progressive to warrant the insurgents to count upon him to act with them in the event of his election by the Michigan legislature.

GRAFT IN COCAINE

Governor Making Personal Probe of Baltimore's Police Department

Baltimore, Sept. 8.—Governor Crothers, who is making a personal investigation of the Baltimore police department, sprung a sensation at a hearing, when he said that he would prove "graft" in connection with the sale of cocaine, running in one case to $10,000.

The governor declared that he expected to prove that one drug store did a cocaine business amounting to $900 a week, while another did at least twice that much.

$50.000 TROUSSEAU FOR MISS SHERMAN

Newport Heiress Becomes Bride of Lawrence Gillespie

Newport, R. I., Sept. 8.—Miss Irene Sherman was married today to Lawrence L. Gillespie of New York in an improvised chapel at the Sherman villa. Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, pastor of Trinity church, performed the ceremony.

Miss Sherman and her sister Mildred, Newport's greatest heiresses, are the daughters of W. W. Sherman. Gillespie is a prominent broker and clubman.

The trousseau of Miss Sherman is said to have cost $50,000. Everything came from Paris. Among other things are dinner gowns costing $5000; ball and opera cloaks, $8000; visiting and luncheon toilettes, $4500; automobile furs and costumes, $2000; embroidered and beribboned lingerie, $1500; hats and veils, $1200; riding habits, $1500; hats, boots and gloves, $1500; hosiery, $500.

WOULD PLEDGE DELEGATES

Vahey Says It Would Avoid Trades Repugnant to Electorate

Boston, Sept. 8.—James H. Vahey, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, has issued a statement in which he voiced his opposition to the policy of electing unpledged delegates to the party's state convention.

He declares in it that to adopt such a plan would practically mean the repudiation of one of the Democratic party's principles, that of direct nomination, and that it would give a few men the opportunity to make trades repugnant to the wishes of the electorate.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla Power

The Curious Mistletoe.

The story of how the mistletoe gets on the trees is a most interesting one. Covering the mistletoe twigs are pearly white berries. These come in the winter season, when food is comparatively scarce, and hence some birds eat them freely. Now, when a robin eats a cherry he swallows simply the meat and flips the stone away. The seed of the mistletoe the bird cannot flip. It is sticky and holds to his bill. His only resource is to wipe it off, and he does so, leaving it sticking to the branches of the tree on which he is sitting at the time. This seed sprouts after a time, and not finding earth—which, indeed, its ancestral habit has made it cease wanting—it sinks its roots into the bark of the tree and hunts there for the pipes that carry the sap. Now, the sap in the bark is the very richest in the tree, far richer than that in the wood, and the mistletoe gets from its host the choicest of food. With a strange foresight it does not throw its leaves away, as do most parasites, but keeps them to use in winter, when the tree is leafless.

Already Planned.

There were few persons who knew the Locke family even in a casual way who had not discovered that Mrs. Locke was in the habit of nagging her husband and children. She loved them dearly, but at times nobody would have surmised it.

"What did Mr. Locke say when he found himself safe after those hours of danger?" some one asked a friend who had been in company with Mr. Locke on an ocean steamer which met with an accident in mid-Atlantic. "He never says the ordinary thing."

"No," said the friend, with a dry smile. "He didn't that time. I said to him, 'James, we ought to make something more of our lives from having them spared to us in this way,' for I had felt pretty solemn, I can tell you. I've no doubt James did, too, but what he said was, 'William, a good share of the rest of my life will be spent in explaining to Theodora how I happened to choose that steamer when there were dozens of others that reached home without any accident.'"—Youth's Companion.

The Long Spoon.

"Tomkyns" recently heard the expression "If you sup with the devil you will need a long spoon." "Though I never heard it before," he says, "it is evidently fairly well known, and what I should like to know is, What does it mean, and where does it come from?"

It means that if you are going to sit down to a meal with his Satanic majesty you will need a long spoon to avoid the necessity of getting too near the old gentleman and, in its general sense, of course, it implies that if you have dealings with a dangerous or notorious person it behooves you to use great caution. It comes from one of the "Ingoldsby Legends," and the quotation reads:

Who suppes with the Deville sholde have a long spoone.

A Queer Diagnosis.

A celebrated Dublin physician was Sir Dominic Corrigan, who was as much famed for his brusqueness toward patients as for his skill. In the course of some reminiscences William Charles Scully told a story of the doctor which is quite well worth quoting. "I was taken to see him," says the writer, "several times, but he always treated me with the utmost kindness. However, a highly respectable maiden aunt of mine had a different experience. She went to consult him. After sounding her—none too gently—and asking a few questions he gave a grunt and relapsed into silence. Then after a short pause of meditation he said, 'Well, ma'am, it's one of two things—either you drink or else you sit with your back to the fire.'"

Fining English Servants In 1680.

Richard Knight, for pride and slighting, 2s. 6d.

William Hetherington, for not being ready to go to church three Sundays, 10 shillings.

Thomas Birdall, for being at Nuneaton from morning to night, 5 shillings.

Cook, dead drunk, 10 shillings.

Anne Adams to be washmaid at Lady day. She went away the 29th of June for being wanton and careless. She lost five pairs of sheets and five pillowbeers, for which my wife made her pay £1.—Diary of Sir Richard Newdigate.

Retribution.

Young Father (in the future)—Great snakes! Can't you do something to quiet that baby? Its eternal squalling drives me frantic. Young Mother (calmly to servant)—Marie, bring in my husband's mother's phonograph and put in the cylinder "At Ten Months." I want him to hear how his voice sounded when he was young.

Squaring Himself.

Mrs. Henpecke—What do you mean, sir, by telling Mrs. Torker's husband you never ask my advice about anything? Henpecke—Well, Maria, I don't. You don't wait to be asked.

CAN WEBB'S FEAT BE EQUALED?

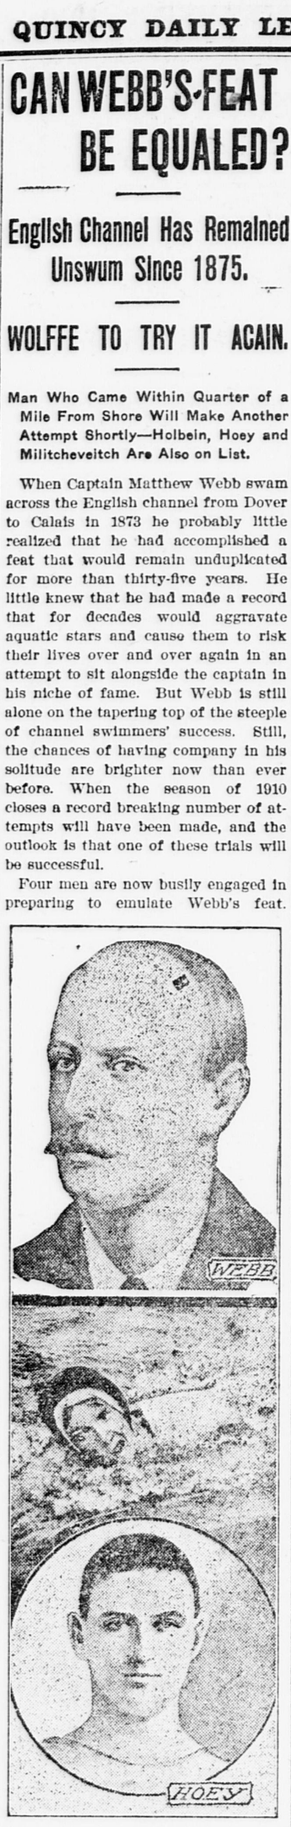

English Channel Has Remained Unswum Since 1875.

WOLFFE TO TRY IT AGAIN.

Man Who Came Within Quarter of a Mile From Shore Will Make Another Attempt Shortly—Holbein, Hoey and Militcheveitch Are Also on List.

When Captain Matthew Webb swam across the English channel from Dover to Calais in 1873 he probably little realized that he had accomplished a feat that would remain unduplicated for more than thirty-five years. He little knew that he had made a record that for decades would aggravate aquatic stars and cause them to risk their lives over and over again in an attempt to sit alongside the captain in his niche of fame. But Webb is still alone on the tapering top of the steeple of channel swimmers' success. Still, the chances of having company in his solitude are brighter now than ever before. When the season of 1910 closes a record breaking number of attempts will have been made, and the outlook is that one of these trials will be successful.

Four men are now busily engaged in preparing to emulate Webb's feat.

ONLY MAN THAT SWAM ENGLISH CHANNEL AND TWO WHO WILL ATTEMPT IT—ILLUSTRATION SHOWS WOLFFE IN CENTER.

Jabez Wolffe, who came closer to Webb's great feat than any other man, is to make another attempt some time between Sept. 12 and 26. Montague Holbein, who came almost as close as Wolffe eight years ago, is also preparing for another dash. Captain Hoey of New Zealand is down for a trial. D. V. Militchevitch, the Servian champion, will also attempt the cross channel. He will start from Calais. There is a report that Miss Lily Smith, a woman professional of London, will try, and rumors are abroad from Burgess and Wiedman of Dover.

Swimming the English channel is not like taking a dip in the surf at some seaside resort, a dash through a nice calm lake or a swim from one side of the river to the other. Natation on a rough day in the tempestuous Atlantic ocean gives an idea of the European feat, but still it lacks some of the essential features that have made the aquatic Marathon unswum by so many.

It is the strong and varying current in the English channel that renders the crossing so difficult, even, in fact, for vessels. While the distance from Dover to Calais is only a fraction over twenty miles, Captain Webb is estimated to have covered almost forty miles, owing to the fact that the tide and current swept him back and forth, up and down the course, almost at will at times.

Of course no story is complete without mention of Captain Paul Boyton. The latter was the first man to cross the channel, but he did it in his famous rubber air inflated suit.

With all these artificial aids he required one hour and thirty-three minutes longer for twenty-nine miles than Webb, relying on his strength and stamina, needed for a distance greater by ten miles.

AUTO PARTY WRECKED

One Killed and Others Seriously injured

Perley R. Glass, formerly of Quincy, was one of the automobile party that were seriously injured at Bingham, Me., on Wednesday when the chauffeur lost control of the car while going down a steep hill and turned turtle at the foot of the hill. Ex-Congressman George W. Weymouth of Fairhaven, Mass., was instantly killed, and Mr. Glass and F. A. Dinsmore, his companions in the car, were seriously if not fatally injured. The chauffeur of the car escaped uninjured. Mr. Weymouth was pinned beneath the car and Mr. Glass and Mr. Dinsmore were thrown away from the car and it is thought internally injured. tI is reported that he car was going at a moderate speed when the chauffeur lost control of it.

ON TO RICHMOND

Board of Trade Thinking of the 1911 Convention

By request of a representative of the Telephone Company the discussion of the new telephone rates was postponed by the Board of Trade until Tuesday evening, Sept. 20, when a representative of the company will be present and explain them in detail. It was thought best to have a clear understanding of the changes proposed before endorsing or condemning them.

The regular September meeting of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening with President Eugene R. Stone in the chair.

The committee on the annual outing to Providence to the Waterways Convention made an extended and enthusiastic report, both of pleasure and of progress in the movement for canals along the Atlantic seaboard. The next convention will be held in 1911 at Richmond, and Quincy will probably be represented.

Secretary Stetson of the Board of Trade was requested to prepare a circular letter and forward it to Congressmen to ascertain their attitude toward the proposed canals.

Action on local street railway service was postponed until the next meeting, as officials of the company are too busy with the aviation rush to attend the meeting this week. The Board of Trade hope to see Washington street double tracked and 15 or 20 minutes service on all the lines of the city, especialy Hancock street, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs.

One new member was elected, and there was an informal talk on improvements in general.

TODAY'S COURT.

Cornelius Driscoll was fined $25 and Michael Mulkern, Amrose Mullaney and John Murklin $25 each, for creating a disturbance on a street car at Quincy. Edward Bryan arraigned for the same offense was discharged.

Carl W. Freden was arraigned for picking pockets at Quincy and held in $1,000 until Sept. 15.

August Swanson was fined $5, Jeremiah O'Leary $5, Charles Carlson $5 and Edward Lynch $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Oliver Lawrence was fined $15 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton, and W. H. Reed and Maurice Clark, $15 each, for the same offense at Quincy.

Samuel Sklar arraigned for the same offense had his case continued until Friday.

—The will of Susan P. Wainwright, late of Braintree which was allowed Wednesday in the Norfolk probate court leaves $400 to the Vincent hospital, Boston, and $1,000 to Rev. William Hyde, rector of Trinity parish, Weymouth.

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND.

Lennox Tells of Difficulties Attached to Playing Third.

ONE MUST THINK VERY FAST.

Guardian of Last Station Has to Decide In a Flash What to Do—Great Physical Courage Is Required In Holding Down the Position.

No. XXII.
By EDDIE LENNOX.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Do I consider playing third base easy compared with the other infield positions? Well, I should say not. A man playing last station must always have his wits about him. It is one of the hardest positions in the infield to play. Great third basemen in the major leagues can be counted on the fingers of one hand. In order to hold down third sack in the big leagues today one must not alone be able to think and act quickly, but must have a steel-like nerve.

There are many players who have been very successful during practice, but could not stand fire during a regular game. There are numerous instances of it. In order to be a successful third sacker in the big circuit today one must have great physical courage. The slightest streak of cowardice or yellow will ruin his chances of drawing a salary from the club. Holding down last station is difficult for many reasons. The player who attempts it has to handle the hardest hit balls that go through the infield and has to make the longest throw on the diamond in less time than other infielders take to do it. He is closer to the batter than any other man except the pitcher, and this makes the work doubly fast and difficult.

The third sacker is called upon to handle 65 per cent of the bunts, and that in itself is a nerve racking duty. Knowing that the runner is swiftly speeding toward first, the man who is holding down third base has to make a dash for the slow hit ball as it spins around in a tantalizing manner and, in order to get his man, must throw almost without looking. If there be a runner leaving first sack on such a play the third baseman must decide in a flash whether it is safer to get the man at second or at first. Should he make a mistake in any way or hesitate in the slightest degree both will be safe. The man who can face such a situation as this without a tremor is not lacking in coolness and deliberation.

A third sacker's nerve is tried when he is unable to decide whether the batter is going to bunt or lift the ball out. Quite often a hitter will make one or two feints at bunting for the sole purpose of drawing the third baseman away from his sack and then suddenly drive the ball at him with all the force at his command. To meet such an emergency the third baseman must be absolutely devoid of fear and have no thought of personal injury.

Here are a few things which a good third sacker must possess in order to be successful in the big circuits. He must have two good hands and a very active brain. He must be able to grasp the batted ball with either hand, and consequently a man with two good hands and long fingers has a big advantage over the man who does not possess them.

Cy Barger Made Good.

Last spring the Brooklyn club asked waivers on Pitcher Cy Barger. Only Fred Lake, the Boston's manager, refused to waive. Lake did the Superbas a great favor, for Barger is now one of Brooklyn's winning twirlers.

NEW RECORDS

gentlemenly young men alighted from a train at Atlantic in the early afternoon that he stepped up to them and ordered them to take the next train back to Boston. If he knew these crooks they did not know him, and they were inclined to refuse to return. A threat that it was either go back or go to the Quincy police station did the busines and they went back.

There were many distinguished people at the meet on Wednesday, who included President Lowell of Harvard, Gen. Nelson A. Miles and Baron Rosen of the Russian embassy.

There were a number of naval officers inside the getaway field and while no bomb throwing was attempted on Wednesday they were much interested in the flights. They had an opportunity to study at first hand a machine that is destined to play an important part in warfare in the future.

It was anounced on the field Wednesday, unofficially, that President Taft would visit the meet before it is over, but just when it is not known. He will motor over from Beverly for the event.,

The American Press Association's report of the flight of Grahame-White over the course from Quincy to Boston light will be found on page two.

PACKARD REUNION.

At the annual reunion of the Packar family held at Brockton on Wednesday Elisha Packard of this city was elected president; vice president, Abbott Packard of Brockton; Secretary, Sarah L. McCuen of Boston.

Although there are many Packards in England. There is no record of any arriving in this county in the seventeenth century except Samuel Packard who landed in Hingham, Mass., in 1638. His son, Zaccheus, married Sarah Howard of Bridgewater and from that time to the present, thorough intermarriage, nearly all the white people of Plymouth County are related to each other. And quite frequently the names were combined for instance: Packard Bryant, Packard Alden and visa versa. The family have mostly borne Biblical names, English names like George and Arthur rarely occuring. While most of the descendents still live near their birth place, members are scartered through every state, but they are very loyal and true to the Old Colony of Plymouth and the land of their fathers.

HEAVY FINES.

The young hoodlums who tried to run an electric car up from Houghs Neck early Monday morning paid dear for their fun. The gang had been to a morning dance and on the way up on the first car they pulled fare registers, tore signs down and pulled the bell rope. A telephone was sent to the police station and the auto patrol met the car at the Adams farm and took off four of the gang. They were all in court charged with disorderly conduct on a street car. Edward Bryan was discharged as it was shown he had nothing to do with the disturbance. Cornelius Driscoll was fined $20, and the other three, Michael Mulkern, Ambrose Mullaney and John Murklin, $25 each. The defendants were represented by counsel, Congressman O'Connell appearing for Bryan.

ALLEGED PICKPOCKET.

A young man who gave his name as Carl W. Freden, and his home as Cambridge, was arrested outside the entrance gate at the Aviation field Wednesday, on the charge of larceny from person. It is claimed that one of the plain clothes men near the gate saw him try to lift a purse from a woman's bag. Before he got it, however, the officer nabbed the fellow. The woman did not desire to appear against the fellow, and asked the officer to let him go. The officer however sent him to the police station. In court he was held in $1,000 until Sept. 15, when he will be given a hearing.

PRESIDENT TAFT ATTENDS QUINCY AVIATION MEET

BOSTON'S MAYOR TAKES A FLIGHT

Thursday Was the Biggest Day Yet in Attendance

Thursday was the biggest day yet at the Quincy Aviation field, and those who selected that day for their first visit were more than repaid, for they not only saw President Taft, the chief executive of the nation, but a crowd of people estimated at 45,000 inside the grounds, which is going some for Quincy. Few outside of the committee and those inside the rail knew that the President was to visit the field. It was announced in the morning that Gov. Draper ad suite were to visit the field during the day, but few looked for President Taft. Early in the afternoon word was received that Mr. Taft was coming and at 4.30 he came onto the field in a large automobile and pulled up in front of the committee office on the getaway.

Mayor Shea was one of those who had been informed of his coming and he stood near the entrance gate to give the President a welcome to the "City of Presidents."

When his car came along Squantum street, headed by a car of secret service men, there were few of the thousands that recognized the large man seated low in the car, dressed in a tan suit and cap, as President Taft. He would probably have got into the field unrecognized by the crowd, but for two Quincy men who stood near the gate and recognized him. They took off their hats and cheered. President Taft saw them and raising his cap acknowledged the salute. In the meantime there was a blockade of automobiles [illegible] the right side of the entrance, [illegible] Mayor Shea stood and the President's car pulled sharply to the left and rushed onto the field before the Mayor could get through the jam to the car.

The first those on the grandstand knew of the President's arrival was when an automobile containing half a dozen police officers dashed around the astern entrance followed by a car with Maj. Butts in uniform on the seat with the driver and a third car containing secret service men.

The band hastily climbed down from the chairs where they had been watching Johnstone doing his duration and distance event, and the music of "Hail to the Chief" was the sigal to the multitude that something out of the usual course of events had taken place. "Hail to the Chief" was followed by the "Star Spangled Banner" and while nearly everybody at that time were on their feet stretching their necks to get a look at the President, many forgot to remove their hats. They did not forget to cheer however.

Meanwhile the President had been welcomed by Chairman Glidden and other meet officials, by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, and General Miles who was in an automobile near by with John Sheppard and party.

Mayor Shea was having a hard time trying to get onto the getaway for which a special badge was necessary. The policemen on duty were out of town men, and therefore were not to blame for not recognizing Quincy's chief executive. A newspaper man spotted him, however, and the Mayor was soon inside of the lines shaking hands with President Taft and extending to him the welcome of the City of Presidents.

GREETING OF THE CITY.

By way of introduction one of the officials of the meet said to Mayor Shea: "The President of the United States is in Quincy, Mr. Mayor. You are Mayor of Quincy and I want you to welcome the President to your city."

"It is a pleasure to welcome the President of the United States to Quincy at any time." said the Mayor, and then the latter was presented to Capt. Archibald Butt, the military aide of the President.

"Mr. President," said Capt. Butt, "This is Mayor Shea of the city of Quincy."

"I am very glad to meet Mayor Shea," said President Taft, "and I am very glad to be in your city today."

"I am more glad to meet you, Mr. President," said Mayor Shea, "and I am equally glad to welcome you to our city today. I only regret that you have not the time to come farther into our city and stay longer with us. I know our people are honored with your presence here and I know they would be glad to welcome you here for a longer time."

"I thank you, Mr. Mayor, for your kind words," replied President Taft, "and pehaps some day I may have a chance to come to Quincy and stay longer. I assure you it would give me great pleasure."

With another handshake the President and Mayor parted to allow others to be presented.

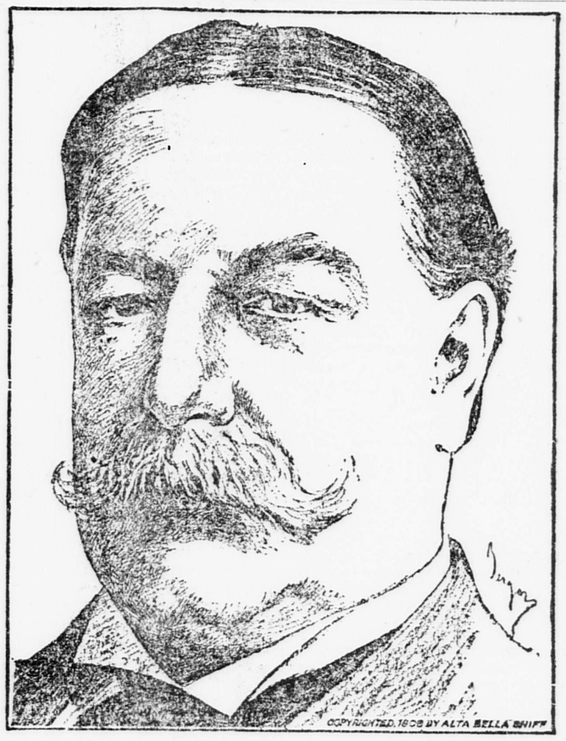

MAY ANNEX BOSTON.

As the mayor was stepping away from the President's automobile he was introduced to Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who stood near the President.

"Mayor Shea," said Gen. Miles, "you certainly have got a great show going on in your city and if it keeps on much longer it looks as if you would have to annex Boston."

"Well, that would be a good thing for Boston," replied the mayor, and I was just thinking it would be a good thing for Quincy if we could have the census taken this week."

Whereat Gen. Miles laughed heartily, and Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, who stood near, smiled at the reference made to his city.

PRESIDENT TAFT.

MAYOR FITZGERALD.

Then the megaphone man was seen to get busy and there was a momentary hush to hear what he had to say. "Mr. Grahame-White will try to take up Mayor John F. Fitzgerald" was what he said and again the crowd shouted and cheered.

Someone had loaned Mayor Fitzgerald a cap, and imitating Grahame-White he put it on with the vizor in rear. He took a seat back of Mr. White, who waved his hand as a signal to let go. The biplane rose gracefully into the air. Both waved their hands to the crowd, and the band played "Sweet Adeline." Over the getaway the bird flew, thence out over Dorchester bay, affording a view of Boston City Hall and the State House.

Three times the biplane circled the course, and then came straight down the field and came to a stop in front of the President's car.

President Taft showed his appreciation by laughing and clapping his hands, and when Mayor Fitzgerald again came forward to shake hands with the President the latter smiling-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Quincy can claim the discovery of the new disease. Aerocrane is its name. You get it in the neck.

The absence of swear words from Esperanto sometimes makes the language seem particularly discouraging to a struggling novice.

Central America will never enjoy the prosperity it should command until it provides less encouragement for the emotional artist in politics.

"Atlanta's census rank," reads an editorial headline in the Atlanta Journal. Oh we are not so sur e of that 154,839 in 1910 against 89, 872 in 1900 is not so bad.

Its a hard year on United States senators. Here is Senator Heyburn trying to kill off "Dixie," and now Pinchot accuses him of starting the forest fires.

The United States produced corn this year at the rate of $14,000,000 a day—a dreadnought a day, if any foreign country cares to figure it that way. And there were a few other crops.

In the sketch of Quincy of 1868, published in today's Ledger as historical paper No. 30, there is no mention of the fact that aviation was introduced to New Englanders at Quincy; that dreadnought battleships of steel, the largest in the world, are being built at Quincy for the United states navy, and also for foreign countries; that submarine vessels are built hereo that turbine engines for warships are built here, etc., etc. But Quincy is up-to-date and making history every year. At no period has progress been more marked than in the last ten years.

Aviation has not only captivated Quincy people and Boston people, but over 100,000 New Englanders have paid admission in five days to see the wonderful achievements, and 400,000 have viewed the flying in the vicinity of the Quincy aviation field. Among the distinguished visitors to Quincy to see the flights have been President Taft, Mrs. Taft. Miss Helen Taft, Charlie Taft, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, President Lowell of Harvard College, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, many naval officials and others.

DRIFT OF OPINION

A contemporary says that "It takes no prophet to predict that in almost any place you choose the schools will be crowded." Probably a few of the suburban towns will not be in this predicament. A few that are going back will escape. But inasmuch as the supply of school buildings is fixed to accommodate the school population of the present or the very near future, and not of the future well ahead, the inevitable result in a growing town is to have the school buildings getting too few for the number of children as time passes, except in some year in which there is a considerable addition to the school accommodations due to the erection of new buildings. It is to a certain extent a matter of pride to the average inhabitant to know that the number of school children is exceeding the volume of accommodations; it shows that his town is growing and that the younger generation is numerous. But the crowding should have its limits; otherwise pride in the achievements of a growing town may give way to sorrow at the possibility of ill health and danger to the pupils in buildings that may be too fully thronged.—Brockton Enterprise.

THREE KILLED, NINE INJURED

Fire Breaks Out In Engine Room of North Dakota

SPREADS TO AN OIL TANK

Big Battleship Wrapped In Dense Volumes of Smoke as Explosion Occurs, the Noise of Which Is Heard Five Miles Distant—Dead and Injured Transferred to Hospital Ship—Schroeder Orders Investigation

Norfolk, Sept. 9.—Three men were killed and nine injured by the explosion of an oil tank on the battleship North Dakota in Hampton Roads. The explosion was caused by a fire in the engine room, which spread to the oil tank.

It is said that some waste in the engine room ignited from sparks from the boiler, and despite the efforts of the crew, the fire spread rapidly.

The flames reached the oil tank and it exploded with such force that the noise of the explosion was heard at Oceanview, a summer resort five miles from the scene of the accident. The big ship was wrapped in dense volumes of smoke and the hospital ship Solace was rushed to the scene to take off the injured and bring them to the Norfolk naval hospital.

Admiral Schroeder made the following report to the navy department on the battleship accident:

"While the North Dakota was under way, approaching Hampton Roads, the fuel oil caught fire in No. 3 fire room, apparently near the settling tank. The oil fuel was being used for tests at the time and only on boilers No. 1.

"There are three dead: J. W. Schmidt, Joseph Streit and R. Gilmore, all coal passers. Next of kin have been notified.

"The injured are Orin C. Murfin, assistant inspector of machinery; J. H. McDonough, chief machinist's mate; E. W. Andrews, machinist's mate, first class; C. C. Roberts, fireman, first class; S. J. Wittwer, J. A. Brady, Fred P. Kinney, John G. Morrison, firemen, second class, and L. F. Pietok. All injured will recover.

"The dead and injured have been transferred to the hospital ship Solace. No estimate is possible yet regarding injury to boilers. Have ordered a board of investigation."

While not prepared to say that a similar accident might happen to an exclusively coal fired vessel, it is explained that the accident is a unique one inasmuch as it it the first of its kind and therefore no positive statements or opinions on it can be made until the fire has been thoroughly investigated and a careful report made.

The keel of the North Dakota, which is one of the American navy's Dreadnoughts, was laid Dec. 16, 1907, at the Fore River Ship and Engine company, Quincy, the same day that the Atlantic fleet began its cruise around the world. She was launched in November, 1908.

The North Dakota cost the government $7,000,000. The battleship Delaware is a sister vessel. Each vessel carries crew and officers numbering 950.

Retired Business Man Commits Suicide For Slight Reason

Webster, Mass., Sept. 9.—Brooding over a slight injury he had caused a clerk in a local hardware store when a revolver which he wished to have repaired accidentally sent a bullet into the clerk's hand a week ago, John C. Porter, a retired business man of Putnam, Conn., committed suicide.

His body was found lying in the bushes at Perryville, a nearby village, with the revolver whose explosion had led to his act, lying across his chest.

A note pinned to his coat read: "William Childs, Webster: My life is miserable." Childs is the clerk who shot. Porter did not know him previously. Porter was 65 years old.

QUINCY OF YEARS AGO

A Sketch of Town from Directory of 1868

Probably the first directory of Quincy was published just 41 years ago, in 1869 by Dudley & Greenough. In the same book was the directory of the town of Dorchester. The Dorchester names made 79 pages, with 3000 persons, while the Quincy directory made 58 pages with 2500 persons. The directory says there were then 89 streets in Quincy, 6 school buildings with 31 teachers, 8 churches, 2 secret societies (the Masons and Good Templars,) the Adams Literary Society, the Choral Musical Soc ety, the McClellan Guards, a Savings Bank, two National Banks, the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, a National Sailors Home, and a Sailors Snug Harbor.

The Town of Quincy was formerly the first and north parish in the ancient town of Braintree, and included what was called "Dorchester Farms," and a romantic point of land called Squantum, jutting out between Quincy and Dorchester Bays, now a noted watering place, and once the residence of Chickatawbat, a celebrated Indian chief.

This territory in common with that of Braintree and Randolph, belonged ot Boston, until the incorporation of Braintree as a town, in 1640. It was the first part of Braintree that was settled, and had been generally called Mount Wollaston, for Captain Wollaston, one of the first settlers, in 1625.

In 1792, this part of Braintree was made a separate town, and called Quincy, on the recommendation of Hon. Richard Cranch, to perpetuate the family name of one of its first proprietors, a name that will ever be dear to the lover of American liberty.

Quincy is bounded north by Dorchester, east by Boston harbor, south by Weymouth and Braintree, and west by Milton.

The surface of the town is diversified by hills, valleys and plains. The soil is generally of an excellent quality, and under good cultivation. There are large tracts of salt meadow in the town, and many large and beautiful farms, which, in respect to soil and skilful management, may vie with any in the State.

The village in the centre of the town, is situated on an elevated plain, and is remarkable for its neatness and beauty. In this village is a stone church, designated the "Adams Temple." This building was dedicated, 1828, and cost forty thousand dollars. Within its walls is a beautiful marble monument to the memory of the Hon. John Adams and his wife.

The Town house, in this village is a noble building, eighty-five feet by fifty-five. It is built of granite, and is a better specimen of the Quincy stone, than the walls of the church.

The ancestral estate of the Quincy family comprises one of the most beautiful and well cultivated farms in Ne wEngland. It is the property of the heirs of the late Josiah Quincy, LL. D., president of Harvard University from 1829 to 1845—who was an eminent agriculturist. He was the only child of the patriot, Josiah Quincy, Jr.

About two miles east from the village is Quincy Point, at the junction of Town and Weymouth Fore rivers. This is a delightful spot, and contains many handsome buildings. This point of land, with a peninsula near it, called Germantown are admirably located for ship-building, and for all the purposes of navigation and the fishery. Here is a fine harbor, a bold shore, and a beautiful country, within ten miles of the metropolis of New England.

Germantown, formerly called "Shed's Neck," was first settled by a number of weavers and glass makers from Germany, who made an unsuccessful attempt to manufacture glass and cloth, some time between 1750 and '60. These Germans, about 1752, were induced to come over, by promises that they should be allowed to live here in the enjoyment of their own peculiar customs, and live in a separate community, being only responsible to New England for their honorable and peaceful conduct. Many came, and weaving and glass making were carried on with spirit. Here were also a pottery and spermaceti works. For a long time all parties were pleased and happy. On their first arrival, General Palmer and old Col. John Quincy roasted an ox for them, and gave them a joyful welcome. Impediments were, however, at length thrown in the way of their success, till they became disaffected, and most of them removed to Waldoborough, in the State of Maine. In 1827, there were some of these persons still living at Waldoborough, who recollected their arrival and settlement at Shed's Neck in Massachusetts. At this place, the great ship Massachusees was built in 1789, the largest vessel at that time in the country. Germantown is fast rising into notice, in consequence of its easy access, beauty, and navigable facilities.

The manufactures of the town consist of a variety of articles, boots and shoes being one of the most prominent but, the abundant hard sienite so universally known, and justly celebrated as the "Quincy Granite," is the most important article of manufacture in the town.

About two miles back from Quincy Bay, in Boston Harbor, is a range of elevated land, in some parts more than six hundred feet above the sea, containing an inexhaustible supply of the Quincy granite, so much used and approved in all our Atlantic cities, for its durability and beauty as a building material. This range of sienite extends through Milton, Quincy and Braintree, but more of it is quarried in Quincy than in the other towns.

In 1844 about one hundred thousand tons of this valuable article was quarried and wrought in Quincy, by the most skilful workmen, into all dimensions, both plain and ornamental. There were in the town about twenty companies engaged in the business, employing about eight hundred hands. Pieces of this granite have been obtained in these quarries weighing three hundred tons each, from which the columns of the Custom House and Merchant's Exchange, in Boston, were made, and to which we refer the reader as specimens of its quality and finish.

By means of a railroad from these quarries to the tide-waters of Neponset river, and of a canal to the centre of thetown, this stone is transported with great expedition and little cost.

These quarries of granite to the town of Quincy are of more value than a mine of gold, and it is fortunate for the public that the supply is abundant, for the demand, for it from various parts of the United States is constant and increasing.

Quincy lies eight miles south by east from Boston, and ten east from Dedham, and there is perhaps no town in the State, of its distance from Boston, that has risen to greater prosperity than Quincy. It has long been the centre of considerable trade and manufacture, and its excellent roads, with its beautiful location on Boston Harbor, have made it the chosen residence of many people of taste and affluence.

Two Presidents of the United States father and son, were natives of this place:—John Adams, born October 19, 1735, and John Quincy Adams, his son, born July 11, 1767.—Their ancestor, Henry Adams, came from Devonshire, England. His son Joseph died here, leaving a son Joseph who had a son John, that was father of the great John Adams, a chief founder of the United States government.

The Hancock family long resided here. Rev. John Hancock was the fifth minister of the Congregational Society. His son, John Hancock, LL. D., was born in this place, in January, 1736. As President of the illustrious Congress of 1776 he signed the Declaration of Independence, and was the first Governor of Massachusetts, under the Constitution. He died in that office, October 8, 1793.

Some of the principal manufactures of Quincy in 1865, were:—Leather tanned and curried, $160,220; Vessels launched, $75,000; Boots and Shoes, $467,665; Building stone, quarried and prepared for market, $271,880. The coastwise trade received for freight, $44,627. There were sixty-six farms, of 4,095 acres, valued with the buildings on them, at $564,650.—(Hayward's Gazetteer of Massachusetts, Life and Writings of John Adams, edited by Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Mass. Census Reports, etc.

SQUANTUM!?

(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)

IS A PART OF QUINCY!?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

LOTS OF LAND

overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

CORN ROAST A NOVELTY

Ex-Councilman and Mrs. Walter E. Piper Entertain

Did you ever place an ear of sweet corn on a long stick and then hold it over a charcoal fire until it was as black as your hat and thoroughly roasted? Then apply a little butter and salt and eat? If not, you do not know what roasted sweet corn is. Every fall ex-Councilman Walter E. Piper invites a few friends to visit him at his home on Centre street and enjoy a corn roast. The event this year took place Thursday evening and proved to be as thoroughly enjoyable as similar events of other years. The charcoal fire was built in a little stone fireplace back of the house, the red glow of the live coals with numerous Japanese lanterns furnishing sufficient light to tell when the corn was roasted. Around this fire a jolly party gathered looking like so many witches.

Of course the corn got black and the lily white fingers of some of the ladies became somewhat soiled, and their ruby lips got slightly discolored, but that did not matter, the blacker the corn the sweeter it seemed to be. Some ate one ear and same so many that they lost count. After they had tired of corn, toasted marshmellows were in order and after that an adjournment was made to the house where hot coffee, home-made corn cakes and crackers and cheese were served. Then came cards so that the hands of the clock were well along toward the hour of midnight before it was realized how late it was, and reluctantly wraps were donned and a run made for the late car. What more need be said.

IMPROVEMENT AT WEST QUINCY

New Depot and Street Railway Extension Wanted

A meeting of the West Quincy Improvement society was held Thursday evening, the first since the summer vacation. The meeting was largely attended and renewed enthusiasm was shown.

After some discussion the question was referred to a special committee consisting of President Little, George F. Elcock and John Casey, who will report at the next meeting.

It was voted to hold a card party at the association rooms next Thursday evening, and to invite prospective members to attend. Handsome prizes will be given for the best scores. The committee in charge is John D. Smith, John Burke, Frank Dufoy, Robert Newcomb and George F. Elcock.

The question of a new railroad depot came up for discussion. The speakers argued that the present station was not only unsightly, but gave a bad impression to strangers visiting West Quincy. The proper committee will take the matter up at once with the railroad officials.

It was announced that the Boston L was to extend its tracks to the Neponset river, where several large manufacturing buildings are being erected, which makes it all the more desirable that the street railway line should be extended from East Milton over Granite avenue to connect with the Elevated. It was stated that several of the street railway officials had expressed themselves in favor of the proposed extension.

TRYING TO PROVE IDENTITY OF BODY

Trial of Crippen and His Former Typist Resumed In London

London, Sept. 9.—At the resumption of the trial of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Ethel C. Leneve, for the murder of the former's wife, Public Prosecutor Humphreys introduced evidence to establish the claim of the crown that the parts of the mutilated body found in the Crippen home once formed a part of the person of Belle Elmore, the missing wife.

Arthur Newton, representing Crippen, cross-examined Mrs. Harrison, who identified portions of hair and clothing as belonging to Mrs. Crippen. In reply to his questions, the witness assented to the suggestion that the hair, portions of a woman's vest and the curling iron found in the Crippen cellar were not only similar to those worn or used by the missing woman, but also "resembled thousands of others."

It is believed that the defense will maintain that the parts found were not of the body of Crippen's wife and so prevent the identification necessary to establish the prosecution's claim.

BRIEFS

The submarine Salmon, built at Quincy, was put into commission on Thursday at the Boston navy yard.

Mrs. Sarah Harding and Miss Minnie Strahan of West Somerville are guests o ftheir sister Mrs. Kate Stimpson of Washington street.

The congreagtion of the First Presbyterian church will hold service in the First United Presbytrian church on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Preaching by the pastor. Bring Alexander hymns.

A report from Bingham, Me., to a Boston paper states that Perley R. Glass was not seriously injured in the automobile accident Wednesday night, as first reported ,and that he was able to leave for his home in Brookline on Thursday accompanied by a physician.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The executive staff of the Young Men's Christian Association has started the work of the fall. Commiittees are formulating plans and Secretary Gay and the department directors are at work preparing for the biggest year in the history of the association in Quincy.

The dormitories are full and there is a waiting list. In all probability new rooms will be added in the near future. At present there are twenty-three men accommodated.

Conditions are favorable this year for a big boom in association work, and there is every reason to expect that it will be a reality. By October first everything will be going at full force and the building will be in first class condition.

The swimming pool will continue to be a great attraction to boys of all ages.

FINANCIAL SUCESS.

A Boston paper is our authority for the following statement, which shows receipts of $250,000 for the first five days of the Harvard Aero meet at Quincy, and there are four days more:

Cash running as high as $70,000 is taken daily from the aero meet field tol Boston and banked. The gate receipts from the sale of tickets at the field last Saturday were $50,000. They fell below that Monday and Tuesday, but on Wednesday $60,000 was taken in and Thursday the receipts were $70,000.

Each day this money is taken by automobile from the aviation field to the National Shawmut Bank under guard. The bills fill an iron box of large dimensions, while the coin is held in money sacks heavier than two men can lift. The tickets, sold and unsold, are taken to Boston in the same car and audited at the State street office. The total receipts include the sale of tickets at the different offices in Boston.

"I think it is very unkind of you, Janette. You tell me that somebody has said this dreadful thing about me, and yet you won't say who said it."

"It isn't unkind, my dear Polly. I am only keeping my promise to Madge Willoughby. When she said it she asked me not to tell you who said it, and I don't intend to."

ly asked the little fighting Mayor if he was afraid, to which the latter said no.

In the car with President Taft, and likewise as deeply interested in what was going on, were Mrs. Taft, Miss Helen Taft and John Hays Hammond.

All of this time Johnstone was keeping steadily at his duration and distance flight, circulating the course and things were going so fast that the megaphone man forgot to announce the time of each lap as usual.

The crowd however did not appear to mind, for it was announced that Willard was going up for a speed trial, and this was more interesting.

There were now two biplanes in the air, Willard circulating the course with express train speed and Johnstone with clock-like regularity was still pegging away at his stunt. Glenn Curtiss went up for a speed test just before the President arrived.

Near the end of the press stand was a yellow duck covered monoplane that attracted considerable attention, and many wondered what it was, for no attempt was made by anyone to fly in it. This monoplane was a Santos-Duemont, "Demoiselle" owned by Mr. Gaines, that had been brought onto the field for exhibition purposes. There were several of the aviators who expressed a desire to try the machine and some of them may before the meet is over.

Mayor Fitzgerald was not the only personage outside of the aviators to fly on Thursday for Lieut Blakely went up with Willard.

There was some good flying Thursday and a number of interesting events. These included such well known birdmen as White, Curtis, Willard, Brookins and Johnstone.

The crowning feature of the day was while Brookins and White were in the air about 6 o'clock in an altitude flight. Brookins was in a Wright biplane and White in a Bleriot monoplane. Both fought their way upward by broad circles which extended to Quincy City Square, going steadily upward until they looked like tiny specks in the sky from the field. To others in Quincy however they were more plain for with the naked eye from all over the city the shape of the planes could be seen, and by their shape it was easily seen that one was a biplane and the other White's monoplane.

Thousands of people in Quincy along the south shore and in Boston people craned their necks and gazed upward in wonderment at the daring of the men they knew must be in the machines.

No attempts were made to fly to Boston Light for the Globe prize on Thursday but it was said that a flight would probably be made today by Glenn Curtiss and possibly others.

It is not generally known perhaps that in flights over the water the aviators wear "Never sink" life preserver suits made by the Inflate Garment Co., of which Adolph Sandberg of this city is the manager.

Mr. Sandberg says that he supplied all of the aviators at the field with these suits except White, and Thursday afternoon he received a telegraph order from Mr. White for the immediate delivery of a suit, as he might make another Boston Light flight.

Shortly after 5.30 the dirigible balloon of Cromwell Dixon was seen to come out from the vicinity of the hangars, and shortly afterward up went Mr. Dixon. He started for the State House, intending to land on Boston Common, but he mistook the Christian Science temple for the State House and landed in a vacant lot near by, after circulating the church dome.

This balloon was also plainly seeen from many points in Quincy, so taking all in all Thursday was a great day for the city in many ways.

TODAY'S COURT.

Clara Chisholm was arraigned for cruelty to animals, and for being a railer and brawler at Quincy. Cases continued Sept. 10.

Samuel Sklar was fined $5 for using profanity on a public street at Quincy. The case against him for trespass was placed on file.

QUINCY MEN INJURED

By Explosion on the Battleship North Dakota

Among those reported seriously injured by the fire on the battleship North Dakota were Chief Machinist E. W. Andrews and Warrant Machinest James H. McDonough. During the building of the battleship both were stationed in Quincy, and made many firm friends. Both also became members of Quincy lodge of Elks. Mcdonough married a Quincy girl, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, who is still in Quincy. No definite word of how bad her husband was injured, had reached her Thursday evening, and this morning she left for the Norfolk navy yard.

Both Andrews and McDonough made trip around the world in battleship New Jersey, and on their return presented Quincy lodge of Elks with a handsome silk banner which they had made in Japan.

BRIEFS

Miss Emma Spaulding of the Y. M. C. A. office is on a two weeks' vation in Maine.

George A. Sidelinger of Presidents hill left Wednesday evening to join his family in Nobleboro, Maine.

John Welch the popular letter carrier in Atlantic is enjoying a two weeks' vacation and is missed all along the line.

R. H. Allen of Presidents hill has just purchased a new Chalmers "30" 1911 model made by the Chalmers Motor company of Detroit.

The Street department is hustling the work on the new tar sidewalk between Common street and the Parkway on Copeland street. It should be completed in a few days.

Walter Bevis the little boy who was run over a few days ago at Squantum by an automobile, breaking his ankle is doing as well as could be expected. He ran in front of the auto which was going slowly.

Lieut. Col. Arthur W. Stetson of the staff of Gen. M. A. Raney will leave next Friday for the annual session of the Sovereign Grand lodge of Odd Fellows at Atlanta, Ga. He will be away ten days and visit the battlefields, Washington and other points.

One Englishman became so enthused over the work of Grahame-White at the field Wednesday that he took several drinks and then began to look skyward. The combination was too much and he got arrested for drunkenness. He was released this morning.

MASSACHUSETTS ENDEAVORERS

The twenty-first convention of the Massachusetts Christian Endeavor Union is to be held in Springfield September 27, 28, 29 and 30. This will be the third time that Springfield has entertained the Christian Endeavorers of Massachusetts since the State Union was organized.

The State Eexecutive committee and the Springfield committee are both hard at work in an endeavor to secure the attendance of at least 3,000 delegates.

The first meeting is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 27, when all the State, District and Local Union officers are invited to a conference on union work to be conducted by Mr. Walter D. Howell, a former field secretary of the Minnesota Union.

The first public session follows, with welcoming addresses by Mayor E. H. Lathrop and Rev. W. W. Weeks. The response for the delegates will be made by Rev. H. A. Manchester of Boston, vice president of the State Union.

The annual business meeting, with reports and election of officers, will occupy Wednesday afternoon. A feature of this session will be an address by Rev. Francis E. Clark, President of the United Society, whose subject is, "Massachusetts, her place and responsibility in Christian Endeavor."

Friday, Sept. 30, is to be known as Springfield day and the local committee are planning many outings, excursions, etc., for the del egates.

The New England Passenger Association has granted a special reduced rate of a fare and three-fifths for the round trip from all Massachusetts points.

SAMUEL J. ELDER
Senior Counsel From America at The Hague

ARGUMENTS ARE ACCEPTED

Elder Wins Every Contention In Fisheries Arbitration

FOUR QUESTIONS ASSIGNED HIM

All of Utmost Importance to American Fishermen and He is Upheld by The Hague Tribunal In Every Instance—Use of Harbors Without Payment of Dues and Right to Fish In Newfoundland Treaty Waters

Boston, Sept. 9.—When Samuel J. Elder arrives home from his trip to The Hague, where he has been one of the most prominent of the delegates in the international court of arbitration sitting on the fisheries dispute, he will find awaiting him a large number of telegrams and letters congratulating him for his brilliant work in behalf of the fishing interests of this country. Every point which had been assigned to Elder to argue was won by the United States.

So important a part did Elder play in the court of arbitration, it would appear, that four of the seven questions brought to the court for settlement were adjudicated according to his suggestions.

Mr. Elder's work is regarded as a diplomatic triumph, for the four questions with which he was so particularly concerned are of the utmost importance to American fishing interests.

Question 3, as presented by Elder, related to the claim made by Newfoundland that American fishermen had no right to cure fish in treaty ports, and had always insisted upon and collected fees and dues when this was done. Elder's contention, for America, was that Americans should have the use of treaty ports free of fees and dues. His contention was sustained.

Question 4, as presented by Elder, was the contention of Canadians that American fishermen could not enter treaty ports for fuel, food, water, shelter or repairs without reporting at the custom houses and the payment of certain dues. Elder argued that Americans should have the use of the harbor without the payment of dues of any kind, and that the regulation requiring them to report to the custom house was unnecessary. Again Elder was upheld by the court.

The sixth question, as presented by Elder, was one of the most important that The Hague tribunal had to consider. The contention of Newfoundland was that the treaty did not give the right to fish in the treaty bays, harbors and creeks. This question, argued at length by Elder, was decided in favor of the United States.

The American contention in the seventh, and last, question, that a fishing vessel could be a trading vessel as well, in regard to buying fish from the inhabitants of a foreign country, was maintained.

At the present time Elder is in Heidelberg. He will sail for this country on the Zeeland and hopes to arrive home on Oct. 14.

Mistakes Church For State House

Boston, Sept. 9.—Cromwell Dixon made a successful flight from the Squantum field, Atlantic, to Boston, late yesterday afternoon in his dirigible balloon. Mistaking the great dome of the Christian Science church for that of the state house, he steered to the left of this and instead of landing on the common came down on a vacant lot.

BALDWIN GETS NOMINATION

Former Justice of Supreme Court Named For Governor

PROFESSOR FISHER DISSENTS

Prevents Unanimous Action by Democrats of Nutmeg State—Platform Accuses Republican Party of Breach of Faith In Enactment of Tariff Law—Calls For Reduction of Many Rates and Extension of Free List

New Haven, Sept. 9.—Simeon E. Baldwin of New Haven, former chief justice of the supreme court, was nominated for governor and a full state ticket was placed in the field at the biennial convention of the Democratic party.

The balance of the state ticket follows: For lieutenant governor, Andrew J. Brougel of Hartford; secretary of state, Zalmon P. Goodsell of Bridgeport; treasurer, E. K. Hubbard of Middletown; controller, John M. Brady of New Britain; attorney general, Talcott H. Russell of New Haven; congressman at large, George B. Ingersoll of Ridgefield.

Baldwin's nomination was made by acclamation, and it would have been made unanimous but for Professor Fisher of Wesleyan university, who stubbornly refused to vote for Baldwin. Fisher refused to withdraw his opposition to Baldwin and remained the only delegate opposing him.

In a speech of some length Baldwin accepted the nomination.

After declaring that the time was auspicious for the Democrats in the nation and state, and accusing the Republican party of a "breach of faith" in the enactment of the tariff law, the platform declares in favor of an extension of the free list and a reduction of many of the tariff rates in that law, the ratification of the income tax amendment to the constitution, and the popular election of United States senators.

On state issues the platform favors among other things the creation of an "effective public utilities commission elected by the people, which shall have supervision of all public service corporations," the repeal of the law limiting the recovery of damages in case of death to $5000, the enactment of a workingman's compensation act, "an honest and effective corrupt practices law," the establishment of civil service for the state and the direct primary form of nomination.

DRIVE OUT THE BOSSES

Hearst Thinks Roosevelt Is the Man to Perform the Task

New York, Sept. 9.—Republican leaders and members of the "Old Guard" at the Republican state committee are not inclined to discuss the cabled statement of William R. Hearst from Paris urging Theodore Roosevelt to fight the "bosses" in this state and the intimation that the Independence League would help him out.

Hearst's declaration was deemed of much importance in the present situation and until now no light had been shed on what position Hearst and the Independence League would take in the approaching state campaign. Following a long statement of Hearst, in which he scores the "bosses" of both parties and at the same time finds certain faults with Roosevelt, Hearst concludes:

"Drive the Republican bosses out of the Republican party, Mr. Roosevelt, and if any one of them deserts to the Democratic party, fifty thousand independents will take his place. If Barnes, Woodruff, Aldridge, all three of them, desert to the Democracy, one hundred and fifty thousand independents will take their places. We cast that many votes at the last election, Mr. Roosevelt. We can cast them again, and more."

NOT TALKING POLITICS

Gaynor Says No One Has Been Authorized to Speak For Him

New York, Sept. 9.—Mayor Gaynor refused to discuss for publication a report recently printed in a New York newspaper that he is a "receptive candidate" for the Democratic nomination for governor of this state, but the New York World quotes him as denying authoritatively the truth of such a report. The denial is as follows:

"I speak for myself. No one is authorized to speak for me. If anyone is doing so, it is under false pretences. I have not discussed politics with anybody and will not do so. I am still a sick man and am trying to get well. I have no interest in politics. If people continue to bother me about such matters I will go away, where I can have quiet."

Action putting Gaynor forward for the Democratic nomination for governor was taken by conventions in two counties. The Ulster county Democratic convention instructed its delegates to the state convention to vote for the mayor's nomination, and the Saratoga county convention indorsed him for first place on the ticket.

CONVICTED OF VAGRANCY

"Smoky Bill" Will Quit His Haunts In Boston For a While

Boston, Sept. 9.—"Smoky Bill" Robinson, aged 42, residence on any old alley leading from Columbus avenue, who for twenty years has proved to the South End that it was possible to live on nothing a day, has been committed to the state farm for vagrancy.

Fifteen times have the police tried to secure his conviction for vagrancy and they always failed up to yesterday. Robinson used to boast of his immunity from arrest on the vagrancy charge.

"Smoky Bill" is famous throughout the South End. He is six feet three inches tall and has a nose the color of a Harvard banner. He is a philosopher of a distinct type.

Officer Lynch explained that "Smoky" was becoming an "eyesore" and it would be the best thing for him to send him to Bridgewater, where he would at least get a bath and an occasional shave.

FIGHT AGAINST MODERNISM

Pope Issues Instructions Concerning Development of Young Clergy

Rome, Sept. 9.—Pope Pius X has issued a motu proprio giving new and practical measures to be adopted against the growing modernist campaign.

The pontiff reiterates all of the rules previously set forth against modernism, and adds that the bishops and the rectors of Catholic colleges must watch attentively the development of the young clergy, seeing to it that they are well prepared to fight error, forbidding them to read newspapers and periodicals, and avoid distracting them from their studies.

Every professor in beginning his course, every acolite before being promoted, every new confessor, curate, canon or holder of a similar office, and every ecclesiastical official before taking possession of his post, must take an oath of loyalty to the healthy Catholic doctrine and discipline.

MAY TAKE PUBLIC OFFICE ONCE MORE

Hint of Possible Candidacy Is Dropped by Roosevelt

Freeport, Ills., Sept. 9.—Theodore Roosevelt has admitted in a speech here that there is a possibility of his returning to public life. In this connection he issued a warning to corrupt corporations that any aid they might extend him in obtaining any official place would be at their own peril, and not with the idea of getting official favors or pardons later.

Mr. Roosevelt also read an open letter by William R. Hearst in which Hearst advised him to return to New York and take up the fight on the Republican organization there, saying that if he did so Hearst would be in sympathy with him.

Mr. Roosevelt said: "I am going back to my state, as mentioned by Mr. Hearst, to fight the bosses. I will welcome the support of any man who wishes to aid in that fight."

DISGUISED AS OFFICERS

Plotters Make Attempt to Get Into Presence of the Czar

Berlin, Sept. 9.—German officialdom has been given a shock by the latest attempt on the life of Czar Nicholas, as one of the cleverest yet made. The authorities connect the plot with the plans of the anarchists now assembled in secret international convention at Zurich, Switzerland.

Detectives familiar with the work of the extreme radicals are hunting two men disguised as officers of the Eighty-Eighth regiment, who passed all the guards thrown around the castle where the czar and czarina are visiting at Friedberg, failing to reach the emperor only because they lacked the passport to the palace gates.

THE LATEST FROM ELKINS

Daughter Won't Wed Duke In February or Any Other Time

Elkins, W. Va., Sept. 9.—Emphatic denial has been made by Senator Elkins of the rumors that he is preparing to go to Paris or that his daughter, Miss Katherine Elkins, will marry the Duke of the Abruzzi in February or at any other time, or that his family is to be presented to the Italian court.

With some impatience the senator declared that he has denied rumors until he is worn out and that he would like to have it accepted as a fact that there is no contemplated union between his daughter and the Italian duke.

Record List of Passengers

Southampton, Sept. 9.—The White Star steamship Adriatic, for New York, is taking a record number of passengers from here. The first class passengers number 424, the second class 518 and the steerage 600.

Lorimer Invitation Cancelled

Chicago, Sept. 9.—In view of Theodore Roosevelt's objection to the presence of Senator Lorimer at the Hamilton club banquet, the committee has recalled the invitation to Senator Lorimer.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the strongest bills announced for B. F. Keith's Boston theatre in a long time is that of next week. Among the big features will be Elfie Fay, the comic opera star; "The Models of the Jardin de Paris" with Carl Henry, Lester Lonergan and Amy Richard, Herzog's big troupe of trained horses and many other features of equal importance. It is sometime since Elfie Fay has been seen in Boston, and she now appears with an entirely new repertoire of songs, but there is no doubt no matter what she sings, she will be unable to get away without singing "The Belle of the Avenue A." "The Models of the Jardin de Paris" is one of the biggest musical comedy features in vaudeville and the comedy element is particularly strong. Carl Henry, the principal comedian, is one of the funniest men now on the stage, and his phrase, "Now I'll tell you," invariably "gets every town in which he appears. Herzig's Horses is one of the greatest troupes of circus animals that ever came to this country. There are no less than twelve beautiful horses performing on the stage at one time. Lester Lonergan and Amy Richard, who have long been legitimate stars, have a splendid Irish comedy called "An Idyl of Erin," and others will be Billy Clark and the Farnum Sisters; W. J. Coleman the monologuist; and the Charbino Brothers.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A fine old-fashioned melodrama will be given at the Castle Square. "Zira" is a modernized version of "The New Magdalen," which greatly pleased the playgoers of a generation ago, and in which Clara Morris won the greatest of her triumphs. In its new form Miss Margaret Anglin was recently successful, and the play then gained a reputation that will make it very welcome at the Castle Square. The incident of "Zira" are such as to give the actress who takes the role of Hester Trent the best of opportunities for strong emotional acting, and that character will be on the capable hands of Miss Young during the coming week at the Castle Square. The varied scenes of the play demand the utmost skill in their interpretation and in them Miss Young will be seen at her best. Mr. Craig will appear as the hero, and in other characters will appear the full roster of John Craig Stock Company. There will be a handsome and effective series of stage settings for the four acts of the play.

BOSTON GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Of the notable offerings of the current season to which Manager Magee desires to call particular attention, first and foremost is the Wagenhals & Hemper Co.'s production of Eugene Walter's "Paid in Full," which is next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House. Since the hour of its first brilliant triumph at the Astor theatre in New York, which inaugurated a two years' run, "Paid in Full' has been the dramatic success of the American stage, a maker of theatrical history, the most popular play of this or any time. Not alone in New York but in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, in every city of the land, it has aroused highest enthusiasm. Its success has been universal. Every eminent dramatic critic in the land pronounces it "the great American drama." The extraordinary quality of "Paid in Full" is shown by the impression it produces on all manner of persons. An entertainment in the truest sense, a story of abounding human interest, a play that stirs the emotions of all, "Paid in Full," has been made the theme of pulpit discourses, of essays by college professors, the subject of editorials in influential newspapers, and has been cited by jurists from the bench. No story told on the stage has appealed so widely as that of Joe Brooks, a disheartened $18 a week clerk, who under the sting of jealousy and discontent, and in bitterness against a harsh employer, turns to theft, then seeks to shield himself behind his loyal wife. It is a real play, of real life, with real men and women, vividly realistic and strikingly true to actuality. This engagement of "Paid in Full" is its first at popular prices. There will be a specially selected New York cast. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

GREAT MECHANICS FAIR.

All New England now quite generally knows that there is to be an "Old time Mechanics Fair" at the Mechanics building on Huntington avenue, Boston, during the entire month of October beginning Monday, Oct. 3 and ending Saturday night, Oct. 29 and continuing every day, except Sundays, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. All of the attractions in this immense building will be free to all who pass the turnstiles and they will be of a really extraordinary character. In the first place there will be more than 200 practical working exhibits of processes of manufacturing many kinds of useful and ornamental articles, shoes and other articles of wear, cut glass and other things for the household; appliances of utility for the home and business office and the closet of the student; great automobile exhibit with the first showing of 1911 models; and about everything of which one can conceive as appropriate to a genuine mechanics fair ,only more of them and of higher quality than ever before shown in Boston.

What may be called the purely entertaining features of the exposition will far surpass those offered at any previous fair in Boston, in cost, attractiveness and general public interest. At this time it is only necessary to call attention to one of them, the famous United States Marine band of Washington, D. C. Negotiations pending for several months between President Taft and Secretary of the Navy, George von L. Meyer and Messrs. C. H. Green and E. J. Rowe, the managing directors of the Mechanics Fair have at last been crowned with success and it can now be announced that this most celebrated organization of 67 trained solo instrumentalists under the baton of Lieut. Santelmann will give the principal concerts every afternoon and evening in Grand hall for the first two weeks of the fair. All seats for these concerts will be absolutely free. For the final two weeks the management will present the Band of the 75th Regiment of Canada from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, an organization that holds about the same relative position in the provinces that the United States Marine Band holds in this country. Every morning, afternoon and evening the Edna Frances Simmons orchestra of young women will give concerts in Exhibition hall. These bands and orchestra will only supply a part of the entertainment programme of the great Mechanics Exposition of 1910.

ON THE STAGE.

Fritzi Scheff as Yum-Yum in "The Mikado" wil lbe the attraction at Shuberts theatre the week of Sept. 19.

The opera season of two weeks will begin on Sept. 19 at the Boston Opera house when the Aborn company will give "he Bohemian Girl," with Miss Bettina Freeman as the Gypsy queen; Miss Blanche Duffield as "Arline;" Mr. James Stevens as Count Arnheim; Mr. Charles Gallagher as Devilshoof; and Mr. Paul Victor as "Thaddeus."

On Sept. 19 Thomas A. Wise in the role of "the gentleman" will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Majestic theatre in that popular play "A Gentleman from Mississippi."

"The Arcadians" a three-act fantastical musical play come sto the Colonial theatre next week from a long run in New York.

The thirteenth season of the Boston Symphony concerts is close at hand. he first public rehearsal comes on Friday afternoon, Oct. 7, and the first concert on Saturday evening, Oct. 8. The rgular auction room sales begin on Monday, Sept. 26, the other dates being Tuesday, the twenty-seventh Thursday, the twenty-ninth, and Friday, the thirtieth. These are the earliest dates at which the concerts begin and next year the whole season will be thrown back one week.

The prospectus for the coming season at the Boston Opera House announces that 12 operas have been added to the repertory of last year. Of these, some are new to America and others are new to any stage. "The Sacrifice," F. S. Converse's opera, which has occupied him for many months past, will be sung in February. It is in English. t will be prepared for performance under the musical direction of Wallace Goodrich. On the second night of the opening season, Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," a work of the composer's youth, with which he won the coveted "Grand Prix de Rome," will be performed under the baton of Andre Capiet. Laparra's "La Habanera," a third novelty of next winter's repertory, also Puccini's forthcoming work, "The Girl of the Golden West." The routine of the week is to be much as last year. he Saturday evening performances at popular prices will be continued and even made a special feature by the engagement for those nights of the leading artists in the most popular operas of the repertory. Eighty regular subscription performances are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons. The popular concerts Sunday evening of opera and oratorio exerpts will continue.

MAKING OF A NEWSPAPER.

Will be one of the big practical exhibits at the October great Mechanics Exposition. The average reader of the daily newspaper, it is safe to assert, knows very little of the processes by which this wonderful production of the present century is made ready for the eyes of the public day atfer day and many times daily. The various steps toward the consummation should be generally known. Such a knowledge, indeed, is quite a liebral education in itself and indirectly exerts a powerful influence for good not only upon the favorite journal but upon society as well. Possessed of this information the reader knows of the trials, the tribulations ,the anxieties, the expense, the enterprise, the celerity, the fascinations of the work and it certainly will act unconsciously in the formation of opinions and in the setting of values on news and editorial decisions. All this will be clearly demonstrated at the great Mechanics exposition to be held the entire month of October in the Mechanics building on Huntington avenue, Boston. The exposition will be open every day excepting Sundays, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night and during these hours a little daily newspaper will be published under the editorial control of the Christian Science Monitor. The mechanical part of the outfit will be supplied by the American Type Founders Company, Whitlock Printing Press Company and the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, and every detail from the supplying of "copy" of the news and gossip of the big fair, the setting of t ehtype, the assembly, the make-up of the forms, the printing and the folding will be in full sight of patrons. The paper is promised to be a very creditable and most interesting sheet. It will contain among other things a complete list of the exhibitors, the programmes of the concerts and under entertainments and all sorts of news and chat about the people connected with the exposition. It will be distributed free "hot from the press" to all comers.

RENOUNCES WEALTH FOR MORMON BRIDE

New York Man Accepts Church Tenets to Win Her

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—Acceptance of the tenets of the Mormon church, which provides that no man shall live in idleness nor on the wealth accumulated by his father or his father's father, is the price Daniel Palmer of New York has decided to pay for the hand of Miss A. P. Weller of Salt Lake City, daughter of A. J. Weller, ward bishop of the Mormon church.

Palmer's determination means the breaking off of his tentative engagement with a New York society girl. He is here to meet his father, D. H. Palmer, a wealthy coal operator of New York. Father and son will go to Salt Lake, where they will meet Bishop Weller and the engagement will be discussed.

"I have been indulged in my every want by my father," said Palmer, who says he is a graduate of Princeton, "and I have the greatest respect for his wishes and desires in all but the dictation of whom I shall marry."

BECOMING DISGRUNTLED

Followers of "Elijah" Sandford Preparing to Throw Off the Yoke

Yarmouth, N. S., Sept. 9.—That the power of Frank Sandford, the self-styled Elijah II, is actually broken, and that time alone will put an end to his Shiloh colony and followers aboard his two vessels, was emphasized here when two members of the Kingdom's crew, both converts, tried to ship on the bark Marietta, which is bound for the River Platte.

Fully a dozen others are becoming disgruntled and are ready to throw off the yoke of Sandford. Food is very scarce aboard the ship and for this reason the people are revolting.

Miss Sara Joseph said: "Sandford does not deny himself.'

AFTER FOUR WEEKS' STRIKE

New Bedford Laborers and Hod Carriers Return to Work

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 9.—After being idle for nearly four weeks and losing an aggregate amount of wages which will exceed $30,000, the striking laborers and hod carriers, members of the New Bedford local No. 303 of the Building Laborers and Hod Carriers' Union of America, have returned to work.

The strike was declared off when the strikers took under advisement the recommendation of their leader, Dominick d'Alessendro, that they return to work and become more firmly organized.

Moissant Coming to America

London, Sept. 9.—John B. Moissant of Chicago, the hero of the Paris-London flight, hopes to sail for America before long to try to win the Chicago-New York race, which starts on Oct. 8.

Alleged Theft of Union Funds

New York, Sept. 9.—Charged with the larceny of $750 of the funds of the Cloak Makers' union, Louis Rosen, secretary of the union, was locked up.

DEATH OF GEBHARD

Once Noted as Prominent Leader In New York Society

New York, Sept. 9.—Frederick Gebhard, for years one of the best-known clubmen in New York, died at Garden City, L. I., where he had been staying since last spring, in the hope of benefiting his health.

A quarter of a century ago Gebhard, then one of the leaders of New York society, entertained largely at his city and country residences and on his steam yacht. He was assiduous for a long time in his attentions to Lily Langtry, the actress, and their engagement was at one time reported.

Snortly afterward, however, in 1894, his engagement to Miss Lulu H. Morris, a young society woman of that time, was announced and their marriage quickly followed. They were divorced a few years later, Mrs. Gebhard afterward marrying Henry Clews, Jr. Gebhard, four years ago, married Marie Wilson, an actress. He was 53 years old.

Arm Severed by Mowing Machine

Orford, N. H., Sept. 9.—Hiding in the long grass of a hay field, intending to spring up suddenly and surprise the driver of a mowing machine, with a make-believe Indian attack, Francis Beaumont, 8 years old, was caught in the knives of the machine and his right arm was cut off below the elbow.

Crematoriums on Ocean Liners

Brussels, Sept. 9.—The International congress on cremation, now being held here, voted in favor of the establishment on every ocean liner of a crematorium, so as to obviate the burial at sea of persons who die in the course of a voyage.

BRIEFS

Gov. Draper and staff may attend the Quincy aviation meet today.

Atlantic is certainly on the map this week.

The title of the next popular song will probably be: "Meet me on the getaway."

It was reported on the aviation field this morning that the meet would be continued all next week.

Mrs. Augusta N. LaBrecque is to entertain teh newspaper men covering the meet with a shore dinner at the Great Hill house.

zDr. Emily Blackwell, a younger sister of Henry B. Blackwell, died in York, Maine, on Thursday aged 84 years.

Alfred O. Spinney, carpenter and builder, has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities $2,220.86; assets $381.85.

Quincy was well represented at the opening of the State Normal school at Bridgewater on Thursday.

The Junior League of the Hall Place M. E. church will commence its services for the fall and winter on Sunday.

Miss Mary A. Manhire of Albertina street, who has been sepnding the past two weeks at Ocean Point, Me., returned home Monday.

Mrs. Kate Stimpson of 575 Washihgton street has obtained a divorce from Jonn A. Stimpson of Charlestown, for non-support and intoxication.

Mrs. H. E. Richardson and daughters Bessie and Mary and Mrs. Lucy Burrell of Brockton were guests over the holiday in Quincy.

Many of the Quincy people are still availing themselves of the advantage of the city bath house. Quite a large number went in for a dip Wednesday afternoon.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held tonight to confirm the appointment of election officers and to take action on the order amending the order apropriating $10,000 for sewer extension.

It has been suggested in view of the great interest that is being taken in the aviation meet that the stores should close at noon Monday to give the clerks an opportunity to witness the flights of the birdmen.

The good looking mounted police officer on duty near the entrance to the aviation field is Officer Phillips. He makes a fine appearance, as does also Officer Whalan who is mounted. Both are kept busy.

Today at 5 P. M. is the last hour when petitions may be filed with the Secretary of State relative to direct nomination of senators and representatives. It is not known whether enough names were secured in the Quincy senatorial district, to allow the question to be submitted to the voters.

EXTRA BASE BALL

Old Makaria Team to Play Old Colony Stars

The Old Colony base ball schedule has been completed, thus releasing many Quincy men who have been playing on different teams, but they are still anxious to play ball. The Makaria club welcome back six of their old team, and have accepted the challenge of Jo Ford, who has got together an "All Star" team composed wholly of Old Colony men, and will cross bats on Saturday at 3 P. M. at Merrymount park. The make-up of the two teams will be as follows and should give the fans great sport:

"MAKARIAS."

HOUGHS NECK.

The causeway from the city stables to the pumping station at Houghs Neck is a great place to see the airships. People are daily seen inspecting the sky through the aid of glasses. Thursday ,about 6 P. M. a small party of men had their spy glass pointed directly at a Houghs Neck car. Upon inquiry, it was learned that they were —looking for a seat on the car.

The recent rains have been a blessing in laying the dust on the Sea street curve. Judging from the results of this summer, we can picture that oil cart sprinkling the curve near spring. But then it is only a picture.

The children seem to take great pride in the new school, and if comment can be seriously taken they will be pleased when they can get inside. Many parents will be also, as it will secure them against any possible danger to their offsprings while travelling to the city.

Many have been the lamentations of Houghs Neck citizens who patronize the lectric cars. Overcrowded morning and night with no apparent elimination of the congested conditions. Tuesday morning the car leaving Houghs Neck was so packed that two passengers counted eight people riding on the rear fender. Should the fender have given way, one can imagine the possible loss of life and limb. Wednesday morning on the 8.05 only 146 fares were registered, which was again significant of the overcrowded conditions the people of Houghs Neck are obliged to put up with. At the hearing last fall, the road stated that they could only afford one hour time for us. This season we were promised half hour time and a late car every night. This cleverly twisted manipulation of arrangement is easily afforded, when two car loads are packed into one.

MILTON

A. J. Ellsworth returns Saturday from his outing at New Found lake, Bristol, N. H.

The child of Cornelius Van Ham is reported as holding its own which can be considered hopeful news. Last week,as is generally known, he met with an accident by overturning a lamp and was burned severely.

R. J. Folsom, credit man for the Mellin's Food company, is spending his vacation at the aviation field.

Preparations for fall athletics start this week at the Cunningham gymnasium. Football practice starts Saturday and basketball practice will begin before very long. This organization expects to put out winning teams as usual which should merit the approval of the townspeople.

Fans Figuring Chances of the Teams In World Series.

CUBS WILL HAVE NO CINCH.

Frank Chance's Team Will Not Have as Easy Time With Philadelphia as It Did With Detroit Tigers—Mack Has Strong Pitching Staff.

Now that teams in the National and American league pennant race have hit the home stretch fans already are beginning to think about the world's series. The enthusiasts have awarded the banners to the Athletics in the American league and to the Chicagos in the National league and now are speculating as to whether the White Elephants will make a better showing in the big series against the Cubs than the Tigers made.

The Mack men of 1910 are a better set of athletes than the team of five years ago, which made such a sorry showing against the Giants in a series for the honors of the universe. Philadelphians are certain that the White Elephants will make a far better showing against the Cubs than the Tigers made.

The rout of the Athletics in the world's series of 1905 was a terrible blow to Quaker fans, who imagined Harry Davis, Ralph Orlando Seybold and the other hard hitting Mack men would knock the curves of Christy Mathewson and Joe McGinnity galley west. What happened is a matter of history.

Many critics on the major league circuits consider the Chicago National league club the grandest baseball machine in the country, and the Cubs will be the favorites over the White Elephants when the two teams get into the world's series. Eminent pastimers who have been spoken to on the subject aver that the Chicagoans will have a much harder time to beat the Philadelphians than they had to beat the Detroits and say it is no moral certainty that the Teddy Bears will win the series.

Ball players consider that the Philadelphia American league club's pitching staff is superior to Chicago's. Jack

EDDIE PLANK, ONE OF PHILADELPHIA STAB BOX MEN.

Coombs is undoubtedly one of the greatest boxmen in the country. "Chief" Bender hasn't shown any signs of retrograding in his work, Minstrel Man Morgan is an able exponent of the spitball delivery, and Eddie Plank is as clever a left hander and as steady as any club possesses.

Chance's probable gunners in the world's series will be Mordecai Brown, Jack Pflester, King Cole and Ed Reulbach. The "peerless leader" hardly would dare intrust the curving assignment in any of these important games to Lew Richie or Harry McIntyre, as the White Elephants have had lots of practice hitting against spitball pitchers. Orvie Overall is not likely to be of much use to the Cubs for the rest of the season and hardly would get a chance to perform in the world's series. Brown and Pflester will be Chance's mainstays. Mordecai isn't as good as he once was and has been hammered freely several times this year.

In the catching department the Cubs thoroughly outclass the Mack men. There is no doubt about Johnnie Kling being the best backstop in the country, and he and Jimmy Archer undoubtedly would thwart a great majority of the White Elephants to filch bassocks. The Philadelphia wind paddists—Ira Thomas, Jack Lapp and Paddy Livingstone—are all hard workers, but that about lets them out. They have pegged to bases fairly well this year, but not one of the trio is in Archer's class. The infields of the two teams are evenly matched. While the Cubs' outgardeners eclipse that of the Athletics, the consensus of opinion seems to be that the two teams are most evenly matched, and the world's series of 1910 will be the most stubbornly fought of any set of contests ever played for the greatest honors of the baseball universe.

OUTING FOR APPRENTICES

The Fore River Aprentices are anticipating great pleasure on their outing Saturday. Three specials have been chartered which will take them all the way through on their trip. Leaving City Square at 7 A. M. they will go first to Lynn, where the works of the General Electric company will be thrown open for their inspection. Here they will be joined by the General Electric Apprentices, and all will have dinner in one of the company's buildings. After dinner the specials will take them to Quannapowitt grove in Wakefield. The ride of twenty miles to the grove is said to be delightful. All kinds of sports will be indulged in during the afternoon. There will be aquatics, a track meet, and a baseball game. In the first two prizes will be given to the individual winners, both the Fore River boys and those from the General Electric competing.

The crowning feature of the day will be the baseball game between the teams of the two clubs of apprentices. President Bowles has offered a permanent cup for an annual contest between them. The name of the winning club and the date of their victory will be inscribed on the cup each year.

After the ball game a real clambake will take place and then all will take the specials for the home trip. It is expected that they will get back to City Square at 10 o'clock.

SPORTING NOTES.

Although the regular scheduled games in the Old Colony league are over, the Quincy team is to play at least three times more. Tomorrow they go to Reading for a game with the fast team of that city. On Friday, the 16th ,they will meet the Deweys at the Weymouth Fair, and on the day following a fame will be played on the home grounds to make up for the Labor day game which was called off. In this game they will have as their opponents some fast team probably from Boston although it has not been definitely decided yet. The year has been a successful one for the "Champs," both from a financial standpoint as well as from the athletic. In considering this it must be remembered that the new bleachers by first base were erected at a considerable expense. In actual cash the management came out just about even.

The Ramblers play at Atlantic playground against the Bay View Athletics. Chapman Brothers will be the Ramble battery.

The Barre Ranger of Vermont play McGregors in Water street grounds on Saturday, kick off 3.30. The Barre Rangers come here with a great reputation. They have been league champions of Barre for the last few years winning all the cups. They intend giving McGregors a hot ninety minutes. Mayor Shea is expected to kick off the ball, seeing it is the opening match on McGregors new ground. The McGregors team is as follows: Drysdale, Craig, Wilson, McDonald, F. Roberston, Meldrum, R. Roberston, (Captain) Rennie, Forsyth, Poe and Henry. Referee, J. Hamilton.

GOVERNOR DRAPER AND STAFF ENTHUSES OVER AVIATION AT QUINCY

GOVERNOR ACCOMPANIED BY LARGE STAFF

Sees Flights by Grahame-White Johnstone and Willard

Too Much Wind for Most of the Events

The high wind during the early part of yesterday afternoon prevented any flights at the Quincy Aviation field until nearly 4 o'cloc. The high wind, however, did not keep the crowd from attending. While the crowd was not as large as on Thursday it was fully as large as it was on Labor Day. It was tiresome waiting, but the crowd was a good natured one and the band entertained them.

While waiting for the flyers to make their appearance the crowd had a chance to rubber about the field and at the biplanes which could be seen protruding from the hangar tents.

GOVERNOR AND STAFF.

About 3 o'clock Governor Draper with his staff made their appearance on the field in two large automobiles. They entered the field unannounced and were taken over through the street between the hangars and thence to the space in front of the committees office.

Soon after their arrival it was announced that Grahame-White would try the getaway event. Before doing so, however, he came over where the Governor was and was presented to His Excellency. Mr. White made three attempts at the getaway, one of which did not count as he struck the ground after rising. His best time in this event was 26 feet, 11 inches, which was remarkably quick. He then made two trials at the accuracy event. Rising in the air and circulating the field he came down, the trick being to alight inside the circle that had been drawn out on the field and as near the centre as possible. The first time he came to a stop 68 feet 6 inches from the centre and the second time 36 feet from the centre which was also remarkably good.

Then it was announced that Johnstone would go up in a Wright biplane for duration and distance. It was some minutes, however, before he was ready.

THE MAYOR RUFFLED.

In the meantime a little side event was being enacted near the press stand in which Mayor Shea participated. His Honor with a party of friends occupied one of the boxes near the end of the easterly press stand. A large automobile containing several ladies came onto the getaway and the driver backed his car to the fence in such a manner that it completely shut out the view of the box party from the field. The Mayor requested the driver to move to some other location, but he was one of those men with unlimited cheek who had not a thought for the welfare of others.

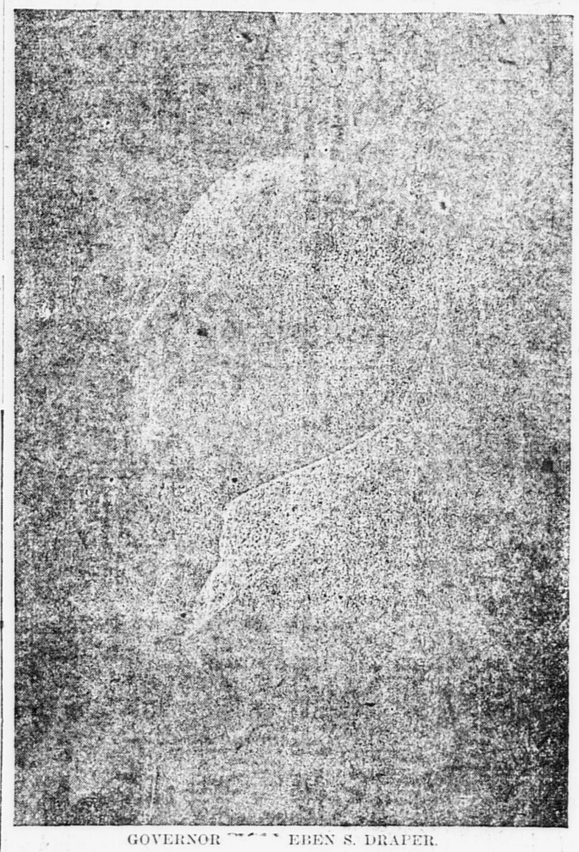

For a reply he said that he had a badge and he would stay ther e as long as he liked, and if the Mayor, did not like it he could get out. "Bills" Ebenezer went up at that, and he ried to attract the attention of the officer on the getaway bu was unsuccessful. Walking down o the extreme westerly end of the grand stand he entered the getaway and came up to the committee's office. A minute later an officer walked out and the driver of the automobile turned on the juice and off he went toward the hangars, while the occupants of other boxes in that vicinity applauded the efforts of the Mayor.

It seems that the driver was determined to remain in front of the boxes if possible, for he soon came back with Mr. Glidden on his car. Mr. Glidden looked into the case a minute and then told the fresh driver to go down to the further end of the boxes, which he did and the incident closed.

JOHNSTONE AND WHITE.

By this time Mr. Johnstone was in the air on the first rounds of his duration and distance event, and shortly after Grahame-White went up in his biplane to do the same stunt, and for an hour or more the two birdmen circled the course again and again. Then Mr. White attempted to alight. He hit the ground all right, but a puff of wind struck one of the planes and before he could recover his equilibrum the biplane rose and landed with a crash on one of the planes, smashing it to pieces, so that it will be some days before it can again be put in condition to fly.

Everybody regretted the accident to his plane, for it is generally acknowledged that he has been the life of the meet, and without him it would be dull music much of the time. Fortunately, however, he has his monoplane left and will continue his flights with that.

GOVERNOR [illegible] EBEN S. DRAPER.

FIRE PATROL VIGILIANT.

While the crowd is busy watching the events taking place on the getaway not much thought is given to what is taking place back of the grandstand. Here is located the hospital and police headquarters and the fire patrol. Unknowingly to the crowd, the firemen on duty have had a busy time. They patrol back and forth behind the grandst nd to see that it does not take fire. Fireman Billings of Combination No. 2 who has been on duty every day, says that already he has extinguished several fires under the grand stand that if they had been known to the occupants of the stand might have created a panic.

People who occupy the grand stand find it very convenient to drop all their old papers to the ground below and there is often many loose papers lying about. Then some smoker drops a cigar or cigarette butt, and the next minute the paper is on fire and blazing away. While these incipient fires have not as yet set fire to the wood work, they doubdless would but for the vigilance of the fire patrol who quickly discover them and as quickly extinguished the blaze before anyone is the wised. Large chemical tanks are located at convenient places in the rear of the grandstand but fortunately there has been on use for them up to the present time.

The main event of interest to the 25,000 spectators Friday was when Grahame-White, Johnstone and Willard were all in the air at the same time. It was indeed a pretty sight.

IDOL OF LADIES.

It was reported on the field yester- Grahame-White, Johnstone and Willthe idol of the fair sex, who attend the meet which is self evident from the applause he always receives from them when he comes onto the getaway. Ever since his flight to the Boston light he has been flooded with sweet scented epistles from ladies expressing their admiration for him. Many ask for a personal interview, and not a few offer themselves in marriage with their fat bank account. These letters were rather amusing at first, but when the number received had reached nearly three hundred it became monotinous, and he is said to have turned them over to his friends to be read. It is doubtful if any of these love messages are answered.

ATTRACTIONS TODAY.

The globe says: If the weather conditions are in the least favorable this afternoon C. Grahame-White, in his Bleriot monoplane, will fly over the Boston Globe course from the aviation field at Atlantic to Boston light and return, and without alighting go over the same course again. What is more, the English aviator will repeat this performance Monday and Tuesday— weather permitting—for the simple reason that henceforth he will include this course and the $10,000 cash prize in his distance and duration contests.

In other words he will endeavor, in future at this meet, to capture three prizes at once—the first prizes of $2000 each for distance and duration and the Boston Globe prize of $10,000, making a total of $14,000. And if he should break the world's records in the distance and duration contests he will be entitled to $2000 more—making a total of $16,000.

This means further that after finishing the flight to Boston light and return and then over the same course again he will not alight, but will stay in the air as the duration contest as welle as the distance will compel him to stay in the air at least one hour each day in his Bleriot monoplane, the most beautiful and bird-like machine of them all.

There will also be flights in the other events. President Taft is coming again some day, and possible ex-President Roosevelt.

RETURN SUPPER.

For several years, at the opening of the season, city officials and others have enjoyed one of Nortemans famous shore dinners at Houghs Neck. Next Saturday, at 5.30 P. M., a return supper will be given to Mr. Norteman. The following committee is a sufficient guarantee that there will be something doing: Henry W. French, Hon. W. T. Shea, Frank F. Crane and Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., Edward J. Sandberg and John Moir. The tickets will be limited to 150.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The high cost of living may help to discourage the Mormons from trying to offord either polygamy or politics.

It cannot be denied that a first class contributing editor gets a lot of time for outside work.

For the sake of those who were not able to attend, it is to be hoped that the moving picture men did their duty at Cheyenne.

The number of automobilists who tried to buck railroad trains off the track was smaller than usual Sunday.

There are times when the title of "King" in Spain, does not seem much more significant than that of Colonel in Kentucky.

England doubtless believes that Col. Roosevelt will be unable to get through his speechmaking tour without starting a disturbance of some kind.

Just why Lieutenant Foulois should want permission to fly across the Rio Grande when at this season of the year he could walk across without wetting the soles of his shoes is a mystery.

It would be impossible to read Mr. Sherman's speeches and fail to appreciate the appropriateness of that "Sunny Jim" title.

If the dome of First church were gilded and the bright and shining land-mark it used to be perhaps the aviators in their flights would be attracted and make a circuit from Squantum to Quincy. If gilded it would be an easier mark to locate than Boston light.

If the Aviation committee had looked the country over it is doubtful if they could have found a prettier spot anywhere. As one sits in the grandstand it is a panorama of beauty no matter which way one looks; inland are green meadows and hillsides covered with trees, topped in the distance by the Blue hills, while the water view with the green islands and shore lines of the bay and the blue water covered with hundreds of white sail boats is a feast to which the eye often turns. The aviation field itself is attractive but probably few Quincy people realized it before the meet.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

This is a plea for the summer cats and kittens to those who are closing their summer homes, in the country and at the shore. Don't go back to your winter domiciles without making provision for the animals that have been your pets and companions during vacation. Don't turn them loose to tramp and starve. Don't be inhuman.

Every year, when the vacation season closes and the working season begins, homeless cats and kittens are left to wander here and there, at the numerous resorts, bereft of human care and human kindness. They are deserted, apparently, with no thought of what is to become of them, until finally they die of starvation or are put out of their misery by dogs or men.

That this is so is a reflection upon those who allow it to occur. Nine times out of ten it is due to carelessness but carelessness is no excuse. If it is too much to take to winter homes the pets that cannot care for themselves, then, by all means, bear in mind that the price of chloroform is not excessive and that could your pet declare its sentiments ,those sentiments would be for prompt and painless death in preference to bitter and persistent tribulation followed by starvation.—Boston Journal.

THAYER ACADEMY NOTES.

The fall term opens Monday, Sept. 12, at 9 A. M.

There will be one change in the corps of teachers: Mr. Southworth goes to the English High school in Boston and Miss Phoebe L. Hosmer of Orange, a graduate of the University of California takes charge of the French and German classes.

It is expected that the work on the tower will be completed by Oct. 1 Work on the structure has been delayed almost a month because of the non-arrival of limestone from the quarries. The new tower will be but fiv feet lower than the old one and there will be four clock faces instead of three as formerly. There will be some changes seen in the belfry and the windows will be smaller.

Dr. William Gallagher, head master with his wife and daughter returned last Monday from a five weeks' stay at Ogunquit, Me.

President Taft's pastor at Cincinnati, Rev. George A. Thayer, is on a visit to Boston. While here he will attend the annual meeting of Thayer academy, of which he is a trustee. Mr. Thayer is a descendant of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer, who founded West Point, and also endowed Thayer academy at Braintree, his native town. During the civil war Rev. Mr. Thayer served as captain in the Second Massachusetts volunteers, and Col. Robert G. Shaw, who fell at the head of the 54th colored regiment at Fort Wagner was a lieutenant in his company The Second regiment, which in discipline was put up to the standard of the regular army, was commanded respectively by Cols. George H. Gordon and George L. Andrews, both of whom were West Point graduates and became brigadier-generals. On Sunday Mr. Thayer will preach in the Unitarian church at Manchester.—Transcript.

SOUTH BRAINTREE.

The Baraca Class of Dorchester, will cross bats with the Royal White Sox on French's common this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Miss Wilkinson is still in Laconia, N. H., at the bedside of her mother, who has had another shock. Her classmate, Miss Gertrude L. Allison of Simmons college is temporarily assisting in the library. Miss Abbie L. Allen of East Braintree has done eight weeks' efficient work in cataloguing during the summer. During the vacation the walls of the children's room have been painted, and the woodwork retouched. A set of 49 photographs of views in Japan will be on exhibition for the next three weeks.

Last Wednesday evening the members of the South parish assembled in thechapel to take action regarding the resignation of Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern pastor, who leaves Oct. 1, to be pastor of the Park Congregational church at Worcester. The meeting was called to order by Mr. F. A. Reed, clerk of the church and Mr. A. S. Pennock was chosen moderator. The pastor's resignation was read and accepted and a set of resolutions commending Mr. Crathern's ministery and expressing profound regret that the church must lose the services of so valuable a man was read by Mr. W. A. Torrey and accepted by the parish.

MILE STONE.

There is a stone by the side of Commercial street, Braintree, near the foot of Penn's Hill, bearing the following inscriptions: "B." "12." "J. M." "1727." "J. H." which is supposed to be the twelfth milestone on the road from Boston to Plymouth. Who can decipher this inscription? My theory is that the initials stand for Jonathan Hayward and Jonathan Mills, the latter of whom married Jemima Hayward in November, 1727, and was ordained pastor of the church in Bellingham the same year. Is this theory correct? Samuel A. Bates.

The above appeared in the Braintree Observer July 23, 1892, and is repuplished by request, for measures are being taken to have this milestone reset and protected.—Edit.

THREE SCOOPED IN.

Inspector McKay with Inspector Sherlock of Boston and State Officers Scott and Flynn made a raid Friday afternoon on a party of young men in the woods off the boulevard, who were said to be crooks waiting for an opportunity to get by the police and into the aviation field where they could ply their trade among the crowd. It is also said that the party in the meantime were working the crowd with a gambling game in which the victim did not stand one chance in a thousand of winning. The officers grabbed four of the men who claimed Boston as their residence. They gave their names as Levi Sheppard, James Hackett and David Ross. They were taken to the police station on the aviation field and then to the police station where they were locked for the night. They were arraigned at Quincy for gaming.

SHORT SESSION CITY COUNCIL

Election Officers Confirmed and Sewer Order Advanced.

Some difficulty was experienced last evening in getting a quorum for the special meeting of the City Council and it was not until 7.50 that a quorum was obtained. The absent members were Councilman Bolster, Cantfill, Cherrington, Flynn, Gardner, Loud, McDevitt, Richards, Snow, Whiton and Woodward.

The appointments of election officers by the Mayor were confirmed.

The order amending the order appropriating $10,000 for sewer extensions was given its second reading and placed in the calander.

The meeting then adjourned having been in session just five minutes.

NOT SERIOUSLY HURT.

The many friends of James H. McDonough, one of the men injured by the fire on the battleship North Dakota, will be glad to learn that he was not seriously injured. Friday he sent a telegraph dispatch stating "Am not seriously hurt; do not believe newspaper stories." Shortly after Mrs. McDonough received another telegram from the father of Mr. McDonough, conveying the same information.

That McDonaugh was in the thick of the trouble there can be no doubt for he is a man always on hand when there is danger. He was on the North Dakota during her trial trips when she blew out one of her boiler tubes, and it was he who crawled along the floor beneath the hot streams of escaping steam and cut out boiler, not only saving the other three boilers in the set but more seamen from being scalded.

LARGE PARTY OF APPRENTICES.

The Fore River Apprentices were off bright and early this morning for Lynn and Wakefield and there was a large party of them, 163 by actual count, in charge of Instructor Neary. They believed in advertising, and the three special electric cars which conveyed the party were appropriately labelled. In the first car were the first and second classes, in the next car the third and fourth classes, and in the last car the alumni. They were guests this morning at the General Electric Company at Lynn, and this afternoon will contest with the Apprentices of that company in a series of sports at Quannapowitt grove in Wakefield.

DEATH OF AGED RESIDENT.

Mrs. Emeline Parker, widow of William Parker, passed away at her home on Hancock court this morning as the result of a shock aged 87 years. Mrs. Parker has been an invalid for more than a year. It was about a year and a half ago that Mrs. Parker slipped and fell at her home, dislocating her hip. The fracture never knitted, so that she has been confined to her bed since that time. Her husband who was one of Quincy's well known builders died some years ago. Mrs. Parker leaves one son, Warren S. Parker, the inspector of buildings.

LARGE SURPRISE PARTY.

Nearly 300 people were present at the surprise party in Electa hall last evening. The party which was given in honor of Helen Leet of Edison park, was arranged by friends from Quincy and Braintree. Dancing was the program for the evening with the exception of half an hour which was given over to serving ice cream and cake. The music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Linton of Dorchester. The thirty dances and extras were sufficient to keep all hands engaged from 8 to 11.30. The success of the affair was due to the energy of the committee, which consisted of Leo Drysdale, Dan Farquharson, Miss Ella Morrison and Miss Mary Cannaway.

SQUANTUM !?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY !?
¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.
¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.
¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?
¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.
¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)
LOTS OF LAND
overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

LOCOMOTIVE TENDER DERAILED

Accident Occured Near Bridge Over Butler's Brook

A bad accident was narrowly averted on the railroad early this morning, when the rear wheels of the tender of the locomotive left the iron just north of President bridge. The train was the outward Plymouth which left Boston at 6.45, and is due at Quincy at 7 o'clock.

The train runs express to Quincy and was bowling along at good speed at the time of the accident. While passing over the short bridge that spans Butler's brook, the rear wheels of the tender left the iron. Along the outer edge of the bridge is a heavy timber on the inner face of which is a face of flat iron. It was this that saved the wheels from going off the bridge, and possibly dragging the locomotive down the steep embankment Striking this iron-faced timber, the tender was carried safely over the bridge. When the wheels left the iron the air pipes separated, which caused the brakes to set, bringing the train to a sudden stop, but not before it had run for several hundred feet.

The outer rail was completely blocked, and it was two hours or more before the wrecker arrived and the tender wheels placed back on the iron. Inward train service was not interrupted, but there was considerable delay of outward trains.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

The Swedish Congregational church joined last evening with the Swedish Baptist church in rendering a farewell reception to Mrs. Sandberg, who leaves Quincy shortly to join her husband who has accepted a pastorate in Sweden. Mrs. Sandberg is the only daughter of Rev. Mr. Englund, who for twelve years served the local Swedish Baptist church. Mrs. Sandberg received tokens of appreciation from both churches.

Short speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Palmgren, Mr. Hedman and Mr. Bergstrom. The Congregational male choir rendered several pleasing selections. Miss Hulda Johnson and Miss Alma Nelson sang a duet. In the absence of Rev. Hanson, Mrs. Hanson took charge during the evening. Refreshments were served and a social hour was ejoyed by all.

George A. Monk is to play at a subscription party to be given at the Quincy Yacht club on Tuesday evening. Friends are invited to attend.

JOHN HEFFERNAN Next to Berry Bros.

MRS. CHARLES T. DERRY.

Mrs. Almira W. Derry, wife of Capt. Charles T. Derry, former residents of Quincy, died at her home in Sharon on Monday in her 77th year. Mrs. Derry was the daughter of the late Capt. G. L. Murdock of West Quincy, who was said to be the first man to command a tugboat in Boston Harbor and who was engaged in towing granite from East Milton, where it was delivered by the first railroad in America, running from West Quincy to the river, for the Bunker Hill monument in Charlestown and the Boston custom house. He was the first captain in Boston harbor to adopt steam for the purpose of navigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Derry celebrated their golden wedding a few years ago and their married life was a most happy one. Mrs. Derry has been in failing health for some time past with infirmities incidental to advanced age. She is survived by her husband and a family of grown up children. The funeral was held at the Baptist church in Sharon on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

CURED TO STAY CURED

If you suffer from backache—
From urinary disorders—
From any disease of the kidneys,
Be cured to stay cured.
Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.

Grateful people testify.
Here's one case of it:

C. H. Foster, 180 Thatcher street, Milton Mass., says: "The symptoms of kidney trouble in my case were not serious at first and I paid little attention to them. The result was that before long I found myself firmly in the grasp of this complaint. I became so weak that I could hardly attend to my work and I also suffered from sharp pains in various parts of my body. I lost twenty pounds in weight and could not sleep well. I was very nervous, had no energy and was in such poor health that the doctor told me that I should take to my bed. I did not do this, however, being unwilling to give up. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. I procured a supply and had only taken part of the contents of one box before I began to feel better. From that time on I improved steadily until I was well." (Statement given May 1905.)

A Permanent Effect.

BRIEFS

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters will meet Monday evening with Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, 279 Arlington street.

Edward Gisburne who has been reporting sports and news for a few months is no longer connected with the Ledger.

All the services will be resumed on Sunday at the Wollaston Baptist church, Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor, Morning service at 10.45; Sunday school at 12.15; Y. P. S. C. E. at 6 and evening service at 7.

Mrs. E. E. Jameson of Wollaston Park has the sympathy of friends in the death of her niece Lucy Sage, daughter of Mr. Frederick H., and Mrs. Isabel Sage Sloan of Hartford, Connecticut.

The first meeting after the summer of the Sunday school of St. Chrysostom's church will be held at noon Sunday. Mr. Parker remains as superintendent and hopes to see all the teachers and scholars back in their old places.

First Church Sunday school begins its fall session on Sunday noon with special opening service. This year there will be newly arranged graded lessons which will be helpful to teacher and pupil.

Tomorrow is a big day in yachting circles ,the Yacht Racing association of Massachusetts holding its annual rendezvous and sail from the Hull Yacht clubhouse to City Point, going by the westward way.

John Kitson who was so badly injured by the accidental discharge of his gun returned this week from the Quincy Hospital to his home near Merrymount park. He is reported as out of danger and gaining steadily but will have to wear a smoked glass over one eye and be careful of his hand for a while.

The director of the Salem Cadet band as well as being a good band master must have a keen sense of humor for when Lieut. Blakely went up Thursday with Aviator Willard the band played most appropriately at the start "The Star Spangled Banner" and on the return to earth "Home Sweet Home" from a foreign shore, etc." Wonder if that was how it seemed to the Lieutenant?

William Patterson the Wollaston florist not only is a specialist in raising flowers but must be an expert with vegetables as well, judging by some of the tomatoes we saw this week. They were not only large and handsome but were heavy, weighing well on the pound mark. Wonder if he is competing with the children's vegetable gardens or out for a prize at the Brockton fair.

Along the Quincy Shore reservation has been one of the best places to view the aviation events of the week for thousand who did not care to enter the field. At times the aviators have flown over their heads toward Quincy square, but at all times except on the foggy day they have been clearly visible. Many people have used the boulevard for the first time, and have been charmed with Quincy bay and the beautiful scenery, and more than one has remarked that it was a charming place for a residence.

HEROIC TARS IN EXPLOSION

Risk Their Lives In Disaster on the North Dakota

COMPLIMENTED BY CAPTAIN

One Seaman Wades Into Blazing Fire Room and Shuts Off Oil Cocks, Thus Preventing Further Feeding of Flames—Others Rescue Senseless Shipmates From Poisonous Fumes and Almost Certain Death

Newport News, Va., Sept. 10.—Notwithstanding unusual precautions against giving out details of the incidents immediately following the explosion of oil on board the North Dakota which killed three men and injured nine others, many acts of great heroism by the men have become known.

Orders have been given by Rear Admiral Schroeder that no other ship should pick up any wireless messages passing between the North Dakota and his flagship, the Connecticut.

When the North Dakota returned to Hampton Roads it was learned that her crew had spent the entire day fighting the fire in her engine room, and it is said unofficially, but from an authoritative source, that the battleship is so damaged that she may be unable to work with the first division or take part in the race off the Virginia capes.

Few tales have leaked ashore because of Schroeder's determination that all reports shall come from the navy department, and that no statement is to be made from the battleship until after a full official investigation. Such stories as have been told show that officers and men risked their lives as cheerfully as they have in other similar crises aboard ship when their mates were dying.

So earnestly and gallantly did the whole ship's crew work that after the fire was extinguished Captain Greaves mustered the full ship's company on deck, and with his officers about him, complimented them all on their behavior under the trying circumstances.

When the fire room was all ablaze the water which was being pumped in seemed to have little effect on the inferno, which was raging near the settling tank. It was seen that oil was still flowing in, floating on top of the water and steadily feeding the flames.

Seaman Greenaway, tying his handkerchief over his nose and mouth, waded into the blazing fire room, filled with choking, acrid smoke, and vapor, and managed to reach the oil cocks and turn them off. So hot were they by that time that the metal tore the flesh from his hands. With his mates playing on him with a hose he stumbled out, exhausted, to safety.

After the explosion the dead and injured men were flung all about the deck, those still conscious rapidly becoming senseless from shock and the oil fumes. Seaman Flowers was the first to crawl into the room. It was simply because he was nearest to the compartment, for at his heels was W. Rador, another enlisted man. Machinist Andrews and Joseph Minigin, a chief water tender, who were unconscious, were brought out by Rador.

Flowers brought out three enlisted men who were badly injured and senseless before he dropped exhausted and overcome by the poisonous fumes. The injured are all expected to recover.

ON WAY TO NEW YORK

Man In Advanced Stage of Leprosy Escapes From Quarantine

Salt Lake City, Sept. 10.—John Kokas, a Greek, in an advanced stage of leprosy, who has been under quarantine here for the last three months, is missing from the tent in which he has been quarantined and it is learned that he took a train intending to go to New York and thence to Greece.

Funds for the journey were provided by his countrymen here. His friends would not divulge the route he has taken. The left hand, it is said, is almost ready to drop off.

Admission of Former Customs Weigher In Sugar Fraud Trial

New York, Sept. 10.—Patrick J. Quigley, a former customs weigher, testifying in the customs underweighing trial, declared that while employed on the Arbuckle sugar docks in Brooklyn, from 1905 to 1907, he had repeatedly participated in underweighing operations.

Quigley testified that his fee for passing the importations was "from $50 to $100 per shipment."

Williams Out For Foss

Boston, Sept. 10.—Former Congressman George F. Williams, in a statement issued yesterday, urges that Eugene N. Foss be chosen as the regular Democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts. He declares that with Foss at the head of the party's state ticket, victory will be practically assured.

RIGHT ON THE JOB

Bucking Broncho Gives Unexpected Show In Boston Theatre

Boston, Sept. 10.—A broncho that "bucked" too effectively on the stage of the Boston theatre last night landed in the orchestra, smashed drums and other instruments and started among the occupants of front seats a miniature panic that did not end for several minutes.

It was in the last act of "The Round-Up" that the broncho tried to emulate a real western steed. The audience applauded as he doubled himself into the likeness of a letter "U," and then scampered madly for safety as he plunged into the orchestra enclosure. Fortunately, the players were not in their places, having gone below after a selection.

After much excitement enough supes congregated on the horse to quiet him and he was finally escorted up the centre aisle, while the end seats were suddenly depopulated.

CHILD BORN IN STREET

Mother and Her Six Children Had Been Evicted From Tenement

Providence, Sept. 10.—Immediately following her eviction from her tenement on Printery street here Mrs. Mary Dunn gave birth to a baby in the street. She is now at a hospital with her new born baby, while six other children, all small, are being cared for by neighbors.

The pathetic case came to the attention of the police soon after the new baby was born. The eviction was for non-payment of rent.

It is believed that the excitement attendant upon the ejection was responsible in some measure for the birth of the seventh child so soon afterward. Her condition, it is said, was known to the owner of the property, who, in spite of the fact, ordered her eviction.

TARIFF BOARD TO SOON BEGIN WORK

Wollen Schedule Will Be First to Be Considered

Washington, Sept. 10.—Sept. 21 the tariff board will meet in this city and lay the foundation for a scientific investigation of what are regarded as the most complete schedules of the Payne-Aldrich law. The now famous schedule K, the woolen schedule, which has been both sharply attacked and strongly defended, will have first consideration. The cotton schedule and the metal schedule will follow in the order named.

Whether the fact that the board is meeting in Washington the same week that President Taft has called the cabinet to the White House for several days' work behind closed doors has any significance no one here attempts to say. It is generally accepted as a fact, however, that another revision of the tariff, to be made schedule by schedule as may be needed, will be one of the subjects discussed at the White House conference.

ILLINOIS STRIKE ENDED

Miners Return to Work, Their Demands Having Been Granted

Chicago, Sept. 10.—The strike of Illinois coal miners, which has been in effect for twent-three weeks, is at an end, and a committee of the Illinois Coal Operators' association has signed the agreement adopting a wage scale outlined by the Peoria miners' convention.

The men returned to work this morning. The agreement carries a general increase of 2 cents a ton throughout the state. The operators also agree to an increase of 5.55 percent for all day laborers and will pay the wages to shot firers, formerly paid by the miners. This will increase their cost between 2 and 3 cents for each ton. About 45,000 men are affected.

IN FEAR OF BLACK HAND

Italian Communal Authorities Forced to Treat With Murderous Society

Rome, Sept. 10.—The newspapers declare that the operations of the Black Hand society have reached such proportions that the communal authorities have been forced to treat with it in order to preserve lives and property.

The newspapers demand exemplary punishment for the murderers of Policeman Rovolino and his family at Pellare recently, saying that otherwise the populace will lose all confidence in the administration of justice.

Tried to Walk on Water

Detroit, Sept. 10.—With a Bible in his hands opened at the passage telling of Christ walking on the water, Peter McDonald stepped off a float at the Belle Island bathing beach into seven feet of water. He was fully dressed. Lifeguard McNally rescued him.

Texas Against Negro Franchise

Austin, Sept. 10.—The lower house of the Texas legislature, by a vote of 81 to 34, instructed senators and congressmen to work for the repeal of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, conferring franchise upon negroes.

JURY ACQUITS LEE BROWN

Debated Twenty-One Hours In Famous Bribery Case

CHEERS GREET THE VERDICT

Democratic Leader In Illinois Legislature Was Accused of Wrongfully Aiding Election of Lorimer to United States Senate—Browne's Friends Jubilant, While State Attorney Is Plainly Put Out by Verdict

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Lee O'Neil Browne of Ottawa, Ills., Democratic legislative leader, charged with bribery in connection with the election of William Lorimer of Chicago to the United States senate, was acquitted by a jury in Judge George Kersten's division of the criminal court.

The jury, which took eight ballots, was out twenty-one hours. On the first ballot it stood eight to four for acquittal.

Immediately upon the verdict being returned the courtroom was in an uproar. It was ten minutes before bailiffs stopped the cheering.

Browne's eyes filled with tears as the clerk finished reading. A second later he threw his arms about Attorney Erbstein, his counsel. Browne was then hoisted to the shoulders of friends and carried out of the courtroom amid handshaking and cheers. He is still under indictment on the same charge, however, and will have to face trial at Springfield.

State Attorney Wayman was plainly put out by the verdict. He said: "The verdict speaks for itself; the public knows the evidence. I presented the evidence and did everything that a public prosecutor could do. The state of Illinois will reap the benefit of the prosecution regardless of the verdict. I have nothing further to say."

The verdict in the Browne case came as a dramatic aftermath to the sensational incident between Theodore Roosevelt and Senator Lorimer regarding the Hamilton club banquet. Lorimer refused to make any statement regarding the verdict.

FOUND FLOATING IN LAKE

Foul Play Not Suspected In Case of Woman Long Missing

Woburn, Mass., Sept. 10.—The body of Mrs. Mary Price, 34, wife of George Price of Milford, was found floating in Mirror lake, Montvale. It was apparent that it had been in the water for several days.

Medical Examiner Blake and the police believe that the woman either committed suicide or fell into the lake accidentally.

The only motive for suicide is found in the fact that during the past four months she and her husband had not been living together and that, according to the Milford police, Price had filed a libel for divorce.

FORTY-POUND "BUSHELS"

Measures Used by Dishonest Long Island Farmers Confiscated

New York, Sept. 10.—Long Island farmers were the chief sufferers by a raid made on Wallabout market, where the farmers bring their produce for sale, by Commissioner of Weights and Measures Driscoll and fourteen inspectors in his crusade against false weights and measures.

The commissioner said that among 500 baskets examined, there were very few that held a bushel, most of them holding not more than forty pounds instead of the required sixty.

Full weight barrels weigh 174 pounds, while the greater part of the barrels seized contained only about 120 pounds of tubers each.

LAKE MICHIGAN DISASTER

Loss of About Twenty Lives and $500,000 In Property

Ludington, Mich., Sept. 10.—One of the worst marine disasters in the history of Lake Michigan navigation occurred when car ferry Pere Marquette No. 18, flagship of a fleet of six steel car ferries owned and operated by the Pere Marquette Railroad company, sank to the bottom of Lake Michigan, twenty miles off Port Washington, Wis., with a probable loss of twenty lives.

The boat was valued at $400,000 and the cargo, which included twenty loaded cars, at $100,000 to $150,000.

FORETOLD HIS DEATH

Farmer Invites Neighbors to Funeral and Then Kills Himself

Newburg, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The early part of this week was spent by George W. Baker, a farmer, in calling on his neighbors and jocularly inviting them to his funeral, which, he said, would be held within a week.

It will. Baker was found dead yesterday at his home, where he had committed suicide by taking laudanum. No reason for his act is known.

Shah's Servants on Strike

Teheran, Sept. 10.—The servants of the shah's palace have gone on strike and are clamoring for the wages due them.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

The Aviation Face Is the Latest Type of Expression—Gallant Canadians Uncork Bottles with Boston's Ancients—"Dry Up the Swamps" Is a New Bay State Slogan—Ice Dealers, Celebrating a Successful Season, Have a Hot Time in the Antique Burgh—A Shop Girl Eloquent.

Do young people come to the top more easily in England than in this country. Not many months ago Bostonians were hearing from his wife the story of Philip Snowden, a feeble cripple, who went without money or influence into a borough where he knew hardly a soul, entered his name as candidate for Parliament, won out solely through his powers of impassioned oratory, took his seat in the House of Commons and in a couple of years became "father of the British Budget." Fancy the most brilliant of young men trying to do that in a New England congressional district. Fancy his being elected against the opposition of the party machines or, if elected, allowed by "Uncle Joe" to serve on important committees in his first term. Again fancy a Boston shop girl through eloquent speech and organizing ability becoming while still a very young woman a figure of international reputation. Fancy her running for the Common Council and being all but elected. Yet something of that sort has been accomplished in "conservative" England by Boston's recent visitor, Miss Margaret Bondfield, whose wonderful oratory thrilled great crowds on Boston Common during the suffrage demonstrations. Miss Bondfield is, of course ,an exceptionally wonderful young woman, but even with her exceptional gifts could she, if born and reared in an American city, have so quickly jumped from counter to career? Probably not, unless by a fortunate marriage.

Is one justified in becoming hot under the collar whe nreading of the doings at the annual outing of the Massachusetts Ice Dealers' Association? No wonder that after the warm summer these gentry of the diminishing junk and increasing ice bill are able to sport diamonds and treat their wives to the best that Nantasket as a resort affords. Still perhaps the ice man is no worse than the other pantry pilferers. Here, for instance, are butter dealers of Boston just encountering an injunction not to charge the customer for five pounds of butter when he actually buys four and a quarter pounds plus a wooden box that makes up the difference in weight if not in nutrition.

"Dry the swamps" is the Massachusetts State Board of Health's latest slogan. To do so is desirable, yet deplorable. Swamps, as every Boston girls who has botanized around them, and in them has discovered are abodes of fascinating floral treasures such as the dry land never yields. From the date on which the hylas first send up their shrill notes from among the cattails until the ice congeals abou the base of the waving reeds there is perpetual charm, perpetual mystery in the mud hole. Even the mosquitoes which it breeds do not altogether rob it of its midsummer glory. The swamp, however, evidently is destined to be removed in the interest of public health and the public tummy, if the board of health has its way. Right around Boston are morasses which may be drained to make garden plots on which suburbanites can raise not only enough vegetables for their own use but to help supply the city markets. So, for economy's sake, banish the bogs.

British aviators and Canadian soldiers ,thronging the streets of the Puritan capital, have lately given a pleasing indication of its growing cosmopolitanism. Quite as much as by the bird men the feminine fancy has been caught by the visit of the Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles, the crack Forty Third Canadian regiment from Ottawa. Visiting various armories and scenes of old time conflict, breaking bread with the boys of the Massachusetts Fifth and uncorking bottles with the gallants of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company, the guests from the Dominion, have had an excellent chance to see things eyen while they have been seen by admiring crowds.

Are President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt right in thinking that the law needs a good overhauling? In Boston the other day two sentences were imposed by the Superior Criminal Court. Henry Smith, for stealing thirty cents, was sent to the House of Correction for three years. Louis de Franzio, who pleaded guilty to a white slave charge, was sent to the House of Correction for nine months. Is it strange that Miss Alice Stone Blackwell asking whether women are "virtually represented" in our laws and their administration?

The aviation face is pronounced by observant Bostonians to be as unmistakable as the automobile face. All the air men seem to look alike—a result, doubtless ,of facing the onrush of the wind at great elevations. One wonders if the society girls who, like Miss Eleonora Sears, are beginning to take up aviation will come out of it with the same roughness of complexion. Ethel Angier.

LLOYD W. BOWERS

Held an Important Pose In Government

DEATH CALLS LLOYD BOWERS

Federal Solicitor General Expires In a Boston Hotel

WAS TALKING WITH FAMILY

Suddenly Ceases Speaking and End Comes a Moment Later—Was Expected to Resume Duties by First of October—Close Friend of the President, Who Was Viewed as Probable Supreme Bench Appointee

Boston, Sept. 10.—Lloyd Wheaton Bowers, solicitor general of the United States, who had been ill at the Hotel Touraine, died there most unexpectedly. Bowers, who had been seriously ill for several weeks, was thought to be well on the road to recovery. President Taft called at the Touraine Wednesday on his way home from his western tour and was much pleased to learn that Bowers was improving rapidly. His sudden death was, therefore, a shock to all who believed in his ultimate recovery.

Mrs. Bowers was with her husband when the end came. The solicitor general's son and the nurse also were present. Dr. Coggoshell, who has been attending Bowers, was quickly summoned, but death was practically instantaneous after the final shock caused by a cardiac thrombus which stopped the heart action.

Mr. Bowers was conversing cheerfully with his family when he suddenly ceased speaking and a moment later he was dead. He had been suffering for the last two months from a severe infection of the throat and bronchial tubes, which had been aggravated by the fact that he was very much tired out by his last year's work.

Although his illness during the last week may be said to have been serious, it was at no time considered critical or alarming. There was every reason to expect that he would be able to begin to resume his work by the first of October.

The daughter, Miss Martha Bowers, is in the Rocky mountains, and the funeral arrangements will not be completed until she reaches the Bowers home in Washington.

Mr. Bowers conducted the government's prosecution of the Tobacco, Standard Oil and other trust cases. He was a Chicago railroad attorney when he gave up a salary of $31,500 a year to become solicitor general of the United States. Had he lived a little longer he might have attained the highest professional position a lawyer can attain. He has recently been talked of as a probable appointee to the United States supreme court.

He was born in Springfield, Mass., and was 51 years old. While at Yale he and William H. Taft were fraternal brothers. The president and Bowers have ever since remained the closest friends.

It has been said of Bowers that he belonged to the "intellectual aristocracy of the United States." He was a descendant of Jonathan Edwards, the great theologian and Calvanistic writer. He studied law in company with Attorney General Wickersham, who was his official superior when Bowers died. When they were law students in New York Bowers got $7 a week, but the other youth not nothing.

MAY CHOP UP BILLBOARDS.

McKenney & Waterbury Co. Give Privilege to Anyone to Destroy Their Signs.

One Boston house, at least, is so convinced of the inappropriateness of billboard advertising as well as of its injurious effects upon real estate values and its detriment to the landscape, that it has resolved to give up this method. W. A. McKenney of the lamp, gas, fixture, electrolier house of McKenney & Waterbury Co. is thoroughly in earnest in this matter, so much so that he is going to destroy every billboard that his firm has, and he goes so far as to give anyone the privilege to tear down and carry away for kindling wood any McKenney & Waterbury Co. sign that may be found in the suburbs of Boston.

In an interview on the subject Mr. McKenney called attention to a magazine clipping wherein the experience was given of Upper Montclair, N. J., which entered upon a vigorous campaign against billboard advertising appeal to advertisers ,every such sign was taken down within five months. Today the landscape around the town is free from advertising devices.

Mr. McKenney does not deny that his house may have derived benefit in the past from billboard advertiswith the result that through courteous ing, but he is convinced that the only way to advertise is in the newspapers and henceforth he will use that form of publicity only. Billboard advertising, he believes, is a great injustice to any community and the suburbs of Boston are being so rapidly defaced that it is time to eliminate these disfigurements. Not long ago Mr. McKenney's firm erected a board in a vacant lot outside of Boston and soon after a physician remonstrated for the intrusion of the sign in his neighborhood. Thereupon, Mr. McKenney promptly removed it, and he is taking the same action with everyone of the firm's billboards.

Mr. McKenney believes that he time has come for a more widespread protest against billboards, and that if the proper opposition was manifested by the public, merchants and other advertisers could be made to see the injustice of this form of publicity and it would not be long before the rural sections would be freed from objectionable signs. He further thinks that that it is within the province of the Legislature to end this landscape disfigurement, and that, if some measure is properly framed, it would become law.—Boston Transcript.

WILL TRY TO PROVE HIS WIFE IS ALIVE

Crippen Begins the Final Attempt to Avoid Conviction

London, Sept. 10.—With five days in which to gather conclusive proof that his wife still lives, Dr. H. H. Crippen, accused of the murder of his wife, entered, through his counsel, upon this momentous task as the only means of saving himself from the dire penalty of the English law.

Arthur Newton, the prisoner's counsel, expresses confidence that he will be successful in proving that the remains found in the cellar of Crippen's London home were not those of Belle Elmore.

Some believe that the next session of the case will result in a tremendous sensation. This might be brought about through the attempted exposure by Newton that a murder had been committed, but not by Crippen, and that the remains found were those of some person who has been mysteriously missing.

CURTAILMENT CONTINUES

Southern Soft Yarn Mills Not Ready to Resume Full Time

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 10.—With between 300,000 and 400,000 spindles represented at the meeting of the Southern Soft Yarn Spinners' association in its fall meeting resolutions were adopted to continue the present curtailment until Oct. 15, or such time as the conditions of the market will warrant a resumption of operation on full time.

The curtailment of the soft yarn spinning mills in this section at present amounts to between 40 and 50 percent.

Investiture of Prince In July

London, Sept. 10.—The investiture of Prince Edward as Prince of Wales will take place at Carnarvon, Wales, in July, 1911.

Boy Killed by Machinery

Westfield, Mass., Sept. 10.—John Mahoney, 17, was instantly killed at the Westfield Marble and Sandstone company's works at Mundale by being caught in machinery.

BRIEFS

A petition is being circulated and quite generally signed by the local business houses to close the stores on Monday at noon so that all hands may attend the Aviation meet and see the men-birds fly.

The Washington Street Congregational church is to have a "Rally Sunday" tomorrow. Great preparations have been made for it, and it is expected that the work of the new church year will have a good beginning as a result.

Makaria Fraternity will begin the new year tomorrow. Mr. King and Dr. Hardy will have charge of the meeting and it is hoped that a record attendance may be taken at this opening session. This wide-awake organization is growing and broadening out each year, and the officers have still other plans up their sleeve to spring during the fall and winter.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cashman have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the loss of his son Henry A., who died suddenly shortly before midnight aged about 17 years. The young man was about as usual Friday and apparently in the best of health. Shortly before midnight he was taken with an attack of heart failure and soon passed away.

Boston police officers are being made to dig down into their keans and fish out a dollar before they are allowed inside of the aviation grounds. Up to Friday they were admitted on showing their badge. Then Detective Burnes who has charge of the police work at the field issued orders that they could not enter without a ticket. Even Chief Watts was forced to give up his dollar to get onto the field.

Miss Corlew's school of dancing and deportment will open Saturday afternoon, October 8, in Brazee's hall Wollaston. The beginners class will be held from 2 until 4, and the advanced class from 4 to 6 o'clock. The matrons for the classes are: Mrs. Wyman H. Streeter, Mrs. Frank C. Blake, Mrs. Clinton Jones, Mrs. Geo. Richardson, Mrs. Samuel Couch, Mrs. C. Bruce Wetmore, Mrs. Walter G. Crowell, Miss Clara E. G. Thayer, Mrs. Everett Simmons and Mrs. Lora L. Merrill.

It was decided at a meeting at Brockton last night that the Bay State basket ball league should include teams from Quincy, Brockton, Randolph, Hyde Park, Charlestown and Attleboro, the last town being admitted in place of Stoughton. The schedule will begin Nov. 22. All the Quincy games will be played on Wednesday evenings. The Quincy color will be red and white. Referees have been elected, and amateur rules will be in force.

Sunday is the date for the annual rendezvous of yachts of Massachusetts in Hull bay, and parade to Boston. The preparatory gun will be fired at 2.15. It will be a pretty sight.

MISS LUCRETIA PIERCE.

The funeral service of Miss Lucretia A. Pierce was held in Bethany chapel yesterday afternoon at 2.30. Many of her life-long friends were present to pay their last earthly tribute to their sister. The service, which was conducted by Dr. Hardy, was simple and beautiful and very much in keeping with nature of the life which has just come to a close. A quartette composed of Mrs. E. C. Page soprano, Mrs. Edith Fitts, contralto, Mr. R. C. McNairn, tenor and Mr. John Green bass, rendered three selections: "Sometime we'll understand," "Looking this way," and "The Homeland."

The casket was covered with wreaths of asters and roses, each of which had a background of evergreen. Everything had about it an atmosphere of peace and serenity which was a constant reminder of the one who has just passed on.

Miss Pierce has always been a sort of ministering angel not only among her friends, but toward all who were in need. At the time of the terrible railroad disaster near the Dimmock street bridge she rendered invaluable services at the City Hospital. Although not a mother, this good woman has mothered two generations of children; as Dr. Hardy said, and all children of the vicinity were frequent visitors at the little white house. In fact she devoted her whole life to smoothing over the rough places for other people, Just a few days before her death she was at the bedside of her friend, Miss Ellen Hersey, fulfilling her last wishes.

Miss Pierce lived in Quincy all her life and for many years has been in the house on Revere road. She was a member of the first class which entered the Quincy high school in 1852. Two brothers Charles E. and George L. Pierce, both of Boston, are the only survivors of the family.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

Vol. 25 No. 211 QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 12, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

RECORD BREAKING ATTRACTION

People Come from All Over New England and Are Fascinated by the Sport

Secretary of Navy Meyers Among The Distinguished Guests

The number of people who witnessed the birdmen in Quincy on Saturday has been largely under-estimated by the Boston press. If there wer 50,000 inside the field, there were over 100,000 on Quincy soil outside the field and 50,000 more in Dorchester, Savin Hill, South Boston, and upon the boats in Dorchester bay. Probably the management is not anxious to advertise the fact that so many have a free show, but from a half mile to a mile from the grand stand there was a semi circle two miles long which was black with humanity, extending from Squantum Head to the Neponset bridges. Ten people to each linear foot would give a total of over 100,000, and that is a low estimate of the number of people in Ward Six of Quincy outside the field. Not only the beach and Squantum street were crowded, but the hills of Squantum, Mosswetussett hill, the upland and woods to the west, the Metropolitan parkway for a long distance in both directions, Atlantic street, and all the streets and estates in that vicinity. Everything considered the railroad, the street railway and the motor boats handled the crowd well, but the carriage men carried large numbers also and reaped a harvest.

All the street railway lines leading into City Square felt the rush of people toward the Aviation field at noon, and from then until after 3 o'clock there were crowds in City Square at all times. Before 5 o'clock the crowd turned homeward and there were busy times until 8 P. M.

EVENTS AT MEET.

During the afternoon Ralph Johnstone was in the air over two hours establishing a new record for duration. He also travelled around the course over 62 miles, which is a new record for the Quincy course. Several times he fooled the people and made them think he was going to alight on the get away, by flying very low, or making a deep bow, but he kept persistently around the course, at timees at great altitude.

Grahame-White was up twice for duration and distance in his Farman biplane which was wrecked the day before, and was a favorite. One time he travelled 7 miles in 10 minutes, 24 seconds, and the other time 27 miles. During the latter flight he also tried for altitude and ascended 2500 feet. He was in the air an hour and 12 minutes.

Walter Brookins tried for altitude at the same time and his instrument recorded over a mile, or 5300 feet, which is also a new record for Quincy. He was up 55 minutes.

SPEED CONTESTS.

Three entered the speed event during the afternoon, Grahame-White making the course three times in 6 m., 37s; Curtiss in 6 m., 42 2-5s; and Willard in 8m., 7 3-5s.

Glenn Curtiss tried for the getaway prize but his record was 145 ft., 7 in. For accuracy he landed on top of the flag but went 110 ft. 11 in. beyond.

Brookins established a new record for acuracy—12 ft., 1 in., on skids, which is a world's record.

Brookin was the only one to try bomb dropping and with one bomb scored 5 points.

The high easterly wind was not favorable for a flight to Boston light. It also made it decidedly chilly for the people about sunset.

It is probable that the meet will be continued on Wednesday and Thursday, and possibly for the whole week. Today many of the Quincy stores closed at noon, and there is another large attendance at Squantum.

There is certainly something very fascinating about aviation. It took 20 special trains on Saturday to convey the crowd from Boston, and 25 to get them back. Never before was the big South Terminal so crowded with people as that day.

BUT FEW ACCIDENTS.

Very few accidents have occurred in the vicinity of the Aviation, but there was one quite serious one Saturday afternoon when a horse attached to a two-seated carriage runaway on Squantum street not far from the entrance and landed in the salt marsh on the side. The street was crowded at the time with automobiles, carriages and people, and several people were knocked down. Some were forced onto the marsh and were pinned down by the carriages. Mounted officer Phillips and others rescued Miss Jennie Prentiss of 39 Howard street, Lynn, who was badly shaken up, but no bones were broken. Mrs. F. H. Shackley of Everett who sustained a fracture and dislocation of the collar bone. Charles E. Peverly of Stewart street, Lynn, who was cut about the head and face, but not seriously. A man who gave his name as Rouillard of Quincy had a dislocated shoulder and numerous abrasions. The injured were taken in the new Police ambulance to the hospital on the field.

SCHOOLMATES AS BEARERS

Funeral of Henry A. Cashman Largely Attended

The popularity of Henry A. Cashman, the 17 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cashman of West Quincy, who died at Houghs Neck on Friday of heart failure, was attested this morning when funeral services were very largely attended.

Prayers were held at his late residence on Cross street followed by the Gregorian mass of requiem at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, celebrated by Rev. Fr. Duffy. Miss Mary McKay was organist, and the regular choir sung. Mr. M. J. Donovan of Concord, N. H., rendered De Profundis after the elevation and Mr. John Mahan Tremann's Factus at Libera.

Inside the rail were Rev. Peter Roman of St. Peters church at Dorchester, and Rev. John J. Coan of St. John's church at Quincy. Mayor Shea and other city officials were present.

The burial was in the family lot at St. Marys cemetery where Rev. J. J. Coan was assisted by Rev. Peter Roman.

Young Cashman was a pupil at St. Johns preparatory school at Danvers in charge of the Xaverian Brothers, and Brother Benjamin and Brother Peter were present with eight of his schoolmates who acted as pall bearers. E. L. Bean was the funeral director.

OVERCOME BY GASES

Exalted Ruler of Elks in Precarious Condition

Quincy lodge of Elks is deeply concerned for the welfare of their exalted ruler, William Coleman who was overcome with gases and acid on Sunday. Mr. Coleman is superintendent of the Bradley Superhosphate Works at North Weymouth, and there was a fire at the works Saturday night which required his best efforts. While in the thickest of it he was overcome, and has been in a precarious condition since.

Although a resident of Weymouth he has a large acquaintance in this city, and is popular with all. They hope for his speedy recovery. Dr. Reardon is attending him.

Paris—Four years ago Santos-Dumont at Bagatelle made the first aeroplane flight ever seen in Europe. Next year French aeroplane manufacturers expect to sell 11,000 machines.

DIRECT NOMINATIONS

Question Will Not be Submitted in Senatorial District

Those who started the petitions for direct nomination of candidates for senator in this district met with little encouragement, and the question will not be submitted to the voters this year. Over 1000 signatures were required in the First Norfolk district and the Board of Registrars of Quincy certified but 34 names.

In only three senatorial districts were the required number of names received—the Third Bristol, the Fourth Essex, and the Second Middlesex.

In 13 Representative districts the question will also be submitted, the only one in this county being the Ninth Norfolk, which includes Randolph, Sharon and Stoughton.

Haverhill is the only city from which enough signatures have been received to have the question of direct nominations referred to all the voters of the place. Over 50 towns have already filed petitions which will give them the right of the referendum.

London special quotes J. B. Moissant, the aviator, as saying: "In five years aeroplanes will be flying across the Atlantic in 24 hours. In less than two years there will be a monoplane, with an engine of 200 horse-power, thrusting the machine through the air at 100 miles an hour. We shall then be able to laugh at contrary gusts of wind. By then aeroplanes will no longer be flimsy structures. It will be the flimsy structures. It will be the era of the metal aeroplane."

There are a great many people who recall the famous "yellow-day" but how many remembered that it occurred twenty-nine years ago last Tuesday, or in other words Sept. 6th, 1881. Men and things on that fearsome day took on a sickly greenish yellow tinge and the end of the world was thought to be at hand. The old globe is still jogging along however and has witnessed many wonderful changes and great progress since then. When the year 1981 rolls around there will be progress and development yet undreamed of in all lines of endeavor.

Although the admission fees for the great aviation meet at Atlantic are rather high, it is a poor man's show for all that, because the air ships when once off ground in good shape are visible for miles and any person blessed with average eyesight can see them free of charge. The meet is attracting thousands of spectators but there are few of them as yet who have expressed any desire to take a trip with the aviators.

It is to be hoped that with all the other interests which the coming of September has brought that the site for the new court house is still receiving consideration and the outcome will be the selection of the right place for it.

Architecturally the finest site in the whole city is on Coddington boulevard facing the Public Library grounds as it would seem in a measure to carry out the idea of a civic centre and a grouping of public buildings.

The next in favor, and which would also carry out the civic centre idea, is on Washington street to the south of the Library. One of the largest and best of the lots offered is the Tisdale estate opposite Foster street.

Washington street seems to meet with favor from most every one but of course there are several things to be considered and those using the old court house would perhaps be in a position to know what is required for a building of this kind than the onlooker. The building should have plenty of light and air space and not be in a noisy location. yet it must necessarily be convenient of access to the railroad and trolley lines to be of use to the public.

Now that the population of Boston has been announced, the official figures for Quincy may be expected in a few days, and they will show a better percentage of gain than Boston. The new census gives Boston 670,585 which is a gain of 109,693 in ten years or 19 per cent. In the ten years from 1890 to 1900 the gain was 112,415 or 25 per cent. Boston continues to rank fourth in the country, the order being: New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburg, Detroit, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Newark, Washington, Jersey City, Kansas City, Indianapolis Providence and St. Paul.

HIGH PRICES DISCUSSED

Congressman Gillett Considers Their Relation to Tariff

THE LATTER IS NOT TO BLAME

Says High Prices Prevail In Free-Trade England as Well as Protectionist Germany—Rise Is World-Wide

Congressman Frederick H. Gillett of Springfield does not believe that the tariff is responsible for the general rise in prices. He has given the subject careful consideration, and in an interview which he has given to this newspaper states what he considers to be the actual causes for this world-wide phenomenon. What he has to say follows:

"The increased cost of living is an unpleasant fact which daily obtrudes itself into the home of every family and excites the query, what causes it? Our wide awake opponents have not overlooked such an opportunity. They know that a tariff law has a direct effect on the cost of some articles and that such a law has just been passed by a Republican congress and so with their wonted recklessness they proclaim that this new law causes the high prices.

"The average American does not have either time nor inclination to study anything so dull and technical as tariff schedules. He has been convinced in many political campaigns that a tariff does affect prices and wages and in the absence of any other obvious cause it would be natural for him to believe this bold and plausible Democratic statement. But he is intelligent and willing to hear both sides, and I am convinced that it will not require lengthy argument to satisfy him that this charge is as unfounded as many other Democratic campaign fairy tales, and that the revision of the tariff had no more to do with our high prices than had the recent comet.

The Tariff and Prices

"How is it that a tariff affects prices? It is because it provides that each one of the thousands of articles which it specifies shall, when imported from a foreign country, pay a certain tax before it can be taken from the custom house and offered for sale. Of course when the article comes to be sold the merchant has to charge his customer not only what he paid the foreigner for it but also in addition what he paid the custom house as a tax on it. So the tax increases by so much the price of the foreign article. It is claimed by free traders that such a tax not only increases the price of the foreign article but also increases by just so much the price of all similar articles made in this country. That claim we protectionists deny, but as it makes no difference on this cost of living question I am perfectly willing to admit just for the sake of argument that they are right, and still with that admission they cannot show on their own theory that the revision of the tariff contributed to the high cost of living.

"And why? Because on practically all articles of common use, the articles whose rise in price is complained of, the tax was either reduced or was not changed at all. If the duty had been raised on articles they could fairly claim on their theory that the raise of tariff raised its price, because the more tax the importer has to pay the custom house the more he would have to add to his selling price. But if there was no change in the tax, or if it had been reduced, that certainly did not cause the merchant to fix a higher price.

The Duties Were Reduced

"Now what did this revision of the tariff do in fixing the duties on the necessaries of life? If you read the long law through, schedule by schedule, you will find that it almost invariably reduced these duties or left them unchanged. I cannot take the time to quote the schedules and no one would read it if I did, but I make the deliberate statement, and no well informed Democrat will contradict me, that there are hardly any increases on necessaries of life and a vast number of decreases—and that proves beyond fair dispute that the rise in prices was not due to the tariff revision.

"The tax on wines and silks and many other luxuries was greatly increased, but these are not the articles we are now concerned with. On the articles of every day use there were very few increases and very many reductions. So if the tariff had any effect on prices it should have lowered and not increased them.

"Moreover, articles on which the tariff was greatly reduced and which should have gone down in price if it was the change of tarriff which was affecting prices, have advanced just as rapidly as the others. All duty was taken off of hides and the duty on shoes was reduced 60 percent and still they advanced in cost with everything else. Was it the tariff which caused it? Was it the reduction of duties which increased the price? Of course it could not have been. If it was, what tariff could possibly have sent prices down except a Democratic tariff, like the Wilson act, which would destroy industry and break all prices?

Gold Has Caused the Increase

"What then is the cause of this undeniable and disagreeable rise in prices if it is not the tariff law? Political economists give many different answers. Nearly all attribute much influence to the increased production of gold. As the measure of value grows more plentiful, they say, it is less desirable and will purchase less and less. Government inspection and the laws against adulteration compel food and meat to be better and so more expensive. Then the inevitable law of supply and demand always asserts itself. While our population multiplies rapidly it produces more luxuries like automobiles, and less hogs and beef and wheat, and so there is greater demand for the necessities and they climb in value.

"It is significant, too, that this rise in value is not confined to our country, as our tariff law is, but is as striking and unpopular in Europe as here, involves free trade England as well as protected France and Germany, so that some world wide current is obviously operating alike everywhere.

"And we must not forget that if we pay more for living in this country we in return get more. Our standard is not only vastly higher here than anywhere else, but is vastly higher here than it was a few years ago. The people eat more varied food, live in better houses, have more comforts and pleasures and resources than ever before. And while the wages here are much greater than anywhere else, the cost of living is not proportionately so great. Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, went abroad last year to study the conditions of the laboring man in other countries and in his report said:

Gompers on Labor Conditions

"'I believe I may assert that whether the cost of living in Europe or America is greater to the workingman depends entirely on the standard of living he adopts in America. If he voluntarily lives the life of self-denial in this country that he compulsorily lived in his native land, his outlay in money will remain about the same. Even then he will hardly be able to escape gaining something from the superior supply of the good things of life in America.'

"We do not wish the wage earner to live here as he does in his native land. We wish him to bring up his children here in a healthier, happier atmosphere. I hope the standard of living will still rise, and that not only the prosperity but the pleasure and happiness of each class may gradually increase. It cannot be done by legislation, but it may be hindered and delayed by legislation, and one of the surest steps is to mislead the people to believe that the present era of high prices is caused by a law which cannot possibly have produced that result."

Three of a Kind.

Duprez, the great but ill favored French tenor, was once walking from the Grand Opera House in Paris with the baritone Barollhet, who was not an Apollo either. They happened to meet Perrot, the dancer, a man of very great ability, but short and thin and so ugly that a manager once said he could never engage Perrot unless for the Jardin des Plantes (zoological gardens), as he engaged no monkeys.

Perrot told them the story, and when Duprez laughed at him Perrot said: "Why, surely you need not laugh. If I am ugly I am certainly not so ugly as either of you."

"You monkey," said Duprez, "this difference shall soon be settled." And, seeing a stranger pass who appeared to be a gentleman, "Monsieur," said he, "will you be so good as to arbitrate in a little difference of opinion between us?"

"With pleasure," said the stranger, "if I can."

"Well," said Duprez, "just look at us and say whom you consider to be the ugliest of the three."

The gentleman looked for some time from one to the other and then said, "Gentlemen, I give it up; I cannot possibly decide," and went away roaring with laughter.

Better Late Than Not at All.

The pastor of the little country church had been much annoyed by having the members of his congregation straggle in long after the service had begun. One Sunday morning, when he felt that further forbearance with this fault was impossible, he decided to rebuke some conspicuous offender. About twenty minutes later than the proper hour there entered a mild mannered little woman, one of the regular attendants of the church, but quite incorrigible in her tardiness. The minister looked up, fixed her with his spectacles and remarked:

"Sister, you are very much behind time. I hope you will not be so late in getting into heaven."

The little woman looked up, smiled sweetly and without a trace of confusion replied placidly:

"I shan't care about that, doctor, so long as I get there."

And now the pastor feels that the smile that went round the church somehow spoiled the effectiveness of his reprimand.—New York Tribune.

(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY !?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

LOTS OF LAND

overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

THE QUINCY AVIATION MEET

Editors All Over the World Discussing Its Lessons

All the newspapers are commenting on the Aviation meet at Quincy and the possibilities of the aeroplanes. We quote a few:

BEYOND HUMAN SCOPE.

The Dedham Transcript says: "The very handsome prizes offered at the Harvard aviation meet at Squantum, are bringing out the most skilled aviators in the world. While it is rather startling to think of flying throught the air as a means of locomotion, it is by no means beyond our power of reasoning, as recent events have shown us that the day of flying machines is at hand. This great meet will sucessfully do away with all scoffing at air flying, and scoffers will now be relegated to the dusty shelves, with those who scoffed at the steamboat and at the automobile. The limit to which human ingenuity may go is entirely beyond human scope."

NEVER EXPECTED TO SEE.

The Stoughton Sentinel says: "If you have not been to Squantum to see the bird men fly you owe it to yourself to do so before this meet is over for the event marks an era in the advance of the times. To see these big bird machines start with their whirr of mortor and propellor, to see them run along the ground on their bicycle wheels for a few score of feet and then to see them gracefully, easily leave the ground, point up into the air and then to soar away on the wings of a dove is a sight that most of us had never expected to see and that even when one does he is almost constrained to doubt the evidences of his eye sight. Higher and higher mounts the big machine as it circles so swiftly around the courses now way out over the harbor then turning and circling directly over the grandstand until we are looking at the bottom of the craft and see the driver directly over our heads. Then the descent is so easy and so graceful. Up in the air one, two or three hundred feet soar the bird men suddenly the motor stops, the machine dips down at an angle of from thirty to forty-five degrees and down on an incline she floats for all the world like a boy coasting down hill. When about twenty or thirty feet from the ground the direction changes and the machine flits like a swallow along the ground and gradually, gracefully and easily drops till the wheels touch the sod and then runs a few feet to the stop. It is all so easy and so pretty that one is astounded and entranced with the beauty and grace of it all."

VICTORY OVER FEAR.

Christian Science Monitor says: "Feats at the Massachusetts aero meet are impressive testimonials of man's progress toward complete mastery of the upper atmosphere, but more significant than all else is the victory over the sense of fear that makes these flights possible. Fear is practise that brought near-perfection fractise that brought near-perfection of control. Hardly less signficant is the success of the "bomb-dropping" experiments that are demolishing the structure of disbelief which still ranks the warship ahead of the aeroplane as a means of offense and defense. The missiles repeatedly hit vulnerable places on the target while the airships sweep over at railroad speed. Regardless of this evidence that a battleship would be disposed of with scant ceremony by a fleet of aerial flyers, it is yet too early to expect any general modification of the international policy of increasing navies. Beliefs cling strongly and nations, like individuals, are slow to accept new methods that mean radical departures from long-established customs. Nevertheless, the airship no longer can be laughed away or surpassed in importance by any type of fighting vessel."

FOR PLEASURE AND WAR.

The Lynn Item says: "Wilbur Wright, who should be a good authority in such matters, says that aeroplanes will never become useful for commercial purposes. Their use will be confined to pleasure and war purposes. While Wright may be correct in a general way, he is probably too conservative. The use of the automobile was largely for pleasure, or for rapid transit in business operations, when it first came into popularity, but since then it has been found invaluable for heavy teaming, as well as for lighter work. This may be the case with the aeroplane as it is developed. It will be popular as a means of recreation for the wealthy who can afford the large expense which is involved in aviation. According to Wright, its only other use will be as an instrument of war. General Miles, who has been a witness of the aerial stunts at Squantum, favors the building of a fleet of aeroplanes, which would cost no more than single battleship, and have them ready as a defense should a foreign foe attempt to approach our shores. A recent issue of a popular magazine a story appears, having for its principal feature, the flight of a war aeroplane over the camp of an enemy that was concealed behind a ridge. The biplane contained the pilot and engineer who made a map of the enemy's position. The men-birds were discovered and fired at, but escaped unharmed. The engineer uses the flag signal code to inform a cavalry force where it could strike effectively. The enemy sends a biplane aloft to attack the daring scouts and the two machines collide in the air, and fall to the ground as shapeless wrecks. The engineer survives long enough to turn over his precious map of the position the other side of the ridge. It is a fanciful account, and yet it is within the bounds of possibility. There is small fear that a situation will ever be reached like the one pictured, but Wright sees it in the dim future, and it may yet come to pass. Grahame-White believes that it will be possible to construct a machine of sufficient power to carry a large load of passengers across the Atlantic. If that can be done, why not the carrying of merchandise? The question of expense is the principal objection, and it is quite probable that the aeroplane can never be brought to the point of utility, where it can be made to pay for commercial uses.

TRAVELLING STAFF COMING.

The Knights of Malta are making preparation to receive the "travelling staff" at their next meeting. The "staff" consists of a contrivance in the shape of a Maltese cross, on which are hung jewels and emblems by the various commanderies which it visits throughout the state. It started from the Lynn commandery three years ago and is due to reutrn in about another year after having been for a short period of time in the custody of every commandery in Massachusetts.

The occasion of leaving the staff with a commandery is made an enthusiastic one, visiting knights being present from other commanderies. Each commandery on receiving the staff has a jewel made and placed on it, along with those of other commanderies. The jewel usually takes the form of some token which will indicate the city which has placed it on. Brockton Commandery, for instance, attached a shoe. The design for the Quincy commandery has not yet been decided upon. The staff with its numerous emblems is now a costly affair, representing thousands of dollars. It is intended to serve as a visitor between the various commanderies, being always accompanied by a large number of knights.

☞Readers will be glad to know that the new serial story to appear in the Ledger will be by that favorite writer Gen. Charles King and the story, "Lanier of the Cavalry." It is absorbingly interesting and the opening chapters should not be missed.

HOT TIME AT OUTING

Quincy Police Scoop In Several Boston Politicians

The Timilty club of Roxbury will have to find a new field for their activities if public opinion has any influence. The crowd that came out for their picnic Sunday kept the police force busy all the afternoon and in the early part of the evening. Officer Cahill received an injury in the eye, and Officers Duane and Goodhue were fortunate to escape without severe wounds.

Practically all the picnickers were drunk, and not a few were in fighting mood. Michael F. Spillane was terribly lacerated on the forehead and nose as a result of being the target for two or three beer bottles. He was rendered unconscious and City Physician Hallowell was summoned by the police officer to bind up the wounds.

John Curtin gave more trouble than any other individual. His case will be brought up tomorrow.

This morning at the court session eleven men were fined $15 apiece for drunkenness. All were quite docile, owing to the sobering influence of a night in the police station. Some objections were made when Judge Avery imposed the fine, but all of them subsided without much need of persuasion on the part of the officers in charge.

The officers who made the arrests said that the debauch was the wildest they had ever seen in Quincy, and no little excitement was aroused not only in the vicinity of Mosquito woods where the revel took place but also in City Square. On the way home the result of thirty kegs and an indefinite number of bottles of liquor became apparent, and one would have imagined that a Fourth of July celebration was in progress from the amount of noise and general disturbance.

Rjktfli SG

John Curtin and John Whelan who gave their age as sixteen, will be tried in the juvenile court tomorrow morning. Curtin is charged with drunkenness, disorderly conduct, and assault on an officer. He was the one that closed Officer Cahill's eye. Whelan is charged with drunkenness and disturbance of the peace.

One of the ward heelers from Roxbury, named Fay, paid the fines of four men and they were released at noon. The other seven are detained and will be locked up again unless they can get bail.

The new auto partol proved a great asset, for it was able to make the three trips which were necessary in the time the old one could have made one. On the way back from the first trip, three men were taken from one of the electric cars, Whelan and Curtin, the two juveniles and William Osborn who was hitting those in the seat in front of him on the car. Osborn was fined $15 for drunkenness and $25 for disturbance of the peace. He appealed and was released under bonds for $400 which were deposited by Fay.

Police force proved its efficiency in this case if it never did before, and Quincy has reason to be proud of its officers.

The whole affair was doubly disgraceful since it came on Sunday, and the last will not be heard of it when the cells are emptied at the police station. When it is found out who is responsible for getting the picnic here, forcible measures will be taken to see that a similar affair shall never occur again. It is to be regretted that Quincy has such a place that will encourage the worst element of Boston.

It is to be hoped that the proper authorities will push this matter through to the end, and will be able to wipe out the influences which have motivated the coming of such a body of disreputable and undesirable people.

HAND INJURED.

At the factory of the Eastern Rug Company on Granite street this morning Albert Ackerstrom, son of Andrew Ackerstrom of 162 Granite street had his left hand seriously injured by being caught in a machine. Dr. Jones found it necessary to take ten stitches.

VCAATION EXPERIENCES

Several Speak of Them from Religious Standpoint

The annual vacation religious experience meeting of Bethany church was held Sunday evening. A number of the members spoke very interestingly of their summer outings. Carle R. Hayward told about the Sagamore Institute, and spoke of the growth of this resort as a convention centre. Miss Jessie Pratt spoke for Silver Bay and E. S. Beckford and Deacon Simeon Scammell related Northfield experiences. Mr. N. Corthell, who had been up the Kennebec river, gave an account of his impressions there.

Theophilus King spoke in his usual interesting manner of perigrinations in Maine and Deacon R. D. Chase referred to experiences in and out of church among the hills of New Hampshire. Phillips Hardy told about his visit to the famous shrine of Saint Anne de Beau Pre.

Clarence Fuller spoke with deep feeling of his communion with nature in the Franconia Notch, where nature can be best appreciated, and where the hand of the Omnipotent has been at work chiselling the features of the famous Profile and hollowing out the Flume.

CONGRESSMAN TIRRELL'S WILL.

Leaving $1000 to Dartmouth college to be used for the development of athletics, the fund to be known as the Tirrell athletic scholarship, the will of the late Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell of Natick was filed for probate last week.

The will is dater June1, 1907, and the estate is valued at $103,000, $100,000 of which is personal.

To the trustees of donations for the Protestant Episcopal church diocese of Massachusetts he leaves $5000, the income to be given to St. Paul's Episcopal church in Natick.

To the town of Weymouth he leaves his library, to be known as the Norton T. Tirrell memorial. The sum of $1000 is left to the town to buy books for the library.

He leaves $1000 to the grand lodge of Odd Fellows for the entertainment of the officers of other orders. To David I. Robinson, Rev. William Full, James Hicks, all three past grand worthy trustees of the grand temple of honor, he leaves $1000, the income to be used for assisting and starting subordinate temples.

HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Mrs. Oscar Crocker of Braintree was injured in an automobile accident at Hingham on Sunday afternoon. She was riding with Charles M. Moulton and family and when their car crashed into the car of Philemon D. Warren of Boston, Mrs. Crocker jumped out. Her left arm was broken and she was hurt internally. Mrs. Moulton was also thrown out. None of the others were injured.

BOOKINGS AT A PREMIUM

Tourists Find It Difficult to Get Away From England

London, Sept. 12.—At all the Atlantic shipping line offices in this city there are stationed messengers commissioned by marooned Americans to bring them the very first news of any cancelled bookings.

Clerks at leading hotels who have brought together holders of tickets able to defer their home-going and tourists urgently pressed to return have made handsome commissions from both buyer and seller, while the latter has made as much as three or four times the original cost of his ticket.

Twenty thousand people, it is estimated, are still without accommodations, and meetings of indignation are almost a constant thing in the big hotels.

HONEY IN CHURCH SPIRE

Hubbardston Folks Expect to Get Good Sized Farm Wagon Load

Hubbardston, Mass., Sept. 12.—Work will be started this week in extracting the hundreds of pounds of honey that are said to be in the spire of the Hubbardston Unitarian church, which all summer has been the hive of swarms of bees.

In the belfry of the church there is said to be so much honey that a good sized farm wagon will be too small to carry it away.

A few days ago an investigation was started and the real truth of the existence of the honey, that is supposed to weigh 1200 pounds, was discovered.

BRIEFS

N. Phillips Hardy has entered Thayer Academy.

The opening session of Christ Church Sunday school will be held on Sunday, Sept. 18, at the usual hour.

It is estimated that the automobiles inside the field at the aviation meet on Saturday were worth $2,000,000.

The street railway should run more cars between Quincy and Atlantic during the afternoon of Aviation week.

Have you one of those handy little timetables which the Granite Bank is distributing free to any one who will call for one?

Dick Fitsimmons, the popular clerk at Walsh's drug store on Water street, is spending his vacation in and about New York city.

Miss Cathryn Black of Glencoe place returned on the S. S. Saxonia Thursday after spending a very pleasant time with realtives and friends in different parts of Scotland.

Wollaston Unitarian church reopened Sunday when H. Houghton Schumacher of this city, a student at Harvard Divinity school preached. Rev. Carl Horst pastor of the church is still in Europe.

The Church Helpers of the Wollaston Unitarian church begins another season of meetings on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock when Mrs. Carl G. Horst will be the hostess.

Marden W. Hayward of Goffe street is with a Colorado mining company in the position of inspector. A few weeks ago he was among the Blacvk Hills of South Dakota and at last reports was inspecting a mine in Arizona.

It would be well for those who have been named by the Mayor as election officers to bear in mind that if they are candidates at the coming caucuses for delegates to any of the conventions that they can not serve as election officers at the caucus.

The street railway is using a new form of transfer during Aviation week. Going toward Squantum a red colored transfer with the date printed across the face in large letters is given, and coming from Squantum a green colored transfer is given to all Quincy transfer points.

Among the arrivals at the Greenleaf Saturday were: O. B. Austin, Hartford, Conn.; Joseph Caulfield, Worcester; J. A. Crary, Chicago; A. Levin, New York city; Gustave A. Reise and A. Fred Winter both of Philadelphia.

Ernest E. Sodergren of Hunt street is to be a candidate for the City Council from Ward Six at the coming election. Mr. Sodergen has been a resident of the ward for six or seven years and has always taken an interest in the welfare of the city, particularly his own ward, serving on the ward committee of which he is at present secretary. His many friends wish him success at the coming election.

HUB RETAINS FIFTH PLACE

Census Bureau Announces Population of 670,585

INCREASE OF 19.6 PERCENT

With Suburbs Included, Making Territory Equal to That of Philadelphia, New England Metropolis Would Have Well Above a Million Inhabitants—Gaining on St. Louis, Her Chief Rival For Many Years

Boston, Sept. 12.—The city of Boston contains 670,585 people. These are the official figures as given out in Washington by Director Durand of the census bureau. It is an increase of about 19.6 percent since the last census of 1900.

Boston easily retains her position as fifth largest city in the United States. She is surpassed only by New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The chief rival of Boston in growth for many years has been St. Louis. The population of St. Louis is 687,029. During the last ten years Boston gained slightly on St. Louis, beating her 2 percent.

Boston men point out that the tendency of Boston for years has been a movement toward the suburban districts for residential purposes and that the real magnitude of this city is not indicated by the 1910 census report. Taking this fact into consideration, general satisfaction is expressed over the growth of the New England capital.

While corporate Boston, with thirty-eight square miles of area, retains its rank as fifth among American cities, it must be understood that its closely built up and contiguous environs, covering an area equal to Philadelphia, and which are not included in the figures given, will show at the same ratio of increase a population of 1,177,695.

If compared with the sixty-one square miles of St. Louis it will be found that Boston and contiguous environs has a population of 947,902, or 260,873 in excess of St. Louis.

Although Boston does not wrest fourth place from St. Louis, the western city's lead of 14,346 in 1900 is increased only to 16,444, in spite of the fact that the area of St. Louis is 61 1-3 square miles, as compared with only 38.2 for Boston.

The percentage of increase shown by Boston fully measures up to the normal healthy growth of cities, especially eastern cities, during the past decade. In percentage of growth Boston easily maintains its position among the vigorous cities of the country.

As compared with her 19.6 percent of increase St. Louis, her next highest rival, increased 19.4 percent; Pittsburg increased 18.2 percent; Philadelphia increased 19.7 percent; Buffalo 20.2 percent; Cincinnati 11.8 percent; New Haven 23.7, and New York, whose growth was enormous, increased 38.7 percent.

The figures given out give simply the population of Boston proper. Her numerous populous suburbs, cities such as Hyde Park, Cambridge, Somerville, Brookline, Quincy, Chelsea and many others properly constituting a part of "Greater Boston," are not included in these figures.

With her new honors attaching to a population of 670,585 Boston leaps forward in the list of the largest cities of the world. She moves up from the twenty-ninth city of the world to the twenty-fifth city. Boston passes Bangkok, Manchester, Eng.; Brussels and Cairo, and now ranks among the cities of the earth next below Liverpool.

NINE LABORERS KILLED

Ten Others Seriously Injured When Great Rock Falls Upon Them

New York, Sept. 12.—Nine laborers were killed outright and ten others injured, one of them critically, and all of them seriously, in the collapse of an overhanging shoulder of rock from above the western mouth of the old Erie tunnel under Bergen hill, connecting the Erie terminal in Jersey City with its westward division.

The collapse was directly beneath the edge of the Hudson boulevard, which at that point runs along the inner line of Bergen hill.

Director Harris Sworn In

Washington, Sept. 12.—Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, formerly chief of the technologic branch of the geological survey, took the oath of office as director of the new bureau of mines. He entered upon his duties immediately.

Storm Delays Target Practice

Washington, Sept. 12.—The battle target practice of the Atlantic fleet, which was scheduled to begin today in the southern drill grounds, will be delayed one day and possibly longer by a southern storm.

Boy Killed by Elevator

Boston, Sept. 12.—Andrew Smith, 12 years old, was crushed to death between the floor and the roof of an elevator in the barn owned by P. O'Riordan in Charlestown last evening.

PRESIDENT TO GIVE CABINET HOUSE PARTY

Will Be a Continuous Session For Three Days

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 12.—The president and cabinet will hold their first meeting in two months in Washington on Sept. 24. The cabinet will be in practically continuous session throughout the 24th, 25th and 26th, and during the three-day period they will be the guests of Mr. Taft in the White House. This is the first cabinet house party ever given by a president.

Emphatic denial was made here of a report sent out from Washington that Secretary Ballinger of the interior department would not be present. He has already been invited to be a member of the house party. The president's friends here say Mr. Taft is still standing by the secretary of the interior, and that Ballinger has no idea of resigning. Every member of the cabinet will be at the special meetings in Washington.

HUNDRED THOUSAND IN LINE

Catholics Participate In Great Religious Pageant In Montreal

Montreal, Sept. 12.—A religious pageant closed the twenty-first international Eucharistic congress.

Visitors from the United States were especially impressed with the magnitude, splendor and reverence of the procession, which marched four miles through the city streets, the host at its head.

A modest estimate is that about 100,000 were in line and that 500,000 viewed it. It took the long and brilliant file four and a half hours to pass city hall. Cardinal Vannutelli marched at the head of the procession himself, carrying the host. Organized choirs sang in Latin, French and English. Bands scattered here and there rendered devotional music.

DOUBTS JAMES MESSAGE

British Scientist Holds That Communication Is Non-Evidential

London, Sept. 12.—Sir Oliver Lodge, to whose attention was called the alleged communication from the late Prof. William James through a medium, writes:

"I find the asserted message to be entirely non-evidential. It might emanate from anybody, and it is quite absurd for the recipients to publish a thing of that character."

Serum Cures Lockjaw

Orange, N. J., Sept. 12.—A victory was registered for tetanus antitoxine at the Memorial hospital when William Kelly, aged 12, was discharged as cured after hovering for weeks between life and death with lockjaw.

Cookery Points

After using a gas stove for baking leave the oven open for a little while to allow the gas to escape. This will prevent sweating and rusting.

If chops and small steaks are placed in tin pie plates and set on top of the broiling grate they can be well cooked, and the tin plates will be much easier cleaned than the broiler grate would be.

Keep the range black by wringing out a sponge kept for the purpose in warm water and rubbing well with soap. Wash the stove while it is not warm. It can thus be kept black and free from grease spots.

Use the oven lighter for articles needing long, slow cooking—as, for example, tapioca and Indian puddings, bread, pies, etc. It will give a slow, even heat when used alone and burn much less gas.

Gas may be saved by remembering that matches are cheap and turning off the gas the moment you no longer need it—by turning off the gas a little before the cooking is done and finishing by the heat already generated.

When anything you have been cooking has been heated to the boiling point turn the blaze low enough to keep the heat just at that point.

Cream Dainty.

One cupful of milk, two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, a heaping tablespoonful of powered gelatin, a quarter pint of water, a teaspoonful lemon juice, a cupful whipping cream, three yolks of eggs, three ounces of preserved ginger, two tablespoonfuls of ginger sirup. Put the gelatin into a saucepan with the water. Set in a warm place until dissolved. Beat up the yolks, add to them the sugar and milk, boiling; pour this back into a pitcher, stand the pitcher in boiling water and stir the custard until it coats the spoon; add to it the gelatin, lemon juice and ginger sirup. Whip up the cream until stiff, then add to it the custard. Allow this to stand until it is almost set. Then stir in the ginger cut in small pieces. Pour into a wet mold and put in a cool place until firm. Turn out and decorate with cut pieces of ginger.

Marshmallow Cream.

One-fourth box gelatin, one-half cup cold water, one-half cup boiling water, whites of four eggs, one cup granulated sugar, one teaspoonful vanilla, one teaspoonful lemon extract. Soak gelatin in the cold water five minutes, add the boiling water and place over a teakettle until thoroughly dissolved. Cool, but do not chill. Stir the sugar in the dissolved gelatin, beat the white of the eggs very light and to the eggs add the gelatin and sugar, a few spoonfuls at a time, beating constantly. Divide in two parts and to one part add pink coloring and flavor with vanilla. To the white part add the lemon extract. Mold in layers, adding pecan nuts to the pink part and marschino cherries to the white part. May be served with or without whipped cream.

Coffee Blancmange.

One cupful of milk, one cupful of strong, clear coffee, two ounces of cornstarch, two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract, one heaping tablespoonful of butter. Put the coffee and half of the milk in a saucepan to heat. Mix the cornstarch smoothly with the remainder of the milk and add to it the hot liquid in the saucepan. Stir over the fire till boiling and boil slowly for eight minutes, stirring all the time. Add the sugar, butter, vanilla and mix well. Pour into a wet mold and turn out when cold.

Particularly Good French Dressing.

Mix a half teaspoonful salt and the same amount of sugar in a bowl; add gradually, stirring all the time, one cupful olive oil. When salt and sugar are dissolved beat in half a gill of vinegar. Add four red chills, eight green chills and half an onion, all chopped very fine. Beat all together and add a tablespoonful minced parsley. Beat again and pour into a can. Let stand an hour before serving. When ready to serve shake in the jar or whip with an egg beater.

When Frying Bacon.

In so many households bacon and eggs is the most popular breakfast dish that more than one housewife may be glad of a tip concerning the bacon's preparation.

If the bacon is too salt (and it is, indeed, sometimes) place a little water in the pan in which you intend frying it. Let the water come to a boil, then pour the water off and cook the bacon in the usual manner.

Not only does this method do away with the saltiness, but it renders the bacon more tender as well.

Deodorized Cabbage.

A piece of stale bread, a small lump of soda or a piece of charcoal placed in the pot will lessen the disagreeable odor that arises when cooking cauliflower or cabbage.

An appetizing lettuce salad is made by arranging the leaves in a salad bowl, sprinkling with stuffed olives cut in slices and just before serving adding a mayonnaise dressing.

Anybody can wash clothes.

All that is required is soap, (preferably Lenox Soap), water, tubs, a boiler and a wringer.

But there are easy ways and hard ways of doing the work.

The easy way is the best way. It gives the best results—for the laundress and for the clothes.

The easy way is described on the inside of the wrapper which surrounds every cake of Lenox Soap.

Four Chinamen Found In Car From Canadian Border

TRANSPORTED ON BALED HAY

Had to Be Provided With Nourishment Before Being Removed to Station House—Journey to New York From New Haven, to Which Place Car Was Consigned, Would Have Been Easily Accomplished

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 12.—Charged with attempting to evade the immigration laws, four Chinamen were dragged out of a freight car full of baled hay Sunday afternoon by the local police.

They are being held here until Assistant District Attorney Lewis of Boston determines what action the United States authorities will take.

The discovery of the Chinamen was due to Munroe Bodurtha, who, while going through the Boston and Maine freight yards, heard faint cries for water.

He summoned Officer Twohig, and they broke open the car. Out tumbled four Chinamen so weak they could hardly stand and nourishment had to be provided before steps were taken toward removing them to the police station.

The car from which the Chinese were taken was consigned to M. E. Monahan, New Haven, and was loaded in Burke, N. Y., near the Canadian line. Once in New Haven, the shipping of the Chinamen to New York would have been easy.

Ham, bread, crackers and ginger snaps were found in the car, and an empty jug, which had contained water. The four men were packed close to the top of the car, there being about a foot leeway between the roof and the bales of hay. They had evidently been in the car several days.

One Chinaman, Moy Dep, has a certificate issued in 1893 in Chicago purporting to show that he was a citizen of the country before the exclusion laws of 1892 were passed, that he was about to leave the country and that he was entitled to return.

Moy Dep also has a certificate for for Moy Tan Sue, but the accompanying photograph does not resemble any of Moy Dep's companions.

ROOSEVELT AND BOLLIVER

Presidential Movement in Behalf of Insurgents Is Started

Washington, Sept. 12.—Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican presidential nomination in 1912, with United States Senator Dolliver of Iowa as second choice, is the program which is taking shape in the west, according to information just received by party leaders in Washington.

The movement for an insurgent presidential ticket was started in Nebraska. The progressive leaders of that state are behind it and they propose to use the same machinery by which Nebraska sent a delegation to the Republican national convention in Chicago in 1908 pledged to the nomination of Mr. Taft for the presidency.

It is understood the movement has gained enough force that the nucleus of a Roosevelt-Dolliver league is being formed to carry on the fight throughout the state.

TO RESTORE HARMONY

Patterson Resigns as Democratic Nominee For Governor of Tennessee

Nashville, Sept. 12.—In a signed statement, Governor Patterson resigns his candidacy as the nominee for re-election and turns the matter back to the Democratic party.

Governor Patterson's statement is addressed "To the Democrats of Tennessee." After asserting that he became a candidate against his best judgment and that unforeseen circumstances have arisen which "appear to make my further candidacy an injustice both to my friends and the Democratic party," the statement says that he yields to enemies because the party is split by "foul slanders." He acts, he says, in order to bring his opponents back to the fold and forestall defeat at the polls.

ENGINEERS VISIT WRECK

Take Measurements to Determine Method of Raising the Maine

Havana, Sept. 12.—The first work preparatory to beginning active operations in the raising of the old battleship Maine was done when Colonel Black and Captain Ferguson of the engineers visited the wreck.

They made a careful examination, taking measurements and soundings, to serve as a guide to determine the best plan for the raising of the hulk.

STOLEN BOY RETURNED

Son of New York Doctor Had Been Missing Nearly Three Months

New York, Sept. 12.—The mysterious return of Michael Scimeca, 2 years old, to the home of his parents, after being forcibly detained away from them since June 17, has completely baffled the police of this city.

The lad was returned to a carriage in which his grandmother was driving and taken to his home. The police are of the belief that Dr. Mariano Scimeca, his father, has paid $1500 for the release of his boy, but this the physician stoutly denies.

The lad is none the worse for his incarceration in a dark room, where he was cared for by two women. He is unable to tell anything that would lead to the arrest of those who held him from his parents.

The lad was returned to his grandmother, Mrs. Michael Pretrella, who had been telephoned that her grandson would be found on Fifty-fifth street. She ordered her coachman, and according to her story, as they were driving along that street they heard the little boy calling.

The story of the coachman as told to the police differs though, as he stated that the carriage was stopped by two women and the child placed within.

TWO DEAD IN AUTO WRECK

Chauffeur Had Borrowed Machine Without Consent of Owner

Nahant, Mass., Sept. 12.—Alexander E. Hanna, 28, a chauffeur, and Mrs. Fannie Reed, wife of Charles I. Reed of Nahant, were instantly killed when the automobile in which they were riding crashed down a heavy grade on the Nahant road into a lamp post and turned turtle, pinning them beneath it.

Mrs. Reed was thrown over the hood of the machine, and her head struck against the post, fracturing the skull. The chauffeur was caught in the wreckage of the machine in such a position that he died of strangulation before he could be extricated.

The other occupants—Charles I. Reed; his son, Dana Reed, aged 14, and Herman Stegeman—escaped with slight injuries.

The car, which is owned by John D. Pilling, a shoe manufacturer of Lowell, and which had been borrowed by the chauffeur without his knowledge, was badly damaged.

TARS IN PRIZE FIGHT ON NAVY YARD PIER

Officials Witness Five-Round Bout For Purse of $1000

Boston, Sept. 12.—Six hundred sailors and fully 200 civilians gathered at the Charlestown navy yard to witness a prize fight between two of Uncle Sam's sailor representatives, one from the scout cruiser Salem, the other from the scout cruiser Birmingham. The representative of the former vessel was Joe Smiley, 133 pounds, while Young Wilson, 152 pounds, upheld the supremacy of the Birmingham.

A five-round bout was pulled off on the pier adjacent to dry dock No. 2. William Ryan acted as referee. The purse was $1000, contributed by the officers and men of the two cruisers.

Smiley was awarded the fight on a foul in the fifth round. He had been fouled previously in both the third and fourth rounds by Wilson, but persisted in continuing the fight.

Commander Evans of the Salem witnessed the fight from the deck of his vessel, while many others of the officers of the ships now at Charlestown were spectators.

Smiley used a left jab to the face continually. Wilson tried the same punch but missed just as often. Smiley floored Wilson in the second round.

FUNERAL OF BOWERS

President Taft and Justice Holmes Among the Pall Bearers

Boston, Sept. 12.—The funeral of Lloyd W. Bowers, solicitor general of the United States, who died at the Hotel Touraine Friday, was held at the Touraine this morning at 11 o'clock.

The services were conducted by Rev. A. E. Dunning and the pall bearers were President Taft, Justice Holmes of the United States supreme court, E. D. Hurlburt, Chicago; O. H. Waldo, Chicago; T. B. Marston, Chicago; J. H. Hammond, Washington; James Byrne, New York, and R. G. Monroe, New York.

The services were private and interment will be at Westfield, Conn.

Freight Brakeman Killed

FORECAST IS IMPOSSIBLE

Contest For Governorship of Maine Very Close

FERNALD IS SLIGHTLY FAVORED

Democratic Claims of Success Causing Much Worry to Opponents—Rock-Ribbed Republican State May Experience Overturn In Light of Unrest—Candidates For Head of Ticket Each Confident of Success

Augusta, Me., Sept. 12.—The voters are today rendering their verdict on the issues presented during the most strenuous campaign the Pine Tree State has ever known.

What will it be? The question is being asked the country over, for Maine is supposed to be a straw showing whether the wind is to be in the Republican or Democratic quarter this year. Will the Democrats make good their predictions of victory in national, state and county contests? Will staid, old, rock-ribbed Republican Maine desert the party of her fathers, or will she keep the faith?

For campaign purposes, at least, the Republicans laugh at the Democratic claims, characterizing them as "brag and bluster." They prophesy larger Republican pluralities in national and state contests than were recorded at the last election. And yet, there are prominent, well informed members of the party, with no insurgent leanings, who confess that away down deep in their hearts they are worried about the head of the state ticket.

There are congressional, legislative, senatorial and county fights with issues all their own, and results in many cases by no means certain. But the contest that overshadows all others is that for governor between Frederick W. Plaisted, mayor of Augusta, Democrat, and Governor Bert M. Fernald, Republican.

Both candidates have completed a five weeks' tour of the state, in which they made anywhere from two to four speeches a day, and each says that he has seen and heard enough during these weeks of campaigning to convince him that victory was his.

"I have absolute faith," said Plaisted, "that I shall be the next governor of Maine. I believe I shall be elected by by a good, substantial plurality, and that we shall elect two congressmen and a majority of the legislature."

"I expect to be elected by a larger plurality than I had two years ago," said Fernald. "I feel sure we shall elect four congressmen and increase our majority in the state legislature. The vote, in my opinion, will be the largest Maine has ever cast, and that will be a good thing for the Republican ticket."

The concensus of opinion among the best informed of both parties would probably be that the contest for governor is close, with the chances slightly favoring Fernald. This, of course, would be an opinion based on known facts, and would leave altogether out of account the "something in the air;" the "feeling of unrest;" the "desire for a change"—that phantom that is causing Republican wakefulness in many of the party strongholds throughout the country.

Republicans and Democrats are banking on the feeling that "anything may happen this year." This is true in Maine. This is an unknown element in the situation which renders all ordinary criteria worthless, and for this reason the Republican organization is unable to make the same reliable canvass that it has made in former years.

GIRL'S LETTER GOES ASTRAY

Falls Into Hands of Man Who Finally Leads Her to the Altar

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 12.—Traveling from Pensacola, Fla., to meet his bride whom he had never seen, Thomas N. McCartney arrived in Carbondale Saturday night, and last evening was wedded to Frances Donnelly.

The marriage ended a most remarkable courtship. The bride, 20 years old, was corresponding with Frank McCartney of Atlanta, when one of her letters went astray and fell into the hands of Thomas N. McCartney.

He answered the missive and straightway the other man was forgotten. That was a year ago, and constant correspondence fed the flames of love until he proposed and was accepted by mail, photographs having been exchanged meanwhile.

To Probe Bank Conditions

Washington, Sept. 12.—Close upon the heels of the radical shake-up in the ranks of bank examiners, by which twenty men on Thursday were shifted to new fields, Comptroller of the Currency Murray announces that he will make a personal investigation of conditions in al examination districts.

Killed Fiancee and Self

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 12.—Jealous of the attention of his rival, Jay Harbison, aged 26, shot Dr. Boyd Clinite and murdered his 19-year-old fiancee, Adele Kizer, in Redfield. He then killed himself. Clinite probably will recover.

BRIEFS

Behjamin R. Lyons died at Clarendon Hills last week, and the interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemtery in this city.

The funeral of Mrs. James H. Flint, a summer resident of Great Hill, Houghs Neck, will be held at Weymouth tomorrow.

Box 42 was pulled at 6.45 Sunday for an incipient blaze in a house on Water street. The recall sounded within five minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Quincy Baxter and Miss Orissa Baxter have returned to East Milton from Moosehead lake, Maine where they spent most of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Sweeney have closed their cottage at Houghs Neck and returned to their home on Willard street.

W. B. Vose of Hyde Park a summer resident at Houghs Neck had his yacht the "Clais" stolen from its moorings Saturday night.

The refusal of one man to sign the petition for a clerks' half holiday today, that all might see the aviation, killed the movement.

Since Grahame-White had Fitz in the air the doctors consider it dangerous for him to make flights, but he has established some dangerous records.

Paul Revere W. R. C. will hold its regular meeting in G. A. R. hall tomorrow afternoon. In the evening the G. A. R. with their wives will be entertained also the husbands of the relief corps ladies.

News items for publication in the Ledger should be addressed to the Ledger, Quincy, Mass., and not to individuals, to ensure publication where addressed to people there is apt to be delay as the person to whom addressed may be away and the mail have to be forwarded or held until their return when it is often too late to be news.

The torpedo boat destroyer Macdonough, one of the first warships built by the Fore River Company, is doing patrol duty in Dorchester bay near the Aviation field. Crews from the Macdonough, Bailey and Stringham held races today for a silver cup. Tomorrow the winning crew will row a crew from the Gresham.

After a lapse of several months the Boston Herald has again put on district men. Some months ago the management discharged all of its suburban correspondents throwing fifty long employees out of work. Now however the paper is taking up the suburban work again and Walter H. Cobb who was with the paper for many years has again entered its employ.

There was a good showing of Quincy boats in the annual rendezvous on Sunday afternoon of the Massachusetts Yacht Association and the run of the yachts from the Boston Yacht club house, Hull to City Point was a beautiful sight, especially looking back on the fleet under full sail. The Boston Floating Hospital joined in the run. The yachts were festive in flags and penants. The Quincy, Wollaston and Squantum clubs were represented.

MARRIAGES.

BEVERINA—COMOLLI—In Quincy, Sept. 10, by N. B. Furnald, Esq., Mr. Attilio Beverina to Miss Victoria Comolli, both of Quincy.

DEATHS.

CUSHING—In Scituate, Sept 11, Mr. Nathaniel Grafton Cushing, aged 79 years, 3 months.

BACHELDER—In Hebron, Maine, Aug. 28, Mr. Nathaniel Quincy Bachelder, formerly of Quincy, aged 82 years.

FLINT—In Weymouth, Sept. 9, Mrs. Abbie Ann wife of Hon. James H. Flint.

MAKARIAS DEFEATED

Old Colony All Stars Required Extra Inning

Those who went to Merrymount Park on Saturday expecting a baseball feast were not disappointed as far as the length of the feast was concerned, but it was served in such a slow and uninteresting manner that enthusiasm was an unknown quantity.

The sun bothered the batsmen so that there was very little hitting, and the catchers were blinded by it, making it difficult for them to handle the curves which came their way. This was true until the last two innings when it became cold and darkness was setting in. In the eighth inning there was some talk of calling the game on account of the sun, but by the tenth it was almost necessary to call it on account of darkness.

Ford pitched good ball for the Old Colony Stars and fielded his position excellently. Bates was good and weak by turns in the box. Errors were more or less frequent but did not figure in the run getting.

In the ninth inning things began to wake up a little. Fallon and McDonald shone quite brilliantly in two successive plays. The third man up struck out, and a tenth inning was necessary

By this time the sun had gone down and either because the cold affected the pitchers, or because the batsmen could see the ball better, the hitting started. Three consecutive singles by Whitney, Fallon and A. Elcock gave the All Stars two runs which the Makarias were unable to duplicate. The game as a whole was a disappointment but the occasional appearance of an aeroplane served to break the monotony, and kept the spectators in good humor.

OTHER GAMES.

The Quincy team which went to Reading on Saturday was defeated 6 to 2. The home team scored 3 in the first and 3 in the seventh, while the Quincy scored in the third and fifth. Knight and Fish were the Quincy battery.

FORMER RESIDENT.

Nathaniel Quincy Bachelder well known to many in Quincy died in Hebron, Maine, Aug. 28, age 82. Mr. Bachelder was employed at the R. H. White Co., Boston, for over 30 years mostly in the boys clothing department. His health had been failing for some time. His wife passed away one year ago last June. Mr. Bachelder's funeral was at Hebron, Aug. 31, and was attended by Rev. M. Ball, Universalist of Mechanic Falls. Burial at Hebron, Me.

AVIATION LAUNCH BURNED.

The large launch, Olympia, which has been used to transport passengers from Neponset bride to the aviation grounds, caught fire at 8.30 Sunday night and was burned to the water's edge. The fire was a spectacular one and was watched by hundreds of persons from the shore about the Putnam nail works, Neponset, off which the launch was anchored. It burned nearly an hour and then sank. Loss $1,200.

GEERS IS GREATEST DRIVER.

Without Apparent Effort Gets Best Out of Horses He Handles.

Ed F. Geers, grand old man of the sulky, for thirty years a daring and successful driver on the grand circuit, is still, if not actually in harness, manipulating the reins with greater skill than any of his younger rivals. The turf has had its Garrisons, its daredevil Fitzpatricks, its Isaac Murphys and its Tod Sloanes scattered through all the years Geers has been a figure on trotting tracks, and there would easily be a dozen named in answer to the query, "Who was the greatest jockey of all time?"

But the trotting turf has had one particular luminary, outshining all its other stars—Ed Geers. Truly, this old gentleman is sui generis.

An expert who has watched Geers in action pays him this tribute:

"Geers' style of driving is peculiarly his own. No other man has ever been seen who exercised such control over his horses with so little apparent effort. He sits immovable in the sulky, no matter what the crisis, never raising his hands, spreading his arms, bracing himself by lying back in his seat or in any way showing the employment of any particular physical force. Only on rare occasions does he touch his horse with the whip and then with mere taps, even in an eyelash finish. For twenty years or more the Tennessee trainer has made a practice of falling back at the start and bringing his horse up with a well timed drive in the last quarter of a mile to win by a head or a neck in the final strides. By letting the other horses breast the resistance of the atmosphere and form a wind shield for his own Geers probably won hundreds of heats before anybody woke up to the fact that he was taking advantage of an unseen but important factor of speed which has lately been shown to mean four or five seconds to the mile."

WINTER HORSE RACING.

Jacksonville and Juarez, Two Popular Tracks, to Hold Long Meetings.

Now that the pessimists have placed an air of finality upon the life of racing in and about New York it might be of moment to announce that the winter tracks, or, rather, representatives of Juarez, Mexico; Jacksonville, Fla., and Oakland, Cal., are mighty busy bees. Moncrief park, Jacksonville, will throw open its gates Nov. 1, to remain open 100 or more racing days. Juarez, owing to improvements, will not be ready for occupancy until Nov. 24, the original date. However, Oakland, with all the astuteness of one Tom Williams brought to play, will attempt to prejudge the start by opening up Nov. 12. This assures the horsemen plenty of winter racing.

Arnst World's Champion Sculler.

Richard Arnst, who defended the professional sculler title against Ernest Barry in Africa, was born in New Zealand and is in his twenty-seventh year. He is the youngest man, bar Ned Hanlon, to ever win the sculling championship of the world. For some years he was prominent as a cyclist and in 1906 took up sculling under the care of George Towns.

BASEBALL WAS PLAYED IN ANCIENT EGYPT.

"I see," said Manager Griffith, looking up from the pages of his magazine, "that the scientists have traced the game way back to ancient Egypt."

"That right?" queried Larry McLean, with sudden interest. "Why, I thought the game started about 1842 in or near New York city."

"Nope," said Griff. "It merely came to life, as you might say. The inscriptions on the pyramids and on a tablet found in the tomb of Sesostris show that baseball was played 4,500 years ago and that the championship of the Egyptian league for B. C. 2673 was settled by a five game series between Memphis and Cairo."

"I don't see," remarked Mr. McLean, "how on earth that could have been, because Memphis is in the Southern league and Cairo is in the Kitty. They aren't even in the same circuit and never have been."

And Griffith, dropping the magazine, with a low moan retreated to the dining room.

TROUNCING FOR HARDYS

Defeated by Adams A. A. to Tune of 13 to 4

After the third innings on Saturday the Hardy A. C. were not in it in the game with Adams A. A. on the Ward Four playgrounds. Adams played almost an errorless game and batted heavy, while the Hardys were week in the field and at the bat. The score was 13 to 4 in favor of Adams.

OUTING OF APPRENTICES

Very Successful Too in Games With General Electric

The 164 Fore River Apprentices who participated in the outing of Saturday to Lynn and Wakefield are enthusiastic over their good time, and the courtesies extended by both the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy and the General Electric Company of Lynn. They are also proud of their success in sports against the apprentices of Lynn. Assistant Manager E. B. Hill and Instructor J. E. Neary acompanied the boys.

The round trip was made by special electric cars without delay or accidents. In the morning they inspected the General Electric plant and were entertained at dinner. Then accompanied by about 260 apprentices of Lynn they went to Quannapowitt grove, a delightful spot in Wakefield. President Bowles of the Fore River Company had offered a loving cup to the ball team of the two companies which won, which should however be open to challenge next year; also gold medals for first prizes, silver medals for second prizes, and bronze medals for third prizes in other events.

The score in the ball game at the beginning of the seventh innings was 7 to 4 in favor of General Electric, but two men of that team left the field and the umpire gave the game to Fore River team 9 to 0.

The one-mile four-oared boat race was won by G. Halbert and Charles Killion of Fore River.

The half mile boat race, one man to a boat, was won by Halberg of Fore River. Leacy of General Electric second.

All three prizes in the 100 yd. dash came to Quincy; Ferguson first, Everet Prout second and Graham third.

The mile relay race was also won by the Fore River team which included Ferguson, Casey, Clark and Graham.

The standing broad jump was won by Hapgood of General Electric, with McCarthy of Fore River second.

It was about 9.30 when the Fore River Apprentices reached Quincy.

GRAHAME-WHITE DOES TRICK AGAIN AND CLIPS OFF SIX MINUTES

QUINCY AVIATION DRAW OVER 100,000

An Unusually Large Crowd for an Off Day and No Abatement of Interest

Aviators Up at One Time for Six Different Events

Over 100,00 people saw the aviation events at the Harvard field in Quincy yesterday, a surprisingly large number for a Monday. It was the eighth day of the meet in Quincy, but interest is on the increase rather than diminishing. The more one sees of the birdmen the more fascinated he becomes, and he goes again and again.

Even if one cannot reach the field until 4 or 5 P. M. it pays to go, as the best flying is usually after 4 o'clock.

On Monday it was nearly 6 o'clock before Grahame-White started on his second flight to Boston light, and this is the one great attraction of the meet. He seems to have this event all to himself as none of the other aviators have aeroplanes speedy enough to make the contest. Glenn Curtiss' new engine is not working satisfactorily and it is said he will not attempt the Boston light flight. Ralph Johnstone could do it, but knows it would take him a longer time.

C. Grahame-White made the trip to the light Monday in 34 minutes, 1-5 seconds, over six minutes quicker than the first flight. The comparison in another column shows that he gained on each leg of the course, and travelled a mile a minute as the course is 33 miles.

Thousands had left the field before it was announced at 5.45 that White would enter the speed event, and then the Globe contest for $10,000. The announcement was greeted with great enthusiasm, and it was renewed when he started. Each time he passed the grand stand there were cheers and the waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

Those with powerful field glasses at an elevation were able to watch the monoplane all over the course, but to the naked eye it soon faded from sight, but only for about ten minutes, as only fifteen minutes were required to make one round trip. The megaphone man announced each time White arrived at the light.

The majority of the big crowd waited in the grand stand until the finish of the flight, but it was then so dark that they could hardly see across the field. Auto lamps were lit and the moon well up.

Johnstone who was out for duration and distance was still flying when White finished his flight, and many were anxious to see him alight. Several times they had saluted and cheered him. But he went to the limit of time, 6.30 ,and then his record was 3 hours 5 minutes and 40 seconds for duration, and 97 miles, 4,666 feet for distance. The former was a world's record for a course, and the latter an American record for distance; Johnstone probably wanted to make it a 100 miles but the time limit for the day had expired.

TIME FOR BOTH FLIGHTS TO BOSTON LIGHT

	First flight	Second flight
Once Around Quincy Course and to Light	10m. 10 2-5s.	7m. 31 1-5s.
Making Turn at Boston Light	1m. 30s.	1m. 5s.
Boston Light to Quincy Field	8m. 4s.	7m. 55s.
Quincy Field to Boston Light	8m. 25s.	7m. 50s.
Total time	40m. 1 3-5s.	34m. 1 1-5s.

During the day Curtiss tried for a speed record, but took nearly 8 minutes. Grahame-White in a Farman made the highest altitude but only 157 feet higher than Brookins in a Wright.

For accuracy in landing on skids Johnstone made a world record of 5 feet, 4 inches.

Other events of the day were in duration, distance, and bomb dropping.

The meet will be continued through Thursday and possible Saturday.

LATER—Glenn Curtiss says he will try today for the Boston Globe prize of $10,000, but does not expect to make as good time as did White.

—An attraction promised by the management of the Brockton fair for the fall is Claude Grahame-White and his Blerlot monoplane. Mr. Grahame-White is booked for exhibitions at San Francisco the first week in October, but will endeavor to have them arranged to enable him to remain in Massachusetts longer.—Monitor.

EXALTED RULER DEAD

William J. Coleman Overcome by Gases

The poisonous fumes from smouldering chemicals proved fatal to William J. Coleman, superintendent of the American Agricultural Chemical works at North Weymouth. Until within the last few years this plant has been known as the Bradley Fertilizer works. Mr. Coleman first entered the employ of this company when he left the high school. His ability was noted by his employers and it was not long before he began to climb the steps which finally led him to the superintendent's chair.

Before Mr. Bradley was made president of the Agricultural Chemical company, Mr. Coleman was manager of the manufactory, but upon his employer's call to the higher office he practically supplanted him with the title of superintendent.

During the past two years Mr. Coleman has been Exalted Ruler of the Quincy lodge of Elks, and in that position his executive ability has had much to do with the success of the lodge. Other organizations to which he belonged were the Quincy council, Knights of Columbus and the Monatiquot colony, Pilgrim Fathers, of Weymouth.

A little after one o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Coleman was aroused by the fire alarm, and went to do his duty. A man of less courage might have gone, but his sense of duty would not have compelled him to run the risk of losing his life. Mr. Coleman insisted upon directing the stream from one of the hoses himself, and in doing this was obliged to get dangerously near the soporific flames. The members of the fire department, which belonged to the works ,tried to dissuade him from continuing at his post, but he was not to be moved, and the excitement prevented his realizing the fact that he was inhaling poison with every breath.

At 6 o'clock in the morning the fire was practically out, and Mr. Coleman went home little realizing how near he was to death's door.

Upon his arrival at his home the reaction began to take place, and the gaseous poison began to do its work. Physicians were summoned from Weymouth and Drs. D. B. Reardon and Dr. Michael Sweeney from this city, but their united skill was unable to save his life, and he died at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mr. Coleman, it is almost needless to say, was very popular, not only among his friends, but with the employees at the factories which is perhaps a still greater recommendation. The old saying goes that no man is a hero to his valet. Mr. Coleman proved the exception for he expected of no man more than he himself would do in his place, and his absolute justice and his knowledge of men gave him a command which was tempered with mercy. He was a general who commanded from the front, and depended on his own resources for victory. When he entered the building which was seething with flames it was not recklessness but his sense of justice which would not allow him to expect others to go where he did not have the courage to go. Thus died a brave man.

The funeral will be held at the house, 443 Bridge street, North Weymouth, Thursday at 9 o'clock with Elk's services, and at 10 A. M. a high mass of requiem will be said at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in East Weymouth.

Mr. Coleman is survived by James and Matthew Coleman ,his brothers, Miss Margaret Coleman and Mrs. Catherine Sweeney his sisters and two nephews, Dr. Matthew J. Sweeney of Weymouth and Dr. Michael Sweeney of Atlantic.

NOTICE

Quincy Lodge, No. 943, B. P. O. E.

The members of Quincy Lodge, No. 943, B. P. O. E. are respectfully requested to attend the funeral services of Exalted Ruler WILLIAM J. COLEMAN, on Thursday morning, Sept. 15, at his home 443 Bridge street, North Weymouth. The Elks service will be held at the home at 8.30 o'clock and at 10 o'clock a solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated at the church of the Immaculate Conception, East Weymouth.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A flock of geese flying north on Sunday has upset the calculations of all the old weather prophets and they don't know now whether the summer is going or coming, but probably it will linger a while longer with us.

Aviation seems to have a grip on every one the world over and in most every country trials of flying are being tried out. Next week in Switzerland aviators are to try crossing the Alps by aeroplane. In England, France, Germany, Italy and various parts of our own country flights are being made this month.

Why should Quincy be the dumping ground for picnic parties like that of Sunday at Quincy woods? Car after car left City square at church time Sunday morning loaded with men, every available inch of room being occupied. It is not good for the city that outside people think they can come here Sundays, or any day as for that, and carouse. It is demor alizing and disgusting, and means should be devised to stop it.

The Metropolitan figures today on page four furnish material for an interesting study on the proper basis for Metropolitan assessment, both for water, for parks and for sewers. Assessed valuation should generally be the basis, but it is often disregarded when some rich town or city wants to escape its just share of the expenses.

The death of Virgil S. Pond of Foxboro, will be learned with regret by the Kings Daughters of our city. Mr. Pond was the donor of the Home for the Aged in Pondville and has always taken an active interest in the welfare of its inmates. He was constantly remembering them with gifts and cheering them with his kindly words of encouragement.

The building which he gave was his old home, and he was often heard to remark that it would please his father if he knew the use to which it had been put.

The Kings Daughters of Norfolk County give largely toward its support, and it is surely a noble work. A few old people from Quincy have gone there and spent the last few years of their lives amid the peaceful surroundings. At present there are fourteen occupants of the home. A delegation from the Unity Circle of Kings Daughters of this city are going to visit the home shortly and do what they can to entertain and cheer the inmates of the home.

Mr. Pond, during the latter part of his life, devoted practically all his attention to the home which was the child of his old age. He was an octogenarian himself, but young in spirit and benevolent in countenance, one would have taken him for a much younger man. His familiar figure will be missed in Foxboro and those who knew him only by reputation will cherish his memory. The old people who are in the Home are inconsolable.

Intellectual Courtship

It Is a Very Different Affair From Simple Love.

By EDITH B. ARNOLD.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Miss Margaret Lyall took all the degrees of the under and post graduate university courses. Being possessed of an independent income, it was not necessary for her to make a living, but she was so clever that the college sent her abroad to study for a professorship. She returned with an additional foreign degree and assumed the chair for which she had been preparing herself.

When Miss Professor Lyall was twenty-seven years old it occurred to her that after all she would prefer to be a wife and mother to growing old as a teacher. If she were to choose the more natural course it was high time she were doing so. She was considered a very attractive woman and was comely. She had had a number of offers, but had not been thinking of marriage and for this reason had accepted none of them. Now, having determined to wed, she looked over the list of her suitors and settled on Royal Richardson, a journalist.

Mr. Richardson was editor in chief of a large newspaper. He was a highly educated and a forceful man. There is no place in the world where exactness, system and, above all, a quick resource are more essential than in the makeup of a daily newspaper. Mr. Richardson had a quiet, dignified way with him that carried great weight.

"That match," every one said, "is between one of nature's highest type of men and the same grade of women. Such a couple united should produce important results for good. What a splendid spur the one for the other!"

"No doll wife for me," said Mr. Richardson. "Give me a woman with a brain in her head!" "If I am to be married," said Miss Lyall, "I prefer a man who is certainly not my inferior. If he is my superior I will follow his lead, for that is a law of nature. If he should turn out to be of poorer judgment than I, then that same law will compel him to submit to my decrees."

Two persons were especially disappointed at this engagement. One was Walter Fairbanks, a quiet, unobtrusive man several years younger than Miss Lyall. Not being highly educated himself—he had gone into business at seventeen—he had a profound admiration for Professor Lyall. It was the acme of his desires to have such a woman for his wife. It would be like an intellectual beggar marrying one with an intellectual fortune. The other disappointed person was Miss Lucy Brooks, a girl of twenty, whose knowledge had been gained in a public school, but whose heart was as fresh as a rose and exhaled as much fragrance upon all who knew her. She had long worshiped Mr. Richardson from a distance, but considered him so far above her that it was madness for her to aspire to be his wife.

No sooner had Professor Lyall become engaged to Mr. Richardson than she began to take an interest in his paper. She liked to pick out editorials in which she could see his vigorous opinions expressed in his terse, pungent style. But one day she noticed what she had not discovered before. She was much interested in the national problems of the day and sympathized with every movement calculated to bring the trusts under a proper legal subjection. Mr. Richardson had given in his editorials an impression that this was the policy of his paper. But in an article which bore every evidence of having been written by him he made use of the term "trust buster." The next time he met his fiancee she said to him:

"Royal, I supposed the policy of your paper was to advocate the regulation of the trusts by law."

"My dear Margaret, the policy of a newspaper is an unknown quantity to any one except its manager."

"Will you kindly explain?"

Mr. Richardson for the moment forgot that he was not in his editorial chair. It seemed an icicle rather than a sentence that came through his cold lips.

"Yes; I will explain by saying that I alone dictate the policy of my paper."

Miss Lyall looked at him with astonishment. "And I alone," she said, "will decide as to the man I will marry. He shall not be one who would make use of the obnoxious expression 'trust buster.'"

She strode majestically out of the room and upstairs.

Mr. Richardson departed with a complication of feelings. He was disappointed, angered, hurt. For the first time he had been interfered with in his life work. His eyes were opened to the fact that the high grade of character, of intellect, he had wished in a wife had in this case at least proved a boomerang. If he had been called to account by another his feelings would not have been the least ruffled. But he had formed the very important plan of marrying Miss Lyall, and he saw that such a union would necessitate the rooting up of the main habit of his life.

"Good morning, Mr. Richardson," came a soft voice, and, looking aside as he walked, he met the amiable smile of Miss Brooks. It was like a warm sunshine breaking through a wintry cloud. He turned and joined her. For an hour he walked beside her, listening to her prattle, scarcely speaking himself, the girl all the while pouring balm on his perturbed feelings. He went with her to her home, and it was another hour before he left.

Miss Lyall suffered the same perturbed sensations, and as Mr. Richardson had been comforted by Miss Brooks she turned to Walter Fairbanks for similar treatment. If a person of strong mind becomes balked and consequently irritated there is a craving for some one—not to rely on for advice, but to whet opinions upon.

Miss Lyall made an excuse to send for Mr. Fairbanks in order that she might have a dummy to pound. Mr. Fairbanks proved himself admirably suited to the purpose. Not capable of understanding that higher role of elevating by an unceasing flow of information which is the great work of newspapers, he saw only the blemishes resting on the press. When Miss Lyall told him of her disagreement with Mr. Richardson he was surprised that she did not know that his paper was owned by a combination of industrial magnates. This opened Miss Lyall's eyes not only to the fact of an entire absence of sympathy between her and the man who was employed to oppose views she held very strongly, but that there was, after all, a comfort in coming down with her aeroplane and having a heart to heart talk on the earth's surface with a man who knew what was going on there.

But Mr. Richardson before any announcement was made of the breaking of the engagement concluded to make an effort to set matters right between him and his fiance. He called upon her, and she came down with a disappointed look on her face.

"I have called to say, Margaret," he began, "that perhaps you are not aware that a newspaper is not exclusively a concern for dispensing noble ideas. Noble ideas there may be in it, but they would not be there at all if the paper had no means for its publication. Unless a newspaper can be made to pay"—

"Has that anything to do with pretending to advocate ideas and at the same time sneering at them?"

"I don't admit"—

"What is your definition of the term trust buster?"

"A trust buster? Why, a trust buster is one who advocates breaking up those combinations which are essential to business at the present day."

"But I don't admit that they are essential."

"Certainly your opinion can have nothing to do with the management of the paper I edit."

"If the paper you edit is the exponent of the principles, or, rather, the want of principles, of the man I am to marry it certainly is of great importance to me."

"I am employed to carry out the policy laid down by the owners of the paper."

"Why, then, do you pretend to carry out opposing ideas?"

"Margaret, a newspaper is a practical affair. It must have advertisements; to secure advertisements it must have circulation; to have circulation it must have readers. Readers are of various opinions. One must steer a middle course to"—

"Enough! You, the man with whom I had decided to unite my very being, have no principles of your own"—

"My principles are my own; the paper's principles are its own."

"Then if you were paid to advocate anarchy and assassination you would do so without a qualm of conscience."

"Margaret," he said, changing his tone to one of despondency, "if our union is to be one of argument instead of simple love it will be a failure."

"And unless I marry a man whose principles are not for sale it will be a failure."

"You are impracticable."

"Goodby!"

Mr. Richardson and Miss Lyall had again found themselves in the position of those

Birds of tempest loving kind
Thus beating up against the wind, though neither of them loved the tempest. They were obliged by their nature to beat up against it. Again they sought solace in the sympathy of their intellectual inferiors. Mr. Richardson called on Miss Brooks, and Miss Lyall called in Walter Fairbanks.

Richardson sat on a sofa beside the lithe, laughing girl, rested by her every innocent word, by her every dainty motion and more than all by that perpetual smile which hovered over her lips. She cared nothing for the policy of his paper, and, as to his principles, she did not for a moment doubt that they were noble. A lock of his hair fell down over his forehead, and with the touch of her waxen fingers she put it back in place, laughing as she did so. He took the fingers in his hand and kissed them. Then he kissed her. That settled it.

Miss Lyall talked to Walter Fairbanks about her conversation with Richardson. He listened to her without a word, looking at her the while with a pair of sympathetic eyes. Whenever she said, "Am I right?" he replied, "You are," and when she said, "Am I wrong?" he said, "You are not." In other words, Miss Lyall got from Mr. Fairbanks what she wanted. And so in time she became accustomed to getting what she wanted and found it more convenient to place Mr. Fairbanks where she could have him all the time. She married him.

Mr. Richardson and Miss Lyall meet occasionally and have intellectual talks. She considers him a brilliant man, but without principle. He considers her a very smart woman, but educated in a theoretic, impractical school. Each is very happy at home.

DRIFT OF OPINION

It is a wise precaution to wash raw fruit before you eat it. "Not to do so is wrong." Dr. Dixon, the health commissioner of Pennsylvania, has made an appeal to his people to take this precaution. He says: "There is no shutting our eyes to the danger of eating unwashed raw fruit. Food infected with typhoid fever by flies caused many deaths among our soldiers during the late Spanish-American war. The time and energy necessary to wash raw fruit is a bagatelle alongside of a case of typhoid fever." It surely is. That disease is one always to be feared and it is easily communicable in the way Dr. Dixon points out. It is well worth while to guard against it by this simple precaution.—Framingham News.

With all the aeronautic trips that are being made at the present time, sufficient data ought to be secured for improving the construction and mechanism of the crafts. Yet comparatively few changes seem to have been made recently. Just now, as has been stated before, the greatest need is for better engines. Until they are devised and until the capacity of the machines to carry a greater amount of fuel is improved, no journeys for long distances will be possible. At the same time, it is harly to be expected that the improvement of motors alone will be sufficient to make the aeroplane commercially valuable. The machine itself will have to be improved, and one obvious repect in which it needs bettering is in regard to stronger and more durable frames which will not increase the weight. It is too soon to expect any remarkable changes, but there will have to be a considerable improvement of the entire craft before much more progress is made.— Beverly Times.

This is not a real estate advertisement, but a straight heart-to-heart talk to young men who are working on salaries. Own a home! It seems as if we have read that line before. O, yes, it was in the real estate columns. It was paid advertising, but this is not. It may pay you to heed it nevertheless. If you are getting any kind of an income at all you can save part of it. Don't spend it all having a good time. Go out and use your judgment in the selection of a lot. Make a payment down and arrange to make additional payments at alloted times. You will find the investment fascinating. It will take you out of a rut and give you a new grip on yourself. It will make you interested in the neighborhood and in the community. Out of self interest you will become interested in the tax rate and in the spending of public money. It will make you a better all around citizen.

Real estate is the best possible investment. It cannot get away from you. It will not depreciate in value unless you blundered in your selection. Use the money you are now using paying rent to make payments on a permanent home. In a few years you will find yourself the possessor of a valuable property, instead of the owner of a handsome collection of rent receipts. You can't sell rent receipts, but you can usually find a buyer for good property.

While we are on the subject of investment, just remember that 60 years ago, the relatives of John Hunt of New York tried to have him sent to the insane asylum because he paid $2,400 for a strip of New York real estate. A few days ago the same piece of property sold for $1,825,000.—Beverly Times.

At the convention of the Grand Army of the Republic at Atlantic City next month the New England delegates will undoubtedly endorse the project to change the date of Memorial day from May 30 to the Sunday nearest the 30th whether it comes in May or June. This is no new proposition, though perhaps this is the first time it has came before the national convention. The reason for urging it is found in the growing inclination on the part of large numbers of people to devote the day to sports accompanied by a manifestly declining interest in the purposes for which the day was instituted. Yet there is not much assurance that great improvement in this respect would ensue if Memorial day were changed to Sunday. Possibly a few more persons would go to the cemeteries to witness the decoration of the graves or would gather in halls or churches to participate in ceremonials. But those who prize a leisure day chiefly because it offers them opportunity for personal amusement would seek personal amusement still. Indeed, a very large share of the community now devotes Sunday chiefly or exclusively to that purpose, and for that share the real significance of Sunday has disappeared in much the same way that the significance of Memorial day has disappeared. To an extent, this is true of about all the national holidays and rest days. The holiday just passed—Labor day—was observed with special reference to its meaning in an occasional community, but in most communities nothing what ever of appropriate significance occurred.—South Framingham News.

S. OF V. VISITATION.

Camp 95 Sons of Veterans, will be visited Friday evening by Division Commander George M. Tucker and staff. This being the first visit of the new division commander all members of the camp are requested to be present. Entertainment will be furnished and the evening will be of a social nature in making the members acquainted with the new Division officers.

The local camp is forging steadily ahead, and now that the vacation season is over, work has begun in earnest with a view of increasing the membership.

A visit of the members to Rockland camp will be made on Wednesday evening, cars leaving Quincy square at 7.10. It is expected a large number will go, as at the last meeting quite a detail was made up.

WILL INSPIRE YOUTH.

"The aviator is the most spectacular man of the age" says Rev. Allen A. Stockdale. "The aviator is bound to inspire hero worship in our age as no other man. He stands out as a man, fearless, skilful and persistent.

"A lazy men should look into the sky and, seeing the aviator at work, feel truly ashamed of himself. The aviator is the most potent agent of peace in the world, because he comes nearer making warfare perilous than any other man in the world.

"The aviator will be a real force in inspiring the youth of today. Flying has been for so long a time the one impossible thing that its present accomplishment will make other tasks seem easy."

METROPOLITAN ASSESSMENTS FOR WHOLE DISTRICT

But Six Cities and Towns More Heavily Assessed Than City of Quincy

Water District Should Be Enlarged to Reduce Burden

The Metropolitan assessments upon Quincy this year amount to $94,701.67 which is $1,559.80 more than last year. The only cities to pay more are Boston, Somerville, Cambridge, Brookline, Newton and Malden. Among those to pay less are Chelsea, Everett, Lynn, Medford, Melrose, Milton, and Waltham.

All the 41 cities and towns in the list below contribute toward the cost of Metropolitan parks and boulevards and all should be in the Metropolitan water district, and thereby reduce the burden upon the 20 cities and towns which are now paying for the cost of that extensive system. Before the last payments, 30 years hence, such cities and towns as Brookline and Cambridge, now outside th district, may be annexed to Boston, but they are escaping water assessments all these years.

Quincy's water assessment is a trifle less than last year,—$279.77, while the sewer assessment is $1,-052.29 more.

The assessments in the summary below have just been announced by State officials, but the Daily Ledger has added the assessed valuation as found in the Manual for the General Court of 1910:

MODERN SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE FARE BADLY IN REVOLUTIONS

WITH General Lee Christmas, who assisted Manuel Bonilla in an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow the government of President Davila of Honduras, enjoying the hospitality of the prison authorities in Guatemala and William P. Pittman until recently immured in a Nicaraguan dungeon as a result of his activities against Nicaragua the romance of recent American soldiers of fortune may be written only in terms of failure. From a viewpoint purely artistic, however, this enhances their story.

Americans remember longest the men whose romance as well as their lives ended with a wall at their backs and a firing squad in front of them—those of the Virginius, for instance—and they cannot forget Winchester Dana Osgood, the old Pennsylvania halfback, lying dead across a machine gun he had so gallantly served on a Cuban hillside.

Success, as a rule, means a generous bounty or concession from the new president or dictator, as the case may be, and a life thereafter of plutocratic ease, which, after all, is the motive of most soldiers of fortune, although there are enough of the other sort—men who fight and stir up trouble for the pure love of fighting and intrigue and unrest—to leaven the guild with that swashbuckling devil-may-care ardor for strife and bloodshed under whatever flag or leader.

Pittman's Case Is Typical.

The story of Pittman is typical of this class. He is a native of Boston, where his family still lives. About five years ago he entered the government service on the isthmus of Panama. When the present revolution started in Nicaragua he hurried from Colon to Bluefields and offered his services to the insurgent chief, General Estrada. He was accepted and received a commission as colonel of the signal corps.

When it became known that the commander of the government forces intended to storm Bluefields, Pittman laid mines around decoy fortifications. The charge was made by some 400 of the government troops, and Pittman, standing by his switches, exploded his mines under their feet. Many were killed, and the attack was checked. This was on May 27. Pittman, believing that after the enemy had recovered courage another attack would be made, remained at his switches and was there cut off and captured by soldiers sent out for that purpose by General Lara.

Philander C. Knox, secretary of state of the United States, acted promptly. He sent instructions to the American consul at Managua and to Commander Gilmer of the gunboat Paducah to investigate and make certain that the prisoner was treated in accordance with the modern understanding among nations as to soldiers captured in war.

Pittman when at Managua was confined in a filthy cell, 6 by 5 feet, fed only by charitable strangers. The man was slowly starving. Consul Olivares, who found him after some weeks of search, immediately protested to General Madriz in the name of the United States and secured from that officer a promise to remove Pittman to a better cell and to see that he was properly fed. This promise was kept.

Christmas Good Filibuster.

Lee Christmas is a native of New Orleans and has been heard of before in South and Central American conflicts. In the recent revolution in Honduras he enlisted as chief military adviser to Manuel Bonilla, who had been vice president of Honduras. Bonilla had been sequestered for some time on an estate in British Honduras for seditious activity against the government of President Davila. His time was spent in planning a revolution destined to put him in the place occupied by Davila. In Christmas he found a ready and warlike ally.

This soldier of fortune succeeded in getting out of the United States with two schooners loaded with Gatling guns and small arms and about a hundred Americans, mostly residents of New Orleans and other towns of Louisiana. The guns were landed on the coast of Guatemala and thence taken across the border into Honduras.

This was late in June. About three weeks were spent in organizing the "army," which, in addition to the 100 Americans, consisted of 400 Hondurans. Early in August Christmas left Utila, one of the Bay islands, where he had established headquarters and a base of supplies, and made his way with troops in launches to Log island, fourteen miles from Celba, where the government troops were in force under General Diaz. From Log island Christmas and his men went in their launches to Truxillo, east of Celba.

Christmas and Bonilla Taken.

General Diaz, in response to Christmas' invitation to "come out and fight," sallied forth, and a battle ensued in which the Gatling guns, manned by Americans, did great execution. However, the engagement was not decisive. Christmas failed to take Celba, and this caused a hiatus in the plans to combine with Manuel Bonilla's men in an attack on Puerto Cortez.

Advices from the scene of revolution have been sporadic and unsatisfactory. All that is authoritatively known is that on Aug. 8 Christmas and Bonilla, together with seventy men, were under arrest in Guatemala city. The failure of this revolution has been ascribed to the British Honduras authorities, who brought the cruiser Scylla into action when Christmas' schooners landed on British territory.

The failure of "Brigadier General" Victor Gordon to set out with a relief expedition to aid Estrada in Nicaragua last spring is likewise to be recorded. Gordon, who is a Texan, fought gallantly with the Boers in South Africa and has been through three revolutions in Nicaragua. He purchased with funds supplied by merchants of Bluefields the steamship Venus, lying at New Orleans. He organized a band of picked fighters, whipped them into shape at the Spanish fort near New Orleans and filled his steamship with arms and munitions of war.

The state department took a hand, and the filibustering expedition was called off. Gordon made his way to Central America without the Venus and alone.

Escaped Death Sentence.

Last May there arrived from Brazil on the steamship Vasari another failure in the person of George Vice, one of nine young soldiers of fortune who went forth to overcome the government of Brazil.

Vice is a Jerseyman, a resident of Hackensack. When he and his party reached Bahia in the spring of 1909 they joined a party of British and American adventurers in a plan to capture the small Brazilian town of Athens and gradually to overcome the entire republic. They charged one night upon the police headquarters, but their fire was returned, and so effectively that one of the party, an Englishman, was killed and Vice, George Gordon of New Jersey, who was one of the nine, and an ex-British army officer were wounded and captured.

Gordon died of his wounds, and Vice and the Englishman were tried and sentenced to death. The Englishman was executed, but Vice, who had forty wounds, was no candidate for a first class execution, and so he was kept in the hospital for many months. Eventually the representations of the state department and the boy's mother prevailed, and he was set free.

Two others of the party were Samuel J. Parker of New York and Hunert J. Kincaid of Moose Jaw, Canada. They returned to this country from Brazil about four months before Vice arrived. They were sorry looking revolutionists and quite eager to pursue some other vocation.

Police Were Prepared.

According to their story, the nine young men landed in Bahia, purchased horses and then proceeded by boat to Athens, where they saddled their horses in the suburbs and galloped into the town square.

The plan was to sweep the square with a volley or two of Mauser bullets, stand the police on their heads and take possession of the town. They were to join several hundred revolutionists, under command of General Magell.

The police had been warned of their approach, however, and dispersed them after a hot skirmish. The six who had not been wounded or captured retreated up a railroad track, cutting telegraph wires as they went. But finally some 800 Brazilian policemen hunted them down and placed them in jail. After many trials they were released.

STAGE FRIGHT CURE FOUND.

Paris Doctor Prescribes Burning of Optic Nerve.

Stage fright may not afflict show girls, but eminent actors and actresses have often said that they suffered continually from it. Dr. Pierce Bonnier of Paris believes that it is a disease and that he has found a cure for it.

Dr. Bonnier attributes stage fright to involuntary contraction of the diaphragm. The muscles of the diaphragm are connected with a facial nerve that runs up through the nose.

The remedy is obvious. Dr. Bonnier would extirpate this nerve by burning, and thereafter the victim of stage fright could tackle any part in any drama with as much sang frold as he would tackle a sandwich and a glass of beer after the performance.

PLAN RAILWAY FOR PILGRIMS

Summit of Fujiyama to Be Made Accessible to Japanese.

The summit of Fujiyama, Japan's holy mountain, is to be made more easily accessible to the 20,000 pilgrims who every year make a laborious ascent on foot.

The Japanese delegates who attended the international railroad congress at Berne after making a thorough examination of the various systems of Swiss mountain railways have come to the conclusion that the suspension cable car system which is operated on the Niesen mountain, in the Bernese Oberland, is best suited to the Japanese requirements.

The building of the new Fujiyama line is to be intrusted to Swiss engineering firms.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of President Has Much Of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street, Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, ecected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse. Admission may be secured on application to W. B. Dewhurst, sexton, 3 Maple street. A fee is asked for attendance, etc.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 1 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

Presidents Adams Mansion.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants Not open to public.

Presidents Lane.

Myles Standish Cairn.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

OVERHEARD AT SQUANTUM.

"I prithee come and fly with me,"
Imp ored the ardent swain,
Said she: "Before I fly with you
I wish you to explain—
To save her worry while I'm gone—
To my beloved mater,
That you possess the license of
A first class aviator."

Constipation

"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take an injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you, I am free from all that this morning. BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pettengill are at Haines Landing, Maine.

H. H. Soule of Brookline has been the guest of Albert W. Fay of Newport avenue.

Felix J. McCann of Philadelphia is the guest for two weeks o fhis aunt Mrs. George G. Roberts of Winthrop avenue.

Miss Eldine Marguerite Young of Prospect street, Atlantic, left Saturday for the White Mountains to spend a week with her grandmother.

The Peleg Thatchers of North Central avenue came up Saturday from South Dennis on the Cape where they have been since the first of July.

Mrs. Eliza Fay and Miss Nellie Mann were guests last week of Mrs. Fay's son, Albert W. Fay of Newport avenue. Mrs. Fay came from Sherborn in an automobile to see the airships. She is eighty-five years old and her wedding trip was taken in a stage coach from Milford, Mass., to Montpelier, Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Russell, Poquett, nee Holbrook returned Monday evening from New York city where they spent the week end with Mrs. Agnes Grant. Mr. Poquett resumed his duties in the master mechanics office of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Tuesday.

Rev. John Garland of the Methodist Episcopal church of Atlantic preached the first of a series of sermons Sunday morning which was entitled "Why people stay away from church." Next Sunday morning he will preach on "Reasons why we should attend church." Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook was the soloist Sunday evening.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church met Monday afternoon in the vestry of the church to discuss final arrangements for a supper to be held the middle of September. Rev. John Garland will give several readings and there will be several musical numbers which will comprise the entertainment.

The Aviation field is over a mile in an air line from the Atlantic depot, also a mile from the Neponset highway bridge, and a mile from Squantum Head. It is over a mile from the Squantum Yacht club house, nearly two miles from the National Sailors Home, and three miles from Adams Shore.

F. W. PLAISTED
Is Elected Governor by Maine Democrats

MAINE SWEPT BY DEMOCRATS

They Elect Plaisted by Plurality of Over 7500

AMAZED AT THEIR SUCCESS

By Curious Turn of Fate the Son of Only Previous Democratic Governor Is Chosen Chief Executive of Pine Tree State—Burleigh, Hinds and Swasey Beaten In Congressional Fights—Next Legislature Will Send Democrat to United States Senate to Succeed Hale

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—A tidal wave of Democracy swept over Maine Tuesday, carrying Frederick W. Plaisted of Augusta to the governor's chair and ousting the present occupant, Bert M. Fernald of Poland, by a plurality of 7687.

The wave also overwhelmed at least three and possibly all four of the state's congressional delegation, which has been Republican since the inception of the party. The flood spread through a majority of the counties and even extended to the legislature, which next winter will choose a successor to United States Senator Hale. The Democrats will probably elect Obadiah Gardner of Rockland.

The Republicans stood aghast as Plaisted's plurality mounted steadily upward until it nearly reached that given Governor Fernald only two years ago.

The party leaders were unable to account for the tremendous change in sentiment, but close political observers declared that insurgency, before unsuspected, had struck the state in its most virulent form.

The political page had to be turned back to 1880 for even a reversal of the Republicans, and there it was found that Plaisted's father, Harris M. Plaisted, was made governor on a fusion ticket by a narrow margin of 159 votes. All the other Maine governors since 1855 have been Republican.

In the congressional contests Daniel J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston defeated Congressman John P. Swasey in the Second district; Samuel W. Gould retired Edwin C. Burleigh of Augusta to private life after eighteen years at Washington, while late returns indicate the election of William M. Pennell, a Democrat, over Asher C. Hinds in the First district, and Congressman Frank E. Guernsey admits that his Fourth district is much in doubt.

Next Legislature Democratic

The incoming senate is surely Democratic by a good majority and the house seems to have the same complexion.

In the face of the sweeping Democratic victory the Republican leaders are overwhelmed with surprise and the magnitude of their success astonishes even the most sanguine Democrats.

The victory of McGillicuddy of Lewiston in the Second district was thought fairly probable, as Swasey narrowly missed defeat in his first election two years ago.

Asher C. Hinds, whose talents as a parliamentarian were discovered years ago by Thomas B. Reed, and who has sat behind half a dozen speakers, including Joseph G. Cannon, has conceded his defeat in the First district.

The election passed off without any unfortunate incident; in fact, it was one of the quietest in years. The vote was about an average one for an off-year, and the total will run to about 140,000.

First to Break Republican Rule

Frederick W. Plaisted was born in Bangor June 26, 1865, the son of Harris Plaisted. He was educated in the public schools of Bangor and St. Johnsbury, where he was graduated in 1884. He began work as a newspaper man in 1885 as editor of the North Star at Presque Isle. At the age of 21 he went to Augusta as business manager of The New Age, then owned by his father and a partner. Three years later he bought out the partner, and in 1898 conducted the paper alone.

He is one of the best known men in the state of Maine. He was the Democratic candidate for congress in the Third district in 1897 and 1898, but was defeated. In 1906 he was made mayor of Augusta, and was reelected to that office in 1907 and 1908. He was defeated as mayor the following year, only to win again in 1910. He was the first Democratic mayor to be elected for forty years.

Mr. Plaisted was elected sheriff of Kennebec county for two years in September, 1906, being the first Democratic sheriff since the county was established in 1799. He served ten years on the village district school board and was its chairman for three years.

He was delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention at Chicago in 1896 and at Kansas City in 1900. He was for four years a member of the national congresional committee of his party and was chairman of the Democratic state convention in 1906.

He is prominent in Free Masonry, a trustee of the Lithgow public library, an incorporator of the Augusta Savings bank, a director of the Augusta General hospital, and holds membership in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Sons of Veterans, the Abnaki club and the Augusta and Cobbosseecontee Yacht clubs.

He was married, Feb. 10, 1907, to Miss Frances Gullifer, daughter of the late Henry Gullifer of Milbridge.

GOVERNOR FERNALD

Governor-elect Plaisted pledged himself on the stump to election of United States senators by direct vote of the people, the resubmission of the constitutional amendment establishing prohibition, the repeal of the Sturgis law empowering a commission appointed by the chief executive to send deputies into every city and plantation to enforce the excise laws over the heads of the local officers at the expense of the county visited, and to reduce the state's expenses.

ACCOUNTS SHORT $3248

Due to Watertown Tax Collector's Poor System of Bookkeeping

Watertown, Mass., Sept. 13.—Former Tax Collector Charles A. Raymond, owing to his poor system of bookkeeping, was short $3,248.27, according to the report to a special town meeting here last night by an expert accountant, employed by the selectmen for three months on the accounts.

According to the accountant there was no evidence of dishonesty. The former tax collector, however, had allowed many abatements.

After the report was read a heated discussion arose which concluded with a resolution authorizing the selectmen to collect on the former collector's bond and by suit against him. The bond will cover $1380 of the shortage.

SHAKEUP IN TREASURY

Superintendent of Buildings and Printing Chief Are Reduced

Washington, Sept. 13.—A shakeup in the administrative force at the treasury occurred when W. M. Imlay, first superintendent of buildings, was reduced to a clerkship and F. H. Jemison, a clerk, was appointed to succeed him. Imlay was confidential clerk to former Secretary Shaw.

George Simmons, chief of the division of printing and stationery for the last twelve years, was reduced to a clerkship and F. F. Weston was transferred from the government printing office to succeed him.

REJUVENATION OF NICARAGUA

Undertaken by Provisional President Estrada

HE OUTLINES HIS PROGRAM

Desires to Re-establish Former Friendly Relations With Us—Would Negotiate Treaty Covering All Claims of United States Against Southern Republic—Plans to Negotiate Loan to Secure Money to Make Payments

Washington, Sept. 13.—A definite program for the establishment of a stable government in Nicaragua and for the financial rejuvenation of the country was set before the American government for its approval in a long cable dispatch from Provisional President Estrada, which Salvatore Castrillo, Nicaraguan representative in Washington, presented to Assistant Secretary of State Wilson.

First of all, Estrada wishes to reestablish friendly relations with the United States, which have been severed for so long. He suggests that the American government appoint a high commissioner to visit Nicaragua. This representative, he adds, should be one with full powers to negotiate, if necessary, a treaty covering all the claims of the United States against Nicaragua.

These include, among others, the claim for indemnity for the execution by order of former President Zelaya of the two Americans, Groce and Cannon, and the Emery claim. The Nicaraguan government desires to settle these claims without entering into any formal convention, but if it cannot be arranged informally, the Nicaraguan president asked that a commissioner clothed with power to negotiate a treaty be sent to Managua.

To secure money for the payment of these claims of the United States Estrada expressed his desire to negotiate a loan which would be guaranteed by the setting aside of 1 percent of the customs receipts of the country. A very important preliminary would be a careful examination and probable scaling down of the apparent indebtedness, for it is believed that many of the claims have been grossly inflated and are more or less tinctured with fraud.

In the matter of re-establishing the government of Nicaragua upon a firm basis Estrada stated that a constitutional convention would soon be called to recognize him as provisional president and fix a date upon which a national election shall be held.

Judging from the experience of the Cubans it might fairly be expected that the election of an assembly and the enactment of laws by that body providing for the presidential election would consume a period of six months and an equal length of time would be required for the election itself and the inauguration of the new permanent president. It is expected that within a few days Acting President Estrada will issue decrees providing for the election of the constitutional assembly as the initial step.

SAYS CHANLER STILL LOVES CAVALIERI

But Lawyer Admits That There Is a "Financial Difference"

New York, Sept. 13.—The first admission from an authoritative source that there had been financial differences between Robert W. Chanler and his famous bride, Mme. Lina Cavalieri, who just at this time are on opposite sides of the ocean, came from Sydney Harris, Chanler's counsel, when he was asked if there had been an ante-nuptial agreement between Chanler and Cavalieri.

"There was," replied the attorney, "but I will not say how much money was involved in the agreement. That is a matter that may come out later, but we are hoping that this unpleasant matter may be settled without any litigation.

"Mr. Chanler still loves Mme. Cavalieri; that is, he still thinks he loves her," said the lawyer. "Aside from this financial difference they are on good terms."

FLIES FIFTY-TWO MILES

Loraine All but Succeeds In Crossing the Irish Sea

London, Sept. 13.—Robert Loraine, the actor-airman, flew from Holyhead, Wales, across the Irish sea to within 300 or 400 yards of Howth Head, Ireland, finally swimming ashore. The distance covered was fifty-two miles—a record flight over the open sea.

Loraine was not accompanied by a steamer. He wore an inflated coat and a cork life jacket.

Former Banker a Suicide

New York, Sept. 13.—Walter S. Jenks, formerly a banker and more recently in the real estate business, committed suicide in his apartments by shooting in the head.

LANGE AGAIN IN PUBLIC EYE

Sheriff Seizes Property of the Scranton Alchemist

OWES INTEREST ON $60,000

Man Who Claimed He Had Discovered Secret of the Ages, Whereby He Could Transmute Base Metals Into Silver, Suffered Severe Blow In Death of Capitalist Who Was Interested In His Project

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 13.—Although he startled the world by the announcement that he could transmute base metals into ingots of pure silver, Dr. Frederick W. Lange has not been able to satisfy his creditors, and as a result his residence and property has been seized by the sheriff. Unless he pays the interest on $60,000, judgment held properties will be offered at public sale on Oct. 1.

Dr. Lange and his alleged discovery of the secret of the ages came in for much publicity following the strange death of Charles C. Dickinson of New York a few months ago. Dickinson came to Scranton to witness a demonstration of Lange's powers, with a view to supply capital to exploit his discovery. There was an experiment in the doctor's laboratory, during which Dickinson stood near a crucible and watched the fusing of base metal with silver by intense heat. Fumes thrown off by the mixture developed a condition in the capitalist's lungs that led to his death from pneumonia.

Dr. Lange declared that Dickinson's death was a severe blow, but that it did not detract from the importance of his discovery. Preparations were made to float a stock issue, but it is not known whether any stock was sold.

Mr. Dickinson's death was investigated by the New York city coroner's office and Coroners Feinberg and Winterbottom, assisted by Coroner's Physician Schultz, made a minute examination of the body and found that death was due to pneumonia, caused by the inhalation of some gas.

So great was the public interest in the manner of Dickinson's death that Lange had to offer some explanation, and in doing so he supplemented it with a description of his alleged discovery that read like a page from the chronicles of the alchemists of old. Four years ago, he said, while experimenting with a process for the reduction of the cost of making silver chloride, used in dry cell electric batteries, he ran across his wonderful secret.

"I discovered," he said at that time, "the means of increasing an atom of pure silver to one hundred times its weight and of equal, if not greater, fineness. I have taken base metals of four different kinds and successfully transmitted them from proportions of one part silver and ninety-nine parts base metal into silver of the utmost purity."

Dr. Lange declared that he had sent the metal that was transmuted to New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago to be assayed, and that in every case the report showed silver of the utmost purity. Some of the big silver houses, he said, had reported that the substance stood every test for silver, and in each instance showed well defined traces of gold.

BRIBED FOR SEVEN YEARS

Admission of Importer at Trial of Surveyor's Clerk and Weighers

New York, Sept. 13.—Otto W. P. Westervelt, of the firm of W. H. Westervelt & Co., lemon importers of this city, admitted at the trial of Chief Clerk Bedell and two federal weighers in the United States circuit court that he had bribed the weighers for seven years to declare false weights on goods imported by the firm, and declared that he knew he was committing a crime when he did it.

His testimony was the sensation of the trial which accuses Bedell, who was chief clerk in Deputy Surveyor Vail's office, and Federal Weighers Drew and Wardwell.

SALARIES ARE TOO LOW

Fifty-Seven Iowa Ministers to Engage In Secular Lines of Work

Charles City, Ia., Sept. 13.—When the upper Iowa Methodist conference convenes here this week it will find that it is face to face with a decided shortage in the number of preachers, and that fifty-seven charges in the conference will have to be filled from a source at the present not known.

Fifty-seven men, the greater number of them young and in the prime of life, will quit the ministry at this time, and all will engage in secular lines of work.

The general complaint is that the salary paid a minister is not sufficient to maintain a family.

PIRATES HOLD UP STEAMER

Passengers Are Robbed and Beaten and Owners Killed

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 13.—A band of brigands disguised as passengers held up a Russian steamer, plying on the Sungari, twenty miles out of this port, and after a desperate fight overcame the crew and robbed the pasengers. In attempting to defend their vessel the owners, two Russians, were killed, and many of the Chinese crew were wounded, as were such of the eighty Chinese passengers as offered resistance.

When the pirates were in control of the situation they bound the passengers, the crew, a Russian sailor and two Russian women, and took the valuables of the captives at their leisure. A boat load of hunters who happened to be in the vicinity gave the alarm and a Russian gunboat was sent in pursuit of the outlaws.

MAD DOGS OFTEN PLAYFUL AT FIRST

Certain Theories as to Their Harmlessness Are Repudiated

Washington, Sept. 13.—Hydrophobia is a reality and not a dream, and is a respector of no particular season nor species of mammal, says a public health service report. Pasteurization generally prevents development, the report says. Artificial immunity is discussed, but despite discouraging results of past experiments at cure by drugs, continued efforts to find an effectual remedy are urged.

Mad dogs are not always wild eyed and frothing at the mouth and determined upon attacking every person they meet. In the earlier stages of the disease they are often playfully inclined.

Dogs, wolves, coyotes and skunks seem to be especially susceptible. But not even within the canine tribe is the disease of spontaneous origin. "If all rabid dogs could be prevented from biting other animals," says the report, "rabies would within a year be a historical curiosity of medicine."

Human hydrophobiacs do not seek to bite other persons. The average period of incubation is a little over ten weeks, but in some persons the effect of a mad dogs bite is not manifested for more than a year.

BURGLAR'S MIDNIGHT VISIT

Results In Countess Being Gagged and Robbed of $24,000

Paris, Sept. 13.—At the Chateau de la Rochecantin (Maine-et-Loire) a thief escaped with plunder valued at $24,000, having previously overpowered and gagged Countess de la Rochecantin, who had been awakened by the noise he made in a room near her own.

It was about 1 o'clock in the morning when the burglar broke into the chateau, and it was shortly afterward that the countess, awakened by the noise, came into the room where he was. Before she could give the alarm the man had covered her month with his hand. Then, throwing her to the ground, he gagged and bound her.

TAFT'S TRIP TO PANAMA

It May Be Cancelled Because of the Political Situation

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 13.—The trip to Panama which President Taft had planned to take in November to inspect the work that has been done on the Isthmian canal may be given up.

It is understood that several of the Republican leaders have endeavored to convince the president that the political situation at home requires his presence in this country.

Engineer and Fireman Killed

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 13.—A passenger train on the Louisville and Nashville railroad was wrecked at Williamsburg. The engineer and fireman were killed. None of the passengers was injured.

SAXONIA'S MEN FREED

Chinese Witness In Smuggling Case Retracts His Testimony

Boston, Sept. 13.—Captain Benison, commander of the Cunard steamship Saxonia, was discharged by Commissioner Hayes, on recommendation of Assistant United States District Attorney Lewis, on the complaint that he had neglected to prevent Chinamen from illegally landing from his vessel.

William Hackett and James Evans, two of the Saxonia's crew, were also discharged on the complaint that they had aided and abetted in the smuggling of Chinese into this country. Immediately after their discharge they were served with a summons to appear as witnesses before the federal grand jury.

At the proceeding before Hayes Ju Suey Kee, the chief witness for the government, contradicted the statements he had made against Hackett and Evans at a previous hearing as to Chinamen being smuggled into this port upon the Saxonia. This Chinaman not only contradicted previous testimony, but claimed he had been offered a bribe of $150 by Chinese Immigration Inspector McCabe to previously tell a story of conspiracy.

TEN ARE INDICTED

Beef Trust Officials Must Answer to Charges of Conspiracy

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The federal grand jury, which has been investigating Chicago packers, returned indictments against ten high officials of Swift, Armour and Morris concerns. There are three indictments against each, charging combination, conspiracy and illegal monopoly.

The men indicted are L. F. Swift, Edward Swift, C. H. Swift, F. A. Fowler, Edward Tilden, J. O. Armour, Arthur Meeker, T. J. Conners, Edward Morris and L. H. Heyman.

The first indictment in detail charges all defendants with engaging in a combination in restraint of inter-state trade in fresh meats. The second charges conspiracy.

Altogether, more than 200 witnesses were examined. The grand jury continued its work quietly for about a month.

CHICAGO'S DISTINCTION

Country's Second City In Size Is First In Postal Receipts

Washington, Sept. 13.—For the first time in the history of the post-office department Chicago, the second city in the United States, has reported postal receipts in excess of New York, the first city in the country.

In a statement issued at the post-office department it is shown that during the month of August the receipts in Chicago were $1,686,484.15, while the receipts in New York were $1,-610,785.43, showing a balance in favor of Chicago of $55,698.73. Philadelphia was third in point of gross postal receipts during August, with a total of $494,526.57.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Proprietor of Narragansett Club Is Found Probably Guilty

Wakefield, R. I., Sept. 13.—Probably guilty of maintaining a gambling nuisance, and probably guilty of maintaining a gambling place, were the findings of the district court in the case of William H. Arnold, proprietor of the fashionable Narragansett club, where several prominent society people were charged with being present on the night of Aug. 6 last, where gambling was going on.

Arnold was held in $1000 on the first count and $2000 on the second count, for the November term of the grand jury. Bonds were furnished, and Arnold was released.

Killed by Fall From Tree

Everett, Mass., Sept. 13.—Michael Monahan, aged 40, was instantly killed when he fell twenty-five feet from a tree. Monahan was exterminating moths and doing forestry work.

Hewit's Ashes In Artists' Corner

London, Sept. 13.—The ashes of Holman Hunt were interred in the artists' corner of St. Paul's cathedral.

Broken Celluloid.

Broken celluloid articles can be mended by softening the broken edges in ether, applying collodion liberally and holding the pieces together under a thoroughly warmed iron weight.

The King's English.

The origin of the term "the king's English" seems to be a little shady, but there is no doubt as to what it meant and means. It dates back to the days when the king of England came as near to being educated as was anybody in the kingdom, and if he couldn't speak correctly there was no use in anybody trying.

The Plantain.

The plantain differs from the banana not only in color and flavor, but in the way of growing. The fruit points upward, while that of the banana points downward on the stem.

A Remarkable Shower.

A shower of a remarkable character occurred in Sicily on April 24, 1781. On the morning of that day every exposed place within an extensive district was found covered with a gray water, which being evaporated left a deposit nearly a quarter of an inch in thickness. It was determined that this solid matter must have come from Mount Etna.

MAKES RAPID HEADWAY

Add This Fact to Your Store of Knowledge.

Kidney disease advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dull pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells, or a tired, worn-out feeling, or if the urine is dark, foul-smelling, irregular and attended with pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the statement of this Quincy citizen.

P. J. Garrity, 367 Granite street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment at times. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do, as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

Edward Mitchell of the Quincy post office is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

Miss Beatrice M. Hadley of West Somerville is making an extended visit with Miss Clara M. Cox of Safford street.

There were 189 cases on the list of the Norfolk Superior criminal court which opened Monday at Dedham, 38 being from Quincy. Eight of these are liquor cases.

The Tammany club of West Quincy went to Elcock's grove at Braintree Great pond on Sunday for their annual clambake prepared by Michael Shea.

The Nearer and Farther Lights society will meet at the home of Mrs. Lena Talbot, 8 Chester street, Wollaston, Thursday evening.

The Unitarian church-Helpers will hold the first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Carl G. Horst, 67 Winthrop avenue, Wollaston on Thursday, at 3 o'clock.

Junior Endeavor meetings will begin Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Wollaston Baptist church. Parents and children are urged to take notice, that the very first meeting may be well attended.

Miss Elizabeth Moynihan of Atlantic and her sisters Mrs. John Leary of Boston and Mrs. Edward Morris of Whitwell street, Quincy, have returned from a brief visit to Newburgh, New York.

W. B. Vose has not heard from his yacht the Polaris which was stolen from its moorings Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Vose had been to the aviation meet returning the boat to the moorings late that afternoon. It disappeared during the night.

Mr. Bugbee, former physical director of the Y. M. C. A., is here for a day or two from Watertown, N. Y., where he has been ever since he left Quincy. Mr. Bugbee is looking as hale and hearty as ever and one can believe that the breezes from Lake Ontario agree with him.

Chief Ranger Joseph J. McNeally will preside at the meeting of St. Francis court of West Quincy in Hibernian hall tonight when Cornelius M. Ruggan HVCR. of Atlantic and Thomas F. Murphy, DHCR, of South Boston make their official visit to the court.

News items for publication in the Ledger should be addressed to the Ledger, Quincy, Mass., and not to individuals, to ensure publication where addressed to people there is apt to be delay as the person to whom addressed may be away and the mail have to be forwarded or held until their return when it is often too late to be news.

The cabinet meeting of the East Norfolk Union of Christian Endeavor was held Monday evening in Bethany chapel. Delegates were present from the Park and Downs Congregational, Wollaston Baptist, First Presbyterian East Milton Baptist and the Bethany Congregational. The principal matter of business was with reference to a delegates to the State Convention in Springfield.

McGREGORS WIN AGAIN

Have Taken Both Games This Year from Barre Team

The McGregor foot ball team again showed the Barre team on Saturday how to win, but the score was close, 2 to 1. At 3.30 Mayor Shea kicked off to Barre in the opening home game for the McGregors. For ninety minutes the two contesting teams fought it out in earnest. This game with the Barre Rangers is an annual affair and during the past fifteen years each team has won its home game. This year the McGregors went to Vermont and bearded the Barre lion in his own den and won. In consequence of this, the game Saturday was especially hard fought and the home team proved their mettle by gaining the victory.

Webster at back played a fine game for Barre. On the line, Duncan and Creighton were very effective.

For the McGregors all eleven men put up such a spirited game that it was difficult to choose the star performers. The three backs deserve honorable mention for their work, and on the line perhaps Rennie and Forsythe, who kicked the goals, were foremost. The game was one of the best ever seen in Quincy.

During their stay in Quincy the Barre men were guests of the McGregor Association, and were entertained after the game at Cahill's hall.

The summary:

McGREGORS		BARRE RANGERS
Drysdale, g.		g., Smith
Wilson, b.		b., Webster
Craig, 1 b.		1.b., Wilson
McDonald, r.h.		r.h., Johnson

GUILTY OF FORGERY

John Guilford Found Guilty by Jury at Dedham

In the Norfolk superior criminal court at Dedham on Monday John Guilford of Quincy was found guilty of forgery and with uttering a forged instrument. He was charged with having forged a check on the National Granite bank of Quincy for $76.98, signing the name of A. M. Rogers on July 21, 1910.

Frank Manglone of Stoughton, indicted on the charge of an assault with intent to murder Joseph Pe Lepro with a knife, retracted his plea of not guilty and made one of guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon.

LOVE THAT COMPELS LOVE.

The Rev. Joseph Walther took for his text Sunday morning, at the Wollaston Baptist church "Love that compels love."

The love of God, manifested in Jesus Christ, is wonderful. It is wonderful to me; it is wonderful in its passion; it is wonderful in its warmth and devotion. No one can charge God with being lukewarm in his love.

God is seeking for us that we may share his greatness, joy, peace and in his power he is seeking to elevate you; to enlarge you; to increase your happiness. His love to us is wonderful. It is constant.

Christ died for us. How are we treating that love? It is not what our intellectual position is concerning him, but how are we treating that love. Are we responding today? Are we opening our hearts to that love? How are we loving Him? Not how are we treating that love, but how are we loving him?

Mr. Walther said—"there is nothing that moves me more than a love between two men. Between two heroic men who are cleaving to each other.

If we have stayed away from His love, and let ours to Him grow lukewarm, may God help us to come back to Him and have more and more love for Him.

AND QUINCY TOO.

Bob Dunbar in his sporting chat in the Journal says: Those who had an idea that the aviation meet at Squantum would prove to be a frost have taken to the woods. Everywhere you go you hear nothing put praise, and it is quite common to hear a remark like the following: "It is the greatest show I ever saw, and I would take a trip in one of those biplanes any time." You will hear few complaints about the arrangements and the conduct of the meeting, and if you have any possible chance to get out to see the sport, make the best of it, and you will never regret your action. The meeting is attracting attention all over the country and some very nice things are being said about Boston and Harvard, yes, and even Squantum.

And Quincy too.

BRIEFS

Three weddings are announced for tomorrow.

Another 80 degree day today, the second this month.

Nominations for the Republican and Democratic caucuses will close on Thursday at 7.30 P. M., but may be filed Wednesday evening.

A meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church will be held at the home of Mrs. George Hawes on West street, Wednesday evening.

Ernest Williams of Barry street left Saturday for Villanover, Pa., to take up his duties as instructor in chemistry at St. Thomas college.

The tennis tournament at the Whitney road courts which was scheduled for last Saturday will be played off at the end of this week. Only two matches were played Saturday. All the interest of the members seems to be centered in the aviation meet and entries for the tournatment were scarce.

The speaker for the first bi-monthly meeting of the fall in the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union will be Rev. Judson V. Clancy of Beverly. Mr. Clancy has been one of the most popular summer preachers in this vicinity and many will want to hear him again on the third of October.. The meeting will be held with the Park and Downs Congregational society.

FOOTBALL NEEDS NO QUARTERBACK

Rule Changes Practically Eliminate Once Important Place.

NEW FORMS OF ATTACK.

The quarterback, hitherto the most conspicuous and most important position on a football team, is a thing of the past. The new rules have done away with all those features of the game which made such a position necessary. Since the inauguration of football spectators have been accustomed to hear a little man shout out his signals, crouch behind the center and then put his football machine in motion as he received the ball from the center and then passed it to one or another of his teammates as his signal directed. He was the life, the vitality, the brains of the team. On his headwork in selecting plays, on his handling of the ball and on his ability to instill spirit and fight into his teammates largely depended victory or defeat.

The practical reason why one man has been played in the quarterback position, in advance of the other backs, has been because originally the man receiving the ball from the snapback was not permitted under the rules to run with it across the line of scrimmage. Half a dozen years ago a rule was passed permitting him to advance the ball, but with the restriction that he must cross the line of scrimmage at least five yards from the point where the ball was put in play. This necessitated the use of the quarterback for all line plunges.

Under the new rules the man receiving the ball on the snapback may advance it at any point. The necessity for the quarterback is therefore gone. The handling of the ball by an intermediate man necessarily takes time and makes fumbling more likely, so that now that the necessity for it has been removed the quarterback position will exist no more.

The rules require that the team having the ball shall have at least seven men on the line of scrimmage. This leaves four men for the back field. There will doubtless be much experimenting with these men before the most effective method of lining them up will be discovered.

The passing of the quarterback is only one of many changes wrought in football by the new rules. The style of play will necessarily be greatly changed in many respects, and all the big colleges will start work a trifle earlier than usual in order to try out the possibilities of the new game and instruct the candidates thoroughly in it.

In past years when a team has had but a yard or two to gain on the third down it has hit the line, knowing that it would almost surely make a short advance there. Now, with the "no pushing or pulling" clause in effect, this avenue of advance is closed. This means that a team in such a position will kick. On the first and second downs forward passing will prove more popular than heretofore, for now the pass can be made over any point in the line, while the opposing team can interfere with the man receiving the pass only in a bona fide attempt to catch the ball. Then, too, the fifteen yard penalty for an incompleted pass has been taken away. This means that forward passing and kicking will form the backbone of the offense, instead of the old style of line plunging.

On the defense the changes in play will be equally great. Under the rules of a dozen years ago the coaches sought men of gigantic frame and weight for the line. They were told to hold their position, no matter what happened. If they prevented advances through or over themselves that was all that was expected of them. Then came the changes of 1905, permitting the forward pass and the onside kick. It now became necessary to develop guards and tackles who could get down the field speedily and recover the ball on the kicks as well as hold their place as under the old rules. In short, better men were needed.

Now the possibility of attacking the line successfully by any save trick plays has been done away with. At first glance it might be thought that this would lighten the requirements of the linemen, but instead it has the opposite effect. The old style guard, who fought to retain his position in the line without thought of activity in the open field, would be useless today.

With the death of the mass play end running will be doubly popular, and linemen will be expected to leave their positions to break these up. But at the same time they must be heady players, ever ready to size up the play of their opponents, for if a lineman can be drawn out to the end by fake interference it would be an easy matter to slip a trick play through the hole he has deserted for a considerable gain. The linemen will also be required to get down the field under kicks both to tackle and recover the ball as never before. In short, the big, beefy lineman of a few years ago has been supplanted by a lighter, shiftier, quicker man.

BONHAG IN TRAINING.

Holder of Thirty-one Distance Records Now Rounding Into Best Form.

There are two athletes of world-wide repute constantly in the minds of athletic enthusiasts. One sets the athletic tongues wagging during the torrid summer months, then settles back and permits the other to occupy the field of honor while the wintry blasts blow. These two athletes are Melvin W. Sheppard, the best middle distance runner that ever flaunted the American shield on his shirt, and George Bonhag, the amateur without a peer or even an equal at distances ranging from two to ten miles. Shep-

The mild mannered champion who is the proud holder of thirty-one American distance records, eleven of which are world's indoor marks, is now devoting a great deal of his spare time in conditioning himself for the winter campaign.

Unassuming George has enjoyed a perfect rest during the past few months. He engaged in several baseball games to keep his limbs from stiffening, but from now on he will be a very busy athlete.

Bonhag is looked upon as the model athlete. He has never touched intoxicants in any form and has never been known to smoke.

FOUR FIGHTS FOR PAPKE.

Crack Middleweight to Visit Australia to Meet Best In Antipodes.

At a conference between Promoter Hugh McIntosh of Australia and Billy Papke, claimant of the world's middleweight title, recently an agreement was drawn up whereby Papke will meet four middleweights in Australia during a period covering not more than twenty weeks.

The four men named are Dave Smith, Arthur Cripps, Edward Williams and Les O'Donnell, all of whom are practically unknown to Americans. It also was agreed that none of these fighters should weigh more than 165 pounds ringside.

Passing of Young Ten Eyck.

Wisconsin is to be congratulated upon the passing of the younger Ten Eyck as crew coach. Young Ten Eyck was a fine single sculler, but as a coach he was an unqualified failure. The art of sweep rowing was a closed book to him apparently, and he sent poor crews to the east, despite the wealth of material from which to build them. It will be a difficult matter to find a successor, for coaches of eight oared crews are scarce.

CONNIE MACK'S HEIGHT HELPS HIM.

Connie Mack's great height may be the means of the Athletics winning the pennant this year. Connie admits this himself.

All American league managers agree that the dugouts in the new ball parks worked a hardship on them. They were accustomed to sitting on a bench about three feet above the ground, from which point of vantage they could watch the signs of the opposition.

With the new ball parks came dugouts, which dropped the manager and player about three feet lower than the ground level. Their heads no longer towered high and dry above the plays pulled off on the diamond. The generals just had to about learn the game over again.

The Athletics' leader was not handicapped as much as the other team bosses, as he is some tall, and he managed to get wise to the doings long before the others. Connie's players say his keen vision helped him materially.

A PLEASANT AUGUST.

The weather throughout August was unusually pleasant with normal temperatures, little rain and an abundance of sunshine. The mean temperature of the month was 67.6 degrees which is 0.3 degree higher than the average, while the highest reached was 85 degrees on the 25th, the lowest being 50 degrees on the 27th. Little rain fell, the total amount for the month being 1.05 inches, which is the smallest rainfall for August on record at Blue Hill and the smallest for any month since November, 1908, when the total fall was 1.00 inch. Last year the August total was 4.22 inches. A measurable quantity of rain fell on nine days and most for any day was .36 inch on the 19th.

There was about the usual amount of relative humidity, less cloudiness and more than the average amount of sunshine. The prevailing wind direction was south and the mean velocity was somewhat higher than is customary. No gales occurred during the month and the maximum velocity was 38 miles per hour from the northwest on the 4th. Thunderstorms occurred on the 2nd, 11th and 15th.—L. A. Wells, Blue Hill Observatory.

Chinese and the Morse Code.

Difficulties of the Chinese language were ably demonstrated when the problem arose of adapting it to telegraphy. How was it possible to apply the Morse alphabet to a language which has no alphabet at all, but consists of nearly 44,000 characters? Then it was impossible to treat Chinese phonetically, writing down the sound of the Chinese words in European letters and translating them into Morse dots and dashes, because no such system could deal with the Chinese niceties of intonation. The ingenious solution came from a Danish professor. He simply codified the 7,000 commonest Chinese characters, representing each by numerals. Thus the Chinese word for "cash" became 6030 in the code, and the operator had only to send the code signal for that.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

Vol. 25 No. 213 QUINCY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 14 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

22,100 WON BY GRAHAME-WHITE

QUINCY MEET A FINANCIAL SUCCESS

The Paid Admissions to Aviation Field About Quarter of Million Dollars

Thought to Have Netted Management $150,000

On account of the high wind Tuesday afternoon there was not as much doing at the Aviation field as there has been during the other days of the meet. About 25,000 people were inside the grounds and probably twice that number were outside to view the exploits of the aviators.

C. Grahame-White was as usual the master of the situation and scored the majority of the points.

In the contest for altitude very little was accomplished. Brookins the holder of the record in this event, only went up 725 feet. Grahame-White who confined most of his efforts to bomb-throwing, took second place with an altitude of 180 feet. With the wind blowing as hard as it did, steering the machines would have been well nigh impossible at any considerable height, and it would have been folly for the aeronants to attempt it.

Grahame-White made three flights during the afternoon but in none of these stayed up more than 35 mintes. Johnstone and Brookins made two flights each, Johnstone averaging 25 minutes and Brookin 11 minutes. No very great endeavor was made in this direction inasmuch as bomb-throwing was the principal contest.

Brookins threw twelve bombs scoring 14 points. Johnstone casting 13 bombs scored 24 points. Grahame-White who had already been up twice decided to try again after seeing Johnstone's performance, and taking a cargo of thirty bombs he circled over the mark scoring 51 points with his missiles. In the two previous flights he had scored 54, making his total for the day in bomb throwing 105. This ensured his winning the $5000 prize.

Johnstone with a flight of only 7 miles, 3084 feet scored 2 points for distance.

On the whole, Tuesday's exhibition was somewhat tame in comparison with that of other days, but the novelty of the thing has not worn off by any means, and the day's work was interesting if not exciting.

CUPS OFFERED. ....

Tuesday practically concluded the meet as far as competition for the cash prizes is concerned, but today and tomorrow will be given up to pleasure rather than business on the part of the aviators, and doubtless they can fulfill their promise to entertain the large crowds which are expected for the extra two days. Bomb-throwing will be made a feature, and all the contestants will try to gain possession of the three hand-

SQUANTUM IMPROVEMENTS

Largely Attended Meeting to Push Them Along

The Aviation meet or something has stired the residents of Squantum to activity for improvements, and a largely attended meeting was held Tuesday evening by the newly organized Squantum Improvement Society. President Coleman presided and 60 or more were present, including Mayor Shea, President Hobbs of the City Council, Councilmen Moir and other city officials.

The great aim of the society is to secure an extension of the Metropolitan parkway from the present Quincy Shore reservation to Squantum Head, and the taking of that land now owned by the City of Boston, for a State reservation or park. Several spoke in favor of the movement, and it was endorsed by Mayor Shea and the Councilmen present. Charles S. Judkins, treasurer of the Massachusetts Real Eestate Exchange, is backing the movement.

Squantum also has a volunteer fire department which the residents think should receive some assistance from the city. Mayor Shea promised them a supply of hose.

Generad improvements were also considered, including acceptance of streets, street lights, etc. Residents were urged to become voters of the city, so that they could take part in the election of city officials, and help to obtain improvements.

PERMANENT FIELD.

It was reported that in Boston negotiations were being conducted relative to buy ing from the New Haven road the tract of land now used at Quincy for the Aviation meet. It is said that the two combined societies will make an offer to the road which will be accepted. The course will be properly rolled permanent grandstand erected, and it is furthermore rumored that the New Haven road will run a spur line from Atlantic to the field so that permanent aviation grounds with all the trimmings will be established near Boston.

The promoters have been advised to make arrangements so that the new auto course may be included in the grounds.

From the New Haven authorities it is learned that while the Harvard-Boston Aero Association might be able to secure a lease of the grounds, it is not likely that a sale could be arranged.

Chairman Gildden said relative to the buying of the field, that the field was not for sale, but that as it had been leased for a number of years interested parties had now under consideration plans to make the improvements reported.—Record.

"Lanier of the Cavalry" by Capt. Charles King begins today in the Ledger and will run serially for the next few weeks. It is an interesting tale of army life on the frontier, every line readable and entertaining. Don't miss the opening chapter today.

STATE SAFELY DEMOCRATIC

Revised Returns Emphasize Landslide In Maine

PLAISTED'S PLURALITY 8747

Two Democrats and Two Republicans Elected to Congress—Both Branches of Legislature Will Be Democratic and Elect United States Senator to Succeed Hale—Republicans Successful in but Three Counties

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—Nearly all of the returns of Tuesday's election are in and the sweeping victory of the Democrats is nailed. The majority in the legislature is assured. The latest figures give Plaisted's plurality as 8747. The vote was: Plaisted, 73,763; Fernald, 64,916.

The latest returns in the congressional fight show:

First district, Asher C. Hinds, Republican, elected by 575.

Second district, Daniel J. McGillicuddy, Democrat, elected by 3000.

Third district, Samuel W. Gould, Democrat, elected by 2200.

Fourth district, Frank E. Guernsey, Republican, elected by about 300.

The Democrats have elected eighty-four representatives, and the Republicans sixty-three, out of a total house membership of 151. This gives the Democrats a majority of the lower branch.

Since they have a majority of eleven in the senate, the Democrats are sure of controlling a joint convention of both branches of the legislature, which will elect a United States senator to succeed Senator Hale.

Complete returns on the vote for state senators show the Democrats will occupy twenty-one out of thirty-one seats in the Maine senate. The last senate, two years ago, was composed of twenty-three Republicans and eight Democrats.

As the legislature is captured by the Democrats it seems more than likely it will mean a probable resubmission to the people of the vexed prohibitory law and a chance for local option in the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The Sturgis act, which has proved so obnoxious to many and was denounced in the Democratic platform, can be repealed. Certainly the act can be made inoperative by Governor Plaisted withdrawing the present commission and neglecting to appoint their successors.

The legislature will choose a successor to Senator Hale and give Maine her first Democratic senator since 1863 and New England the first since the election of William D. Eaton in Connecticut in the late '70's.

Half a dozen candidates for the senatorship have sprung into the field, Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, Lindley M. Staples of Washington, William M. Pennell of Brunswick, who gave Asher C. Hinds such a hard fight in the First district, Oakley C. Curtis of Portland, John C. Scates of Westbrook and James C. Hamlen of Portland.

The next lesislature will have full charge of redistricting the state.

The Democrats also carried a majority of the counties, some of the old Republican sheriffs, including John W. Ballou, for thirty years sheriff of Sagadahoc county, going down before the Democratic landslide.

The Democrats elected thirteen out of the sixteen high sheriffs of Maine, according to complete returns. The Republicans elected their shrievalty candidates in Aroostook, Franklin and Washington counties only.

The newly elected Democratic legislature shortly after convening in January will elect the state treasurer, attorney general, secretary of state and a commissioner of agriculture.

As governor, Plaisted, with the consent of his counsel, will have a number of nominations to make.

WOULD HELP MAKE LAWS

Kentucky Woman Announces Her Candidacy For Congress

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the state W. C. T. U., has announced her candidacy for congress in the Seventh district against J. C. Cantrill, Democrat, and M. C. Rankin, Republican.

She will run independently on a platform opposed to liquor, white slave traffic and tobacco.

She calls upon the "chivalrous" men in the district to vote for her. She declares she is eligible to serve in congress because there is nothing in the constitution which prevents her helping make the laws. She declares the question of a woman so serving must be settled some time and it might as well be done now.

WITH USUAL MAJORITY

Arkansas Elects Democrats and Apparently Adopts Referendum

Little Rock, Sept. 14.—Democratic nominees for state offices, headed by Governor Donaghey, candidate for re-election, rolled up the usual majority at the election in Arkansas, and while the fate of the proposition to incorporate an initiative and referendum amendment in the state constitution is not known, the indications are that it has carried.

Although weather conditions were good, the expected heavy vote failed to materialize, notwithstanding vigorous campaigns conducted during the last week by William J. Bryan, urging the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment.

COLOR LINE IN DELAWARE

Democratic Platform Calls For Jim Crow Cars For Negroes

Dover, Del., Sept. 14.—The Democratic state convention adopted the following planks in its platform:

"We invite the co-operation of all white voters to rescue our state from the present corrupt control of its political affairs.

"The control of the Republican party in the state of Delaware for the past twelve years shows a record of incapacity and misrule, which demonstrates its unfitness for the power placed in its hands. They have made unfit nominations, debauched the ballot and abused the election machinery so as to record the votes of dead men and of imported negroes.

"We favor a law requiring all steam railroads and electric railways in Delaware to provide separate accommodations for white and negro passengers and forbidding negro passengers from intruding in cars or parts of cars intended for the accommodation of white people."

"PLENTY OF TIME"

Gaynor Will Not Say Whether He Will Take Gubernatorial Nomination

New York, Sept. 14.—With delegates to the Democratic state convention instructed to vote for his nomination as governor, Mayor Gaynor still refuses to discuss the political situation.

When he was flatly asked whether he would take the nomination if it was offered to him, Gaynor replied: "There is plenty of time between now and the date of the convention for me to make my reply to that question."

Mayor Gaynor declined to discuss the matter further, but his manner indicated that he is considering the question which the political leaders in the state of New York are urging him to answer.

DEMOCRATS CARRY ARIZONA ELECTION

They Will Write the Constitution of the New State

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 14.—Democrats will write the constitution of the new state of Arizona. In the election of delegates to the constitutional convention they won at least twenty-eight of the fifty-two seats in the convention. The official canvass probably will increase the number of Democrats.

If campaign platforms and pledges are carried out the constitution will not be the short, plain instrument pleaded for by those who expressed the fear that any other sort might be frowned on in Washington. It will establish the principle of the initiative, referendum and recall, direct election of United States senators and direct primary.

State-wide prohibition and woman's suffrage may be fought out on the floor of the convention or submitted as amendments to a popular vote simultaneously with the constitution.

KING OF ITALY BALKED

Long Talked of Abruzzi-Elkins Engagement Is Declared Off

Paris, Sept. 14.—A clash between King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and United States Senator Elkins has put a final end to the negotiations for a marriage between Katherine B. Elkins and the Duke d'Abruzzi of the Italian royal house.

Senator Elkins' demands for practically royal honors to be paid to his family before and during the ceremony aroused the anger of King Victor and caused an abrupt termination of the negotiations.

One of the demands of Elkins was that an Italian battleship should be sent to America to convey his daughter to Italy for the wedding, while another was that himself and Mrs. Elkins be accorded places of honor at the betrothal and wedding ceremonies, such as are only assigned to personages of royal blood. These two demands constituted the rock upon which the negotiations split.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 14.—Upon the request of the Berlin police, an American by the name of Margolin and a woman companion were arrested here, charged with having conducted a swindling operation involving $50,000.

Ton of Silver Stolen and Recovered

Cobalt, Ont., Sept. 14.—Seven men are under arrest here in connection with the stealing of a ton of silver bars. All the silver has been recovered from the ditch near the mill.

Stockholm, Sept. 14.—Destructive rains have caused heavy losses in the southern provinces of Scania. Much grain has been ruined and the sugar beet crop has suffered severely.

PICTURES NEAR AVIATION FIELD

Views of An Artist Who Has Enjoyed the Scenes

The editor of the Fine Arts department writes us follows on pictures at the Aviation field in Quincy:

"As you approach the Aviation field at Quincy, in the midst of a motley procession which for hours blackens the causeway, you get a succession of gay pictures, in which the blue waters of many bays and estuaries, flashing under the afternoon sunlight, form the liveliest notes. Marshes spread on all sides, with russet passages and the dull greens of late summer, and beyond these wide expanses rise islands and promontories crowned by cedars. Over towards Boston, beyond bays of blue water ruffled by the breeze, rise the chimneys of great mills, filling the sky with wreaths of thick brown smoke. The far hills of Milton lift their gently rounded outlines against the sky in the southwest and on all the intervening heights are lines and masses of black, growing denser and ever more black as the afternoon wears on towards twilight.

"On the field itself there are many moving spots of color. Two rows of white tents yonder provide shelter for the aeroplanes, and from time to time you see a machine emerge, pushed out to the starting line by mechanicians. A white flag is waved as a signal that somebody is going to do something; a red flag is waved, and the actis under way. There is a whir of propellor blades; the biplane moves over the level ground for a few yards, gathering speed, and, as easily as a huge bird, leaves the earth, and soars aloft, while the stands rustle and murmur and stare. The biplanes are of neutral colors, the predominating one being a faint light-yellow ocher, which varies in the different makes. Between the twb planes, in the centre, the little black spot, now and then almost invisible, is the aviator.

"On the ground the biplane is not an object of surpassing beauty; but when it is in the air the poetry of its motion gives it something of the grace of a bird in flight. While it is still a novelty, we are unable in cold blood to say just how pictorial it may be; the wonder of the achievement must first obscure all other thorghts. The motor is a distinctly machine-like machine, there is no evading that; but on the Farman bislane the propeller blades are invisible when at work, they move so swiftly, and at a half-mile distance there is no sound from them, so that the thing seems to float, glide, swoop and soar, as it were, without effort naturally, like a denizen of the air.

"Toward five o'clock the lower sky in the north and east becomes stained with faint rose and thin smoky exhalations against which Ralph Johnstone's bipiane, as it takes the sharp turn just beyond the automobile parking space, silhouettes itself like a dragonfly making dizzy reverse curves in space. The most astonishing thing is how soon the sense of novelty wanes. We live in such an age of wonders that even this supreme wonder of inventions does not for long retain its power to thrill.

"The most interesting thing in the world is the people. This spectacle of hundreds of thousands of people, drawn by a common interest from far and near, is what really interests the imagination. It is like an army. There are your pictures, in the grandstand, in the automobiles, about the hangars, about the judge's stand, on the causeway, about the railroad stations and in the vast concourse of vehicles which chokes all the roads leading to Atlantic; it is a twelve-day long Derby Day, or Grand Prix, or Harvard-Yale football crowd. It is an experience that is worth while to be in it and of it, and the element of the picturesque is never wanting.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church, West Quincy, was held in the vestry of the church, Monday evening, Sept. 12th.

The meeting was called to order at eight o'clock by the 4th vice president. The report o fthe treasurer covering the last six months was accepted.

Reports were also received from the vice presidents. Several important matters were brought before the League, duly discussed and disposed of.

One name was received for admittance to membership but as it had not been presented to the cabinet in time it was laid on the table until the next meeting.

Business adjourned at 8.45 after which a social hour in charge of Miss Beryl Hannant and Miss Catherine B. Hodgkinson was enjoyed. Fruit and candy were served in charge of Miss C. B. Hodgkinson.

HOUGHS NECK BUDGET.

Another little "Wall" has been completed which in years to come will grace the Houghs Neck school. This little "Wall" weighted 8 1-2 pounds and arrived Sept. 5. As this is the fourth "Wall" our respected citizen James E. Wall now has a complete room. Her name is Carolyn, and she looks like papa—handsome. Jim had to wade in many puddles to get Dr. Dean of Quincy and Dr. Norton of Dorchester, but he got them and in record time too! Good luck Jim, and may your troubles only consist of little walls of blessings.

The Houghs Neck Associates will gather forces tonight after a peaceful summer. Matters of importance are expected to mature. President Maloney is brushing up a bit, and will be expected to give us a bunch of oratory that will show signs of life. Jim can do it too, when he gets mad.

The Men's Club of Union Chapel, of which our esteemed register, Henry W. French, is president, now has 36 members. The club made money on the Mock Trial and plans are now under way for a men's supper. The cooks have not yet been chosen. Preventative dyspepsia, will be their guiding star. Charles E. Decker.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The Charitable Tens Circle of King's Daughters will meet Monday, September 19th, at 2.30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Frank S. Davis, No. 25 Elm street.

The Milton Woman's club will begin its season of 1910-'11 on Monday, October 3, when the first home afternoon will be held. There will be a report on the biennial convention of women's clubs in Cincinnati, and also a reception to the new executive board, which was elected last spring. The second meeting will be on October 17, when Mrs. May Alden Ward will open her course of lectures on current events. The officers and committees are at work on the program for the season and it will soon be completed and announced. The usual interesting season is promised.

Next Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 21, the Women's Missionary societies of the Wollaston Baptist church meet at three o'clock with Mrs. J. P. Perry of 12 Marion street. The afternoon's subject will be Alaska and the speaker Mrs. James McWhinnie.

Brockton's Visiting Nurses made 228 calls in August and considerable illness was reported. There are two regular nurses.

• • •

The Ladies' Library Association of Randolph, the oldest club in the state, opens its season of 1910-'11 this evening, meeting to discuss the winter's course of entertainments.

• • •

Chairmen of the committees of the Quincy Women's club can have the use of the executive board room for meetings by applying to Mrs. F. S. Davis of the House committee. The rest of the club house is being renovated and floors painted preparatory to the opening of the season in October. Reports of the State and Biennial meetings will be given at the opening meeting of the club and there will be a reception, music and tea.

Members of the Day Nursery Association have preparations well under way for their annual "tag day" which will be on Saturday Oct. 15. Every detail will be carefully looked after by the committee which hopes to raise a large sum of money to continue the work of the Nursery.

• • •

What has heretofore been known as reciprocity or president's day of the Quincy Women's club, will this season be Federation day when Miss Georgia Bacon, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs will be given a reception. Presidents of neighboring clubs will be invited as usual and it will be one of the pleasant afternoons of the season's meetings.

• • •

The Church Helpers of the Wollaston Unitarian church meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Carl G. Horst, the pastor's wife.

The Hospital Aid Association is preparing to open its season of meetings with a large one and special effort will be made to get out a large attendance.

QUINCY DAY NURSERY.

The announcement that the Day Nursery Tag Day, will be Oct. 8 was an error; the day has been set for Oct. 15. New Tags and official boxes will be used this year.

Generous contributions have been made for the new house on Garfield street but there are a few things still needed. One of the most important needs is a kindergarten table seating ten with ten small chairs for the dining room. There are now so many children they cannot all be seated at one time at the old table.

An oil cloth is also needed for the floor of one of the rooms. The Day Nursery Association will very much appreciate these practical gifts.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals for 1910 are announced in a bulletin issued today by the National association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis an dthe American Red Cross. "A million for tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign.

Two features of the sale this year are unique and will bring considerable capital to the tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close co-operation with the National association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced also from 20 percent to 12 1-2 percent, which will mean at least $50,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States.

The stamps are to be designated as "Red Cross Seals" this year and are to be placed on the back of letters instead of on the front.

The national conference of tuberculosis secretaries through its president, John A. Kingsbury of New York, has issued a letter calling upon all state and local anti-tuberculosis associations to unite with the National association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the Red Cross society in the sale of Christmas seals and the extermination of tuberculosis. Every effort will be made to discourage the use of local stamps and to encourage the distribution of the national stickers. It is expected that over 430 anti-tuberculosis associations and hundreds of Red Cross societies in every state of the Union will unite in the sale of Christmas seals.

WATER FOR THE DOG.

Human thoughtlessness is nowhere emphasized more sharply than in the general failure to provide better facilities for the relief of thirst among the animals of the city.

The city of Mexico has a law, almost a century old, requiring storekeepers and business men in general to keep pans of fresh water in the doorways of their business establishments for the relief of dogs. The law was secured through the efforts of the kind-hearted women of the city, and in consequence Mexico City never has a mad dog "scare," and hydrophobia is unknown and muzzles are unneccessary.

In enlightened America, in sharp contrast with "barbarous Mexico," when and where is provision made for man's friend, the dog. Only a small proportion of public drinking fountains are so constructed that dogs can drink from them, and the thirsty dog must wander disconsolately about until his sufferings become so acute that he is pronounced mad, and the usual tragedy is the result.

The matter is one that can be regulated without the aid of law. Let the householder spare a thought for the dog, as well as for the horse. A pan of water under the hydrant in the yard will soon attract attention, and perhaps will be the means of preventing another one of those "scares" which speak so ill for public common sense. In summer never let the pan, provided for the household pets, be empty. One will be astonished, if he observes closely, at the number of times an animal will drink during the day. —From Our Dumb Animals.

ALTITUDE TAKEN BY ANGLES.

The Globe Man at the Quincy meet tells how the altitude of the aviators was taken by angles. Off to the north side of the aviation course, in the field near the beach, Ihad a talk with one of the four young men who carry on the work of taking the altitude of the flyers.

He was seated on a perch, or platform, about four feet high. Under the platform was a telephone booth, a young man sitting at the instrument. Above the platform a sextant was fixed to a wooden support, in a suitable position for the observer to look through it easily while seated. It was like an ordinary sea captain's sextant, except that the finding mirror was larger, and it was fitted with an arrangement for moving the indicator, called an alidade, more rapidly than usual along the arc of degrees, known as the vernier scale. This instrument is placed at the end of a base line 5000 feet long, at the other end of which, in a field near the Quincy shore boulevard and Squantum street, is another sextant, similarly equipped.

"As these instruments can work only in one vertical plane," said the young man to me, speaking a language known to scientists and sailors, "we have two stations on the hills at some distance from the field which work in conjunction with us."

One of these auxiliary stations is near the Quincy water tower, and the other on Forbes hill. They are 6200 feet apart. Each is equipped with a surveyor's transit and they are connected by telephone. The operators arrange to sight a machine at the same moment.

"As the theodolite records both horizontally and vertically," said the young man to me, "their observations are a good check on ours, and we are able to tell exactly how high a machine goes, unless sight of it is obscured by clouds."

Dates for the winter season of Alpha and Union Halls are being rapidly booked at the present time.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Some of the Fashions That Were Ungainly Last Season

What We May Expect This Autumn

IN FASHION'S REALM.

At the end of the season we begin to take stock of what the months that have gone meant in a sartorial way. In the hurly-burly of the time itself we suspended judgment, sometimes fatally. We accepted things that we should have refused, and we ignored things that we should have used. Pressing need of clothes made us judge unwisely, and the season probably ended for us in a vague feeling of dissatisfaction and disapproval.

It is always well, for this reason, to go into the fashions in detail and try to find out how far it is possible to avoid mistakes during the months that are to come.

All shops take an inventory of stock several times a year, and balance up their judgment against the wishes of the people. They find out what has sold and what has remained on the shelves. They get at the truth of the difference between supply and demand.

This is not done in a haphazard fashion. It is a deliberate statistical piece of work, the results of which are figures, not fancies. It is not possible for the individual to work in this fashion. Her method should be just as thorough, but it must be along other lines.

She should take a week or two to go over every part of her wardrobe in fact and memory. Let her put the results down on a piece of paper, so she will have them before her. If she absorbs them until they are part of her mental make-up she will bring better judgment and a wiser expenditure for the choosing of her clothes for fall and winter.

It is said that every one makes a mistake once, but only a fool makes the same mistake twice. Harsh as this may sound to our own ears when we remember how often we have erred twice in the same place because of stubborness or carelessness or forgetfulness, it is a good maxim to keep with us.

If experience is to teach anything it should teach it at the first sharp blow. We cannot help having a bit of disdain for the person who goes back for another blow, including ourselves.

This applies to clothes as it does to all the other details of life, and it will continue to happen over and over, unless a woman takes stock and finds out just where experience should teach her.

She has to buy new clothes soon, and she must either get the wrong things through carelessness or the right things through caution. Everything that is fashionable is not desirable, and all that is lovely is not becoming.

Few women know offhand just what is the correct thing for them to buy and to wear; experience must teach them certain things and comparison the rest.

The only way a woman can approach with wisdom the new purchases which are to be made is to take this time of the year for finding out what she must avoid and what she must see.

She will be astonished at the knowledge she will have after a few days of careful wardrobe inspection. If she does it systematically, gown by gown, hat by hat, and puts down opposite the name of each one whether it was a failure or a success she has added years to the sum total of her experience.

When we have finished, no matter if it took two weeks of our time, the trouble will be worth the achievement. One would have a much wiser head concerning the offering of shops and dressmakers, of tailors and milliners, if one kept this little half sheet of figures in the hand or in the mind.

Attractive things that were going cheap would not entice; new models that were pronounced irresistible would not allure; hats that looked entrancing on our best friend would not create envy. We would be saved so much thought and would gain so much in placidity.

We should know what was worth our money and our wearing. It might present itself in various guises and many rooms, but it would have as a foundation the thing which was necessary for us to secure.

We would have certain knowlege that shorts coats, or long coats, were not for us; that the peasant blouse was never intended for our figure, or that it was the only kind we should wear. We would prove by experience that stripes were not as good as check, or vice versa, and that ornate collars did not serve our necks as attractively as simple ones.

These are only a partial list of the things that we would know by memory. The facts would be so ingrained that the action of the mind would be involuntary for or against a certain thing.

It seems unbelievable that any one would think such a method useful. If they do they surely buy unwisely. We all face the fact that we do this thing here and there through the season, at the cost of our purse and our self-repect, but the great question is, Do we only buy unwisely at times and under stress ,or do we buy unwisely as a habit?

If we do the latter this is high time to reform. No woman wants her closet filled with gowns and hats that are useless, and she does not want the memory of having spent $10 on something that had to be given away because she could not use it.

It is all very well to give away old clothes, but it takes a saint to give away new ones with any degree of unselfishness and equanimity.

What the coming season will really bring is only rumored, not foretold. There is no reason to believe that hats or skirts will be less eccentric than they have been. Colors will probably be less vivid and black will be much worn. Hats will be trimmed at the back, skirts will be short, and presumably narrow. The hair will go back to the Greek fashion and be arranged in a large Psyche or many small curls—the pompadour shows no sign of returning. There is a strong tendency to bring high collars back into fashion and put the collarless blouse out of commission.

But whatever the fashions, the great point is the way the individual approaches them. If you will go to work now ,take an inventory of stock and experience, get the result well in your mind, and be guided by it when you begin to buy clothes next month, then you will be less apt to make mistakes and will probably view your purchases with serenity after you have worn them.—Anne Rittenhouse in N. Y. Times.

ATTRACT THE BUYER.

An advertising expert tells this story: One Saturday afternoon two bootblacks were trying to draw trade. Their stands were similar in appearance, the boys looked alike, and their locations were of equal value. One called out "Shine, shine, get a shine here," briskly enough. The other called out "Get your Sunday shine." The second boy did a rushing business while the first was idle.

Quite a lesson there for the advertiser. The second boy won out because he called the attention of people to a need they had already felt and recognized. He knew that a lot of them would n eed a shine the next day, and he simply called their attention to a want they had already felt. The successful advertiser calls attention to a want the public has already felt. He wastes no breath or space trying to persuade them of some need they had not recognized as a need. If the public wants cheapness, first the successful advertiser emphasizers prices. If the public wants style first the good advertiser conveys the impression of fashion and modishness. If good wearing goods are what is wanted, the advertiser emphasizes durability—Beverly Times.

BIGGER BETTER BUSIER

In order that we may purchase a bigger and better stock of goods and make our store busier during the next few days we offer everything here at prices much lower than cost. If you want a suit, skirt, waist, or furs call here during this week. This is the chance of your life to save money.

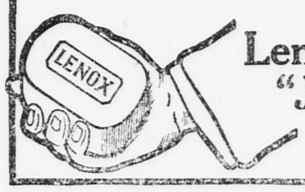

Our custom tailoring department continues to gain in popularity. No woman can be happy with a misfit garment and we guarantee all suits, etc., that leave our hands to be perfect in every way. Come in and look around. We invite inspection.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

A romance of army life in the Indian country in Indian fighting days! Lanier, the self sacrificing hero who typifies Uncle Sam's military officers; Miriam, the sweet girl whose love he wins; Dora, the capricious little beauty who set a whole military encampment in a turmoil; Rawdon, young, miejudged, but honest, who was the rival of the evil officer Rafferty, a soldier of whom the service was well rid—these are only some of the characters that General King has drawn in the thrilling settings in the far west of bygone days when the Apaches and the Sioux waged war on the "palefaces" in their last stand to save their hunting grounds. In this realistic narrative the humor compels laughter, the romance charms and the intrigue and tragedy thrill and grip the reader.

CHAPTER I.

THE sun was sinking low beyond the ford of the foaming Platte. The flag at the old fort on the neighboring height clung to the staff with scarcely a flutter, awaiting the evening salute of the trumpets and the roar of the sunset gun. The young girl flitted restlessly about the vine covered porch of the roadside cottage. She laid the big binocular aside, a wistful, longing look in the dark and dreamy eyes. Ever since stable call she had hovered about that shaded nook, again and again searching the northward slopes and ridges. Rawdon should have been here at her side—Rawdon, whom she had not seen for three mortal days—Rawdon, whom she had never set eyes on before the 1st of April and whom now she looked upon as the foremost soldier of the regiment, when in point of fact he was but a private trooper, serving the first part of his first enlistment.

This girl of seventeen, in her dainty white frock, plumped herself dejectedly down on the top step with two very shapely, slender, slippered feet displayed on the second below.

And then of a sudden the tears were dashed away and the girl sprang to her feet. A blithe voice hailed her from within.

"Dey's comin', Miss Dora—two on 'em, at least—like enough to be twin brudders."

Dora flew light as a bird to the other end of the little porch and was gazing out through the honeysuckles with all her soul in her eyes.

Coming up the slope at easy canter rode a young officer, with broad brimmed hat and dusty field dress, alert, slender, sinewy, of only medium height and not more than twenty-five years, with a handsome, sun tanned, smiling face, and behind him came what Aunt Chloe, in her "darky" dialect had declared "the very spit of him"—a young trooper in similar slouch hat and dusty field dress, younger probably by three or four years, but to the full as alert and active, his face now all aglow with a light that was sweet for girlish eyes to see.

The leader swung his hat and blithely shouted as he curbed his eager horse. "Howdy, Miss Dora? Bless your heart, Aunt Chloe, I knew you'd have the buttermilk ready! No, Rawdon, I shan't dismount"—this to the young orderly, who had sprung from saddle. "Father home, Miss Dora?" he went on cheerily.

"Over at the stables, Mr. Lanier," was the smiling answer. Trooper Rawdon had instantly swung once more into saddle and was reining back to his place.

"Stables going yet? I thought it supper time. Colonel sent me ahead to find him. Three of E troop horses act like they'd been eating loco weed."

"Colonel Button's always findin' some way of sendin' you in ahaid, Marse Lanier," grinned Chloe. "Ah don't wonder dey says you can do anything you like an' never get hauled up for it."

"You're a gossip, auntie," laughed Lanier. "Rawdon, you dismount and wait for Dr. Mayhew in case I miss him. Give him the colonel's message and say the squadron should be in by 7:30." And, with a wave of his hand, he was off.

Then Chloe vanished opportunely. Dora, with glistening eyes and glowing cheeks, retreated within the shelter of the bowered porch. Then, bounding up the steps and turning with outstretched arms, thither Rawdon followed.

Ten minutes later at swift trot came a third horse and rider, the horse all that a cavalry horse should be in gait and build, the rider well nigh as marked in build and proportions. In front of the little cottage of the veterinary surgeon he hurriedly dismounted and strode, angering, through the gate. Dora, her face paling, met him at the head of the steps.

He brushed by, turned sharp to his left, and in an instant the two men were face to face.

"Rawdon," spoke the newcomer, his tone curt, domineering, insole "what do you mean by letting an ord r lead your horse to stables? Go . u to yours at once! Take my horse, too, and groom him!"

Rawdon flushed to his forehead.

"My orders were from Lieutenant Lanier, sergeant, and they were distinctly to stop here."

"Go you at once and do as I say," was the instant rejoinder, and the veins in the sergeant's face were swelled almost to bursting.

"Indeed, Sergeant Fitzroy," began the girl rebukefully, "those were Lieutenant Lanier's orders."

"Hang Lieutenant Lanier's orders! No stripling sub can give such orders in this regiment. How dare you delay there? Go, you town skip, or I'll kick you through the"—

But now, with blazing eyes, Dora Mayhew threw herself in front of him. "If you raise hand or foot against Rawdon, Sergeant Fitzroy, it's the last time you come inside our gate. No, I'll not stand aside! Before you strike him you'll have to strike me!"

And then and there Sergeant Fitzroy realized that the fears and forebodings of the past month were more than grounded. If angered before he was maddened now. Brushing her light form aside with one sweep of his powerful arm, he sprang forward at the young soldier's throat just as a tall, lean man with grizzled beard, but athletic build, bounded up the steps and caught his wrist.

"None of that in my house, Fitzroy!" came the order, stern and compelling. "In God's name, what does this mean?" And, still grasping the sergeant's arm, the speaker backed the raging Englishman against the wooden pillar and held him there.

"Let go, Mayhew!" raved the sergeant. "I've ordered that young rip to stables, and he refuses to go."

"He was ordered to stay, papa, until you came," protested Dora, her eyes ablaze. "Lieutenant Lanier—that man's superior officer—gave him the colonel's message to you."

"He was ordered to go by Lieutenant Lanier's superior, the officer of the day, whom I represent," was Fitzroy's answer, "and the longer he stays the worse 'twill be for him."

"No officer ever authorized you to come to my quarters and lay violent hands on a man behaving like a gentleman, which you are not," was the cutting rejoinder of the older man, and it stung Fitzroy to fresh fury. Was he,

"BEFORE YOU STRIKE HIM YOU'LL HAVE TO STRIKE ME!"

the model rider of the regiment, to be braved like this and in presence of the girl he loved?

"Let go! You must, Mayhew!" he hissed through clinched teeth. "You have no authority. You are only a civilian. You can be broke and fired if I report this—outrage—and what I know. Let go!" he shouted, freeing himself by furious effort. "Now, you, Rawdon, come with me. No. Stop! Corporal Watts!" he shouted to a noncommissioned officer swinging up the pathway toward the guardhouse on the bluff, four men of the guard at his back. "Come here and take charge of this man. It's the order of the officer of the day."

Corporal Watts slowly descended the incline, then, obviously embarrassed at the presence of Dora Mayhew, demanded further information.

By this time Rawdon, pale and silent, was standing at the foot of the steps. Too well he and other young soldiers had learned to know the weight of Sergeant Fitzroy's spite. Two officers were coming swiftly around the corner of the corral, Lanier foremost.

"I say again, Corporal Watts, this man is to be taken in charge at once. It is Captain Curbit's order as officer of the day. I came direct from him," was Fitzroy's final order. But it failed.

"Do nothing of the kind, Corporal Watts," said a quiet voice, at sound of which Sergeant Fitzroy whirled about and turned, if a possible thing, a full shade redder. There at the gate stood Lieutenant Lanier. There, a dozen yards away, but trudging fast as dignity would permit, came the officer of the day.

A jerk of the head to the corporal in response to his instant salute, and that young soldier, much relieved, strode away to join his men. Then Captain Curbit turned on Sergeant Fitzroy.

"You told me nothing of the facts in this case, sir. Lieutenant Lanier says he directed this man to wait here, with the colonel's message, while he rode to stables. Pardon me, Miss Dora. Come this way, sergeant."

And there was nothing for it but to obey. Abashed, humiliated, rebuked and in her presence, where he had looked but a moment before to humble and humiliate his rival, Fitzroy could only lift his hand in salute, follow the captain out of earshot and there make his plea as best he could, leaving Lanier and the silent young trooper, Dora and her grave faced old father, in possession of the field.

For a moment they watched Fitzroy.

"He'll give you no more trouble, I fancy," said Lanier in low tone to the veterinarian. "I'll say good night again, Miss Dora." And he walked cheerily away, but Mayhew looked after him long and anxiously.

"Maybe not—maybe not," he muttered, with sorrowing shake of the head, "but few men can give more trouble than him when he's minded, and I reckon he's minded now."

* * * * * * *

Nearly six long months went the regiment a-field on the hardest campaign of its history. Then at last by way of reward it had been ordered into big Fort Cushing for the winter. The new station was blithe and merry with Christmas preparations. Half a dozen fair visitors had come from the distant east. The band was good, the dancing men were many, the dancing floor was fine, and the dance they were having on Friday night, Dec. 16, was all that even an army dance could be until just after 11 o'clock. Then something happened to cast a spell over everybody.

Bob Lanier was officer of the guard. Bob had asked the colonel to let him turn over his sword to a brother officer, who, being in mourning, could not dance, and the colonel had curtly said no. The colonel's wife was amazed. Six girls were sorrowful, and one was cruelly hurt. She was under parental orders to start for home on the morrow. She liked Bob Lanier infinitely more than she liked her father's dictum that she must like him not at all. As for Bob Lanier, the garrison knew he loved her devotedly even before she knew it herself

Took the Advice.

The president of one of the prominent railway corporations in America was making a stirring address to an audience of young men and dwelt with particular emphasis on the necessity of making a good appearance.

"When you are looking for work," he said, "be careful that you are presentable. If you have only $24 in the world, spend $20 for a suit of clothes, $3.50 for a pair of shoes, 50 cents for a hair cut and shave. Then walk up to the job wherever it is and ask for it like a man."

This advice was greeted with great applause, and the railway president sat down amid a storm of cheers. The very next morning a dapper looking young fellow walked into the outer office of the orator and, handing a note to the clerk, said, "Please give this to the president." The note read as follows:

"I have paid $20 for this suit of clothes, $3.50 for a pair of shoes and 50 cents for a hair cut and a shave. I have walked from Harlem, and I would like a job as conductor on your road."

He got the job.

Millet.

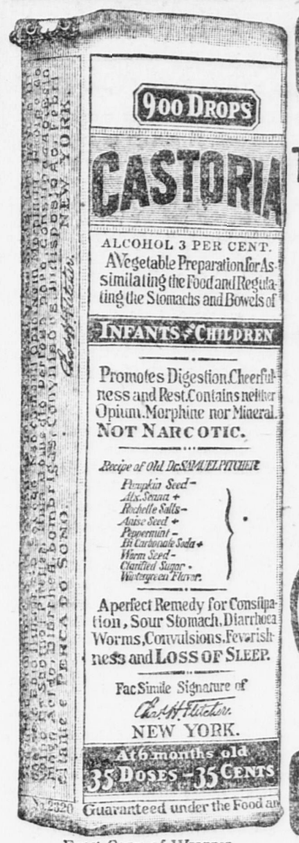

Millet was once the daily food of the masses in Europe, but has gradually been dropped and is eaten now mostly by the Slavs beyond the eastern frontiers of Europe and by the negroes in Africa.

An East Indian Custom.

An odd custom prevails in India. A native visitor never takes his departure of his own accord. Etiquette requires the host to dismiss him, which he does in a polite way, not by saying, "Go," but by saying hospitably: "Pray, come again. The sooner we see your face the better we shall be pleased."

Java's Flying Frog.

The flying frog of Java is usually a beautiful green in color, white underneath, with orange yellow soaring membranes between the fingers, and it changes color like the chameleon. This frog feeds on insects, remains quiet in bushes by day and when disturbed glides away to quite a distance.

ITS INFLUENCE ON CONGRESS

A Significant Feature of the Result In Maine

BURLEIGH MACHINE IS UPSET

Third District Congressman Long Dictated Maine Patronage In Both Branches of Congress—His Defeat Means Reorganization of Republican Party In State—Republicans Fear Losing Seats In Eastern States

Washington, Sept. 14.—There is a feeling of genuine alarm in Republican circles in Washington as a result of the sweeping Democratic victory in Maine. It is admitted on all sides that the Republican party has suffered a severe blow, not only because it has lost control of the state, not only because the state has done its share toward giving the Democrats control of the house of representatives by electing two Democrats, but most important of all because the party leaders fear that the Democratic victory will have a tremendous influence next fall in every state where the votes are closely drawn.

The wide margin by which Frederick W. Plaisted was elected over Governor Fernald is a source of great astonishment to Republicans who have been keeping in close touch with Maine affairs. It had been feared that the election would be uncomfortably close, but none was rash enough to prophecy that Plaisted would equal the 7000 plurality given the present governor two years ago, much less exceed that vote.

Perhaps the best answer to the question as to what caused a humiliating defeat of the Republicans in Maine is to be found in the defeat of Representative Burleigh of the Third district. Here, in the opinion of some of the closest observers of conditions of Maine affairs, can be found the real state of affairs. Burleigh long was the leader of the Republican machine in Maine. For years he controlled the entire organization of the state and practically dictated the patronage, not only from the house end, but also the senate patronage at the disposal of Senators Hale and Frye.

It was through the Burleigh machine that Hale operated for years, and to the Burleigh machine he looked for the votes in the legislature to send him back to the senate. It was the inability of Burleigh to guarantee that his machine would be in working order and able to control the legislature, coupled with Senator Hale's desire to help his son, Fred Hale, get the congressional nomination in the first district away from Asher Hinds, that prompted the veteran of the senate to announce that he would retire to private life at the close of his present term.

The election indictes that Burleigh underestimated the tottering condition of his organization, for he has gone down in the wreck himself and his seat in the Sixty-Second congress will be occupied by Samuel W. Gould, a Democrat.

The results in Maine have served to impress the managers of the Republican congressional campaign with the necessity of exerting themselves to the utmost if they hope to retain control of the house. Their chief danger, it is pointed out, is in losing seats in eastern states.

Representative McKinlay of California, one of the most effective campaign speakers now on the stump and one of the most optimistic members of the house organization, only a few days ago claimed the house for the Republicans by a scant twelve members. He was one of the speakers sent to Maine to help return a solid delegation and he did not concede Republican losses in that state in making his estimate of the Republican control in the Sixty-Second congress.

TUTTLE STEPS OUT

President of the Boston and Maine Railroad Declines Re-election

Boston, Sept. 14.—At the monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Boston and Maine railroad, President Lucius Tuttle declined re-election to the office he has filled for so many years, and Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, was elected acting president, with all the powers of president.

Mr. Tuttle gave as the reason for his action a desire to be relieved from arduous duties and to have a chance to rest. He was given leave of absence until the annual meeting of the road, Oct. 11, 1911, and it is understood that during that time he will receive full pay.

Mr. Mellen's first acts as acting president of the Boston and Maine road were to order the milk transportation rates on the Boston and Maine to be placed upon a basis with the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, temporarily at least, and that the Hoosac tunnel be immediately electrified. In fact a gang of men were at work yesterday carrying out this part of Mellen's program toward improving the Boston and Maine system.

HIGHLY PLEASING TO BOTH PARTIES

How Germany and Turkey Worked Battleship Trade

London, Sept. 14.—A telegram from Salonika throws new light on the recent purchase by Turkey of two antiquated German battleships for $15,000,000. It will be remembered that the Ottoman government recently failed to recover the balance of ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid's fortune, which was lying in German banks.

German diplomacy proved more amenable than German law, and the government accepted for the battleships $40,000,000 of Abdul Hamid's money, which was practically in German possession, calling on the Ottoman exchequer only for the balance.

The transaction is highly pleasing to both parties. Turkey has been able to make use of the deposed sultan's money, while Germany has been able to sell two obsolete warships and to obtain prompt payment for them.

EXAMINERS ARE FOOLED

Banks In Small Western Cities Have Been Concealing Loans

Washington, Sept. 14.—A system by which banks in small cities in the west have been fooling national bank examiners and concealing loans in their reserve bank in a large city has been discovered and is under investigation. A keen young man among the examiners has found a concrete instance of as many as a dozen banks in small cities concealing loans in one reserve bank in Chicago.

There is authority for the statement that the whole system of national bank examination and regulation is to receive great attention during the next few months. New legislation may even be recommended to congress.

WOMAN HELD AS SLASHER

Charged With Carving Neck and Face of Man With Razor

Rumford Falls, Me., Sept. 14.—Mrs. James Caliendo was held by Judge Stearns, after a hearing here, for the October term of court in the sum of $500.

The charge was assault with intent to kill, and the alleged victim was Frank Lammac, who was badly cut by a razor, said to have been used by the respondent a week ago. Lammac was cut about the face and neck and was unable to appear in court until yesterday.

ENGLISHMAN GETS $29,600

Lion's Share of Honors In Aero Meet Go to Grahame-White

THE BOSTON LIGHT FLIGHTS

Won Against Time Without a Single Competitor—Wright Team Second In Points, Smashing World's Record For Accuracy In Landing—No Accident to Life or Limb During Many Exciting Contests

Boston, Sept. 14.—The great Harvard-Boston aero meet has closed, as far as the official contests are concerned.

Never in the history of aviation has there been a more successful meet financially. So successful has it been that exhibitions will be held today and tomorrow.

And this first financially successful aero meet was "captured" by the Englishman, Claude Grahame-White, who scored more points than all the other aviators combined, and carried away in prizes twice as much money as the "field" of contestants.

The Boston Globe prize of $10,000 for the race twice around Boston light he won without a single competitor, against time, leaving a record of 33 miles in 34 minutes 1 1-5 seconds for future aviators to try to better—an exhibition of speed never before seen in America for the distance.

The prize of $3000 for the best speed laps also went to Grahame-White with a record for the course of 5.25 miles in 6 minutes 1 second. In the altitude, duration and distance events he won second money, $1000 each for duration and distance and $2000 for altitude.

In the bomb dropping contest, invented in this country, and never before tried by Grahame-White, he won the only prize, $5000, with twice as good a score as his nearest competitor.

In all Grahame-White will take away with him $22,100 in prize money, in addition to the $7500 guarantee. And by carrying passengers he has cleared nearly $2000 expense money.

Not only did the English aviator capture the lion's share of points, prizes and honors, but he set a pace for American aviators that prevented the meet from becoming tiresome, and put himself out to entertain the crowds when an ascent meant risk to his life and his machines.

Against the showing of Grahame-White, the field of American aviators pales. The Wright team, Brookins and Johnstone, with the two biplanes that showed great efficiency, carried away $6250 in all, first prize in five events and second prize in two.

These prizes, three of which were for the Wright specialties, were altitude, duration, distance, slow lap, both prizes, and both prizes for accuracy.

It was by the Wright team that the only world's record was smashed at the meet, that of accuracy in landing. Ralph Johnstone established a new world's record for accuracy of 5 feet 4 inches. He also established a new American record for duration and distance by remaining in the air 185 minutes and 40 seconds, covering a distance of 101 miles 289 feet.

The final summary of points and money division for the nine days of the meet follow:

	Points.	Money.
Grahame-White	226.5	$22,100
Brookins	111	4,250
Johnstone	52	5,000
Curtiss	38.5	2,000
Willard	21	50

The contract prices for entry were: Grahame-White, $7500; Brookins and Johnson (Wright Brothers entry), $30,000; Curtiss, $10,000; Willard, $4000; Roe, $7500.

Fortune enabled the Harvard-Boston aero meet to establish a new world's record for excess of income over expenditure, and for the total absence of any accident to life or limb during the meet, and for no accident to aeroplane of more than $500 damage.

KAISER'S GIFT TO MEXICO

Statue of Famous German Scientist of Century Ago Is Unveiled

Mexico City, Sept. 14.—Tuesday was German day at the Mexican centenary celebration. The big event was the unveiling of a statue of Frederich Henrich Alexander Von Humboldt, the German scientist and author who more than 100 years ago made a journey of research through Mexico.

The statue is the gift to the republic by Emperor William and the formal presentation was made by Herr Carlbuenz, German minister to Mexico. The acceptance was by President Diaz.

GLENN CURTISS IN HARD LUCK

White Says He Took Great Chances at Quincy Meet

C. Grahame-White writes interestingly to the Globe on the different aviators at the Quincy meet: He says

"I have but one regret about the meeting and that is the continued illfortune which followed Mr Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator. Knowing, as I do, the great capabilities of Mr. Curtiss, I regret that he was unable to do justice to himself, even after the many attempts he made in which to get the speed he felt necessary to cope with my Bleriot machine.

"After all, there is more luck than necessarily good management in aviation, especially in the department consisting of speed. What has happened to Mr. Curtiss has happened to myself, as well as other aviators. It is a question of having the speed and without that the greatest aviator is helpless.

"Mr Curtiss tried every means he knew in order to get the speed to wrest the Boston Globe prize. He took mny chances, as his sudden descents attest; in fact, far more than the ordinary man would do. He risked his safety, and that is all that the bravest aviator can do. When he found that even with a machine stripped to the minimum of surface, with a strange engine, that he could not make the flight, he did not even stop there. He then prepared to take a last chance in the biplane which carried him in such a magnificent manner from Albany to New York city. Again the fates were against him, for yesterday's winds made a fast flight to Boston light impossible in fact, dangerous in the extreme, for the wind was of a particularly exasperating kind and made speed work hazardous.

"I am extremely sorry for Mr. Curtiss. It would have given me pleasure to have had competition for th e Boston Globe prize, for it would have been more interesting for me and also for the thousands of persons II have seen in my daily flights. However. it gives me great pleasure to know that I have won the splendid prize of $10,000 offered by Gen. Chas. H. Taylor.

"My success at bomb throwing, speed and getaway was also a great satisfaction, for when I arrived here I did not have the remotest idea of what I was going to do. I knew that I had excellent machines, but I did not know much about your aviators except by reputation. Also I did not know how very well equipped they would be; therefore, I consider myself very lucky to have got off as well as I did.

"The Wright machines and operators did extremely well and I must say that the machine is an excellent one.

"I found Mr. Johnstone to be a remarkable aviator, whose control in the air is wonderful. He seemed to be able to do the most hair-raising stunts without the least bit of trouble. He is one of the finest sky jockeys I ever saw and I have seen some excellent trick men in the air, among them my compatriot, Mr. Roe, who in England is looked upon as one of the best. Here he has been very unlucky.

"As regards Mr. Brookins, who won the altitude honors, I found him to be one of the best operators at that class of flying that I have ever come in contact with.

"In conclusion I have only to state that my visit to Boston has been a memorable one, and that when I leave your city I shall carry away the fondest recollections of the splendid treatment afforded me by the press and public.

—A movement has been started to have one of the new states to be admitted to the Union named Lincoln, to commemorate the name of President Abraham Lincoln, and it is expected that it will be endorsed by the Grand Army as a body.—Athol Chronicle.

some trophies which are offered, the city of Boston cup, the John Hays Hammond cup, and the John Barry Ryan cup. One of the stipulations is that the aeroplanes must be at an altitude of 1800 feet when the bombs are thrown. This contest together with various races and all sorts of aerial stunts should furnish sufficient amusement for all who attend the meet on the closing days.

Glen H. Curtiss will probably not be there, as he is expected in Syracuse on Wednesday to try for the world's record for altitude at the New York state fair. Mr. Curtiss has been very unfortunate during the meet, but being a thorough sportsman he has no complaints to make. After he had the new engine installed everyone had hopes of his making some new records, and especially of his making a try for the Globe prize in a flight to Boston light. Monday, he tried out the engine for the first time, and was obliged to land in the marsh near the Neponset river before he had completely circled the course. Yesterday he was still less successful and had gone scarcely 200 yards when he was obliged to land. The flight resembled that of a bird with a broken pinion. It is very unfortunate from our American standpoint that Mr. Curtiss had so much trouble, for Grahame-White admitted that he feared him more than any of the others. But even so, we do not begrudge the young Englishman one penny of his $22,100 for he deserved every bit of it, and he will always be welcomed here.

Probably the most enthusiastic spectators yesterday were out in the harbor. A large number of children were taken for a sail in the Floating Hospital ship. The boat was anchored off the aviation field so that all the children, even those confined to their cots, could get a view of aeroplanes. Many of the little tots had expressed a wish to see the aviation and the officials made it possible for those who were strong enough to take the trip down the harbor.

SPORTS AT BROCKTON FAIR.

The third annual Marathon held in conection with the Brockton Fair will take place Friday, Oct. 7. The start will be made in front of the Boston Athletic Association on Exeter Street and the finish will be in the fair grounds. The route will be the same as that of previous years and only two laps will be run on the Brockton Fair track.

The eighth annual amateur athletic meet will be held on the grounds Thursday, Oct. 6. The list of events includes 440 yard novice, scratch; 100 and 880 yard dash and run, open only to residents of Plymouth county one mile relay, open to all colleges, Y. M. C. A. teams and recognized athletic organizations.

The handicaps events will consist of 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440 yard run, 120 yard high hurdles, putting 16 pound shot, pole vault, 880 yard run, one mile run, three mile run, 220 yard low hurdles, running high jump, running broad jump. Entries close Sept. 28 with Horace A. Keith, 26 Pinkham St., Brockton.

SPORTING NOTES.

At the Water street grounds Saturday the Quincys will played a picked team from the Old Colony league.

Three boats have been selected to represent this country in the German-American sonder races to be held at Kiel during the month of June 1911. The Beaver, owned by George B. Dabney, Augus H. Eustis and George Nichols; the Bibelot, owned by Harry Payne Whitney and R. W. Emmons, 2d and the Cima which belongs to Guy Lowell, are the three which have been chosen.

REPUBLICAN GATHERING.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the Republican gathering on Saturday at the home of Councillor J. Stearns Cushing at Norwood, which is to be in the nature of a reception to Governor Draper, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Senators Henry Cabot, Lodge and W. Murray Crane, and Congressman John W. Weeks, with the members of the Republican city and town committees of the second councillor district which include Quincy. The reception will be held from 1 to 5 P. M., Nearly 1000 invitation were issued. Theaffair will be one of the most notable gatherings of this year's Republican campaign.

FREE TIME TABLES.

The National Granite Bank has now on hand for free distribution timetables of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. giving arrivals and departures of trains from Quincy, Quincy Adams and Wollaston. Citizens are cordially invited to call at the bank and help themselves. tf

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND.

Johnny Kling Says He Had Hard Time Coming Back.

WAS GIVEN GREAT PANNING.

In First Game He Caught This Season He Made Costly Wild Throw—Practiced Throwing Continually and Regained His Old Form.

No. XXIII.

By JOHNNY KLING.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Did I have a hard time coming back? Well, you can just bet I did. When I joined my team early in the season I thought I was in great shape, and I figured all I had to do was to jump into harness, get to work behind the bat and do as I did before. You see, I had played with the semi-professionals the year before, and I believed that my throwing arm was as accurate as ever and all I had to do was to get into the game. Right there is where I was away off. I was as slow as a truck horse. I tried to do as I had done in other seasons—to move around quickly—but it was of no use. Something seemed to be holding me.

To tell the truth, it began to worry me. So after thinking matters over one afternoon I decided that the best thing I could do would be to practice continually, then in the course of a short time I could judge best myself whether I was improving or going back. From that day on I practiced throwing to the bases. I would ask one of my teammates to play second and another third, and I would also have a speedy runner on first, with instructions to steal. By pegging at a human target this way I rapidly swung my arm into shape.

I remember well the first game I caught this season. I attempted to catch a runner going to third and threw several feet over Steinfeldt's head. "Go on back to Kansas City, where you belong!" some one yelled from the stands. "Take him out! Get another backstop!" and other unkind remarks were hurled at me. I was getting the first "panning" I had received in a long time, and I had it coming to me. I was pretty much of a big frost, and to make it harder the fans expected more of me than I had ever done before.

Early in June while the weather was cold I went in and caught a game and hurt my arm on a snap throw to third. I really thought for a time that my whip never was going to get right, and I couldn't hit anything to speak of. In fact, my batting average was around .100.

My arm got better with the warmer weather, and it's as good now as it ever was, and I'm hitting at about .265. And one more thing. I'm in solid with the fans again.

Phillies Hold Record For Failures.

Twenty-eight consecutive failures to win a pennant! That is the record of the Phillies in the National league, and it stands as a world's record, since the Cincinnati and St. Louis clubs, the two others that have never won a National league championship, joined the organization years after the Phillies. No club in any other league has equaled the record of the Phillies for consecutive failures, which is a performance that stands unique in the history of baseball.

ACCUSED OF SMUGGLING

Dressmaker to Boston's "Four Hundred" Is Under Arrest

Boston, Sept. 14.—Boston's most fashionable dressmaker, "Mme. Driscoll," really Mrs. Mary A. Dolan, with a splendid residence in South street, Brookline, and an establishment with a gold facade in this city, was arrested by customs officials in New York on a charge of smuggling gowns worth upwards of $10,000.

The modiste to Boston's 400 arrived from Europe on the steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie. She had eleven trunks, containing an assortment of specially ordered gowns, and although she made a declaration on some of her baggage, the customs officials declare it was only on a small part of it.

She was placed under arrest immediately upon landing and taken to Hoboken, N. J., for arraignment. With her was a Miss Jeanette Gude, who was subjected to a most searching inquiry because of her association with Mrs. Dolan.

HOLY GHOST WOMEN KEEP OUT OF SIGHT

Crowds Who Try to See Them Meet With Disappointment

Yarmouth, N. S., Sept. 14.—"Our troubles are apparently multiplying," was the statement of Elder Whittaker when the second attempt to float the barkentine Kingdom proved futile.

The craft has been on the marine railway at Yarmouth for the past two weeks undergoing repairs sustained when she grounded off Yarmouth.

The women of the Sandford faith who are aboard the boat are careful the general public do not see them, and appear only under cover of the night, and then do not leave the deck of the vessel. No visitors are permitted on board the vessel, and those aboard are as safe from intrusion as though they were in mid-ocean.

Although the crew and passengers have been within the three-mile limit of the city for nearly three weeks they are as great an attraction as when first thrown upon the shores of the island, and large crowds daily collect at vantage points in the vicinity of the craft.

SCARRED FOR LIFE

Dye Containing Acid Used on Faces of High School Initiates

York, Pa., Sept. 14.—As an outcome of an initiation of ten young men into the Alpha Debating society of the York high school, a half dozen or more students will be disfigured for life and several of the hazers, it is said, will be placed under arrest.

A black oil dye said to contain an acid used to dye tan or light colored shoes black was applied to the faces of the young men and they all appeared at their classes with marks and scars that physicians fear cannot be removed.

The parents of several of the boys have complained to the district attorney.

No Appeal on Fisheries

The Hague, Sept. 14.—The award of the international court of arbitration in the Newfoundland fisheries case became irrevocable with the expiration of the five days allowed for an appeal, without either the United States or Great Britain having entered a protest against the finding.

Gift of $689,000 to Cornell

Toronto, Sept. 14.—Cornell university receives $689,000 unconditionally by the will of the late Professor Goldwin Smith, probated here, in which the value of the estate is indicated as $832,859.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

Vol. 25 No. 214 QUINCY, MASS., THURSDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 15, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

A $10,000 BOULEVARD

Now Wanted by the Houghs Neck Associates

The Houghs Neck Associates held a hot and vigorous meeting Wednesday evening and wel l thrashed out subjects of public welfare at the beach. The different committees were heard and reports filed, or accepted as progressive.

It is the unanimous desire of the associates to see an appropriation of $10,000 used in widening and macademizing Sea street from the Willows to Bird street and they will appear before the Council with that object in mind.

It was stated that the schoolhouse would be ready for occupancy by Thanksgiving. Whether it would be 1910 or 1911 was not noted, but we hope the former. James E. Ware suggested that the completion of the school be marked by a fitting dedication, and made a motion that a committee of five be appointed to carry out the same, which was voted.

Waldo L. Hutchings protested as to the poor police protection of the beach citing his grievance, which he claimed was brought to the attention of the police, who offered poor consolation. While Mr. Hutchings was on his vacation his home, on Crosby street was broken into a cellar window having been forced and broken. The intended burglary was not completed as the door leading to the kitchen was well barricaded, but the offender or offenders demolished some material in the cellar. It is good encouragement to further breaks if such matters cannot directly concern the police whose daily bread is supplied by tax payers.

A committee of five from the floor were appointed to thoroughly canvass the beach in search of some good citizen, who can go to City Hall with clean hands and represent this district in the Council. It was attempted last year, but the material proved a raw edge, and did not see the dawn of the ballot. There is plenty of good timber at Houghs Neck for selection, and it is hoped that a choice will be made which will appeal to the deep thinking man, whether he pay a common poll tax or heavy land assessment.

MRS. JOHN B. BLAKE.

Following illness prolonged through several weeks, Annie S. (Hastings) Blake, wife of Dr. John Bapst Blake, died Tuesday morning at her home, at 161 Beacon street, Boston. Mrs. Blake, was born in Boston and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hastings. She received her education at the Sacred Heart Convent of "Elmhurst" in Providence R. I., and at Grosse Pointe, in Detroit. She was married in Boston in October, 1899, to Dr. Blake, one of the five sons of Dr. John G. Blake of Beacon street, whose wife, the late Mary E. (McGrath) Blake, was a gifted writer. Mrs. Blake is survived by her husband and seven children the youngest of whom is only four weeks old. The family has a summer home at Green Hill, on the Nantasket road to Cohasset, formerly the estate of Mrs. Blake's parents and one of the most attractive places in that part of the South Shore.

Glenn Curtiss Out for Speed — Other Interesting Flights

The cold, threatening and windy weather of Wednesday was against aviation, and now that the official meet is over there was a great falling off in the attendance at the Harvard field. There were 3000 to 4000 inside the gates and fully 10,000 in the vicinity, which would have been considered a big crowd before the record of the past week.

All the star aviators remain, C. Grahame-White, Ralph Johnstone, Walter Brookins, Glenn Curtiss and Charles Willard. Each of these made several flights on Wednesday but none were in the air over 15 minutes.

Glenn Curtiss made a trial for speed (three times round the course on the field) and made it in 6 minutes 19 3-5 seconds, only 18 second slower than the best time.

Johnstone was seen in sensational stunts one of which was christened the spiral turn, in which the machine appeared to turn completely over.

Grahame-White made ascent both in his biplane and the Bleriot monoplane, and Willard was up in Curtiss flyer.

An incident of the day was the ascent of Grahame-White with a fair passenger. She expected to make three laps or more, having tendered a check for $500, but there was a hitch after the start.

Miss Catherine S. Reed of Washington, D. C., was the passenger. She first appeared at the aviation field Tuesday morning and was found waiting outside the gates when the first attendant came. She haunted the hangars during the morning, soliciting a ride for which she was willing to pay at the rate of $50 a minute. When Grahame-White's price was mentioned to her she said: "I'd be willing to pay that, for I expect to get $1000 for a story I shall write on my flight and I can offord to pay him $500 for it."

When taken to the committee room and asked to explain, she admitted that there were no funds to meet the check but anticipated making it good from the payment that would be made to her for her story. She wanted to continue the fight on that basis, but her offer was declined.

Urged o produce money to make her check good she called up two persons by telephone and when after some delay, she was unable to get into communication with either, she drew a check for $150 on a Washington bank and gave that as payment for the portion of the ride she had received. She declared she had money in the bank to meet the check.

Later she left the field with a young man, and told a reporter she was going to the Atlantic station to telegraph The Outlook.

Miss Reed said Tuesday she was a reporter for the Washington Herald. Wednesday she said she was a teacher in the Western High School of Washington.

Today will probably be the last of the flying at the Quincy field for the present. Even since Saturday, Sept. 3, with the exception of Sundays, there have been daily flights which have been very successful. No aviator was injured during the ten days, although there were three or four sudden descends and slight damage to machines.

"The meet will serve the purpose of putting Boston (and Quincy) on the map in one of the geratest games of the age," said a solid business man to the Globe man on Wednesday. "It is a great thing for the city, for New England, and," he added with a smile "for the Boston Globe." I had no wish to deny anything he said. There is no denying that in aviation matters the meet will give Boston a firm hold on first place among the few cities of the country where aviation is likely to develop as a science and a sport. It may not be too much to say that as a result of the meet Boston will become the center in aviation in this country.

Already the Squantum field is the best of any devoted to the sport. It is really the only aviation educational center in America. The Harvard Aeronautical society has lease of it for five years, and will give any aviator a chance to use it, under proper restrictions, for working out problems in airship invention or in the art of flying. This means more to Boston than may appear at first sight to realize.

AEROPLANE BUILDING.

There are now about 800 aeroplanes in France, 700 of which have been made in the last 10 months, according to statistics published by L'Illustration. A year ago there were about 100 aeroplanes in the country, but since Bleriot crossed the channel his firm has manufactured more than 250 and Henri Farman more than 100. The Bleriot monoplane costs about $3,600, but can be had for $2,000 with a cheaper motor. The Farman is sold at $5,700, the Volsin at $5,000, the Antoinette at the same price and the Sommer at $5,700.—New York Tribune.

JUNIOR LEAGUE.

The Junior League of the Hall Place M. E. Church began its work for the season Sunday with a good attendance. The pastor is being assisted by Miss Maud Nichols. Plans are being made for a busy and interesting year's work. The Junior League has made an excellent record for itself in the work of past years, and it is hoped that the work this year will far exceed that of other years in effort and success. The officers who have been elected to serve for the first part of the year are as follows: president—Harold Norris; vice president—Addie Newcomb, Secretary—Ethel Nichols, Treasurer—Mona Norris; visiting committee—Milton Miller, Ardis Raupach and Ethel Newcomb ;look out committee, Edna Miller, Charles Hodgkinson and Ethel Nichols.

BEAUTIFUL FLORAL TRIBUTES

At Funeral of Exalted Ruler of Quincy Elks

The funeral of William J. Coleman, former superintendent of the American Agricultural Chemical Company's plant in North Weymouth, took place this morning. It was the largest and most impressive that has taken place in this vicinity, for years, giving evidence of Mr. Coleman's popularity.

At 8.30 the Quincy lodge B. P. O. E., No. 943, conducted Elks services at his late residence, 443 Bridge street. Lawrence H. Sullivan, P. E. R. of Boston lodge, No. 10, who takes the place of the late Exalted Ruler, was in charge of the ceremonies. He was assisted by Elmer L. Paine, esteemed leading knight; Robert J. Williams, esteemed loyal knight, George A. Jordan, esteemed lecturing knight; Chaplain, John D. Smith, Treasurer Rednor P. Coombs, Secretary Leo J. McMaster and Esquire Joseph F. Monahan. Other prominent Elks present were P. E. R., D. J. Deasy, P. E. R., William R. Thomas and from the Boston lodge, P. E. R., Charles T. Kelly.

The members of the Quincy lodge of Elks marched out, two by two, and broke ranks at the door, allowing the funeral procession to pass through. After marching for about a mile they broke ranks again and this was repeated again at the church door.

The Gregorian solemn high mass of requiem was conducted by Father James W. Allison, celebrant; Father John Cuffe, patsor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, deacon; Father Maurice Lynch of the home church, sub-deacon; Father H. J. Harkins of St. Joseph's church, Amesbury, master of ceremonies; Father James Flannery of St. Anne's church, Neponset; Father Jeremiah Driscoll of St. Eulalia's, Roxbury; and Father Edmund C. Slaney of St. Catherine's in Charlestown inside the rail.

The music was in charge of Miss Nellie Noonan organist. The regular choir sang in the services and after the mass rendered Dei profundis.

At the conclusion of the services the Elks marched out of the church and again broke ranks for the funeral procession to pass through.

The pall bearers were His Honor, Mayor William T. Shea, James F. Burke, Lawrence H. Sullivan, Luke J. Mullen, Michael T. Sullivan, Philip H. Sullivan, William Gaffey and Francis Gunville. They were followed by a delegation of the Quincy council,

THREE CLASSMATES MARRIED SAME NIGHT

Pretty College Wedding of Miss Edna Marion Wood and Mr. Cecil King Blanchard

Miss Lillian Hoxie Bride of Mr. George Henry Moodie

A wedding of unusual interest took place Wednesday evening when Miss Edna Marion Wood, Wellesley, '09, and Mr. Cecil King Blanchard, Amherst, '08 both of Quincy were united in marriage. The ceremony, which was the double ring service, was performed by Dr. Edwin Noah Hardy of the Bethany Congregational church of Quincy. The wedding was at the home of the bride's parents, 130 Upland road, and a hundred people were assembled to bid them Godspeed in their journey through life.

At 8 o'clock the wedding march began with Miss Mary Larrabee of Willamantic, Conn., a classmate of the bride as pianist. First came Miss Isabelle Cummings of South Weymouth and Miss Elizabeth Winchester of Peabody, bearing ribbons which formed an aisle as they advanced. Down the aisle the wedding party marched. Joseph Blanchard bearing the rings on a tray, led the procession. He was followed by Miss Mary H. Garey of East Weymouth, the bridesmaid, and the bride who was accompanied by her father, Mr. Lorenzo Wood. The minister, the groom and the best man, Mr. Alden H. Blanchard, Amherst, '09, entered from the right.

The whole front of the room was an immense bank of palms, directly in front of which the group formed. And a very pretty picture it made with the bride attired in a gown of white chiffon over white taffeta, trimmed with princess lace, the maid of honor in white messaline and the ribbon girls in white muslin each carrying blue cornflowers, the class flower of the bride. The bride had a bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley and the maid of honor one of white asters.

After the ceremony a reception was held, and the guests were given an opportunity to see the presents,which it is needless to say were beautiful and numerous. The ushers were Mr. Delcevare King and Mr. Lawrence H. Allen of Quincy, Mr. Walter W. Dubreuil of Worcester, Mr. E. Allen Burt and Mr. Philip H. Burt of Newton, the last three mentioned being classmates and fraternity brothers of the groom. Frederick D. Blanchard also assisted at the reception.

After all the guests had congratulated the bride and groom, the delegation cup was presented to Mr. Blanchard. Early in their college the delegation of '08 in the fraternity of Phi Gamma Delta at Amherst procured this cup to be presented to their first benedict. Mr. Blanchard captured the coveted prize.

A little later in the evening college songs and cheers for the bride and groom were given by the Amherst men, ending with their Alma mater song, "To the fairest college of them all." Then the Wellesley girls gathered around the piano and sang the songs of their college.

It is an interesting fact that three brides on this evening were intimate friends and classmates, the other two being Miss Mildred Gardner, who married Henry Tilden at East Weymouth, and Miss Jennie S. Emerson of Braintree who married Albert E. Burnham of Central Falls, R. I. They were playmates and inseparable friends in childhood. It is a strange coincidence that all three weddings should have taken place on the same evening and at the same hour when each bride decided the time of her wedding unknown to the other two.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the bride and groom hurried to their carriage amid a shower of congratulations, best wishes and other things that generally accompany such occasions. After a two weeks camping trip, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard will occupy their new home at 554 Washington street, Wellesley.

Mr. Blanchard in addition to his course at Amherst college studied a year at Tech under Professor Sedgewick of the biological department. From there he was called to the position of agent of the Board of Health of the town of Wellesley. Mr. Blanchard is the first to occupy this position and has been very successful in organizing the work of the department. Mrs. Blanchard is well known in Wellesley also, and the young couple will be well received there. They will be at home after Nov. 1

MOODIE—HOXIE.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ellsworth Hoxie on Beale street, Wollaston, was solemnized on Wednesday evening the marriage of their daughter Lillian Ellsworth Hoxie and George Henry Moodie, of Providence, R. I. The house was beautified by palms, ferns, pinks and asters arranged by William Patterson the florist.

In the bridal party beside the bride and groom were the best man, Albert M. Hoxie, of East Milton, brother of the bride; the matron of honor Mrs. Albert M. Hoxie; the bridesmaids Miss Ida Bland of Atlantic and Miss Jeannette Soule of Wollaston; the ushers John W. Moodie of Providence, R. I., brother of the groom and Benjamin Fuller of East Milton and the officiating clergyman, Rev. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston M. E. church was performed at eight o'clock the bride being given in marriage by her father. Miller's orchestra of Cambridge played during the ceremony and for the reception which was held from half past eight until ten o'clock.

The bride was most charming in a gown of white crepe de chine, cut en train and trimmed with duchesse lace and pearl trimming. Her only ornament was a chain and pendant of pearls and amethyst a gift of the groom. The veil was caught up with lilies of the valley and she carried a large shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor wore a pink brocaded silk, trimmed with silk braid and carried pink roses, while in harmonious contrast the bridesmaids wore nile green silk with gold fringe trimming and carried white roses.

As souvenirs of the happy event the bride presented her attendants with brooches set with amethysts and the groom remembered his best man and ushers with signet scarf pins.

Among the guests at the reception were Miss Laura E. Fish of Elkhart, Indiana, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bachelder of Raymond, N. H., Capt. Charles Doten of Plymouth, as well as friends from Providence, R. I., East Milton, Wollaston, Atlantic and Quincy.

Mr. and Mrs. Moodie have gone on a three weeks' trip to New York, Washington, D. C., Buffalo and Niagara Falls. Their future home is to be at Edgewood, R. I., a suburb of Providence, where they will be at home to friends after November first.

SPAULDING—FOX.

A pretty home wedding took place at 24 Wabon street Roxbury, Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock when Miss Carrie Edwards Fox daughter of Mrs. Caroline M. S. Fox nee Packard formerly of Quincy, and the late Charles E. Fox of Boston and Ernest Leonard Spaulding, Tufts 1900, Harvard 1902, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard E. Spaulding of Jaffrey, New Hampshire were married by the Rev. Harry Adams Hersey of Somerville, a classmate of the brides at Tufts college 1903.

The rooms were decorated with pink and white astors, smilax and palms.

As the orchestra played the bridal march from Lohengrin, the bridal party entered the room.

The bride, who was given away by her mother, looked charming in an exquisite full trained gown of ivory messaline over taffata with pearl trimmings. Her tulle veil was fastened with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. Miss Mildred Minette Vaupel of West Somerville and Post Island was flower girl, in a dainty

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Quincy now has an opportunity to become a part of the tenth city in population in the world; that is if it will assis Boston in its aspirations. Both Boston and Quincy have soared the past week because of the success of aviation, and both Claim the honor of being the location of the Harvard field when the records were made. Inasmuch as the field is in the corporate limits of the city of Quincy, the City of Presidents has good claims. It will also fight Boston in its movement to annex the 40 suburban cities and towns from Hull and Cohasset on the south, to Dover, Wellesley and Weston on the west, and Lynn and Swampscott on the north.

These are the figures which have ruffled Boston; the Hub does not like it because St. Louis has the reputation of being a larger city. The 10 largest cities of the United States now rank as follows:

New York city	4,766,883
Chicago	*1,698,575
Philadelphia	1,549,008
St. Louis	687,029
Boston	670,575
Baltimore	*508,957
Pittsburg	533,905
Detroit	465,766
Cleveland	*381,768
Buffalo	423,715

* Census of 1900.

It has been ascertained that Boston, by annexing the 39 surrounding cities and towns, would have a population of over 1,400,000 which would make it the tenth city in the world and close to Philadelphia, Vienna and St. Petersburg, as will be seen by these figures:

1—London	7,429,740
2—New York	4,766,893
3—Paris	2,735,165
4—*Chicago	2,250,000
5—Tokio	2,186,079
6.—Berlin	2,040,148
7—St. Petersburg	1,678,000
8—Vienna	1,674,957
9—Philadelphia	1,549,008
10—*Boston	1,439,182

* Estimated.

Can you see Quincy anywhere in this last summary? We are there, but only a little over two per cent of the Boston total. As two per cent of Boston we would "stand in" about as good for improvements as des Squantum as a part of the city of Quincy. What has Boston to gain by such a wholesome annexation? The city is already too large and unwieldy.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

A contemporary lays some stress on the fact that "Gov. Harmon has issued a special proclamation guaranteeing the people of Ohio protection from violence if they come to the State fair this week. Isn't that a pretty situation in a free coutnry at peace with all the world?" remarks the Fall Fiver Herald. It may be a far from pretty situation, but the only surprise in it is that Gov. Harmon has guaranteed such protection. In a big crowd anywhere there is no certainty of protection for anybody. It matters not whether it is a free country or a monarchy, the same situation presents itself when a great crowd assembles for a holiday—there is danger in it of violence toward anybody that chances to rouse the antagonism of any portion of the mass, or even of an individual. It is not especially surprising that such is the fact. It is one of the evil traits of human nature that has come down through the ages, and which always will prevail.—Brockton Enterprise.

REPUBLICANS MUCH WORRIED

Maine Election Will Affect Campaigns In Other States

HAS BEARING ON CONGRESS

Assumption That Roosevelt Convinced Westerners That Insurgents Could Accomplish Reforms Receives a Setback In View of Democratic Victory In Hidebound Republican State—As Viewed In Washington

Washington, Sept. 15.—Maine is destined to be a byword in the state and congressional campaigns next fall. This is now regarded as a foregone conclusion by Democrats as well as Republicans. The Democratic spell binders have already received instructions from the headquarters in Washington to hammer away at the Democratic success achieved in Maine and to emphasize that what can be accomplished in Republican Maine can be accomplished also in other Republican states.

Taken by itself the Democratic landslide in the Pine Tree State is serious. When the election there is viewed in the light of the influence it will have throughout the country the situation really becomes alarming from a Republican point of view. The administration officials now in Washington who are in close touch with President Taft do not attempt to conceal their concern over the sweeping Democratic victory in Maine. These officials declare that they do not base their alarm either on the loss of the state ticket or the substitution of two Democrats for two Republican members of the house. They are chiefly concerned about the moral effect of the Democratic victory throughout the country.

When Mr. Roosevelt returned from his western trip last Sunday it was the opinion of those who travelled with him and likewise among those who followed in his trail through the west that he had greatly strengthened the cause of insurgency. This assertion was based in part on the assumption that the colonel had brought the voters of the west to a realization of the fact that the necessary reforms which he advocated could be accomplished by the election of insurgent senators and representatives.

The Maine election seems to have changed these views. Prominent men who returned to Washington full of confidence that Roosevelt had saved the house in the Sixty-Second congress for the Republicans, are now coming to the conclusion that the Democratic victory in Maine has captured the next house for the Democrats. In support of this theory it is pointed out that throughout the country Maine is looked upon as a hidebound Republican state. The fact that the Democrats, after thirty years of uninterrupted defeat, could bring about such a turnover is regarded here as nothing short of marvellous.

It is believed that the countryy, and especially the states where the lines are closely drawn, will reach the same conclusion, with the result that there will be Democratic gains in states where it was claimed the Republicans would hold their own. One prominent official of the administration undertook to enumerate the states which would be directly influenced by the Maine election. He predicted that the Maine election would be directly responsible for serious Republican losses in Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, California, Nebraska, Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

While the claim will be made that the Democratic victory in Maine was due to local conditions, prominent Republicans familiar with the situation do not attempt to put forth any such excuse when discussing the matter confidentially. It is pointed out that President Taft has from time to time been fully informed as to the seriousness of the situation confronting the Republicans in Maine. The Republican congressional campaign managers likewise were informed that there was real danger that the state would go to the Democrats.

At a recent conference at Beverly this state of affairs in Maine was given very serious consideration and as a result the Republican congressional campaign committee sent some of its very best stump speakers into the northeastern section of New England with the hope of heading off defeat. Whatever may have been the arguments put forth by the supporters of the state ticket, national issues and the administration of President Taft were discussed by those who participated in the congressional campaign.

One prominent member of the house who spent a week talking in four congressional districts in Maine stopped in Washington Tuesday on his way to his home in the west. At that time the returns from Maine had not become known. This congressman asserted that there was an astonishing feeling of unrest and discontent throughout the state and announced that he would not be surprised at anything that might happen. Incidentally he expressed the opinion that the sentiment which he found in Maine was not dissimilar to the sentiment which he has encountered in practically every state he has visited since the adjournment of congress.

This same message has been brought to congress frequently during the past two or three weeks, and it is because of such messages that the administration officials who remain in town are taking a more and more pessimistic view of the outlook.

JOHNSON MAY BE SENATOR

Nomination and Election by Maine Democrats Is Expected

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—Charles F. Johnson of Waterville is to be a candidate for the United States senatorship at the coming session of the legislature, which body is Democratic at least 111 to 69, thereby insuring a senator of that political faith. Leading Democrats assert there will be no opposition to him of any consequence.

Mr. Johnson, twice the Democratic candidate for governor, also congressional candidate in the Third district twice, was urged by many delegates at the state convention at Augusta in June to be a candidate for governor.

The returns for governor from all of the 521 cities, towns and plantations, except Woodville, which four years ago cast 23 votes, gave Plaisted a plurality of 8945 over Fernald. Fernald.

SHERMAN RETAINS LEAD

He Is Ahead of Roosevelt In Primaries Held Thus Far

New York, Sept. 15.—Republican primary results show that, while Mr. Roosevelt carried New York county, the other counties are in the hands of Mr. Sherman and his friends. A line-up of the men who will be delegates to the Saratoga convention shows that Sherman is in the lead with 316 of the delegates, while Roosevelt has 305. More than half the delegates have now been chosen.

While all the thirty-five districts in New York county are now headed by men ostensibly supporters of Roosevelt, it is the general belief that at least a score of the 190 delegates from the county will be with the Barnes-Woodruff-Sherman crowd on convention day. In Brooklyn, Woodruff probably controls 105 of the 142 delegates. The "Old Guard" holds all the Queens county delegates.

GOODWIN IS NAMED TO OPPOSE BALDWIN

Stormy State Convention of Connecticut Republicans

Hartford, Sept. 15.—The Republican convention named the following ticket:

For governor, Charles A. Goodwin, Hartford; lieutenant governor, D. A. Blakeslee, New Haven; secretary of state, M. H. Rogers, Bridgeport; state treasurer, Costello Lippett, Norwich; state controller, T. D. Bradstreet, Thomaston; attorney general, J. H. Light, Norwalk; representative-at-large in congress, J. Q. Tilson, New Haven.

A platform was adopted indorsing the national administration and extending through a declaration of policy in state affairs, in favor of a public service commission bill, and other legislation described as remedial. A plank for direct primaries was tabled. The Democrats nominated Simeon E. Baldwin of New Haven for governor.

The convention was without parallel in the history of Connecticut Republicanism. For hours the delegates were in turmoil and the chairman, Congressman Hill, had great difficulty in keeping them within bounds. Much of the uproar was brought about by decisions of the chairman on parliamentary questions.

POINDEXTER'S VICTORY

His Nomination as Senator Considered a Blow at Ballinger

Washington, Sept. 15.—The nomination of Representative Miles C. Poindexter for United States senator from Washington by an enormous vote over Thomas Burke and James M. Ashton is regarded in Washington as an indirect repudiation of Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, who for years has been one of the most prominent Republicans in that state.

The friends of Ballinger were the enemies of Poindexter in the contest which has just closed, and Poindexter had to contend against all the influence of the regular Republican organization with which Ballinger is affiliated.

It is pointed out here that the primary elections in Washington gave the people of that state an excellent opportunity to express their confidence in the cabinet officer by voting against his political enemy. That the voters did not do so is regarded here as extremely significant, and it will be urged upon President Taft as one of the reasons why the administration should be relieved of the embarrassment of carrying a cabinet officer who is proving a heavy burden.

MODOCS RETURN LIKE ISRAELITES

Warring Generation Dead and Great White Father Forgives.

BACK TO THEIR NATIVE HILLS

Thirty-five Per Cent of Number Removed to Indian Territory From Their Oregon Mountains Participate In Biblical Parallel, but Not Captain Jack and His Fighters.

Like the children of Israel, who "wandered in the wilderness for forty years until all of that generation which came out of Egypt were dead, and then were they allowed to enter into the Promised Land," is the case of the Modoc Indians. For nearly forty years the Modocs pined and wasted far from their promised land of home and liberty. And now—now that all the generation with which Uncle Sam waged war are dead—the Modocs have crept unhindered to their ancient homes.

Little has been said about the return of the Modocs. The interior department and the Indian bureau have not blazoned their kindliness abroad. A few lines in the official archives; a few phrases in the report of the department; a few remarks by the agents of Quapaw, Okla., and Klamath, Ore.; a few changes in the tables of Indian population for the year—and that is all. That is the sum of the attention officially paid to the closing chapter of the west.

Return to Ancestors' Home.

Officially all Americans know is that "inasmuch as the original Modoc prisoners transported from Oregon to Indian territory are now dead, and as there seems to be no objection to their return the band of Modocs now at Quapaw agency will be transported as expeditiously as possible to the Klamath agency in Oregon." That is all the government has to say about it, and that is the way in which the chapter is officially sealed.

Thirty-seven years of exile in a distant land, thirty-seven years away from the mountains and the lakes, the country where the old tribe roved and fought and died as warriors should—thirty-seven years during which the captives taken to the faroff reservation have perished to a man! And now a straggling few, their children go back to the home of their fathers—the country they have never seen.

When the white man first swept into southern Oregon and northern California he found the Modocs, never strong in numbers, but of splendid fighting stock, living in the land of lakes and hills that lies upon the border line. They were an offshoot of the conquering Tinneh race that swung down from the frozen north 1,000 years ago. That onrush of polar hunters carried clear to Mexico, leaving the Apache, Navajo and Lipan as farthest outposts. The Klamath, Hupa and Modoc were left along the road of travel.

After much fighting between the white men and the Modocs a portion of the tribe agreed in 1864 to be herded with the Klamath on the latter tribe's reserve. Klamath reservation is an integral part of the old hunting ground, and with its lakes and peaks is even more delightful than the tract the Modocs held. Nevertheless one faction of the Modocs, headed by Kientpoos—known in western lore as "Captain Jack"—objected strongly to the transfer.

Modocs Open War.

Kientpoos and his band, numbering not over 225 people all told, went to their new location under protest and soon made the protest stronger by declaring that they could not live in harmony with the Klamaths. They begged permission to return home, and the government received their prayer with red tape, and some more red tape for good measure and variety.

Then the Modocs cut the Gordian knot in the Indian way. They jumped back to their former homes and the war was on.

The story of the fight Kientpoos made against a nation has been told 10,000 times. We know how the Modocs whipped everything the government could send against them. At last a peace commission was appointed to treat with the tribe, and here the Indians overplayed their hand. They murdered the commission, headed by General Canby, and their doom was sealed.

New armies came, and the Modocs, retiring to that inferno known as the lava beds, cheerfully killed the soldiers from the shelter of the rocks. More soldiers came, and also Warm Springs Indians, incited by the white man's pay. The Modocs held their ground among the lava, but hunger did its work, and the tribe surrendered.

Kientpoos and his councilors were duly hanged at Klamath agency, and the tribe, 140 strong, went to Quapaw, Indian Territory. Here they were assigned land and learned the arts of civilization. They became Christians, farmers, hardworking citizens. They gave no trouble, and they faded away one by one, ten after ten.

Only forty-nine of the tribe remained—just 35 per cent of the number first kidnaped from their faroff home. The forty-nine packed up their slender baggage, and a forgiving government sent them safely on their way.

MONACO SEEKS FOR WAY TO SPEND BIG SURPLUS.

Annual Revenue $200,000, Expenditure Nil, Puzzles Gambling Principality.

A few Americans who happened to be visiting the principality of Monaco at the time when it was struggling with its first elections had an exceptional opportunity to enjoy themselves.

Some months ago Monaco suddenly woke up one morning with a thirst for parliamentary government and marched upon the prince's palace. A revolution was averted by the prince consenting to receive a deputation, to whom he said, "If you want to elect each other to something, by all means do so," or words to that effect.

The Monegasques accordingly elected each other to a body which they called the communal council after going through all the proper formalities of shouting and spellbinding. The body electorate at once split up into four distinct parties, the Real Monegasques, the True Monegasques, the Monaco Patriots and the Progressive Nationalists of Monaco. The last named party came out at the top of the polls and holds the majority in the communal council.

The prince has granted the council supplies of $200,000 a year. The question before the council, improbable as it may seem, is what to do with the money. Every public expenditure is covered already several times over by the profits of the Monte Carlo gambling tables. The council's budget therefore will work out something like this: Annual revenue $200,000, expenditure nil.

The day of the political boss has not yet dawned in Monaco, but it will probably come, and then there may be some modification in this unique balance sheet.

MARBLE DEMAND HURTS ART.

French Sculptors Blame American Builders For Scarcity.

French sculptors are complaining that marble has become very expensive and that they find it almost impossible to obtain large blocks, even at the present high prices. America is blamed for this state of affairs.

For many years the export of marble to the United States has increased enormously. The great hotels, office buildings and magnificent houses of America have monopolized the output of Carrara at prices which France cannot meet.

Carrara reserves a certain proportion of its marble for Italian artists, and the rest goes to America. France has some marble quarries of her own, in the Haute Garonne, but they belong to an English company, which sells the best blocks to America.

That the difficulty felt by French sculptors is a real one is shown by the complaint of the sculptor Bartholome that he cannot begin work on his monument to Jean Jacques Rousseau in the Pantheon on account of lack of the necessary material.

NEBRASKANS HUNT PEARLS.

Finding of $500 Specimen In Elkhorn River Starts Search.

The pearl fishing craze has struck Stanton, Neb. Merchants are leaving their stores, professional men their offices and farmers their fields to hunt pearls in the Elkhorn river.

A few days ago Herman Seidel was fishing in the river for pike. Running out of bait, he opened a clam shell in order to get the clam and use it. As he pried the shell apart a pure white pearl almost as large as a hickory nut flashed before his eyes. He stopped his pike fishing and went to hunting clams, with the result that in the afternoon he secured two more pearls, somewhat smaller than the first one.

Seidel sent the largest pearl to a wholesale jewelry house in Omaha and has received word that it is worth $500. The result of this find has started everybody to hunting pearls.

SQUANTUM!?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY!?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

LOTS OF LAND

overlooking sea and country, islands and bays, dotted with beautiful shade trees and bounded by sandy beaches, cool healthful and restful, which he wishes to transfer to sojourners for only a fraction of their value.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The new lunch room in the High school will be opened Monday morning. This departure should prove to be a good one, and if it meets with the expectations of those who have it in charge, it will, not only be a financial, success, but will furnish the pupils with good food at the minimum price. The Domestic Science department will have it in charge, and a woman from outside will be engaged to assist the instructor in running it.

A long counter is under construction in the corridor of the third floor. Here the pupil can go at recess and procure a good lunch for five cents. There will be two or three combinations to choose from, and everyone who patronizies the lunch room should find there something which would appeal to their sense of taste.

The idea was originated by the Quincy Women's Club and an offer was made by the club to give $100 toward running the lunch room until it became self supporting, but the school committee raised sufficient funds to get the scheme started and the Women's Club was not called upon to pay anything. The menu the ladies suggested was to consist of sandwiches, canned soups, fruit, etc. Probably this idea will be followed out by the domestic science department of the school. It is surely a step in the right direction and its success should be assured.

Henry A. Cashman whose death occurred last week entered the High school as a senior from St. Johns preparatory school in Danvers. His sudden death came as a shock to his fellow students who in the few days he was with them learned to respect him very highly.

• • •

At the first football practice of the year 22 men reported to Coach Byrne. In addition to these a number of the regulars appeared on the second day. The Aviation meet has been keeping a number away from practice, but by the end of the week all should be back. The members of last year's team who are still in school are: Capt. Hill, Johnson, Harmon, Blackmur, Manning, H. Prout, Arthur and Rice. The new material is more promising than usual and Quincy High school should be represented by a rattling good team this year. The practice so far has been in handling the ball, and no scrimmage will be tried until the men are hardened a bit.

The schedule is nearly completed, but one ortwo dates are still open. The schedule as arranged is:

Sept. 27, Cambridge Latin at Quincy.
Sept. 30, Weymouth High at Quincy.
Oct. 7, Abington High at Quincy.
Oct. 11, Revere High at Revere.
Oct. 14, Brockton High at Brockton.
Oct. 22, Dedham High at Dedham.
Oct. 25, South Boston High at Quincy.
Oct. 28, Melrose High at Quincy.
Nov. 1, Hyde Park High at Quincy.
Nov. 1, Hyde Park High at Quincy.
Nov. 11, Hingham High at Quincy.
Nov. 19, Dorchester High at Dorchester.

An interesting game is to be arranged with Chelsea High, but the date is uncertain yet. Probably a game with Belmont High will be arranged shortly. A full schedule will be printed as soon as possible.

The gymnasium work under the direction of Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, the physical director, will begin Monday, October 3. All the pupils who do this work are obliged to wear the regulation uniform and all those desiring to obtain these should get in their orders early. All freshmen are required to take this course unless excused on doctor's certificate. It is elective with the members of the other classes, but all are advised o take it. The importance of this phase of the school work cannot be emphasized too much. Although many of the pupils do not take it very seriously there can be no doubt but that it is an aid to symmetrical growth. At many of our colleges physical education is a required course during the first three years, and statistics show that in those colleges the general health of the studen body is better. Systematic exercise is the most helpful although its work is slow and cannot always be detected.

The situation in the Lynn High schools is pretty bad, according to the superintendent of schools. The Classical high school is not yet ready for occupancy and the English High has to accomodate 1305 pupils when it was only intended for 700. Supt. Peaslee is said to have remarked that if any more scholars came he would have to stand them up in corners or hang them on the pegs in the corridors.

• • •

Miss Lillian G. Clark, recently of Quincy, has entered the Weymouth High school.

Dedham High has 240 pupils. Domestic science will be taught in both the high and grammar schools.

• • •

Weymouth High has 283 pupils, the freshman class numbering 121, the sophomores 65, the juniors 42, and the seniors 55.

Malden High has an enrollment of 1000 pupils. The entering class numbered over 375 and is the largest in the history of the school. The building is said to be the second largest High school in the State.

• • •

The Weymouth High football team already has ten games on its schedule.

• • •

The High schools at Newton have new master, Irving O. Palmer being at the head of the Technical high, and Wallace E. Richmond of Great Barrington at the head of the Classical high.

The Rockland High now has over 200 pupils. They have a new commodious building.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

The total enrollment at Woodward this year is 176, the largest in the history of the school. The courses are the same as in previous years, with one addition. Sewing has been introduced for freshmen, and Miss Whitcomb, who also has charge of that branch of work in the High school is the instructor.

• • •

Mr. Rice, the new pricipal, hopes to move his family here in October. There has been so much delay in getting Mr. Plummer's house ready in Chelsea that he is still living here, and Mr. Rice cannot move in until Mr. Plummer vacates the house. The latter started his work at Chelsea High this week.

• • •

This year at Woodward gives promise of being very successful. Mr. Rice has had a wide range of experience as a teacher, and he can bring much to the school in the way of methods. He is well liked by the scholars and things are running very smoothly at the Institute.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Miss Catherine Carter one of the teachers at the Massachusetts Fields school will be out for several months on account of illness. Miss Anna Blacklock of the Adams school is taking charge of the room until her return.

The situation at the Quincy school is interesting. At present there are more than enough to fill the seats, Three assistants are kept busy all the time. In January, when those who are kept out now by the age limit are allowed to enter, some means will have to be devised to accommodate sixty or eighty pupils. All the rooms in the school are occupied, and it will probably be necessary to go outside for accomodations.

The Adams school with an average of 3 2to a room, has the ideal condition. There is no crowding and a chance is given for individual instruction where there are fewer scholars, thus making it possible to get better results. This can also be said of the Cranch, Gridley Bryant and John Hancock schools.

• • •

At the opening of the year it was stated that there was a possibility of overcrowding at the Washington school, but fortunately that possibility has not become a reality.

• • •

Superintendent Barbour announces a committee meeting for Friday of this week.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

The new St. Johns school has been quick to get into working order.

Four new parochial schools have been opened this month in Massachusetts—at Quincy, Neponset, Dorchester and Stoneham.

The teachers of both the Quincy and Neponset schools are members of the order of St. Joseph, while the sisters who will teach in Dorchester are from the order of Notre Dame, and those at Stoneham in charge of sisters of Divine Providence.

It is estimated that over 60,000 boys and girls will attend parochial schools in Masachusetts this year, a majority of them in Boston.

LAUNCH THAT CAUSED BIG SUIT NOW IN GLASS CASE.

Curious Legal Complications Ended Over Gold Bonanza at Nome.

The steamer Mackinaw has sailed from Nome, Alaska, with the famous launch Eagle aboard. The Eagle will be taken to Seattle and put in a glass case, where the public may gaze to its heart's content and Captain E. W. Johnson may gloat over Josh R. McIntyre.

The launch was the cause of the long drawn out suit between Johnson and McIntyre for the possession of the famous Copper Gulch mine No. 8, which Johnson finally won in court.

Johnson and McIntyre engaged in the lightering business at Nome in the days of the gold rush and shipped a launch from Tacoma to do the work. The business did not pay, and the launch was beached.

After lying on the beach for a year Johnson took out the engines and placed them in two other boats. In the course of time he traded one of the boats for a supposedly worthless claim. This claim is now the Copper Gulch No. 8, which has already produced $1,500,000 and shows no signs of stopping.

When the mine turned out to be a bonanza McIntyre sued for a half interest on the strength of his old interest in the launch sent from Tacoma.

BREATHING CAVE IN ARIZONA

Air Inhaled and Expelled by Crevice In Rock.

"A curious freak of nature is the pride of a country neighborhood near Prescott, Ariz.," remarked F. X. Dorgan of El Paso, Tex. "This is called a breathing cave. The cave is in the lava formation on a high tableland near Prescott. In a wall of this cave is a crevice which is probably three inches wide and several feet long. A visitor stands close to this crack. He feels a current of air rushing out of it. This is not so strange. But if he waits long enough he will notice that the direction of the current has changed and the air is being drawn into the crevice.

"The people of the neighborhood have many theories to account for the change in the direction of the air current, but I do not believe that any of them would stand the test of a scientist's examination.

"A subterranean stream is given as the probable cause. Just how the flow of an underground river could cause the direction of the air current to be reversed I cannot see. However, the crevice is there and the phenomenon exists. I think that some of the people in that neighborhood are just a bit superstitious on the subject of the breathing cave."

BURNS MUST PAY FOR SEAT.

London Labor Leader, Once Poor, Now Has Big Salary.

There is a delicate dispute about John Burns, the British labor leader, at Battersea. The Radicals of Battersea elected Mr. Burns to the house of commons in 1892 and paid him a salary and all election and registration expenses until 1905, when he became president of the local government board at a salary of $10,000 a year.

That salary has since been increased to $25,000, and Battersea thinks that Mr. Burns should bear the expenses of registration and the Radical organization, or at least the greater part, which amounts to between $1,500 and $2,000 annually.

Hitherto the London Liberal federation has subscribed, but it has now notified the Radicals that it will discontinue its subscription. The Battersea Radical association declares it will dismiss its agent and let the organization, which is one of the best in London, lapse entirely unless Mr. Burns accepts its terms.

SWAMPS IN SPITZBERGEN.

Swedish Geologist Finds Traces Similar to Florida Cypresses.

The same species of swamp cypresses that grows in Florida today once flourished in great profusion on Spitzbergen, says Count de Geer, the leader of a Swedish geological expedition which has just returned from an exploration trip to that bleak and ice-bound island.

The expedition found geological strata which are described by Count de Geer as one colossal herbarium in a fossilized state. They justify the assumption that in early periods the entire north polar region was one vast low lying plain covered with dense forest.

Evidences of the early vegetation now present themselves in extensive coal deposits which a newly formed company is beginning to work. It is expected that 50,000 tons of Spitzbergen coal will be shipped next year. Today no plant grows on Spitzbergen taller than an inch or two at the most.

RHODE ISLAND'S BLIND BOSS SECURE ON THRONE THOUGH 70

General Charles R. Brayton, Dean of Political Czars, Still Absolute, While Platt, Quay, and Croker Are Dead or Out.

Legislation Directed From Chair In Capitol, and Governor Made Nonentity by Barring Revision of the State's Constitution.

GENERAL CHARLES R. BRAYTON of Rhode Island, dean of the political bosses of the United States, who has controlled absolutely in his state for twenty years or more, although stone blind for the last seven years, fell recently and broke his hip. But nobody in Rhode Island thinks that this second affliction will cause the aged general to relinquish his power.

When the accident happened the boss was groping for his desk telephone and his chair slid out from under him. He may have been about to call up some state officer, the governor perhaps, to tell him what to do next.

On second thought, however, it probably was not the governor, for that dignitary's duties are few and clearly defined. He may sign commissions for notaries public, make a speech on governor's day in state fair week, and in real gala years of the past he used to pitch the ball across the home plate at the opening of the baseball season while the band played "Hail to the Chief!"

That the governor of Rhode Island could not veto anything nor appoint anybody to anything was due to General Brayton's annual success in preventing a revision of the constitution. As it was, the veto and appointive power belonged exclusively to him.

Keeps Governor Nonentity.

Once in a great while the Democrats succeed in electing the governor and lieutenant governor in Rhode Island, but it means nothing, because the legislature always belongs to Brayton. After a recent empty victory of this sort the Democrats indulged in much gloating over what they called the rescue of the state from Brayton and corruption.

"Why are they blowing so hard about it?" asked the general good naturedly. "They've only got a governor who can't do anything but sign commissions for notaries and a lieutenant governor who can't do anything."

Brayton is the dean of his profession. He was the absolute ruler of one of these United States before Platt and Quay and Croker and all the rest were heard of.

He, with no sight and a cripple, is still boss, while they are all dead or in retirement and being rapidly forgotten. All sorts of explanations of the man's continued power have been given, and they are probably all true. He's likable in an old fashioned sort of away that has no place in the new ethical movement in politics, but Rhode Island is full of people who never heard of such a movement.

He is honest, also, in an old fashioned political way—that is, he is loyal to his friends and has no taint of hypocrisy, and he has not acquired an immense fortune. So far as that is concerned he is as frank as ex-Senator Plunkitt of New York, who made himself famous throughout the country by declaring his belief in "honest graft."

Voters Should Be Paid.

With equally brutal frankness General Brayton once said that in his opinion the voter should be paid for the time that he takes from his work on election day to go to the polls. As a rule the general thinks that that time is worth about $2.

He has been ever since the civil war the idol of the old soldiers who went to that conflict from Rhode Island. That fact alone was sufficient to explain his power for many years until the veterans began to be outnumbered by the younger voters.

The boss came by his title of general honestly, and at the suggestion of President Lincoln. He was a sophomore in Brown university when the war began. He left college, organized a company and went to the front as its captain in a heavy artillery organization. At the end of the war he was a colonel and a brevet brigadier.

There are still other reasons. General Brayton is more than six feet tall and big boned and big voiced in proportion, not a man to be frightened or bluffed. He knows how to tell a good story to mollify an indignant denouncer of his methods, and if the story does not suffice he is an adept at using the sort of language from which the average denouncer shrinks.

Perhaps the chief reason of his long success has been his minute knowledge of every nook and corner of his small state, his intimacy with everybody in it and his personal attention to detail. He never has left much to lieutenants.

General Brayton was born seventy years ago at Apponaug, R. I., a descendant of the original white settlers in the colony of Roger Williams. His father was a representative in congress. His grandfather and an uncle were both justices of the supreme court of Rhode Island.

At the close of the war General Brayton was made postmaster at Hilton Head, S. C., refused a captaincy in the regular army, returned north and in 1874 was made postmaster at Providence.

Irregular Accounts No Handicap.

He held this office until 1880, when he was removed because of a technical irregularity in his accounts. But that fact did not impair his political prestige in the least. During the years he held the office he had been exercising to the full his genius for political management. From that day to this he has been the dominant political factor in the state. Twenty years ago he was called the chief of the Swiss mercenaries of Rhode Island politics.

Three Democrats have sat in the executive chair during that time, but never with a friendly assembly at their backs, and they have been unable to effect reforms.

The last public office of consequence held by General Brayton was that of chief of the state police, created as a tail to a prohibitory law passed in 1886. The office carried a salary of $3,000. Illicit selling flourished while this law was in effect, and eventually General Brayton resigned his office and worked openly and successfully for the defeat of prohibition.

When the new $3,000,000 statehouse was opened, eight years ago, General Brayton established himself in a chair in the corner of the office allotted to the sheriff of Providence county, and there he has stuck in spite of the efforts of a Democratic governor to have him kept out of the statehouse as an undesirable person. From this chair he has directed legislation. In it he has given audiences to seekers of favor and passed sentence on those who showed signs of independence.

"Rob Roy of Rhode Island."

In his letter to the sheriff and to the legislature asking that the boss be kept out of the statehouse, the governor referred to him as "the Rob Roy of Rhode Island, with a shameless disregard for the outer forms of public decency and a moral and political pest."

General Brayton makes no bones of the fact that he has made a good living out of his control of the state. Nominally he is an attorney at law.

"I am an attorney for certain clients," he explained once, several years after he had become blind, "and look out for their interests before the legislature. I am retained annually by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company and, as every one knows, I act for the Rhode Island company, which controls the traction interests in this state, and for the Providence Telephone company. In addition to these I have had connections, not permanent, with various companies desiring charters and franchises and things of that sort from the legislature.

"My power in the legislature comes from my managing the campaign every year, which puts me in a position to be of service to men all over the state. I help them to get elected, and naturally many warm friendships result. Then when they are in a position to repay me they are glad to do it."

PARIS LIKES MILK COLLARS.

Curds of Goats' Product Cheap and Not Shiny Like Celluloid.

Imitation celluloid collars made of goat's milk are used in Paris by artisans, tradesmen, waiters and conchmen. The milk collars are said to be as serviceable as the celluloid and to have less polish, which makes them a great improvement.

In preparing the milk for collars the curds are drained off the whey and subjected to high pressure, resulting in a substance that looks very much like celluloid.

Milk curds have been used in Europe for some years for the making of billiard balls, combs, imitation bone knife handles and collar buttons.

Million For Russian Aviation.

Russia has appropriated nearly $1,000,000 for a complete army aeroplane equipment, the largest sum expended for the purpose by any government.

MONOPLANE HAT NATURAL.

Stickpins Have Propellers That Revolve In Wind.

The latest creation in millinery reported from Paris is the monoplane hat, invented in celebration of Moissant's flight from the French capital to England.

Like the Bleriot, it is a monoplane, with two wings, each over a foot long, spread out on each side of the head. But the chief novelty is the hatpins.

These have propellers at their ends—not mere imitations, but real miniature propellers with wooden blades. When a breeze blows the blades revolve gayly as the wearer walks along.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Quincy, and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any Quincy reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. George L. Nott, 99 North Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for holding a high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells which were so seaere at times that I had to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My sight was also affected, spots often appearing before me and my back ached intensely. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, I was cured. Other members of my family have used this remedy with equally good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BRIEFS

Mr. Thomas Spinney of Madison street is very ill with a quinsy sore throat.

Thomas DeCoste of Pleasant street is spending his vacation in Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Sullivan of Great hill, Hough Neck, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. John P. Sullivan and daughter Frances of Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Sadie Orr of Division street Montclair has bought out the store recently run by Miss Rachel Golding and will carry on the business.

Patrolman Harry E. Hobbs of the Metropolitan Park Commission has moved his family to 15 Bruce street, Ashmont. Their friends regret their leaving the city where Master Harry, Jr., has become a favorite among his many little playmates.

In the 10th congressional district the candidates are raising the Dickens with each other. Curley calls McNary Micawber and McNary retorts by saying Curley is a Uriah Heep. Both are willing to declare that O'Connell is not "Our Mutual Friend."—Globe.

Mrs. Alfred Oliver Spinney of Pope street has gone to New Hampshire to visit her sister before going to Denver Colerado where she is to make her future home. Montclair people will miss the Spinney family very much as they have lived there for several years. Miss Rachel Golding who recently passed away after a brief illness was Mrs. Spinney's sister.

Lanier of the Cavalry
Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

(Started Sept. 14.)

Of course she came to the dance. As the guest of Captain and Mrs. Sumter, she even had to go up and smile on the colonel and his wife, who were receiving. She and Kate Sumter had been classmates, roommates, at Vassar, and Kate, born and reared in the army, had never been quite content until her friend could come to visit the regiment—her father's home.

A winsome pair they were, these two "sweet girl graduates" of the June gone by, while the regiment was stirring up the Sioux on the way to the Big Horn and Yellowstone. Everybody had lavish welcome for them, and to Miriam Arnold the month at Fort Cushing had been quite a dream of delight until there came a strange and sudden missive from her father bidding her break off a visit that was to have lasted until February and all relations with Lieutenant Robert Ray Lanier.

For reasons of his own Mr. Lanier had made no avowal of his love to her, even though he had disclosed it to every one else. Bob had his enemies—frank men generally have. He could hardly believe the evidence of his ears when just after sunset roll call he had confidently approached the colonel with his request and had received the colonel's curt reply.

Everybody by half past 10 had heard of it. Nobody was very much surprised when in the midst of the lovely "Lorelei" waltz a group of young officers near the doorway opened out, as it were, and Bob Lanier, officer of the guard, came gracefully gliding down the room, Miriam Arnold's radiant, happy face looking up into his. It was a joy to watch them dance together, but not to watch the colonel's face when he caught sight of them. Except Lanier every officer present was in full uniform, without his saber. Lanier was in the undress uniform of the guard, but with the saber—not the long, curved, clumsy, steel scabbarded weapon then used by the cavalry, but a light Prussian hussar sword that he had evidently borrowed for the occasion, for it belonged to Barker, the adjutant, as Barker realized to his cost when the commander summoned him.

"Mr. Barker, you will at once place Mr. Lanier in arrest for quitting his guard and disobeying my orders."

"I shall have to—get my saber, sir," stammered the adjutant, meaning the regulation item over at his quarters.

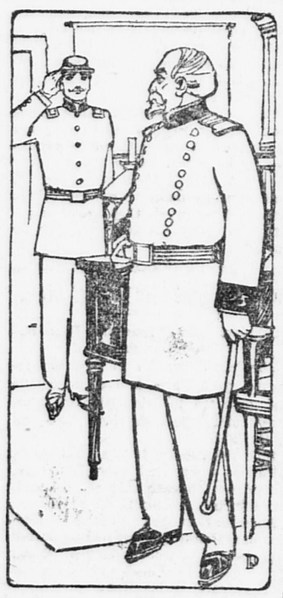

"There it is, sir, before your eyes. Mr. Lanier, at least, can have no further use for it until a court martial acts on his case."

"Good Lord," thought Barker, "how can I go up to Bob and tell him to turn over that sword so that I can properly place him in arrest."

But the colonel would brook no delay. "Direct Mr. Lanier to report to me in the anteroom," said he, marching thither forthwith.

Bob saw it coming in Barker's somber visage.

"Miss Arnold, may I offer myself as a substitute for the rest of this dance? Bob, the chief wants to see you a second," was the best that Barker could think of. They praised him later for his "mendacity," yet what he said was true to the letter. It took little more than a second for the colonel to say:

"Mr. Lanier, go to your room in arrest."

Now, that was the first touch to spoil that memorable December night. The waltz soon ceased, but the colonel called for an extra and led out a lady from town, the wife of a future senator. "Keep this thing going," he cautioned his adjutant, but the piteous face of the girl he had left at the door of the ladies' dressing room and in the hands of Mrs. Sumter was too much for Barker.

Colonel Button was hopping mad, yet at what? Lanier's offense had not been grave. It had happened half a dozen times that the officer of the guard, making his rounds and visiting sentries in the course of a dance evening, would casually drop in by one door and out by another, taking a turn or two on the floor perhaps—"just waltzing in and waltzing out," as they said.

"Disobeyed his orders flatly," suggested Captain Snaffle.

"Disobeyed no order," said Sumter as stoutly. "Simply did what many another has done, and nobody hurt. Nor would Lanier have been noted, perhaps, if he had not first asked to turn over his sword to Trotter."

Not ten minutes after Lanier went out, and went silent, but in unspeakable wrath, Paymaster Scott came dawdling in, and though but a casual visitor at the post, just back that day from a tour of the northward camps and forts along the Indian border, he saw at a glance that something had gone amiss. The colonel was laboriously waltzing; three or four couples were mechanically following suit, but most of the men were gathered about the buffet, and most of the women huddled at the dressing room door, and Scott, marching over to pay his respects to the colonel's wife, noted instantly the trouble in her serious face. Captain Snaffle was speaking with her at the moment. Mrs. Snaffle was at her side. "Why did they tell her at all?" Mrs. Snaffle was asking, with much spirit and obvious effort to control a racial tendency to double the final monosyllables. "Sure they might have known 'twould so—frighten the life out of her."

"So—frighten who?" asked Scott. Snaffle shot a warning glance at his wife.

"It's Bobby Lanier, meejor, only you mustn't sp—refer—to it."

"Lanier? Oh, yes, I thought it was Bob I saw awhile ago streaking it across the parade. What's Bob got to do with frightening folk?"

"Something very unfortunate has happened, major," said Mrs. Button. "Mr. Lanier was officer of the guard and asked to attend the dance, Mr. Trotter offering to take charge of the guard. Colonel Button felt compelled to decline, and—he came anyway. You know, of course, that couldn't be overlooked."

"I'm," said Scott gravely and reflectively. "And who is so frightened?"

"Miriam Arnold, a very charming girl who is visiting the Sumters. Indeed, it looks as though she cared for him. It's no secret that he's in love with her."

But at the moment Mrs. Sumter was seen coming forth from the dressing room. Half a dozen women were upon her at once with sympathetic inquiries. She came straightway to Mrs. Button.

"You will forgive my girls for not saying good night," she cordially spoke. "Miriam has been quite upset by a letter from home, and this little—episode—this evening, which she cannot understand as we do, has so unstrung her that Mrs. Foster offered to send them over home in her sleigh. The side door had been barred, but Mr. Horton pried it open for them, so they had no need to come this way and face everybody—and explain."

"You know how sorry I am," said Mrs. Button. "Of course they are excusable for leaving as they did. Why, where are the others going?"

The music had suddenly stopped. Some one among the women, with startled eyes and paling face, sprang up saying, "It's fire." Almost at the same instant the colonel and Scott reached the veranda without. A dozen officers were there, intent and listening. "I tell you I heard it plainly," said one of their number, "and the Foster sleigh isn't back."

"Heard what, sir?" demanded the colonel. "What's the trouble?"

"A cry for help, or something, over yonder."

There presently appeared round the corner of the building the sergeant of the guard, and with him a burly soldier, bleeding at the nose. One hand covered a damaged eye; with the other he saluted Captain Snaffle.

"Sir, I have to report Trooper Rawdon assaulting a noncommissioned officer."

Major Scott gave tongue.

"Trooper Rawdon!" cried he. "Why, he now has a month's furlough from General Crook. He's the best man of the escort."

"Refused to obey my orders to go to his quarters, sir, and assaulted me when I tried to enforce 'em. Sergeant Blunt says he won't confine him unless Captain Snaffle orders it."

"One moment, sergeant," interposed Colonel Button. "Has any disturbance—any cry for help—been heard at the guardhouse, or was this the explanation?"

"No, sir, hasn't called off half past 'leven."

"No. 5!" cried two or three men at the instant, and without a word Captain Sumter hurried away.

"No. 5!" repeated the colonel. "That's just back of Sumter's quarters."

Afar across the glistening level a few lights glimmered faintly in the row of officers' quarters, but there was no sign of moving humanity. Only the hurrying form of Captain Sumter could be seen halfway across the parade. The Fosters' sleigh was nowhere in sight. Sumter's quarters were about the middle of the row. Lanier's were at the eastward end. All men stood waiting, watching. Then on a sudden two or three black forms darted from the shadow of the middle quarters. One came running out across the parade, hardly slackened speed at the hall of Captain Sumter, pointed back with one hand, shouted something that doubled Sumter's pace.

It was Conroy, corporal of the guard. "The adjutant orders me to report No. 5 sick, sir," he panted. "I found him all doubled up in the coal shed. They got the steward over from the hospital, but they want the sergeant and some of the guard to search the back buildings."

"Who wants them?" demanded the colonel.

"The adjutant, sir. Lieutenant Blake's with him. There has been some prowlers, and the young ladies were frightened."

"One moment," interposed the colonel. "Sergeant of the guard, take four of your men and report to Captain Sumter or to the adjutant. Now, corporal, when was this cry heard?"

"Just after the young ladies got home, sir."

"Was the officer of the guard over there?"

"Not the—new one, sir, but"— The corporal suddenly stopped.

"But what?" demanded the colonel. "Do you mean that Lieutenant Lanier was there—out of his quarters?"

"Out of his head if he was," growled the paymaster, who loved him well and was deeply concerned over his trouble.

"I—I didn't see him, sir," answered the young soldier, but in manner so confused that it simply added to the commander's suspicion.

"Come with me, Horton," said the colonel to his quartermaster, and turned back for his cap and overcoat. Then once again the voice of the aggrieved and importunate sergeant was heard, this time with convincing appeal.

"I beg the colonel's pardon, but if he wants to get the truth as to this night's business it would be well to arrest Trooper Rawdon or he'll be off for good and all."

"Find him, then, sergeant of the guard, and have it done," said Button.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

French Servants' Characters.

It is an unwritten law in France that you must never say anything bad about a servant or employee in his "character"—that is to say, if you cannot say anything good you must content yourself with a noncommittal statement which will not compromise his prospects. For instance, if you have caught your cook robbing you in such a shameful and impudent fashion that you are obliged to dismiss her you may not state on her "certificate" that you have dispensed with her services because you found she was dishonest. That, it is held, might prevent her obtaining a situation elsewhere, and as every one has to earn his bread the cook must be given the opportunity of recommencing her larceny elsewhere. All that you are entitled to say on her "character" if you will not lie and pay her compliments is that she entered and left your service on certain dates.—Paris Letter to London Globe.

Armies In Old Testament Times.

All through ancient history oriental armies had no sentinels, and thus in the Bible King Saul when he was pursuing David slept without any guard, so that David stole up to where the king lay asleep and took the cruse of water at his head with him (I Samuel, xxvii). A striking illustration of this was when Alexander the Great, accompanied by his chief officers, entered the lines of the Persian army the night before the decisive battle of Arbela and found that there was not one of the sleeping host who observed them. We can readily see, therefore, that a panic might occur by a sudden night attack on an army so carelessly guarded and that Abraham's company might easily have taken advantage of this.—Dr. William Hanna Thomson in Designer.

He Knew It.

"Tommy," said the teacher, "you knew very well you have no good excuse for staying away from school yesterday."

"I know it, teacher," replied the little fellow, "but it wasn't my fault."

"Are you sure it wasn't?" queried the teacher.

"Yes, ma'am," answered Tommy. "I tried my best to think up a good excuse, but I just couldn't."—Chicago News.

GOTHAM BANKS ARE TRIMMED

Ease In Securing Loans Causes Hop Dealer's Downfall

PLEADS GUILTY OF LARCENY

Sum Named In Complaint Is Only $10,000, but Two Banks Have Lost at Least $175,000, While Others Lose Various Sums—Merchant Kept $300,000 "In the Air" by Juggling Loans In Different Banks

New York, Sept. 15.—Adolph Rothbarth of the firm of Martin Rothbarth & Co., hop dealers, with offices in London, Frankfort and St. Petersburg, pleaded guilty to the larceny of $10,000 from the Mercantile National bank and was held for trial in an equal amount of bail.

He had been under the surveillance forty-eight hours, and his arrest occurred after a long conference between the district attorney's office and a coterie of bankers with whom he has had dealings.

"Your Honor," said the assistant district attorney in charge of the case, "although the specific sum named in this complaint is only $10,000, the actual amount this bank alone has lost will come to more than $100,000, but I ask only this small bail because the prisoner has admitted that he did wrong and promises to afford the prosecution every aid in his power."

The money went in speculation, according to Rothbarth's own admission. "I was squeezed in the panic of 1907," he said, "and began to get loans from the banks. It was so easy that I kept on."

F. S. Schenk, president of the Liberty National bank, gave out a statement of the bank's dealings with Rothbarth. "We have not thought it necessary to prosecute," he said, "in view of the action taken by the Mercantile National bank, but none the less we also are out $75,000. Of course, we shall take action to get back as much of it as we can from the firm.

"We have been doing business with Martin Rothbarth & Co. for more than three years. The loans given to Adolph Rothbarth in behalf of his firm cover a period of about that time. The loans made were varying amounts, but in January, 1910, they were all paid up.

"Later Rothbarth began borrowing again. On a statement made by him on Aug. 31, that these credits of the firm aggregated $1,200,000, we advanced him $75,000. When we learned later that he had got loans from other banks, we investigated and found that the statement made to us was false. All the previous transactions had been very business-like."

Three other banks are said to be involved, but their names have not yet come out. It is said that by juggling loans among them, Rothbarth was able to keep as much as $300,000 in the air at once. He could not give the bail demanded and had to spend the night in the Tombs.

BY DIRECT NEGOTIATIONS

United States and Canada Expected to Conclude Reciprocity Treaty

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 15.—Negotiations for the conclusion of a reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada will be opened next month. Ambassador Bryce has assented to the negotiations being carried on directly between Canada and the United States without the formality of being conducted through the British embassy.

The details of the negotiations have not been arranged as yet, but it is the hope of President Taft that before the end of October the representatives of both countries will be able to come together.

The reciprocity idea will meet with considerable opposition in both countries, but it is believed that the Canadian opposition is more pronounced that that in the United States.

MAKES STONG DENIAL

But New York Minister Is Fined In Pawtucket as Auto Speeder

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 15.—"I know more accurately than any one on earth or in h—— that I was not exceeding the speed limit," declared Rev. Dr. William D. Buchanan of New York, when he was charged in court with overspeeding in this city. Buchanan has a summer residence at Narragansett Pier.

Judge Tuck was not inclined to accept the clergyman's emphatic denial, however, and found him guilty. A fine of $15 and costs was imposed. An appeal was taken and Buchanan was held in $100 bonds for his reappearance in court.

Killed on Death Crossing

Waltham, Mass., Sept. 15.—On the Elm street grade crossing, long regarded a death trap, Louis Lieberman, aged 25, was killed, and his companion, Jacob Nesimbaum, was seriously injured when their wagon was struck by an express train, the gate tender, William Norton, having failed to lower the gates.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 15.—The sudden death last week of Solicitor General Bowers has made an important vacancy for President Taft to fill. Several names have been presented to the president for his consideration.

Among the most prominently mentioned is Frank B. Kellogg of Minneapolis. Kellogg was employed as special attorney in the prosecution of the Standard Oil cases, and it is understood is thoroughly familiar with the work of the solicitor general's office.

NEW MALADY ATTACKS POPE

Believed to Be Due to Worry Over Affairs Concerning Church

Rome, Sept. 15.—Besides suffering from gout, Pope Pius is ailing from another complication of which the doctors refuse to talk. The regular physician at the Vatican is holding a series of consultations with Professor Marchiafava, although no undue alarm is felt.

It is believed here that the pope's illness has been brought about by worry over the affairs of the Roman Catholic church in countries where the Vatican's plans have met with reverses recently.

The attending physicians have ordered a period of complete mental and physical rest for the pope, which, it is believed, will result in a return of his normal health.

ANOTHER ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP WRECKED

Three of Crew Seriously Hurt When Motor Explodes

Baden-Baden, Sept. 15.—The German dirigible balloon Zeppelin VI, while entering her shed was blown up by an explosion of the motor in the rear gondola. Three of the airship's crew were seriously injured.

The Zeppelin VI was under charge of the Passenger Airship company, having replaced in the passenger service the recently wrecked Deutschland. She was transferred from Friedrichshafen to this place and proved to be the speediest of her type. The dirigible was reconstructed to carry ten passengers and during the last few days had made trips to various places.

The accident occurred as the dirigible was being slowly worked into her shed here. There was a sharp report, a flash of flames, and in a moment the immense fabric of silk canvas was afire. The crew tumbled over the sides of the airship, barely escaping with their lives.

This is the fifth serious accident which has befallen the Zeppelin dirigibles, the histories of which have been brilliant but brief, and usually ending in disaster.

GOTHAM MURDER MYSTERY

Part of Human Body Found Wrapped In Paper In River

New York, Sept. 15.—The police report that George Grant of 529 East Eighty-third street found at the foot of East Eighty-ninth street part of the trunk of the body of a human being wrapped in a paper bundle.

Beyond the finding of a handkerchief marked "J" and parts of a blue and white skirt, the police have few clews to work upon.

Two Killed as Building Falls

Charleroi, Belgium, Sept. 15.—One of the exposition buildings in process of construction collapsed. Two workmen were killed and several ohers were injured.

Heavy Haul by Robbers

Trenton, Ky., Sept. 15.—Robbers broke into the bank at Trenton and got away with $100, all in copper cents. The other funds in the safe were not disturbed.

CHARGED WITH INHUMANITY

Head of Farm School to Have Trial by Jury

ALLEGED TORTURE OF BOYS

Said to Have Been Placed In Device Resembling a Coffin, Where They Could Not Kneel, Sit or Rest—Holes In Box Fourteen by Fifteen Inches Square Made by Occupants Gasping For Air

New York, Sept. 15.—Acceding to the prisoner's demand for a jury trial, Judge Quinn of Valhalla has adjourned the case of Charles P. Fisher, the superintendent of the Brace farm school, at that place, charged with cruel treatment of some of the boys committed to his care. Fisher was arraigned before Judge Quinn.

Immediately upon his arraignment Fisher moved that his case be adjourned, saying that he wished to be tried by jury instead of by a justice of the peace. The courtroom was crowded at the time with officials and witnesses.

The boys who will be called as witnesses against Fisher were ordered into the custody of Inspector Burke of the Aqueduct police. What Burke calls "the most infamous device for torture ever seen in the county of Westchester" is stored in the Aqueduct police station. It will be offered as evidence against the superintendent.

It consists of a box made of two inch plank nine feet high. It is charged in affidavits that the holes in the box had been bored and cut by boys gasping for air. A single partition made the box practically two upright boxes, or closets, for accommodating two boys at a time. Its double doors are equipped with an iron bar and padlock.

These separate "coffins," as they were called, measured 14 by 15 inches square on the inside, and were so small that an ordinary man could not squeeze into them. A person in the box could not kneel or sit or rest. It is charged that the box was kept in a cellar, filled with sulphurous fumes from a fumigating apparatus. In an affidavit sworn to by Thomas Barnshaw he says:

"I went voluntarily to the Brace school to learn how to work on a farm. They put me to scrubbing the second day until my knees blistered. When I objected the superintendent struck me, knocked me down, kicked me and when I tried to get away he threw me into a room where the box was kept. I screamed in pain as he twisted my arm, and when I was too weak to stop him he put me into the box, locked it and kept me there from 3 o'clock in the morning until noon. After beating me again he made me go in the box a second time, keeping me in until half-past 5 o'clock that afternoon."

ROBBED AS HE SLEEPS

More Than $15,000 In Booty Secured From Home of Judge

Providence, Sept. 15.—Burglars entered the summer home of Judge Lebaron B. Colt of the United States circuit court at Bristol, where more than $15,000 in jewels and money was stolen, and a cottage at Watch Hill, where jewels belonging to Mrs. E. M. Burrill of Waterbury, Conn., and a Mrs. Thatcher of Boston to the value of $10,000 were taken. No clues were left by the robbers at either place, the burglars evidently gaining entrance to the houses by means of false keys.

The robbery of Colt's house was one of the most daring ever perpetrated in the state. Going to the room on the second floor where Colt and his wife were sleeping, the burglars ransacked the bureau drawers, taking all of Mrs. Colt's jewels. Colt's pocketbook, containing about $100, was taken from his trousers pocket, and Mrs. Colt's pocketbook, containing about $35, was also stolen.

BOSTON'S SCHOOL ARMY

Registration of Children Is Well Above Hundred Thousand Mark

Boston, Sept. 15.—Over 100,000 children reported for instruction yesterday at the opening of the public schools of this city.

Indications at first pointed that attendance would not exceed 103,000, but the schoolhouse commissioners and the school board are now of the opinion that the total registration may be as high as 105,000 by the end of the week, as not all of the children have applied for admission as yet.

Walsh Fortune Down to $6,500,000

Denver, Sept. 15.—The estate of Thomas F. Walsh, which had been approximated as high as $100,000,000, is worth only $6,500,000, according to the inventory filed by S. A. Osborn, representing the estate.

Plague Decreasing In Italy

Rome, Sept. 15.—Only one new case of cholera and one death were reported during the past twenty-four hours at Barletta, and one new case at Andria and Trinitapoli, respectively.

BRIEFS

Robert C. Hollbrooke of Whitman has secured employment in this city and will move here.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter French of Wollaston are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George W. French at Randolph.

Mrs. Alice H. Alexander and Mrs. L. Kenneth Hirtle have returned form Pawtucket, R. I.

Residents in the vicinity of Massachusetts Fields school admire the improvements made about the grounds the past week.

Mrs. Albert B. Muir of Hamilton street has so far recovered from sciatia as to be able to walk about the house by the help of crutches.

The Fletchers of Quincy were well represented Wednesday at the reunion of the Fletcher Family Association, held at Chickering hall, Boston, some four or five families attending.

Mrs. Daniel C. Miller of Willet street returned the first of the week from a trolley trip to Westerly, R. I. where she was he guest of Mrs. Mary Currier Burke formerly a teacher at the Massachusetts Field school.

A fine social time was given members of Paul Revere post Tuesday night at G. A. R. hall by the Relief Corps. There were refreshments of ice cream coffee, cake, etc., and an entertainment of music and readings. The affair was a great success socially and thoroughly enjoyed.

Friends of Mrs. Stella Hirtle Roberts formerly of Wollaston will be shocked to hear of the death of her husband Frank Roberts at Pawtucket, R. I., last week. On Monday morning while attempting to kindle a fire by using kerosene oil as he thought, but which proved to be wood alcohol he was so severely burned that death followed on Tuesday night.

WEDDINGS

embroidered white muslin with irish crochet and pink ribbons she carried a basket of pink roses. Her brother John Leyson Vaupel was ring bearer. The ushers were Messrs. Allan H. MacKenzie and Arthur G. Alexander of Dorchester.

A reception was held from 8 until 10 o'clock, the grooms' mother and bride's mother assisting in receiving.

After the collation an interesting feature was the cutting of the bride's cake by the bride, which contained a ring, thimble and money. There were many beautiful gifts including silver, cut glass, china, linen, french clock and checks.

Mr. and Mrs. Spaulding left mid a shower of confetti. After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C., they will be at home after October fifteenth at Jaffrey, New Hampshire.

BURNHAM—EMERSON.

Miss Jennie S. Emerson of Braintree became the bride on Wednesday evening of Mr. Albert E. Burnham, a business man of Central Falls, R. I. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. E. L. Bradford of East Weymouth at the residence of the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Emerson on Bellevue avenue.

The bride's dress was of ivory messaline with duchess and rose point lace, the tulle veil was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Bride roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Alice C. Emerson of Braintree, and Miss Edith A. Barr of Providence. The former wore Swiss embroidered muslin and the latter chiffon over pink silk; both carried pink roses. The best man was David B. Campbell of Central Falls. The ushers were Arthur T. Emerson of Braintree, Sewell E. Newman of Winchester, T. T. Chamberlin, Jr., of Central Falls and Walter E. Davis of Valley Falls.

Guests were present from Providence, Central Falls, Pawtucket, Boston, Ohio, New York, Winchester and Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson will be at home at Central Falls, R. I. after Nov. 1. The bride was a graduate of Smith college in the class of 1902.

JONES—SANFORD.

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized on Wednesday evening when Miss Bertha Mae, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sanford of Braintree, became the bride of Edward Burton Jones of Brooklyn, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Mitchell, of Braintree.

The bride looked charming in white crepe de chine, and carried bride roses. Her maid of honor was an intimate friend, Miss Lillian Spencer of Wollaston, who was gowned in white lace over blue silk and carried white carnations. The best man was Mr. Arthur Drollett of Braintree, a cousin of the groom.

A wedding reception followed at which a great deal of merriment was created over the cutting of the bride's cake.

The bride and groom left amid a shower of confetti and good wishes in an auto. After a trip to Maine and the Provinces, Mr. and Mrs. Jones will reside in Brooklyn, N. Y.

TILDEN—GARDNER.

The marriage of Mr. Henry P. Tilden and Miss Mildred Gardner took place at Mr. Tilden's home in East Weymouth, Wednesday evening at 8.30. The double ring service was used and was conducted by Rev. E. L. Bradford. The bride was given away by her brother, Alfred W. Gardner, and Miss Ethel F. Raymond was the maid of honor.

WOLGAST - M'FARLAND FIGHT.

Battle Between Champion Lightweight and Chicago Man Should Be Corker.

After many ineffectual attempts to get the two lightweight stars together Packey McFarland has been billed to meet Champion Ad Wolgast over the ten round route at Milwaukee Sept. 30. The boxers will weigh in at 133 pounds at 5 o'clock.

The fight will be Wolgast's only real engagement since the time he hurt his hand in a battle in Milwaukee. McFarland's last fight was when he battled twenty rounds to a draw with

TWO STURDY LIGHTWEIGHTS TO MEET IN MILWAUKEE SEPT. 30.

Freddie Welch in London, and it will be the first time he ever has met the champion in his class.

Packey is elated over securing the chance to meet the champion and has been in hard training for the last two weeks. McFarland has been chasing Wolgast for nearly a year, and at last his desire has been fulfilled. He is certain he can down the champion in ten rounds, and the battle is sure to be one of the fastest and most bitterly fought in the history of ring contests at Milwaukee.

SCHULTE IN GREAT FORM.

Chicago Crack Outfielder Hitting the Ball With a Vengeance.

Frank Schulte, right fielder on the famous Cub baseball machine, is hitting the ball with a vengeance this fall and attracting the attention of the ball fans in all parts of the country. He is one of the most natural hitters in the game today, and his long drives are made with as much ease as if he were simply laying down a bunt.

Frank Selee picked Schulte up in Syracuse, N. Y., and said at the time that the youngster was destined to be one of the greatest batters in the history of the game. Frank Chance, who succeeded Selee, has always had the same opinion as his old leader, and the opinion of the two great leaders has been brought to pass, for Schulte is now one of the leading sluggers in the game and is the envy of every player when he swings on the ball.

Schulte has every one of the pitchers scared when they face him, for he has the most deadly swing of any of the batters in the game.

Players Stick to Same Ball Clubs.

Only five big league players of long experience have put in all their time with one club. Chance, Evers and Kling have always been Cubs, Lee Tannehill's entire career has been with the Chicago White Sox, and Eddie Plank began with the Philadelphia Athletics.

BASEBALL CHIRPS

Archer plays first base like a veteran for the Chicago Cubs. Chance feels that he can afford to lay off any length of time without any cause for worry.

Meloan of the Chicago White Sox gives the impression that he is going to be a good ball player. The youngster fields well, is fast on his feet and handles his bat as if he were a hitter.

Rollie Zeider is the sole survivor of the infield with which the Chicago White Sox started the season. Purtell has gone to Boston, while Gandil and Blackburn have been relegated to the bench.

The playing of Jack Knight, the New York Americans' infielder, has been the talk of the league for weeks. He has shown himself a wonderful shortstop, a first baseman good enough for any team, and now he is demonstrating that he can bat just as well as any of them.

Talk about your odd names in baseball! The following short list shows that the Murphys, Reillys, Smiths and Joneses are being pushed into the background by the comers and phenoms who are coming up from the lowly minors: Rapp, Lapp, Snapp, Krapp, Upp, Krupp and Knapp are now looking for honors.

PUNISH PITCHERS WHO HIT BATTER?

Penalty Should Be Imposed on Twirler For Such an Offense.

GIVE BATSMEN THREE BASES.

Slabbists Then Would Be Compelled to Use More Discretion—Boxmen, as a Rule, Do Not Intentionally Hit Man at Plate.

Many close students of baseball are of the opinion that the penalty imposed on pitchers for hitting batsmen is altogether too light. It is suggested that the batter who is hit by a pitcher should be allowed to take more than one base. Some suggest that if a fine or suspension was imposed on a pitcher every time he hit a batter there would probably be a decided decrease in the "hit by pitcher" part of the tabulated scores.

It is argued there is no satisfaction in awarding first base when a team may lose the services for weeks of one of its best players. If the man hit were allowed to take second or third base instead of first there would be fewer wild inshoots and fewer men struck. Pitchers then would be compelled to use a little more discretion and so many balls would not shoot by within a sixteenth of an inch of a player's head. If the pitcher found that by hitting a man he gave that player third base and stood in jeopardy of giving the opposing team a score he would soon change his tactics.

Some may argue that certain players would walk into the ball and take a chance of getting hit if third base were the penalty, but the umpire usually can decide this point. No man is going to walk into a swiftly thrown ball if he can help himself, and those who tried to bump into a floater would not be able to get their point.

Pitchers, as a rule, do not intentionally try to hit or cripple a batsman, although there have been cases where strong suspicion was raised by a twirler's "wild" heaves. A case in point arose during the first game of a double header played in New York last June between the Highlanders and the Athletics. Russell Ford was pitching for New York and Cy Morgan for the Quakers. Twice Morgan pitched the ball directly at Ford's head. The second effort grazed the peak of Ford's cap. He was allowed to take first base, but he was so completely unnerved that the Athletics knocked him out of the box in the next inning.

It was said at the time, after the awful howl Connie Mack set up last fall when Ty Cobb spiked Jack Barry, that the manager of the Athletics was somewhat inconsistent in allowing such tactics.

Through being hit by pitched balls some of the best batsmen in the game fell off in their stick work for months, and some never got back to their original form. Hughey Jennings and Billy Lauder are in the list. Freddie Parent was never again as good as before he was hit by a pitched ball. Danny Hoffman was winged by Jesse Tennehill, almost killed, and has never since been able to face with any confidence a left hand pitcher. Birdie Cree of the New York Americans was put on the injured list for a long time through the same cause.

Walter Johnson, the speed merchant of the Washington club, has a record for this seeming wildness that sometimes looks intentional. He put Harry Lord, the Boston captain, out of business for awhile.

Big league pitchers admit that they use a "beau" on dangerous batsmen in order to drive them away from the plate. Fans can see for themselves that often when the pitcher is in a hole and a good batter up the twirler will send the ball as close to the batsman as is possible to deliver it. His intention is to shake the confidence of the hitter and make him back away. He figures that the next couple of balls he can curve over and get the batsman in a hole. Sometimes the first ball comes too fast for the batsman to get out of the way and he is laid out.

Uhlan, 1:58¾, Well Bred.

A POINT FOR CRIPPEN

Pathologist Unable to Determine Sex of Vicitm of Murder

London, Sept. 15.—Testifying at the resumption of the Crippen murder trial, Professor Pepper, the pathologist of the University of London, said that his examination had convinced him that the human parts found in the cellar of the Hilldrop-Crescent home were severed by a hand skilled in surgery, and directed by a mind that possessed a real knowledge of anatomy. Under cross-examination, Pepper admitted that he had been unable to establish the sex of the victim.

Solicitor Newton suggested that a man specializing in the ear, nose and eye, like Dr. Crippen, would not necessarily be able to adroitly separate the members of a body, but Pepper thought that a specialist as counsel described would have a general anatomical knowledge. Newton intimated that experts engaged by the defense had reached conclusions differing from those of Professor Pepper in some particulars.

Liner Stops and Sends Twenty Italians Back to Boston

Boston, Sept. 15.—Wireless messages brought a tugboat post haste from the White Star docks to the liner Canopic, when she was alongside parted with $22 each for the envelopes, Boston light, to take back to port a party of twenty Italians, who threatened to make trouble when the steamship officers refused to recognize as good for passage to Italy twenty long brown manila envelopes, which, they said, they had been assured were good for transportation to their native land. parted with $25 each for the envelopes, under the impression that they were purchasing tickets to Italy.

The envelopes bore no legend other than the business card of a North End bank printed upon them. Volubly the Italians protested that they had Their protests proved unavailing, however, and the big liner halted in its course, signalled to shore for a tug, and had the wildly excited men returned to the docks, from which they were carted last night to Station 15 and locked up on a charge of trespassing.

TWO YEARS FOR GERBRACHT

Fine of $5000 Also Imposed on Former Employe of Sugar Trust

New York, Sept. 15.—Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg refinery of the Sugar Trust, who with Charles R. Heike, former secretary and treasurer of the Sugar Trust, was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the government by the underweighing of sugar, was sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta and fined $5000 by Judge Martin in the United States court.

After imposing sentence, Martin granted a stay on appeal and fixed bail at $25,000. Sentence on Heike, who has been called "the man higher up," is still pending.

Killed While Stealing Ride

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 15.—Albert McArthur of Malden, Mass., was struck by a bridge while riding on the roof of one of the cars of an express freight which reached here late last night, and was instantly killed. He was stealing a ride and did not stoop low enough when the train was passing under a bridge. He was married and a veteran of the Spanish war.

About 50 carriages followed the hearse. The body was taken to the Mt. Calvary cemetery in Roxbury where it will be buried in the family lot.

The bereaved family received wreaths, set pieces and bunches of flowers too innumerable to mention. It required three carriages to convey them to the cemetery.

The church was filled with mourners both the auditorium and the gallery. The Elks occupied the left hand side of the middle aisle in front, and the K. of C. delegation were directly behind them. The chief mourners were on the right of the middle aisle opposite the Elks.

Mr. Coleman will be greatly missed not only in his home town, but here in Quincy where he was well known. To know the man was to like him, as his host of friends would testify. It is hard to lose a friend like this, but the fact that he died at the post of duty alleviates somewhat the sorrow which all must undergo.

NOMINATIONS FOR STATE CANVASS

REPUBLICANS HAVE A FEW CONTESTS

Two Nominations for Congressman, and Two in Sixth Representative Districts

Double Sets of Senatorial Delegates in Five Wards

Nomination papers for the Republican caucuses were opened at Republican headquarters on Thursday evening by Louis F. R. Langelier, the secretary of the Republican City Committee, in the presence of a large number of voters, including most of the members of the Ward and City Committee.

FOR CONGRESS.

The Republicans of the Tenth Congressional district will make direct nomination of a candidate for Congress, and the Quincy ticket in all wards will contain these candidates:

J. Mitchell Galvin, 47 Melville avenue, Boston, for whom two papers were filed, and William B. Willcutt, 31 Walton street, Boston, for whom five papers were filed.

At the last Congressional election Mr. Galvin received four less votes than Joseph F. O'Connell, the successful Democrat. Messrs. Galvin and Willcutt were both at headquarters when the papers were opened.

REPRESENTATIVES.

The Republicans of Wards One, Two and Three, comprising the Fifth Norfolk District, will make a direct nomination of a candidate for Representative to the General Court, and Representative William R. Thomas of Ward One has no opposition, papers being filed for him and no one else.

The Republicans of Wards Four, Five and Six comprising the Sixth Norfolk district, will also make a direct nomination of a candidate and there are two in the field:

Louis F. R. Langelier of Ward Six, for "Renomination," for whom three papers were filed, and Nathan G. Nickerson of Ward Five.

DELEGATES.

In all wards, except Ward Two, there are rival lists for Senatorial candidates, but only one list for the various other conventions, the tickets being as follows:

WARD ONE.

State—Clarence Burgin, Charles H. Johnson, George E. Adams and George H. Brown.

Councillor—Vacancy.

County—John O. Hall, Charles C. Hearn, Thomas M. Butler and Francis M. Curtis.

District Attorney—George W. Abele, John D. Mackay, Arthur W. Stetson and William M. Marden.

Senatorial—Eben W. Sheppard, Frederic E. Jones, Andrew Johnson and Henry P. Furnald.

Second list—Edgar G. Cleaves, Carl Edgren, Henry P. Kittredge and Archibald F. Macleod.

WARD TWO.

State—Eugene C. Hultman and Harry G. Studley.

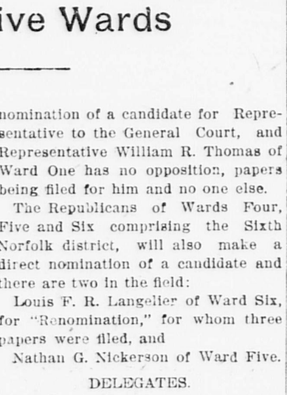

Councillor—Harry G. Studley and Rolin H. Newcomb.

County—Edgar F. Hayden and Arthur W. Newcomb.

District Attorney—Eugene R. Stone and Albert L. Whitman.

Senatorial—Edwin W. Newcomb and William G. Webb.

LATEST!

Senator Hultman Out of the Field

Will Not Be Candidate for Third Term from the First Norfolk District.

The political surprise of the day is the withdrawal of Senator Eugene C. Hultman of this city as a candidate for reelection. He has found that the First Norfolk district is strongly opposed to a third term. He writes the following letter:

Boston, Sept. 16, 1910.

H. G. Gallagher, Esq., chairman Republican Senatorial Committee, First Norfolk Senatorial District, Milton, Mass.

Dear Sir:—Having served five consecutive years in the Legislature, three years in the House and two years in the Senate, I some time ago decided not to be a candidate for renomination. I felt that I could not serve another year without a serious sacrifice of my private interests.

Afterwards, upon the solicitation and representation made to me by many friends in the district, I felt that I ought to be willing, if elected, to serve another term, even at the sacrifice of my private interests, but only upon the condition that there was a fairly unanimous desire for my nomination.

I am now satisfied that such is not the case, and that the nomination is to be had only after a contest. Being unwilling to enter into such a contest, I notify you that I am not a candidate for renomination.

I desire to express my thanks to the voters of the district, and all my friends who have supported me in the past, and to assure you and them that I stand ready and willing, in the future as in the past, to do all I can in the cause of good government.

Very respectfully yours,

E. C. Hultman.

EUGENE C. HULTMAN.

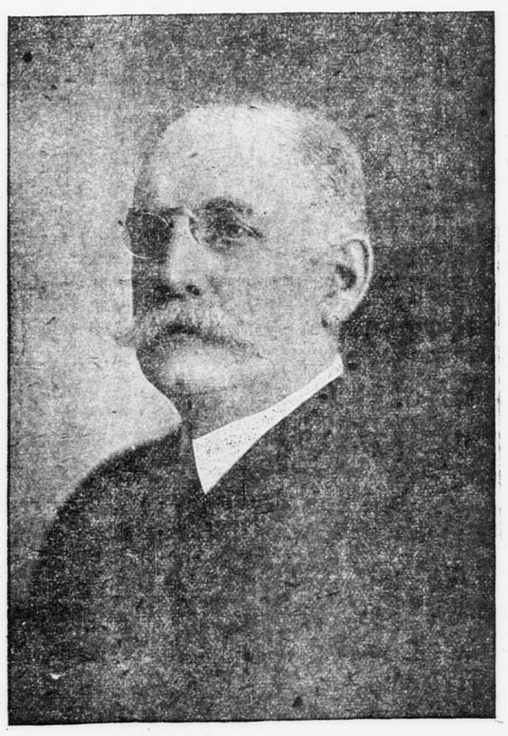

HOUGHS NECK.

L. M. Denton, the popular purser on the Houghs Neck steamboat made his last trip Thursday. The many patrons of the steamer will miss his pleasant face and genial disposition, but will congratulate him on his appointment as second mate on the Gloucester boat Cape Ann. The Houghs Neck steamer has enjoyed a successful summer, which was not marred by any accident.

Angus A. Brown the hardware man who recently went under the surgeon's knife for appendicitis, is slowly improving. Thursday his temperature was normal. His family expect his release from the hospital about Oct. 1.

Henry W. French appears to be the general favorite for nomination as Councilman this fall, but it is a question whether the beach can be successful in persuading him to accept a nomination. The committee however, which was appointed Wednesday to secure a likely candidate, is not giving away secrets. The association has suffered injury in the past by being misquoted, and this committee is taking no chances this time. When a member was approached Thursday at his place of business in Boston, the writer was courteously asked to withhold an interview for a few days out of respect to the balance of the committee. The committee itself is composed of good representative stock, any one of which Houghs Neck would stand by.

A man is specially and divinely fortunate, not when his conditions are easy, but when they evoke the very best that is in him when they provoke him to nobleness, and sting him to strength, when they clear his vision, kindle his enthusiasm and inspire his will.—Hamilton Wright Mabie.

ANOTHER DIVIDEND

Citizens' Gas Light Company Is Prospering

On Thursday the Citizens Gas Light Company declared another dividend, a regular quarterly dividend of one per cent, payable Sept. 30 to stock of record Sept. 28.

This is good news to the people of Quincy, as regular dividends at the rate of four per cent or more annually are now assured, to the stockholders and an early reduction of rates to gas consumers in this city. The consumers have been paying much higher rates than other cities supplied by the Massachusetts Gas Companies, but have waited very patiently for the Quincy company to get established.

The Massachusetts company also declared a quarterly divident of one per cent; the Boston Consolidated a quarterly dividend of two per cent; the East Boston company a quarterly dividend of two and one-half per cent the Newton and Watertown company a quarterly dividend of one per cent.

The combined net earnings of the Massachusetts Gas Companies for August were $132,852, against $115,394 in August 1909, and $82,356 in August 1908.

"Lanier of the Cavalry" by Capt. Charles King begins today in the Ledger and will run serially for the next few weeks. It is an interesting tale of army life on the frontier, every line readable and entertaining. Don't miss the opening chapter today.

TROPHY GOES TO ENGLISHMAN

Grahame-White Wins Cup In Contest With Curtis

ALSO ESTABLISHES RECORD

Proves That Foreign Machines Are Away Behind In Matters of Speed—American Hopes Now Pinned on Wright Brothers—Roe's Triplane Wrecked and Aviator Badly Hurt on Last Day of Squantum Meet

Boston, Sept. 16.—A lean, wiry Englishman in a lean, wiry Bleriot airship swept three times about the Squantum aviation field last night, and then, as if in supreme confidence of the result, sailed indifferently over the heights of South Boston.

A few minutes later, with the eyes of 10,000 citizens upon him as their last hope, Glenn Curtiss in his famous biplane cut his three circles about the course.

The crowded stands vibrant with enthusiasm and hoping against hope that at last they had seen an American lower the colors of the English aviator waited in suspense for the time.

Slowly, as if to emphasize the decisive win, came the announcer's tones: "Grahame-White's record for the course in three laps is 5 minutes 47 4-5 seconds. Glenn Curtiss' record for the course is 6 minutes 4 3-5 seconds."

There was a moment of silence. Then the crowd with the spirit of the best man wins uppermost broke out in round after round of applause for the victorious Englishman.

Grahame-White had not only demonstrated to the satisfaction of everyone that the Bleriot is supreme for speed, but he had lowered his own record for the course and had established a record that is apt to stand for some time.

Curtiss had little to say. He had done his best but he had been caught napping. The Englishman was not only as good an aviator, but he had brought with him a better machine. And Curtis and 10,000 others knew it.

Grahame-White, with his wonderful Bleriot, had won the race, the $3000 cup, and had shown everybody that when it comes to speed the Americans are away behind machines of foreign make.

Out of the decisive defeat of the American struggled one lonely hope. Wilbur Wright announced that he and his brother had determined to build a machine for speed and hoped to be able to wrest away the colors of the Englishman in the international race Oct. 16.

This announcement of Wright's was taken as one of the most important happenings in the field of aviation that has occurred for some time. Americans had pinned their hopes on Curtiss, only to witness his defeat.

In addition to defeating Curtiss, the world champion, Grahame-White demolished his previous record of 6 minutes 1 second, made in the speed contests which closed last Tuesday. His time yesterday was 16 4-5 seconds faster. His mark yesterday was 5 minutes 47 4-5 seconds for the same distance of five and three-quarter miles.

The second extra day of the meet brought the only injury to an aviator during the meet. A. V. Roe was wrecked with his triplane. The machine was demolished, while Roe himself was cut about the head and arms and taken to the emergency hospital, where six stitches were taken in an ugly cut on his right temple.

Roe had tried several times unsuccessfully to fly the triplane. Yesterday he succeeded in getting his motor in fairly good working order. He swung past the grandstand and when within thirty yards of the water and about fifty feet in the air swung sharply to the left.

As he swung to the bank of wind, a fresh puff caught under his planes and the triplane dived sideways to the earth.

BADLY BROKEN IN HEALTH

Friends Say Jeffries May Have to Retire to Sanitarium

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—James J. Jeffries is near a complete breakdown, according to reports current here. The big fighter has never recovered from his defeat at Reno, and his friends fear that he will have to retire to a sanitarium and have a complete rest.

Although Jeffries' condition has not been openly discussed, the report that he is broken in health and a nervous wreck does not come as a surprise to many of his friends.

PLANS FOR NICARAGUA

These Outlined by Estrada Receive Approval at Washington

Washington, Sept. 16.—The state department has advised Salvador Castrillo, the Nicaraguan minister, of its satisfaction with the policy which President Estrada has announced his administration will follow, including the request that this government send to Managua a commission to conclude any formal agreements that may be necessary.

Acting Secretary of State Wilson's note was in reply to the note by Castrillo last Monday, transmitting Estrada's telegram. The state department in this note, which the Nicaraguan authorities regard as an official recognition of the Estrada government, expresses the belief that Estrada's proposals will be for Nicagagua's good and will strengthen the relations of the two governments.

HUB'S FIRE COMMISSIONER

Daly Gets Position Over Which There Has Been Much Wrangling

Boston, Sept. 16.—Charles D. Daly, the former Harvard and West Point football player, yesterday had his appointment by Mayor Fitzgerald to the position of fire commissioner approved by the civil service commission.

It was another "eleventh hour" approval of the commission's, the final action upon the appointment not being taken until after it had been held up twenty-eight of the thirty days allowed the commission by law to consider it.

The new fire commissioner will take the position made vacant by the resignation of Samuel D. Parker at once. This is the place to which Surveyor of the Port McCarthy was originally appointed, only to be turned down later by the civil service commission.

MUST CLOSE UP OR BE STRENGTHENED

Comptroller Murray Is on Trail of Weak Banks

Washington, Sept. 16.—During the next few weeks the few national banks in the United States which are rated as "weak" will have their last chance to strengthen themselves or get out of business. The 105 examiners through whom the government feels the pulse of national banks have been instructed to carry that ultimatum to every board of directors which needs it.

The statement of the condition of every national bank in the country at the close of business on Sept. 1, now being compiled, will be the last chance for any national bank to show its capital impaired, any reduction of its reserve under the limit, any bad papers in its vaults or any concealed liabilities.

Acting on the principle that it is better to liquidate a weak bank, pay off the depositors and save some of the investment for the shareholders, Comptroller Murray will use all the authority of his office to compel sound banking in the strong institutions and force the weak ones to strengthen or retire.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED

Stowaways Taken From Ocean Liner Are Held For Hearing

Boston, Sept. 16.—The preliminary court proceedings against the twenty Italians who were taken from the White Star liner Canopic out at Boston light were begun before Judge Bragg in the Charlestown court. A charge of conspiracy to defraud the White Star line was lodged against each and all pleaded not guilty. Each was held in $100 for a hearing Sept. 21.

As a result of what the police of Station 15 learned from the prisoners Mario Ferlazzo, who, it is claimed, is identified with the business of the Banca Stabile, and three others, were arrested.

COOK'S LONG SERVICE

It Is Rewarded by a Present of a House and Land

New York, Sept. 16.—That there are still a few good and faithful servants to be found is proven by the fact that Mrs. Julia D. Thompson, wife of Dr. Thompson of Ferris Lane, a suburb of Poughkeepsie, because of the invaluable services performed by Kate Brown, her cook, has presented a house and lot, adjoining the Thompson homestead, to Mrs. Brown. The property is free and clear of all encumbrances.

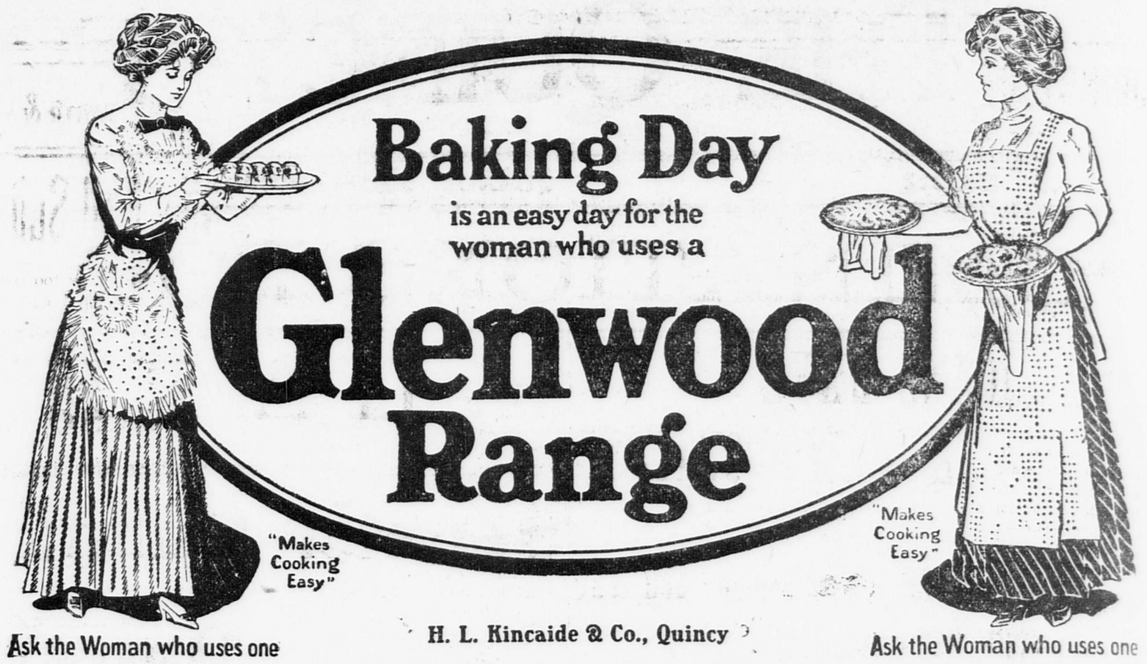

Mrs. Brown has been a cook in the Thompson home for more than thirty years.

District Attorney—Ernest E. Sodergren and Horace T. Jenkins.

Senatorial—Frank E. Badger and Herbert S. Barker.

Second list—James H. Churchill and John Moir.

A PROTEST.

It was the intention of ex-Representative Edward J. Sandberg to have filed a list of Senatorial delegates in Ward Two. He had a list already to file but two men wished to be excused. He sought a new paper about 5 P. M., but was unable to get it until about 7 P. M., and when ehe was ready a second time he was told that he was too late, the time limit of 7.30 having passed. The Republican City Committee decided later to admit Mr. Sandberg's paper, and these names will appear on the ballot for delegates:

SQUANTUM !?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY !?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

QUINCY OF YEARS AGO

Resident of Atlantic Holds Queen Anne Grants

(Historical Paper No. 31.)

William Bowles Glover, of Atlantic street, corner of Newbury avenue, Atlantic, is descended in the eighth generation from John Glover, born at Rainhill parish, England in 1600, who came into possession of large estates at the decease of his father when he was but 19 years of age, by the law of primogeniture, being the eldest son. Manor house and armorial bearings, according to "Burkes Lineage," were his, and he became captain of The Ancient and Honourable Artillery Co. of London. In 1628 his name appears on the records of The London Joint Stock Company, organized at London for adventure in New England, with Sir Richard Salonstall's subscription of 100 pounds and the several others 50 pounds each for allotments of land in the New World to such as "intend to became planters there." In 1620 at London, at a meeting of the company, formed for New England, "First election day; Present this day, the governor; deputy governor, Sir Richard Saltonstall; Mr. Glover" and others.

The Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony arrived on the coast of New England in 1630, and John Glover, who came on the ship "Mary and John" with others of the London Company, among whom was a Mr. Thomas Newbury, who seemed to have been alotted as part of his company acres, land to the south side of the Neponset river. Members of the joint stock company were entitled to two hundred and fifty acres of plantation and additional acres of the common and undivided lands, according to the number of men employed in their business, and their servants.

These grants of land from the "Proprietors of Dorchester" seem to have been interchangable, as at a later date it is mentioned in public documents that Mr. Newbury relinquishes a former grant of land "in that part of Dorchester south of the Neponset river" the upland, "which Mr. Glover so much desireth;" there appears to have been no deed given, but the title was confirmed by the heirs of Mr. Newbury, recorded on "Records of the General Court at Boston, which appear to include further acquisitions by Mr . Glover, as the record gives boundaries as follow: "Bounded north by Neponset river; south by Mr. Wilson's farm in Brantry; east by the sea, at low water mark; and on the west to that precinct of Dorchester" indicating the point that is now Milton. "Brantry" being Braintree, which became Quincy the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Mr. Glover leased farms to "John Gill and Roger Billings—denoting them as the Newbury farms"—and provided stock and farming utensils. "Mr. Glover brought over with him a great number of cattle" and all the provisions and instruments, with men servants, to sit up and carry on the tanning trade," as according to the laws and regulations of the London joint stock company each member was required to establish some trade on his estate."

John Glovers name stands among a list of the inhabitants of Dorchester at the incorporation of the town in 1631, according to "Blake's Annals," and the pits of his tannery were remaining up to recent years. He had a fine dwelling place in Dock Square Boston, but took up his abode, which seems to have been substantial—on his possessions which he so much desired on the south side of the Neponset river in 1640. Two children were born to him there before his decease in 1653, on the site of what is the old Glover place, where Horatio Nelson Glover, prominent in places of trust and honor in the town, was born; and Willam Bowles Glover, the subject of this sketch, the 20th of Sept. 1835, seventy-five years ago.

Two hundred and seventy years have elapsed, and sixty children have been born on that old place descendants of John Glover, who is frequently mentioned in public documents as of influence in the Colony. Governor Winthrop, frequently alluded to him in his journal, and the General Court among other allusions and decrees; one of the former in 1638; the latter in 1648, empowers Mr. Glover to appoint a proper party to do the ferrying across Neponset river. "or take the ferry himself and to his heirs, as his inheritance forever." He was appointed to settle claims with the Indians, who had a trail from Squantum Rock to the Blue hills;" was representative, and magistrate and owned at his decease, much landed estate, having bestowed his possessions in England upon his eldest son, when he reached his majority.

In 1642, that part of Dorchester at the upper southerly side of the Neponset river, became Milton, and subsequently, the lower or sea side of the river passed from Dorchester. The Colony line, between the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies, was not far from the Rev. Mr. Wilson's place bounding John Glover's estates south on the Neponset river. On the present County road, beyond, where a few years ago, was a considerable depression in the land a brook flowed between. At the old Taylor place; in a mowing contest between one of the young men, and one of his classmates in Harvard College, the former received a deep cut with the scythe wielded by his zealous competitor.

The Taylor family had at one time a plan of battle which had been received from Gen. Zachary Taylor as a memento of his military experience. Washington depended upon what was then Braintree, and the adjacent country, for supplies to his army on Dorchester Heights and Boston Neck. Digging away the beautiful uplands by railroads, has marred the picturesque undulations which in some measure remained up to the last "Muster" held on the boundary from the track, to the water front east, held fifty years ago.

The foregoing has been taken largely from "The Glover Memorial and Genealogies." William Bowles Glover retired from active business some years ago; has served his native town in public office, and the inheritance will probably pass to the co-trustee, Mr. Horatio N. Glover of Milton, at his decease.

Counsel, employed to obtain residuary legacies in England may have given the family the information or impression, that during the reign of Queen Anne, the grants of land to the south of the Neponset river, passed to the Earl of Newbury, and further title to the "Newbury Farms" was given to the descendants of John Glover through him. It is generally spoken of in the family, when alluding to their antecedents, that the Glover possessions were "a Queen Anne Grant from the Earl of Newbury," possibly confounded with Thomas Newbury" who seems to have had considerable prestige in apportioning off the Plantation. There are very many present residents of Atlantic who have intermarried with the Glovers, notably the Pope's Billings, Halls and Nelsons.

Agriculture and commerce provided more equally for the distribution of meritorious award for honesty and industry; ever affording opportunity for the pioneer and all interested in healthful happy pursuits, for the common good. Webster knew that a great trend to manufacturing boded no good for the masses.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST SPANISH PREMIER

Priests and Even Court Ladies Are Taking an Active Part

Madrid, Sept. 16.—Mgr. Vico, the papal nuncio at Madrid, has returned from Zaraus, after a month's stay at the summer resort, and with his reappearance in the capital the organization of the Clerical campaign against Premier Canalejas is proceeding with renewed activity.

Great preparations under the direction of the priests are being made for the inauguration of a series of manifestations and meetings of protest to be held throughout the county on Oct. 2, the day before the cortes assembles. Particular care will be taken that the meetings assume a patriotic and peaceful character.

Hostility toward the premier is growing in court circles, many of the ladies of the court having already signified an intention to remain in retirement so long as Canalejas continues in power.

PANAMA'S NEW HEAD

Arosemena Chosen to Fill the Unexpired Term of Obaldia

Panama, Sept. 16.—Liberal members of the national asesmbly elected Pablo Arosemena, Frederico Boyd and Rodolfo Chiari as first, second and third designates respectively. Arosemena becomes acting president for the unexpired term of the late President Obaldia. All three designates are Liberals. The Conservative assemblymen were not present at the election.

The election of Arosemena as first designate and therefore as acting president was generally looked for, and ends a bitter campaign, in which the question of American intervention was given prominence at various times. Arosemena formerly was vice president of the republic and president of the assembly.

TUTTLE'S SUCCESSOR

Timothy Byrnes Will Become Head of Boston and Maine Railroad

Boston, Sept. 16.—It is stated that Vice President Timothy E. Byrnes of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad will be the next president of the Boston and Maine railroad, succeeding Lucius Tuttle, who has a year's leave of absence.

Mr. Mellen is acting president, but it is said that Byrnes will become actual president at the annual election. This was the plan a year ago, and is now to be carried out. Byrnes will within two weeks assume the active management of the road, performing the duties which have devolved upon President Tuttle.

Killed by Elevated Train

Boston, Sept. 16.—Patrick Connors, 27, was picked up by the truck of an elevated train from the trestle on which he had been working, carried thirty feet along the ties, and hurled thirty feet from the elevated structure to the street below, dying almost instantly. His skull was fractured and his neck broken.

THE NEW TELEPHONE RATES

BULLETIN No. 2

Having accepted the recommendations of the Highway Commission relative to rates and service in the Boston and Suburban Districts, it is incumbent upon us to present them and explain their application.

The following may help residence subscribers determine which class of service best meets their needs and make clear some apparently obscure points.

I. The curtailment of area under the proposed district plan does not proportionately curtail the subscriber's actual use of the telephone.

Professor Jackson, the Highway Commission's expert, took careful records to ascertain the number and destination of calls from each exchange to points within the Metropolitan and Suburban districts. He found that, aside from calls for the seven Metropolitan exchanges, only 14% of all Suburban calls went outside districts composed of a particular exchange and its contiguous Suburban exchanges. Hence, the great majority of Suburban users would not be adversely affected by reason of the creation of such districts, but, on the contrary, distinctly benefited when all the advantages are considered.

The present lowest unlimited Suburban rate obtainable is a four-party line at $30 a year. The new lowest unlimited Suburban district rate—a two-party line with divided ringing—is $21 a year in "E" districts, $24 a year in "F" districts, $27 a year in "G" districts and $30 in "H" districts. Here, then, is a reduction of 30, 20 and 10 per cent, respectively, in three classes of exchanges, and the substitution of a two-party line with divided ringing for a four-party line, with other benefits which will be referred to later.

In this connection three important points should be considered—the reduction in the annual rate, the reduction of the toll rate to and from Boston, and the improvement in the service which will result from two-party lines with divided ringing in place of four-party lines. Each of these is a part of the same problem.

II. The reduction of the 10-cent toll rate to five cents to all exchanges within five miles of Boston on April 15, 1908, and the present extension of the 5-cent radius to eight miles, is part of the general plan of revision and reduction, and must fairly be considered in connection therewith.

It was distinctly stated that this 1908 reduction was tentative and part of a general plan, but to be made in advance of other changes. These further changes are indicated in the new rate schedule.

Professor Jackson's figures show that 20% of the calls originating in the present Suburban territory are for the seven Metropolitan exchanges in Boston—Main, Fort Hill, Haymarket, Richmond, Oxford, Tremont and Back Bay. It follows in the toll rates, too, there is a substantial reduction.

The reduction from 10 cents to 5 cents on Boston calls applies to the following exchanges within an 8-mile radius (including those to which the 5-cent reduction was tentatively applied two years ago): Arlington, Belmont, Brighton, Brookline, Cambridge, Charlestown, Chelsea, Dorchester, East Boston, Everett, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Malden, Melrose, Medford, Milton, Newton North, Newton South, Quincy, Revere, Roxbury, South Boston, Somerville, Winchester, and Winthrop.

III. The substitution of two-party lines with divided ringing for four-party lines will tend to the improvement of service.

It is obvious that the fewer parties there are on a line, the more valuable the service, as there is less interference in using it for outward calls and less likelihood of its being "busy" to inward calls.

Divided ringing, on a two-party line, provides for only one ring of the bell and that for the number wanted. It eliminates any annoyance or confusion resulting from a multiplicity of bell signals. It will remove one of the common causes of complaint, and, coupled with the substitution of the two-party for the four-party line, will work a material improvement in the subscriber's service.

IV. The measured service features of the new plan offer distinct advantages to those having special or limited requirements.

For example—There is a measured rate giving for $24 430 calls, which may be used to any exchange, Metropolitan or Suburban, within an eight-mile radius. Additional calls, if made within the exchange district, are 3 cents each.

Here is a case in point: Among the recent inquirers at the Milk street office was a professional man residing in the Newton South exchange, whose telephone service was costing him about $42 a year—$30 for a four-party residence telephone and about $1 a month for toll calls to Boston.

He estimated that two calls a day would meet his actual needs, and he was delighted to learn that these needs (730 calls, including 120 calls to Boston,) under this measured service schedule, could be given him for $32.30, as against the $42 he now pays.

Note—The next bulletin will present a complete rate schedule, with a special analysis for business telephones.

BRIEFS

Music hall is now putting on regular plays at intervals that seem to be appreciated by our people.

Theatre news today and social and personal items Saturday. Are you reading the serial story every day "Lanier of the Cavalry?"

The caretaker of Bethany church takes considerable pride in the looks of the grounds about the church and the green lawns and well kept walks receive much favorable comment from passersby.

Friday is theatre news day with the Daily Ledger and the plays in the local theatres as well as the Boston houses can always be found on the fifth page. This page will be made more of a feature as the season progressts, having pictures and comments on plays and actors.

News items for publication in the Ledger should be addressed to the Ledger, Quincy, Mass., and not to individuals, to ensure publication where addressed to people there is apt to be delay as the person to whom addressed may be away and the mail have to be forwarded or held until their return when it is often too late to be news.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

(Started Sept. 14.)

CHAPTER II.

THAT ended the dance, but not the excitement. Not yet midnight, and in the space of less than one hour all Fort Cushing had been stirred by the news. A most popular and prominent young officer had been placed in close arrest. A prominent, if not most popular, sergeant had been pummeled. An alarming scene of some kind had occurred at the quarters of Captain Sumter. Mrs. Sumter had hurried away the minute she learned that her husband had gone. The colonel, sternly silent, led his wife to their door and there left her, saying he had summoned certain officers to join him at once, and she, who ruled him in all matters domestic almost as she managed the children, knew well that when roused he would brook no interference in matters professional, and Bob Lanier, a prime favorite of hers, had in some way managed to fall under the ban of his extreme displeasure.

At the office were presently assembled the colonel, the adjutant, the quartermaster, the post surgeon, and to them came Paymaster Scott. At the "store" were gathered half the commissioned officers. At Sumter's there kept coming and going a succession of sympathetic callers, who left even more mystified than when they arrived. Miriam had had a fright in the dark on their return home and screamed. No! Sumter thought Mrs. Sumter would need no help, yet he was so much obliged to the several who asked if they couldn't "do something."

Another house was virtually closed to question. To the disappointment of many and the disapprobation of a few, Bob Lanier had closeted himself with his classmate and most intimate friend, "Dad" Ennis; then, after a brief colloquy with Barker, the adjutant had caused a big card to be tacked on his door whereon was crayoned in bold black letters "Busy." But at quarter past 12 the assistant surgeon, Dr. Schuchardt, called, as was known, for the second time and entered without ceremony. When the officer of the day came tramping along the board walk at 12:30 and turned in at the gate he struck the panel with the hilt of his saber. Ennis came to the door, but came with gloomy brow.

"I am ordered by Colonel Button to ask certain questions of Lieutenant Lanier," said the official.

"How's that, doc?" called Ennis over his massive shoulder. "Can your patient see the officer of the day?"

"Not yet, with my consent," came the stout answer.

"Shout your questions, captain," sang out the patient, with much too little humility of manner, yet Lanier knew Curbit well and knew his mission to be unwelcome.

"Is Trooper Rawdon in hiding anywhere about your quarters?"

"He is not, if I know it."

"Have you seen him—tonight?"

An instant's pause then, "I don't know whether I have or not."

"You don't know?" exclaimed Curbit, puzzled and beginning to bristle.

"I don't know," repeated Lanier.

"Suppose the colonel tells me to explain that," began Curbit, but Dr. Schuchardt set his foot down summarily.

"Here," said he, "this thing's got to stop. Lanier's in a highly nervous and excited state. He doesn't know whom he has seen since he got home in arrest."

"Well, the old man wants to see that young Rawdon forthwith, for many people believe he's skipped."

"You can track anything but a ghost in this new fallen snow."

Curbit lowered his voice. "That's exactly the trouble, doctor. Go to the back of the quarters and see for yourself. His trail starts and ends here."

In all its history Fort Cushing had never known such a day of bewilderment as that which followed. Guard mounting was held as usual at 8 a. m., and Colonel Button, awaiting in his office the coming of the old and the new officers of the day, directed his adjutant to drop his own work at their entrance and give attention to what took place.

All eyes were on the two burly captains who entered at 8:30, fur capped, fur gloved, in huge overcoats and arctics. The wind had begun to whine and stir.

"Blizzard coming," said Scott as he glanced at the sullen skies.

"I report as old officer of the day, sir," said Curbit, with brief salute, tendering the guard report book.

The colonel went straight to business.

"No sign of Trooper Rawdon?"

"No, sir."

"His horse and kit all right?"

"All right, sir."

"Police notified to watch all trains—and stages?"

"Yes, sir."

There was impressive silence in the office.

Eight men had gone with Sergeant Stowell as escort to the paymaster when, nearly four weeks earlier, he had set forth on his trip. Then the little iron safe was full of money. Seven men had come back with him, when, as the safe was well nigh empty, the paymaster said he hardly needed an escort. Of the eight who started, four were "casuals" who belonged to companies stationed at Fort Frayne, well up in the Indian country, and there they remained when the duty was over. Of the seven who came with Stowell, three belonged at Fort Frayne, a corporal and two men of Captain Raymond's troop, and they came fortified with the orders of their post commander, a copy of which was now in Barker's hands.

"What I don't understand," said the colonel, whirling his chair to the right about and addressing the paymaster, "is how or why those men should be down here."

"It seems simple," answered Scott placidly, he being entirely independent of the post commander. "From Frayne I had to go to the cantonments up along the Big Horn, and we doubled the size of the escort accordingly. When we got back there these three were permitted to come all the way, whether to buy Christmas things for the Frayne folk or for affairs of their own I didn't inquire."

"To whom did you assign them for rations and quarters?" demanded the colonel of Barker.

"Captain Snaffle, sir, C troop."

"Are they there—the others, at least?"

"Corporal Watts and Trooper Ames are there, sir. Trooper Rawdon, as you know, is not. He has not been seen about the quarters since some time last evening."

Again a pause. Then presently, "You arrested Kelly, I see, the man who was on No. 5."

"Yes, sir. Both Dr. Schuchardt and the steward said his sickness was due to drink. I believe he was doped."

"That he could get whisky anywhere along back of the officers' quarters," said the colonel reflectively as well as reflecting, "is not improbable. That it should have been doped, judging from the way one or two have misbehaved, is not impossible. The usual orders for the present, captain," said he to the new incumbent. "And you are relieved, Captain Curbit," to the old. "But I shall need to see you later, so do not leave the post."

FOUND IT EASY TO GET MONEY

Hop Importer's Dream Was to Become Millionaire

WALL STREET HIS UNDOING

Thought He Was Experienced Enough to Speculate Wisely, but Concluded Otherwise After He Was Shorn—Ready to Take Punshment For Fleecing Banks of Large Sums—Brothers May "Make Good"

New York, Sept. 16.—"I wanted to be a millionaire. I found I could get large sums of money from the banks easily and I got them. Then I speculated in Wall street in the hope of realizing my dream of wealth. I was a lamb and was shorn. I am now at the end of my rope. I am willing to expiate my crime. I hope they will send me away quickly, so that it may soon be over."

Dejected and morose, Adolph Rothbarth, the hop importer, under arrest on the specific charge of getting $10,000 from the Mercantile National bank by grossly misrepresenting his assets, bewailed his fate in his cell in the Tombs.

"I did not want to be a millionaire for the sake of living in luxury," he added. "I have simple tastes. I merely wanted to have the money and the reputation of being a millionaire. I though I was experienced enough to speculate wisely. The panic was practically my undoing."

Rothbarth is held in the Tombs in default of bail. According to the police, lawyers and Rothbarth himself, several hundred thousand dollars figure in his transactions with banks. At one time he obtained loans of $130,000 from one bank when his assets were less than $20,000. When the note matured he paid the money in order to avoid suspicion and to keep his credit good.

Rothbarth's operations were discovered through his own carelessness when he tried to establish a new line of credit at the institution from which he borrowed the $130,000.

After making a statement as to his assets and liabilities to one bank in applying for a loan he failed to make a copy of it. This document was submitted to the Liberty National bank, and by this institution was compared with another statement made to the Mercantile National bank, with which he had been doing business.

There was a wide variance in the items and the amounts in the two statements because of the inability of Rothbarth to remember what he had put in the first statement, and when the credit men of the two banks compared notes suspicion fell upon the importer and he was confronted with the facts. After vainly attempting to explain the discrepancies on the plea of bad bookkeeping, and after an examination of his books had disclosed the actual condition of affairs, he admitted the deception practiced, according to the district attorney, and said he was willing to take the consequences.

According to Frederick B. Schenck, of the Liberty National bank, Rothbarth owes to that institution about $75,000, and, according to Willis G. Nash, president of the Mercantile National bank, Rothbarth owes to that institution "an uncovered balance of about $34,000." The National Park bank had done business with Rothbarth, but has closed out the account and Rothbarth does not owe a cent there.

Neither of the banks affected by the dealings of Rothbarth is in fear of not being able to get the money he owes it. Rothbarth was the American representative of his three brothers, Justus, Leopold and Martin, who do business as Rothbarth & Co. in London, Frankfort and other European cities. The firm has been established more than thirty-five years and handles most of the hops grown in Europe. It is rated at more than $1,000,000, and from this firm the banks are confident of getting every dollar due.

MAINE RETURNS COMPLETE

Plaisted's Plurality Is Found to Be More Than Nine Thousand

Portland, Me., Sept. 16.—Frederick W. Plaisted was elected governor of Maine by a plurality of 9114 votes over Bert M. Fernald, according to the complete returns on the gubernatorial vote, just available for the first time.

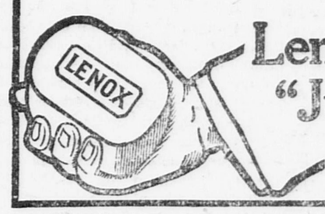

The little town of Woodville, in Penobscot county, which has neither telegraph nor telephone service, was the last place to be heard from, and when its returns finally reached the outside world it was found that the hamlet gave only nine votes to Plaisted, while it added fifteen votes to Fernald's total. The vote of the entire state was: Plaisted, Dem., 73,801; Fernald, Rep., 64,687.

Death of Admiral Dickins

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

Milton and Sargent Aborn's spectacular production of "The Bohemian Girl" begins a two weeks engagement at the Boston Opera House Monday evening. This will be the first time in many years that Balfe's standard and ballard opera has been given a special production. The forthcoming revival promises to eclipse anything of the kind that has been seen in modern times. The company, including principals, chorus and ballet, will number upwards of 150 people. This spectacular revival is being staged by Edward P. Temple, late stage director and producer at the Hipprodrome, New York. Mr. Temple, during his career as a grand opera producer, has made upwards of 50 revivals of "The Bohemian Girl." He has introduced many striking novelties in the work. Outside of the stage settings, which promise to be most elaborate in extent, there will be introduced at the finale of the first act a troupe of 20 horses, the scenery being so built that Devilshoof will escape on the mountainside with the child, Arline, on horseback. He will be pursued by the 20 mounted horsemen belonging to Count Athheim. In the second act there will be a gypsy camp, and a country town fair with acrobats and other novelties. Instead of the usual book and score of "The Bohemian Girl" the Messrs. Aborn will use the one which Balfe assisted by the Marquis de Saint-Georges, made when the opera was given in Paris in 1869. For this revival Balfe supplied many new numbers to the score. There will be matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

A. E. Matthews, the delightful English comedian whose American debut in New York two months ago was so successful, will make his first appearance in Boston at the Hollis Street theatre Sept. 19 in "Love Among the Lions." For the past ten years Mr. Matthews has shared with Gerald du Maurier in London the whole field of light comedy, and he brings with him a method of natural acting quite unlike any seen in this country. He is a subtle artist; a kind of early Charles Hawtrey, who prefers to suggest rather than over do. Indeed ,his is a rare faculty of investing a farcial, humorous situation, with a human quality that gives its comedy a lasting impression. His vehicle, "Love Among the L"ions," is particularly suited to him. It is a romantic comedy dramatized by Winchell Smith, author of "The Fortune Hunter," from the well known novel of the same name written by Frank Anstey, the best known humorist of London Punch. Mr. Matthews takes the part of young Theodore Sanders who is engaged to Lorena de Castro, an impetus young lady who demands that the wedding ceremony take place in a cage of lions. Theodore tries to screw up courage for the awful ordeal. After a most amusing scene in which he tries to summon his courage, finally falls in a faint. A ceremony, however, takes place and it looks as though Lorana had become the bride of Nono, the vulgar tamer of lions. The manner in which Theodore and Lorana are finally extricated from their predicament is by no means the least clever bit of the entertaining farce.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The first opportunity to see a real airship at close range will be afforded at B. F. Keith's theatre next week. Up to this time the thousands who have seen he flights at the Harvard Aero meet have not had an opportunity to come in close contact with either the aviators who have become famous, or the machines. Mr. Keith has arranged to,have one of the great racers placed on the stage and shown in full operation, while an aviator who has become world famous will tell some of his experiences. After this the audience will be invited to come upon the stage and get a close view of this wonderful machine. This will only be one remarkable feature in a bill of novelties. Something equally wonderful will be shown in the mammoth production called "Sherman's Enchantment." In this living figures in beautiful groupings are shown and these dissolve in full view of the audience, other groupings appearing in their places. There has never been anything just like this wonderful transformation on the stage, and the groupings themselves are said to be far and away ahead of anything previously given. Another big feature will be Marshall P. Wilder the world-famous humorist; B. A. Rolfe, and his big company of "Rolfonians" said to be the greatest musical combination ever seen in vaudeville; Robert Henry Hodge in "Bill Blithers, Bachelor;" Wright and Dietrich, the singers; Chassino, the shadowgraphist; and others.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Bells of Haslemere" will be welcome at the Castle Square next week. This sterling English melodrama is one o fthe most famous of the many produced within the last quarter of a century, and it has had long runs in England and in this country. Originally produced in Boston by the old Boston Museum Stock Company, it gained a popularity that has lasted until today, and that promises to be unending. hTere have been several revivals of it at the Castle Square, but none within the last half dozen years. Next week's production will be its first production by the players of the John Craig Stock Company. The scenes of "The Bells of Haslemere" are laid in England, and in Louisiana, and it has a thrilling plot that involves the career of a badly treated young Englishman who finally successfully overcomes his enemies and marries the girl he loves. It will have a series of finely picturesque stage settings, and there will be incidental music that will give it an added attraction. The role of the hero, Frank Beresford, will be acted by John Craig, and there will be equally good characters for all the other members of the stock company. It need not be supposed because "The Bells of Haslemere" is a melodrama that it is lacking in humor. It has a number of delightfully comic scenes that have as much to do with the progress as have the more exciting and emotional incidents.

GLOBE THEATRE.

"The Cub," the latest play from the pen of Thompson Buchanan, author of "A Woman's Way," and the starring vehicle which William A. Brady has chosen for Douglas Fairbanks, is described as "the story of a feud." When the comedy is seen at the Globe theatre, Boston, Monday evening for an indefinite engagement, the experiences through which young Fairbanks in the title role will have to go are something like this. Steve Oldham (Fairbanks) has just finished his college course and found his first job—cub reporter on the Louisville Courier-Journal. Word reaches Louisville of the outbreak of a bitter feud between the Whites and the Renlows, two old and desperate families in the mountains of Kentucky. Because the "covering' of a feud calls not so much for a good reporter as for a reckless dare-devil with limited enough intelligence to discount the actual peril of mixing with the feudists the managing editor assigns Steve to the task. The cub goes at the work enthusiastically. Thirty miles from the seat of the fighting, at a little hamlet in Virginia where Steve leaves the railway and begins a mule-back ride into the mountain country, he meets by chance Alice Bentley whose brother Jack is leader of the Renlow side. The beautiful young girl volunteers to direct Steve to her home—and the first appearance of young Fairbanks comes with his entrance over a rude bridge, astride the mule, his fair guide seated behind him. Steve's association with Miss Bentley during the mule-back trip necessitates his taking up the cudgels of the Renlows. Already he has incensed the Whites by stories sent to his paper before his arrival in the mountains, in the course of which he has described one of the band, Coroner King, as a desperado. The cub reporter escapes violent death at every turn. There are four acts all depicting scenes in the Kentucky mountains.

BOSTON MECHANICS FAIR.

The great Mechanics building on Huntington avenue, Boston, is rapidly taking on the appearance of a veritable beehive. It will be an old time Mechanics Fair in every sense of the word, not a food fair, but an immense assembly of practical working exhibits. One big feature will be an Art Loan exhibit of paintings and statuary, of the finest and most valuable character, a vast gallery of costly works of art cheerfully loaned by owners solely because of their public spirit. Among the contributing artists will be Walter Lansil, John J. Ennecking, Darius Cobb, Tarbell, Hazzard, Scott White, Marshall, Johnson, Abbott, Graves, Alfred Smith, James T. Breen, Carbee, Monks, Buhler, Hallowell, Vinton, Alexander Pope, Chambers, Dean, Mary Macomber and Roger Rich. Among Cobb's pictures will be "The Last Comrade's Tribute," "Belfry at Lexington," "Bunker Hill," "Mt. Washington in the Snow," and "Celtic Bard." Roger Rich will show his two famous "Taj Mahal" paintings, one in the sunlight and the other in the moonlight, both owned by Harvard University and "The Reapers." Among the contributing sculptors will be Hugh Cairns, Bela Pratt, Kitson and John Wilson. This great Mechanics Exposition will be open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M., every day from Monday, October 3 to Saturday, October 29, inclusive.

ON THE STAGE.

Boston is to be the first city to see the Sothern-Marlowe performance of "Macbeth," to be played here within the next few months.

"Polly of the Circus" written by Margaret Mayo and dramatized by Frederic Thompson is to be played next week at the Grand Opera house and the clowns , acrobats, ponies, trained elephant, Little Hip and all of Polly's circus friends will be there with her on the stage.

Tickets went on sale this week for the engagement of Fritzi Scheff in "The Mikado" at Shubert theatre next week.

"A Gentleman From Missippi" with Thomas A. Wise as the star comes to the Majestic theatre, Sept. 19. This play had a Boston run last season of sixteen weeks.

Direct from two years atthe Gaiety theatre, New York, comes to the Tremont theatre on the 19th John Barrymore in "The Fortune Hunter."

Winchell Smith author of "Love Among the Lions" is the nephew of the actor-playwright William Gillette.

Gertrude Elliot has sailed from England and will open her engagement at Shubert's on Oct. 3 in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow."

Marie Doro comes to the Park theatre shortly in "Elecricity" writritten especially for her by William Gillette.

John Drew has never been more pleasantly cast than in the new Maugham comedy, "Smith," in which he opened his season in New York, last week. A semi-serious play, it gives a wider opportunity to the gifted actor to show how varied his comedy is, than he has had in years. Certainly no one has succeeded in laying bare the shams of the fashionable set more forcefully or delightfully than Mr. Drew does in this piece.

William Gillette, ruddy of face and looking stronger than ever, after his summer on his houseboat "Aunt Polly," is now strenuously upholding his title as the most active actor-playwright in the world. Not only is he beginning the rehearsals of each of his six plays for his repertoire season, but he is also conducting the rehearsals for the new play that he has written for Miss Marie Doro, "Electricity."

WOODROW WILSON

University Man Being Groomed to Head Democratic National Ticket

WILSON FOR GOVERNOR

Head of Princeton Is Chosen by Democrats of New Jersey

Trenton, Sept. 16.—Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, was nominated for governor by the Democrats of New Jersey. The vote was: Wilson 747½, Katzenbach 373, Silzer 206. The nomination was made on the first ballot and was made unanimous on motion of Silzer and Katzenbach delegates.

The platform says: "In regard to the administration of the federal government, we charge that the Republican party through the present unfair tariff laws is largely responsible for the higher cost of living now burdening our whole people, and we demand an intelligent revision downward of the present tariff in the interest of all the people."

The platform declared for the voting of rate-making power in the public utilities commission; for the extension of the primary election laws to all nominations, and the publication of campaign expenditures.

DISEASE SPREADING IN RHODE ISLAND

Infantile Paralysis Attacking Persons Other Than Children

Providence, Sept. 16.—An epidemic of poliomylitis, commonly known as infantile paralysis, which began early in the summer, has spread to such an extent as to cause alarm throughout the state. Statistics compiled by Secretary Swarts of the state board of health show that from June 1 until last night 122 cases were reported to the board.

Many more than this number, Swarts believes, are afflicted with the disease, but the board is given information only through the courtesy of physicians.

Only 10 percent of those afflicted ever recover, Swarts states, those that do not die being paralyzed for life.

While the infection, for which eminent physicians all over the world are searching for a remedy, first made its appearance among infants, it is now attacking persons up to the age of 20 years.

CHARGED WITH SMUGGLING

"Most Beautiful American Woman" Held Up at New York

New York, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Bessie F. Chapman of Boston, mother of the famous Chapman baby and herself called by a famous French artist the most beautiful American woman, must face a smuggling charge in court here.

Mrs. Chapman, who arrived home on the Adriatic, had, however, somewhat of a laugh on the customs men last night, for the "$20,000 necklace" which they found secreted on her after a personal search by the matron, turns out to be paste and worth only $200.

But that doesn't explain several Paris gowns which the Boston woman brought over and neglected to declare.

BRIEFS

The sun now sets before 6 o'clock, the afternoon having shortened one hour and 29 minutes.

All pastors are requested to forward church services to reach the Daily Ledger Friday morning each week, that they may be inserted in the Quincy Patriot.

The schooner Fannie and Fay sprang aleak Thursday and put in to Vineyard Haven. This vessel used to be familiar in local waters and named after the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hitchcock, who are now Mrs. Percival Sears and Mrs. Edward B. Pratt.

Miss Margery Melcher will speak at the prayer meeting in Bethany church this evening. Miss Melcher has been one of the field secretaries of the Young Womans Christian Association of America and has done excellent work in that position. She has won an enviable reputation as a speaker and was chosen to deliver an address at the big summer conference in Geneva, Ohio. The address this evening will be along missionary lines as she is at present connected with the Student Volunteer League of American.

CHURCH WEDDING.

The wedding of Mrs. Katherine Victoria Nelson and Mr. George Henry Van Iderstine took place Wednesday evening at the Swedish Lutheran church on Granite street. The single ring service was used, and was conducted by Rev. S. N. Elvin, pastor of the church.

The bride was very captivating in her gown of white messaline which was trimmed with spangles. The yoke was surmounted by a necklace of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

Miss Isabelle Nelson, the maid of honor, and Miss Elizabeth Nelson, the bridemaid, were both handsomely attired in gowns of silk. They were attended by Richard Cameron who acted as best man and Herman Wigren as groomsman.

After the wedding a supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, 253 Whitwell street.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Iderstine will take a two weeks' trip to Prince Edward's Island, after which they will reside in their new home at 170 Glendale road. They will be at home after Oct. 1.

PATROL GOES TO BROCKTON

Brings Back Two Boys Who Had Runaway

The youthful banditti, Willis Stanchfield and Ralph Salmonti, have been captured. Thursday morning a telephone message from the Brockton police summoned the auto patrol to the Shoe city to give them a little spin, after a night in the station. And they surely had a spin for the blue wagon covered the 29.6 miles in 37 minutes.

Evidently these nine year olds have reached the dime novel age. For some time they have been laying in their supplies for an extended trip. Watches, money and other valuables have been borrowed with the probable intention of returning them after Captain Kidd's treasure had been discovered.

But all their plans were nipped in the bud by the police, and they are now in the custody of the probation officer. The boys were not intimidated by a night in the police station, but it is to be hoped that they will not prove incorrigible. There has been too much o fthis sort of thing going on in this vicinity. A Weymouth officer was here a few days ago with a similar charge. Some boys had rifled a caboose and procured money and other things of intrinsic value.

The juvenile court hold sessions now, and we can expect results from it. But it is very unfortunate that boys of that age should acquire habits of that sort, and we cannot help thinking that if not exactly encouraged in it, no steps are being taken by those who could influence them, to discourage any such actions.

The auto patrol wagon left for Springfield today for finishing touches, having been here only on trial during Aviation week. It stood the paid test well, and is praised by everyone.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY INJURED

Run over By Heavy Automobile Truck

Loyal R. Safford, son of Charles R. Safford of 2 Clive street, Atlantic, was victime of a painful accident Thursday afternoon. School was just out and the boys all ran to the street. Two cars went by without stopping, and some of those who lived to the north thought they would get a ride on Kincaide's big auto truck which came along just then. A number of them went around on the side away from the school and jumped on the long running board. One of the men on the seat drove them off, and young Safford tried the other side.

He sat on the running board and was laughing at his companions because they couuld not get a ride too, when he lost his hold and slipped under the truck.

He made an effort to save himself in the second that he had, and managed to get his head out of the way. He was lying face downward headed toward City Square. The rear wheel ran diagonally across his upper left arm, crushing it very badly and entirely severing his coat sleeve. It was very fortunate that the rubber tire was wide. Otherwise the arm would have been severed, also.

When Mr. Howlett master of the school arrived a few moments after the accident occurred, the boy was lying about three feet from the curbstone in the same position as when the auto ran over him. He bound up the arm and fixed the boy so as to alleviate the suffering as much as possible. An elderly gentleman whose name was not learned was passing in his touring car with a party headed for the Aviation field. He stopped and offered his services. Mr. Howlett suggested that he take the boy to Quincy hospital.

Making a stretcher of a reversible lap robe, they placed young Safford in the back seat, after the party had alighted, and he was hurried to the hospital, where he was put under ether. Mr. Roach one of the teachers at the High school went with him.

The doctors believe they can save the arm and in time make it as good as new. The break was a clean one, and the bones were not splintered at all, thus making the healing process much easier.

Early in the night his heart began to go back on him, but this was partly due to the effects of the ether, and this morning he was much better, and owing to his vitality, and youthfulness, recovery will be rapid.

Both Loyal and his elder brother Winthrop have been known about town as singers. Loyal has been in the Bethany boy's choir recently, and was the soloist at the concerts which were given during the past year. He entered the High school this fall, and is well liked by all his classmates. When Mr. Howlett went out, the boy was in great pain, but the thought of his mother seemed to be uppermost in his mind, and his own suffering seemed to be a secondary consideration with him, which goes to show the manliness of the lad.

The blame of course must be placed and the fact that the driver is not culpable is unquestioned. He thought all the boys were off, as did also the man who was with him, and owing to the noise of the machinery and the big load on the truck, he was wholly unaware of the accident. The boy himself was to blame in a way of course, but the recklessness of boyhood in general is the real underlying cause. It is miraculous that here are so few such accidents when the boys are continually placing themselves in path of danger.

The teachers in the High school devoted the time allotted for opening exercises to cautioning the pupils to be more careful and it is probable that for a time at least nothing of the sort will occur in that vicinity.

During Aviation week about 85 petitions were filed at City Hall for hackney carriage licenses.

The stores of North Weymouth closed on Thursday during the funeral of William J. Coleman.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

Vol. 25 No. 216 | QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 17, 1910 | PRICE TWO CENTS

Plans Approved for Two New Schoolhouses

MIDNIGHT SESSION OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE

New Style of Architecture for Schoolhouses at Wollaston and at Montclair

Both Buildings Will Have Flat Roofs and Everything Modern

Plans page one

At the meeting of the School Committee last night all were present except Mr. I'Hara, Mr. Curtis and Mr. Barker. Many matters of importance were discussed and notes were taken on a numberof measures. It was a midnight session.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

Evening schools will open Monday, October 3. The same courses of instruction will be followed as last year. The non-English speaking people will meet three times a week at the Adams and Willard schools. This phase of the school work is very important and is becoming more so each year with the increase of foreign population.

At the High school, classes in drawing will be conducted. Both free hand and mechanical drawing will be taught covering machine, architectural and monumental lines. There will be classes in cooking, sewing and dressmaking for girls, and a civil service clas for boys. An elementary commercial course will also be conducted.

NEW JANITORS.

The resignations of George Craig, janitor of the Massachusetts Fields school and Marcena Sparrow, janitor of the Wollaston school, were accepted.

C. F. Bryant was appointed to fill the vacancy at the Massachusetts Fields and Louis R. Dunham at the Wollaston school, subject to the approval of the civil service commission.

SCHOOL PHYSICIANS.

It was voted to ask the Board of Health to make provision for school physicians to examine all school children annually. This is a very wise step and in keeping with the advance of the times. More and more attention is being paid each year to the health of our school children, for people are realizing more and more that a sound mind is dependent to a cosniderable extent upon a sound body.

SCHOOL PLANS.

The plans and specifications by James McLoughlin for the new schoolhouse at Montclair were presented to the committee as were also those for the new Wolaston school by McLane and Wright. Both were considered at length and finally accepted subject to certain changes which were ordered. The chairman of the committee was authorized to certify them to the City Council.

Both the new schoolhouses will hace flat roofs and modern, up-to-date contsruction in all particulars. They will be built of breck with trimmings of Quincy granite. The Wollaston building has 12 rooms and a hall, and the Montclair building 8 rooms.

The erection of these new buildings will solve the problem in the northern part of the city, and it is hoped that the children in that section will not have to wait much longer before the congestion can be relieved, or at any rate before there is some definite hope of relif.

DR. SARGENT'S LECTURE.

The first meeting of the Mother's Association for the season will be held on October 5th at 3 o'clock in Bethany church chapel. Dr. D. A. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium will speak upon the subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's body." Every woman in Quincy who is interested directly or indirectly in this subject is invited to attend and hear it discussed by one who is an acknowledge authority on physical development. It is an opportunity which should not be missed. No admission fee.

BLAME NOT ON FORE RIVER

Nothing in North Dakota Report to Place Responsibility

According to a report received from Charles R. Edwards, chief engineer of the Fore River shipbuilding company, who was sent to Washington Thursday to examine the report of the naval board of inquiry appointed to determine the cause of the fire on the battleship North Dakota, there is nothing in the report to justify the press dispatches sent out from Washington, which said the blame had been placed on the builders of the ship, says the Boston Globe.

The telegram received from Mr. Edwards read: "Nothing in report to place responsibility on contractors. Exact cause not determined."

Mr. Edwards was sent to Washington as soon as the report of the board of inquiry was known. In the newspaper dispatches sent out from Washington it was said the board had placed the blame for the fire on the faulty construction and installation of the oil-burning system of the ship. In the fire which resulted three men were killed and many others were severely burned.

The officials of the Fore River company were asked Thursday morning to make a statement in reply to the naval board's finding but refused until the complete official report of the board had been looked over.

The oil burning apparatus in question was installed by a Philadelphia firm, it having been sublet to that firm.

Officials of the Fore River company say that the published reports of the naval board's findings were so much at variance with the real report that it was regrettable such a statement reflecting on the shipbuilders should be sent broadcast without any reason for it.

Some newspapers are always ready to slap home industries, but the Daily Ledger prefers to investigate, and carefully consider all the evidence, and for this reason did not print the Washington dispatch. It had the appearance on the face of it of being unreasonable.

SUPERIOR CRIMINAL COURT

Verdicts Reached in Several Quincy Cases

A unusually large number of cases were disposed of during the opening week of the Norfolk Superior criminal court at Dedham. The list below includes only those from the East Norfolk district, there being several from Quincy:

James McDermott of Providence, breaking and entering at Quincy, placed on probation.

Michael Joseph, illegally exposing keeping liquor for saile at Quincy, case placed on file.

Gauc Cemaurwes, illegal sale at Weymouth, fined $50.

Michael Johnson, illegal sale at Weymouth, fined $75.

Edmund D. Studley, violation of the automobile law at Milton, fined $20.

In the case of David Stroyman of Braintree, charged with larceny from Rice & Hutchins at Braintree, the jury reported a disagreement.

John Guilford of Quincy, found guilty of passing a forged check, was sentenced to the house of correction for one year.

Thomas Gaffney of Weymouth, breaking and entering at Weymouth, placed on probation.

MANY RALLIES.

The candidates for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Tenth district, Messrs. O'Connell, McNary and Curley, are holding two or three rallies each evening and are saying some very "kind" things about each other. Last night Mr. McNary spoke at St. Marys hall in West Quincy, and Stone hall at Quincy Point. Councilman J. D. Smith presided at the former and Councilman E. P. Histen at the latter. Most of the other speakers were from Boston. Tonight Congressman O'Connell will hold five rallies in South Boston and five in Roxbury.

AVIATORS FOLD TENTS

Work of Dismantling Has Started at Harvard Field

The aviators who have been at the Harvard field at Squantum for the past two weeks are departing for other tournaments. C. Grahame-White is being feted in Boston and at the North Shore and will next exhibit at the Brockton Fair.

Glenn H. Curtiss, the American champion, who won the international cup at Rheims a year ago last August has been given a position on the United States team of flyers without being required to qualify in the elimination events, which will shortly be run off for the purpose of selecting the most capable representative trio to defend Old Glory.

Wilbur Wright and Ralph Johnstone will prepare for the international meet to be held at Belmont Park, N. Y., in October.

Walter Brookins went to Dayton, O., Thursday to visit the Wright factory and attend to arrangements which the Wrights are reported to be making concerning radical innovations in the line of speed.

Auburn, the French aviator, flying in a Bleriot monoplane, at Bordeaux, yesterday, broke all speed records for 186.3 ratesfl negotiating the distance in three hours, 33 minutes, seven seconds At the end of the second hour he had flown 103.7 miles and at the end of the third hour 156.49 miles. His average was about 55 1-2 mile s an hour

G. A. R. DELEGATES.

Albert Keating, a member of the John A. Andrew Post No. 15, of Boston, Joseph Hayden, Joseph Lapham and Cushing Baker of Paul Revere Post, No. 88, of Quincy, start today for Atlantic City ,to attend the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. This will be an enormous gathering despite the fact that many are dying each year. The encampment opens Monday morning and the Quincy representatives are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to greeting old comrades some of whom they have not seen since the time of the war. A delegation from Paul Revere W. R. C. will start Monday morning.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A pleasant surprise party was tendered Miss Cicclea Ericson of Glendale road, last evening when a party of her friends met at the home of Councilman Charles Ericson and presented her with a gold locket and chain.

Miss Ericson thanked them, not only for the gift but for the kind feelings that prompted the giving; and then bade them enjoy the hospitality of her home. A few hours were pleasantly spent in playing the usual parlor games and in singing. Later in the evening refreshments were served and then the party broke up after singing some of the good old songs.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ericson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Person, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Johnson, Ida Ericson, Julia Kernchussen, Edith ohnson, Mr. and Mrs. N. WILL IT BE SENATOR SHEA?

Withdrawal of Senator Hultman Will Give Weymouth Man the Republican Nomination

Democrats Looking to Quincy for a Candidate

The withdrawal of Hon. Eugene C. Hultman of Quincy, as a candidate for reelection which the Daily Ledger was the only Quincy paper to announce yesterday, puts a new complexion upon the First Norfolk Senatorial district, as the Republicans will probably nominate now a candidate from outside the city, possible from Weymouth. In that event the Democrats will probably nominate some Quincy man whom they think may carry the city. Naturally, Mayor William T. Shea, who has thrice been elected as the executive of the city by large majorities is the choice. Personally Mayor Shea is not anxious to enter the contest, but he may be drafted for the good of the party. It is thought he could have all the financial support needed to wage a big fight.

At the last election Senator Hultman carried all the cities and towns of the district, except Weymouth and Randolph by handsome votes. In Weymouth he lost by only 70 and in Randolph by 97. He went out of Quincy with a vote of nearly two to one, 2436 to 1337, and the ratio was about the same in Braintree, Hyde Park and Milton.

Mr. Hultman's plurality in the district was 2,342 which is about normal, but the same cities and towns gave Gov. Draper only 912 plurality over James H. Vahey, and this is what gives the Democrats courage if they can find the right candidate.

The votes of the district for Senator and Governor are given side by side below. It will be seen that Gov. Draper received 564 less votes than Senator Hultman, while Mr. Vahey received 866 more than Mr. Foley. It was in Quincy and Hyde Park where the Republicans cut Gov. Draper and supported Mr. Vahey, while Weymouth, Holbrook and Randolph gave Gov. Draper a larger vote than Mr. Hultman.

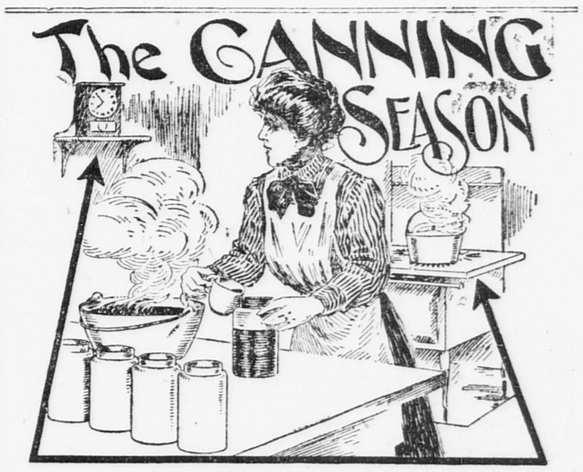

George L. Banes of Weymouth who now seews to have the inside for the Republican nomination for the Senate, is a young lawyer, born in 1879. He was elected to the House of 1904 and reelected for 1905 and 1906, and is an experienced legislator and popular fellow. He is classed as one of the new type of the Republican party.

Councilman Edward J. Sandberg of this city may also be in the field having lists of delegates filed in some of the wards. He also has had three years in the Legislature, and is a big vote getter.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mayor Fitzgerald is but following in the Quincy plan, in consolidating the street, water and engineering departments of Boston.

Aviation seems to have a grip on every one the world over and in most every country trials of flying are being tried out. Next week in Switzerland aviators are to try crossing the Alps by aeroplane. In England, France, Germany, Italy and various parts of our own country flights are being made this month

Now that everybody is aviation mad and monoplanes, biplanes,etc., are the chief topics of conversation, what has become of the famous Tillinghast airship which is said to be capable of such marvellous stunts. Its perormances are said to eclipse anything that has yet been done at Atlantic and it is predicted that should it appear there all the other competitors would be completely out of the contests. Well seeing is believing and the general public, just now so enthusiastic over air navigation, is willing to be shown.

Some very unreliable stories are being published from the Boston end relative to the receipts at the Aviation meet. About the fourth day of the meet it was reported one day's receipts were $70,000, and that was not the biggest day; and now comes a report that the total receipts were but $130,000, and that the expenses were over $125,000. Certainly the attendance on the eleven days was over 100,000, and the receipts would average over $2 per capita including returns from automobiles.

Business in many lines seems to be unusually dull just now and ther are many theories advanced by profound thinkers to account for the depression. Of course there is a reason but so far nobody seems to have suggested a satisfactory solution of the puzzle In the meantime the high price for commodities continue in force and the workingman sometimes has to do some petty deep thinking concerning the problem of existence. It is to be hoped that matters will soon right themselves because cold weather is not far away and a winter with a short pay roll is not pleasant to contemplate.

Altogether we have had a seemingly short summer on account of unseasonable weather and now the autumn is coming with a rush. It may be a trifle early to make the suggestion, still the fact remains that Christmas is not so far off but what the wise ones will begin to look about and devise plans, about what gifts they intend to make or purchase. Of course the month of December has a fascination because of the rush and bustle incident to the holidays and the general air of pleasant anticipation but for all that the knowing ones will look into the matter early and save themselves much hurry and worry latter.

INGERSOLL IS UNDER ARREST

Deposed Bank Treasurer Arraigned on Sick Bed

$20,000 BAIL IS FURNISHED

Four Warrants Charge Him With Embezzlement of $3300 From Biddeford Institution, Although Discrepancies In His Account Are Estimated at $340,000—Old Irregularities Outlawed by Statute of Limitations

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 17.—Charged in four warrants with having embezzled $3300, Richmond H. Ingersoll, deposed treasurer of the York County Savings bank, which was forced to close its doors a month ago by the discovery of discrepancies in his account since estimated at $340,000, was arrested at his home here late yesterday.

His family physician made affidavit that removal from his home would endanger the aged former treasurer's life, and he was arraigned in his room in the presence of his wife and daughter.

Ingersoll was held in $20,000 bail for a hearing. Bail was furnished by Charles A. Moody, cashier of the First National bank of Biddeford; former Mayor Horrigan and Dr. Warren, also of Biddeford.

President Prescott of the bank, who swore out the four warrants against the former treasurer, said last night that the $3300 which he is formally charged with embezzling comprises all the funds which the investigators were able to discover had been taken within six years. Irregularities committed prior to that time are outlawed by the statute of limitations. Prescott stated further that definite grounds upon which to base the formal charges had only yesterday been found, and that there was no delay in making the arrest.

The arrest of Ingersoll took place in the room in which he has been confined by illness during the month since the alleged shortage was discovered, and in which he has twice attempted to take his life. The arrest was made by Chief of Police Harmon. Ingersoll was sitting up in bed, wrapped in a heavy blanket.

When informed he had been placed under arrest he broke down and cried, but soon recovered his composure, and during the formality of arraignment, conducted by Recorder Rummery of the municipal court, showed evidence of an alert mind.

Throughout the arraignment he was cool and collected. He stated that he did not wish to plead at this time, as he had engaged Edward C. Reynolds of South Portland as counsel and would like to confer with him before making any plea.

The York County Savings bank closed its doors on Aug. 12, following the discovery by State Bank Examiner Skelton of discrepancies in Ingersoll's accounts.

Late in the previous day, Ingersoll was found unconscious in his room, suffering apparently from an overdose of morphine, while a note was found in the bank stating that a shortage would be found in his accounts, the result, he said, of his efforts to cover up heavy losses incurred many years ago by the bank through investments in faulty western securities.

When the shortage was discovered, President Prescott had been in office less than a year. It was through his insistence, backed by the trustees of the institution, that a new method of keeping the books was inaugurated, and it was through the notice of the proposed publishing in the local papers of the individual accounts of depositors that the discovery was brought about.

STILL MORE TO COME

$150,000,000 In Gold Has Been Taken Out of Klondike Region

Washington, Sept. 17.—The Klondike placer mining district in Alaska has produced $150,000,000 in gold since 1898, and mining experts estimate the amount yet to be mined will equal that already produced. Consul Cole of Dawson states that the gold output for 1910 will exceed that of 1909, when more than $3,500,000 was produced.

Most of this gold, he states, was shipped to the United States. A small quantity went to the new Canadian mint. Cole reports that rich deposits of copper ore have been discovered in the southern part of the Klondike district.

$22,100 IN LOVING CUP

Grahame-White Presented Prizes For Successful Flights

Boston, Sept. 17.—A handsome silver loving cup was presented to Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, who captured the recent Harvard aviation meet, by a number of prominent Bostonians at a testimonial dinner given by the management of the Harvard aero meet at the Algonquin club last evening.

In behalf of the donors, Charles H. Taylor of the Boston Globe made the presentation, dropping into the cup the check for $10,000 which he had offered as a prize for the flight to Boston light.

Adams D. Claflin, manager of the meet, also dropped into the loving cup checks aggregating $12,100, which represented the value of the prizes which White won at the meet.

In accepting the cup, White spoke of the efforts of Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator whom he had defeated, in the highest terms, eliciting applause at each mention of his name.

BREACH IS WIDENING IN EMPIRE STATE

Little Hope of Settling Differences of Republicans

New York, Sept. 17.—Quite aside from the result of the Maine election, the Republicans of this state, whatever their affiliations with one or the other of the warring camps, are approaching a stage of despair over the prospects of the state campaign.

The growing animosities which this situation encourages are forcing the factions further and further apart, until now one hears in Republican circles more about placing the blame for the said pass that things have reached than about an effort to get a man to lead the state ticket and a set of issues to run on.

The Saratoga convention is hardly more than a week away and there is little to show where the control will rest. Accordingly, there is in prospect one of the most lively political contests of the generation.

HIS COLLEAGUES AS JURY

Ballinger Will Quit Cabinet If They Refuse Him Vindication

Washington, Sept. 17.—Whether Richard A. Ballinger's resignation as secretary of the interior will follow immediately upon the meeting of the cabinet Sept. 26, or whether he will retain his position, depends now upon the attitude of his cabinet associates.

Mr. Ballinger is coming to Washington, his friends here insist, wholly unconscious of any act on his part for which he should be condemned; and has determined to force his chief and his official colleagues to be in effect his judges.

If they concur in the view at present attributed to Mr. Taft, that the accused secretary shall be sustained as an innocent and persecuted man, he will retain his position; if they fail so to back him up, he will resign forthwith. That this in substance is Ballinger's present position was learned here, upon authority hardly to be questioned.

NO LINE DRAWN BY PRESIDENT

Declares That Regulars and Insurgents Are Alike to Him

RESTORATION OF PATRONAGE

Felt That Duty Required Him to Withhold It From Those Who Seemed to Oppose Efforts of Administration to Fulfill Promises of Party Platform—Attitude Ended With Primary Election and Conventions

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 16.—President Taft hereafter will draw no distinction between insurgent and regular Republicans in the distribution of federal patronage. This was made clear in a letter to certain of the Iowa insurgent leaders, which was made public at the summer White House by Secretary Norton. In taking this course the president indicates that he is but bowing to the majority of the people. The letter, which is signed by Secretary Norton, says:

"Your letters of the 9th are at hand and I have delayed replying until after the primary elections. The president directs me to express to you and to your friends his deep appreciation of the work which you have done, and the powerful assistance which you have extended to the administration from the beginning—an assistance that has contributed much to the legislative and other successes which have been secured.

"The president recognizes that your efforts have been wholly disinterested, that you have fought sturdily and generously for what you believed to be his interest and the welfare and success of the party.

"While Republican legislation pending in congress was opposed by certain Republicans the president felt it to be his duty to the party and to the country to withhold federal patronage from certain senators and congressmen who seemed to be in opposition to the administration's efforts to carry out the promises of the party platform.

"That attitude, however, ended with the primary elections and nominating conventions which have now been held and in which the voters have had opportunity to declare themselves. The people have spoken and as the party faces the fall election the question must be settled by Republicans of every shade of opinion whether the differences of the last session shall be perpetuated or shall be forgotten.

"He recognizes the danger that in certain cases expressions of feelings were so intense as to make it difficult in some instances for factions to come together and work loyally for the party, but, as he stated in his letter to the Republican congressional committee, he believes it can be done and should be. The president is confident that you will yourself meet your local and state situation in this spirit and that you will write your friends and ask them to do likewise.

"The president feels that the value of federal patronage has been greatly exaggerated and that the refusal to grant it has probably been more useful to the men affected than the appointments would have been. In the preliminary skirmishes in certain states like Wisconsin and Iowa and elsewhere, he was willing, in the interest of what the leaders believed would lead to party success, to make certain discriminations; but the president has concluded that it is his duty now to treat all Republican congressmen and senators alike, without any distinction.

"He will now follow the usual rule in Republican congressional districts and states and follow the recommendations made by Republican congressmen and senators of whatever shade of political opinion, only requiring that the men recommended shall be good men, the most competent and the best fitted for the particular office."

In a quiet, unostentious way, President Taft yesterday celebrated his 53rd birthday. He was born in Cincinnati, Sept. 15, 1857. A number of telegrams, expressing good will and many more birthdays, were received from dignitaries of nation, states and cities, and from foreign government attaches at Washington, which were answered.

THE ILLINOIS PRIMARIES

Cannon Renominated For Congress, but Boutell Is Defeated

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Returns from the primaries in Illinois are coming in slowly. Thus far they show that "Uncle Joe" Cannon was renominated for congress, but by decreased majority. Congressman Boutell is defeated by 7000 votes and Congressman Foss is probably defeated.

The standpatters nominated Lee O'Neil Browne, recently acquitted as a briber for Senator Lorimer. The progressives nominated John C. McKenzie.

SQUANTUM!?
(EVER HEAR OF THE PLACE?)
IS A PART OF QUINCY!?

¶ It is not under water nor a hundred miles from Boston. In a short time (through the kindness of the City Fathers) you will be able to get there without swimming or fear of drowning.

¶ It has some city water, some electric lights, and telephone connections for such as pay for it. Also electric cars visit this place occasionally, with five cent fares from all parts of Quincy.

¶ With the above information would you risk the price (5 cents) and take a journey to the wild domains of this unexplored region?

¶ As a minor side attraction it might be mentioned that the Harvard Aviation Field is located here, on which a few pennies are being expended preparing the grounds and a few more may possibly be expended during the meet, Sept. 3rd. to 13th.

¶ Finally, though perhaps of less importance, the undersigned begs to add that he has a few (hundred)

A MODEL STATE FARM

Massachusetts Editors Entertained at Bridgewater

Monday, Sept. 12, by invitation of the trustees, members of the Massachusetts Press Association visited the state farm at Bridgewater. The larger part of the party left Boston on the 10.35 train arriving at Titicut at 12 o'clock. Carriages and autos were taken for the farm, where the guests were introduced to Superintendent Hollis M. Blackstone, who in behalf of the trustees extended a cordial welcome to the party.

Some little time was spent at the office where each was requested to register in the guest book. From there the party was escorted to Mr. Blackstone's home, where a sumptious dinner was served to the 30 guests in the party. The menu consisted of melons, tomato soup, fish, broiled chicken, mashed white potato, sweet potatoes, Lima beans, salad, ice cream, cake, rolls, crackers, cheese, salted nuts, coffee and fruit. With the exception of the fish and sweet potatoes the main dishes were raised on the farm.

After dinner the party adjourned to the main office, where cigars were lighted and Mr. Blackstone gave a short talk on the workings of the farm and also an outline of the trip of inspection.

The first department visited was that of the criminal insane, which includes nearly 700 persons. The first room visited was the bath room, where the new dry-bath cabinet which is heated by electricity was examined. From there the party was taken all over the building through the recreation rooms and hospital wards. The one thing noticeable, not only here but in all the departments, was the neatness with which everything is kept.

From here the party visited the women's department across the street from the main office, some 461 being in this department. The laundry is situated here and much of the mending for the inmates is done here.

Returning to the main buildings a tour of the prison department was made. Here the chair, shoe and tailor shops were inspected, also was the kitchen and dining rooms.

The next place visited was the yard, where some new buildings are being erected for the prisoners. These buildings were designed by Supt. Blackstone and are of cement ,the work, with the exception of the designing ,all being done by the men. The doors, windows frames and all woodwork were made on the premises.

Carriages were taken then for the State almshouse, where 300 State paupers are cared for, after which a tour of the farm was made, the final point being the depot, where the train was taken at 4.10 for Boston on the return trip. The guests were loud in their praise of what they had seen and voted that Mr. Blackstone was the right man in the right place.

Some little idea may be had of the amount of land under cultivation from the fact that Head Farmer Ernest E. Bacon told the writer that there were 200 acres of hoed crops, including 52 acres of potatoes, 25 acres of corn for silo, eight acres of cabbages, nine acres of beets, one acre of parsnips, and carrots each. A new venture this year is the raising of beans, and as stewed and baked beans are used in considerable quantities, it will be a large item.

Mr. Bacon said that here were nine acres ready to be picked. The visit to the kitchen revealed the fact that everything was kept in the very best of condition. About 8,000 ears of corn were picked yesterday for the dinner and supper and 225 bushels of potatoes were used during the week.

The Bridgewater State farm was established in 1853 and originally consisted of 150 acres. It now includes 1184 acres ,and with buildings is valued at $1,032,320.

The number of inmates on Sept. 7 was 2,459, including about 700 criminal insane and 300 State paupers, asit is also the State almshouse for southeastern Massachusetts.

The farm is cultivated solely in the interest of its own inmates, none of the products being sold. The principal crops are hay, vegetables, milk, eggs and pork. The value of these matured and stored last year was $35,67. no estimate being placed on the garden truck raised.

The cost of maintenance in 1909 was $308,999.40 making a per capita expense of $2.56 weekly.

MILTON

The marriage of Mr. William Flynn and Miss Lillian Gardner took place this week at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Alice Blaney of Sheldon street, East Milton, is in Kennebunkport, Maine ,on her vacation.

James Sweeney arrived home on Wednesday from his vacation in New York.

John Larrabee and Edward Paolucci are now sure of going to witness the world's championship series. Larrabee is number 16 and Paolucci number 17 in the contest. William Park who is number 79 may go also.

A distinct jar was felt in East Milton on Thursday, at about 4.30 in the afternoon. It came as the result of exploding the dynamite bombs at Squantum which were hurled at the miniature battleship.

East Milton can now boast of a naturalist. Secundino Paolucci of 21 Grafton avenue is the man. Some months ago he received a young fox from New Hampshire and started in immediately to train him. It was by no means an easy task, but untiring patience at length made it successful. Topsy, as Mr. Paolucci call the fox, is now as tame as a kitten. He plays with the dog and cats and ducks as well as the children in the home, and has never been known to harm any of them. Mr. Paolucci has two English setters, Blanco and Jip, who are great friends with the fox. Topsy has proved herself quite a bareback rider. At a signal from her master she will jump up on the dog's back and ride about contentedly. It is quite remarkable that dogs and ducks should live amicably with the fox, because the former are generally his arch enemies, and the latter his prey.

Freeman Gray has gone for a trip to Port Antonio. He sailed on one of the steamers of the United Fruit company, the Admiral Dewey.

Joseph Walters has gone for a two weeks' fishing trip in New Hampshire.

RELIGION IN COLLEGES.

Miss Margery Melcher, Radcliffe '07 spoke on the subject: "Religious conditions in our colleges today," at the Friday evening meeting of Bethany church. As field secretary of the Young Woman's Christian Association she has had more oportunity than most people to view the conditions. Her field covers 200,000 girls in the colleges and universities of our country. From her obseravtion and rer work among them she has been able t osee very hopeful signs of religious growth among them. And what can be said of the college women is equally true of college men. More interest is aroused in evangelism, not of the emotional or sensational type, but the practical wholesome kind promoted by trained workers who live the abundant life, in bible study and bible living, in mission study and in mission giving.

The Student Volunteer movement is advancing by rapid strides. In fifteen years its membership has increased from 1,400 to 30,000. All these prove the usefulness of the Christian Association in our colleges, for it is under their aupices that all these are conducted. The work of the church and the colleg go hand in hand. The church must train the boys and girls in the fundamental of religion before they go to college so that they may not go astray when they get there. The work of the colleges is to tiarn leaders for the church. And, despite a great deal of adverse criticism, the colleges are doing this successfully. Sixty per cent of the ministers today are college men and this percentage is increasing each year. Practically all the lawyers and doctors and a growing percentage of teachers are college men, yes and college women too. The outlook is very encouraging, and all that is needed now is a wider range for the work, nad more consecrated men and women to do the work.

MRS. JAMES H. FLINT.

Mrs. Abbie A. Flint, wife of Judge James H. Flint of the Norfolk County Probate Court, died Saturday morning at her home, 20 Front street, Weymouth. She was born in Quincy, September 29, 1836, and was the daughter of Thomas and Abigal Rowell. She had resided in Weymouth for years. Deceased was one of the organizers of the Trinity Episcopal church and was active in church and charitable work and in the death of Mrs. Flint the town loses a woman of sterling character and worth and she will be greatly missed by the many people whom she has helped. She was unostentatious and did not believe in letting her acts of charity be known. Judge Flint has the sympathy of everyone in his affliction.

The funeral took place from her late home Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful and almost hid the handsome gray casket from view. The whole front of the parlor was banked with floral offerings from the many friends of the deceased. At few funerals has there been seen such an expression of personal loss taking the form of tributes of flowers.

There were present county and town officials, members of the bar, and many who had received of the benefactions of the deceased.

Rev. William Hyde, rector of Trinity church conducted the service. The Corinthian male quartet of Boston sang, "Abide With Me," "Shall We Gather at the River," and "Lead Kindly Light."

The interment was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Rev. Mr. Hyde recited the committal service at the grave and offered prayer.

ON TRIP TO MICHIGAN.

Ernest V. Fitts left yesterday for a few days in Battle Creek, Michigan. Mr. Post, president of the Postum Cereal company issued invitations to all the wholesale grocers in Maine and Massachusetts to inspect the plants of the company. All the expenses of the trip will be met by Mr. Post working through his Boston agent. Over 150 accepted the invitation and their special train started on its way yesterday. Mr. Post, who is a multimillionaire, is reputed to be a royal entertainer, and all of his guests should enjoy themselves thoroughly. When the train reached Battle Creek it will sidetraced and the men will use it for their sleeping quarters. The big dining room of the Sanitarium will be used at meal times. The party will probably get back to Boston Monday morning.

BRIEFS

Autumn begins Sept. 23.

The moon will be full Sunday night.

These are beautiful September days and evenings.

The first regular meeting of the City Council since July 25 will be held Monday evening.

Ernest Williams of Barry street left Saturday for Villanover, Pa., to take up his duties as instructor in chemistry at St. Thomas college.

Provisioners tell us there are lots of pears in their market this season, and the matrimonial market seems to be equally well supplied with its kind.

Henry M. Faxon is improving several of his houses by a coat of paint. Nothing helps more for civic betterment than well kept real estate and the fall is just the time for satisfactory painting as it wears better.

Mrs. S. I. Wood leaves for New York today on a business trip. She will visit the best millinery establishments of New York city to get the latest fall notions and to do some buying.

The Ward Four Improvement Association opened the social season on Thursday evening with a card party, which was quite a success. The first prize, a hall mirror and hat rack was awarded to Morris Cohen; the second prize, a cut glass lemonade set, to William Rolleau; the third prize, a box of George Elcock's hahlias to Irving Badger. The consolation prize went to John Casey.

The funeral of Miss Catherine T. Cremins was held yesterday at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Cremins of Garfield street. The Gregorian mass followed at St. John's church, by the regular choir, Miss Mary McConarty organist. After the elevation Miss Mary Burns sang Pie Jesu. The Rev. Patrick Scannell was celebrant. Burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, Randolph.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Quincy Citizens Show the Certain Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of diabetes of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Quincy citizen says:

James P. Daugherty, Hammond Place, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let other sufferers know what they have done for me. I was bothered a great deal by back ache and had but litt'e strength or energy to do my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures, but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at the Cox Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified at the prompt way in which they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better generally. I would go to considerable trouble to induce anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have so much confidence in them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Lanier of the Cavalry
Or,
A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyrighs, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

(Started Sept. 14.)

"The man that leaves the post this day," said Major Scott, with a squint through the upper and unincumbered panes of the nearest window, "may need a seven days' leave."

"And that, colonel," said a quiet voice at the commander's elbow, "is what I applied for earlier. Pardon me, sir, but I need to know your decision."

It was Captain Sumter who spoke, and the colonel flushed promptly at sound of his voice.

"I had intended sending for you, Sumter," said he, "but these rather engrossing matters had to be taken up first. I—have your application," he continued. "It is an awkward time, and these are awkward circumstances. It will leave your troop without an officer."

"Mr. Lanier will be here, colonel."

"Here, but in close arrest," frowned the colonel, "and you haven't had a first lieutenant since I have been in command."

"My misfortune, sir, but hardly my fault," answered Captain Sumter tersely, yet respectfully. "General Sheridan selects his aids-de-camp where he will, and last month you thought it a compliment to the regiment and to my troop. Our guest, Miss Arnold, is in no condition to travel alone," added Captain Sumter gravely. "My wife and I desire to accompany her to Chicago."

The colonel bit his lip and bowed. "I see," said he. "Miss Arnold was very much shaken by what happened after she got home?"

"Rather by what happened before she got home," was the calm yet suggestive reply.

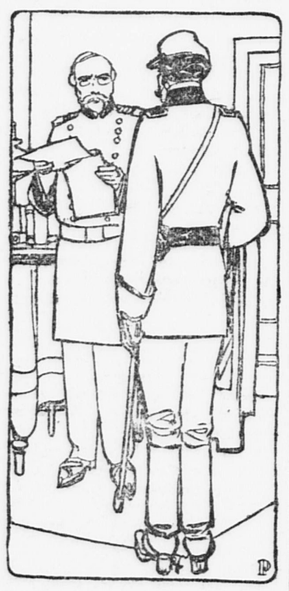

"Captain Sumter," said he, flushing angrily, for no one of his officers held he in higher esteem, "your attitude is that of opposition, if not of rebuke, to the official acts of the post commander."

"Then let me disclaim at once the faintest disrespect, Colonel Button, but—as Mr. Lanier's troop commander and personal friend, I beg leave to say that, so far as I know, his offense is one which his comrades have often committed without rebuke."

"Which simply goes to show, sir," responded the colonel, with glittering eyes, "that you do not know the twentieth part of his offense."

"If that be true, Colonel Button, of course I cannot think of going. I withdraw my application." And, turning slowly, he left the office.

Instead of carrying three enlisted men present as "casually at post," the "return" of Troop C had but two. Trooper Rawdon, whose horse, horse equipments and field kit were safely stored in the troop stables since noon the previous day, was himself accounted for nowhere. In view of the fact that he had not been seen and could not be found there was nothing remarkable about that. With the morning report book, however, there was handed in a copy of an order duly submitted by Corporal Watts to Snaffle's first sergeant, and by him to his captain, which read in part as follows:

2. On arriving with his detachment at Fort Cushing and in compliance with the telegraphic instructions from department headquarters Trooper G. P. Rawdon, Troop L, —th cavalry, is granted thirty days' furlough, at the expiration of which he will report to the commanding officer of Fort Cushing for transportation to his proper station.

Just as the paymaster predicted, the wintry storm broke with the early afternoon. A genuine blizzard came shrieking down from the mountain pass to the northwest. Veteran first sergeants told off a stout squad in each troop and sent them with a sack load of rations to re-enforce the stable sergeant and grooms, there to stay to feed, guard and water the horses.

But the telegraph wires went with the first hour. The stage, of course, couldn't be helped to return from town, and, so far as getting news from the surrounding universe was concerned, Fort Cushing might as well have been in Nova Zembla. And the Sumters, three, with Miriam Arnold, had set forth at noon, intending to intercept the eastbound express, and the colonel's spirit was raging in sympathy with the storm and in spite of his wife, for some one had started a tale that Sumter and his household had ostentatiously called upon Robert Ray Lanier, in close arrest, in utter disfavor and inferential disgrace.

Now, while an officer in arrest may not quit his quarters under seven days and may not even thereafter visit his brother officers unless authorized, there is no regulation prohibiting other officers or their households visiting him. Nevertheless, they who publicly do so lay themselves liable to the imputation of sympathizing with the accused at the expense of the accuser.

And so resolved Colonel Button, a brave soldier, a gentleman at heart, a kind if crotchety commander and a lenient man rather than a disciplinarian. A vain man was Button, and dearly he loved the adulation of his comrades, high or low. Veteran Irish sergeants knew well how to reach the soft side of "the old man." Astute troop commanders, like Snaffle, saved themselves many a deserved wigging by judicious use of blarney. Sterling, straightforward men, like Major Stannard, like Sumter, Raymond and Truscott, of his captains—men who could not fawn and would not flatter—were never Button's intimates.

Button believed it of Sumter that he and his on the way to the railway station went in and condoled with Bob Lanier and doubtless vituperated him, the commander, when in point of fact no one of their number had seen or spoken with Bob.

Then came the storm and then a Sunday and Monday in which no man went either way between the fort and town. And then a third in which the gale went down and the garrison dug itself out.

It was barely 9 o'clock. Guard mounting, the first held since Saturday, was just over. The morning reports, the first rendered since Saturday, were just in, and the staff and company officers for the first time since Saturday were beginning to gather at headquarters and to compare notes. All had much to tell. Stannard's wood pile, Snaffle's storm shed and Barker's cow had blown away. Somebody had just reported Sumter's north dormer window "torn out by the roots," which moved Button to say to Sumter, who had returned:

"I hope your quarters sustained no damage in your absence."

"I do not know, sir. I came direct to the office to report."

"Ah, true. Your household started before the storm."

"Only started, sir. They went no farther than the surgeon's quarters, where we learned the train was six hours late. I had—business—in town, and went on. They remained."

"Then the ladies have not gone east?"

"Neither they nor any one else since early Saturday morning. The road is blocked."

"The paymaster too? He went in right after luncheon."

"I cannot say, sir."

The captain withdrew.

"Can I have a sergeant and twenty men at once, sir, armed and mounted?" cried Quartermaster Horton, hurrying in. "The ambulance with the paymaster never reached town."

"Order them out at once, Mr. Barker," was Button's instant answer, turning to his adjutant, who went out like a shot. "What time did they start?"

"About 2, Saturday afternoon. It was blowing a gale then and the snow so thick we lost sight of them within a hundred yards. Major Scott declined an escort; said he and the clerk and the two men inside were more than enough. He had only $3,000 left and thought that too little to tempt anybody."

The silence in the office was oppressive.

"How did you learn they hadn't reached town?" demanded Button.

"Sergeant Fitzroy just came out. He'd been in there with Sergeant Stowell to help find Rawdon, he said. Major Scott had a section engaged in the Pullman for Omaha, and Fitzroy says he never claimed it—says he searched every stable for the ambulance, but there was no sign of it, and he says there was a gang of half a dozen toughs that had been hanging about town for a week, and they've cleared out. I'd like to go and get into riding rig, sir."

"Go, and I'll have a troop out after you if need be." Then, turning to his adjutant, "Barker, have Sergeant Fitzroy sent for at once."

HYOSCIN DOSE CAUSED DEATH

Doctor Gives Damaging Testimony Against Crippen

CAUSES SPIRITS TO DROP

Accused Man Had Hoped That Government's Case Would Be Shattered Because Remains Found In His Cellar Had Not Been Identified—Counsel Has Bold and Original Theory For the Defense

London, Sept. 17.—A telling point against the defense of Dr. Crippen was made when Dr. Wilcox, medical expert for the prosecution, made the flat declaration that the person whose remains were dug up in the cellar of the Crippen home died of hyoscin poisoning.

"More than half a grain of hyoscin was found in the remains," said Wilcox, "considerably more than is necessary to cause death."

Crippen paled as this damaging testimony was given, and a deathlike stillness prevailed in the courtroom. Miss Leneve, arrested as Crippen's accomplice, gave one glance at Crippen and bowed her head on her arm.

The blow to the defense was especially hard, for when Crippen entered the courtroom for the resumption of his trial on the charge of murdering his wife, Belle Elmore, the actress, he was buoyed up by the belief that the day's proceedings might see the government's case entirely shattered. He nodded cheerfully to several acquaintances and smiled encouragingly to Ethel Leneve, the typist jointly accused with him in the murder charge.

It was evident from his demeanor that he was greatly cheered by the points in his favor brought out at the previous session of the trial, when the government's expert witnesses testified that it was impossible to tell the sex of the remains found in the cellar of Crippen's residence or the manner in which death had been inflicted.

That the body supposed to be that of Belle Elmore was buried in the house where it was found before the doctor took the house will be the defense offered by Arthur Newton, counsel for Crippen.

The theory of the defense is both bold and original, but will not be made public in all its details for about two weeks.

Mr. Newton, who is conceded to be the most able and ingenious criminal lawyer in England, not only will attempt to disprove the contentions of the crown, but will try to clear up the mystery in a way that will prove his client blameless. He will contend that before Crippen occupied the house in which the body was found the tenant was a murderous lunatic now confined in an asylum. The body, he will say, was that of a victim of this insane man and was buried in the cellar before Crippen moved into the house.

The crown itself has helped his case by proving that a mixture of lime and clay, such as that in which the remains were found, will preserve a body for two years or more. This testimony was given by experts for the crown.

Further, the parts of the body found were wrapped in the jacket of a man's pajamas, and the defense will argue that, if the victim were a woman, the slayer would not deliberately wrap the remains in such a jacket.

The hearing was continued to next Wednesday.

GIVES BLOOD IN VAIN

Transfusion Fails to Save Life of California Man's Fiancee

San Francisco, Sept. 17.—Risking his own life in a final effort to bring his dying fiancee back to health, Edward A. Bennett prevailed upon the attending surgeons to transfuse his blood into the impoverished arteries of Miss Elma M. Williams as she lay between life and death in Oakland. His heroism proved unavailing.

An artery in Bennett's wrist was opened, and attached to an artery which had been opened in Miss Williams' wrist. The operation was believed by the surgeons to be most successful, but the young woman's illness had made such deep inroads on her vitality that she failed to rally. She died last evening.

"DREAM" WILL NOT BE DENIED

But Taft Has No Intention of Stepping Aside

CONTEST FOR RENOMINATION

President Will Preserve Dignified Silence Until Proper Time Arrives to Face Question of Candidacy—His Letter Indicates Intention to Recognize Moral Issue Represented by Insurgency of Middle West

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 17.—While, as a matter of course, President Taft will not notice the remarkable story which has emanated from Beverly to the effect that he intends to withdraw from the contest for a renomination, and that he is content to leave the field open to Mr. Roosevelt, it may be emphatically stated that the story is untrue. Mr. Taft has certainly no intention of stepping aside to leave the way clear for his predecessor.

President Taft will not deny this latest "dream" from Beverly. It is not necessary for him to do so. From all parts of the country come assurances of a daily growing support due to his strict attention to the business of being President of the United States as well as his attitude of ignoring the attempt to draw him into a controversy which would belittle his office and his country. When the president has occasion to face the question of whether he will be a candidate again he will look at it squarely and make his decision.

Whatever the president may do in connection with "insurgency" is incidental to the reaching of the goal which he has set at the end of his four year term. This is the fulfilment of the pledges of the platform on which he was nominated. He treats the work of the last session of congress in this direction as well done, but passed. This brings him to another session, and if he can bring about legislation promised by the Chicago platform by working with "insurgents" he is more than likely to be found leading them in that direction.

If the "regulars" still are able to throw and tie the "insurgents," as they promise to be able to do, the president will demand of them the laws for which he is accountable.

It is a new kind of politics which the president introduced in his letter signed by Secretary Norton, in which he announced that he will again recognize the recommendations of "insurgent" members of congress in matters of federal patronage. No longer is there a strict interpretation of "to the victor belongs the spoils." While no name is given, the letter, which is believed to have been sent to "Lafe" Young of Des Moines, is an invitation to "insurgents" to come home to the family table.

TWENTY-TWO TO NINE

Standing of Maine Senate, as Shown on Complete Returns

Portland, Me., Sept. 17.—The vote for state senator from the western half of Washington county has been completed. It gives F. A. Chandler, the Republican nominee, a plurality of 53 over F. W. Barnham, his Democratic opponent. The vote was 3888 to 3835.

The senate will consist of twenty-two Democrats and nine Republicans, while the house will be composed of eighty-nine Democrats and sixty-one Republicans, with a tie on the Ellsworth representative.

Hamlin After Lodge's Seat

Everett, Mass., Sept. 17.—At a rally in Everett square last night, marking the opening of the Democratic state campaign, at which the prevailing keynote was harmony, Charles S. Hamlin was introduced as a successor to Senator Lodge. James H. Vahey was hailed as the next governor.

"Whip" Dwight a Winner

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Representative Dwight, Republican "whip" in the national house of representatives, apparently won a decisive victory in the primaries in Tompkins county by capturing 105 out of the 135 delegates from this county to the district convention.

Wilson to Quit Princeton

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 17.—Woodrow Wilson, who was nominated for governor of New Jersey by the Democratic state convention, will offer his resignation as president of Princeton university to the board of trustees at its next meeting on Oct. 20.

SARAH JOSEPH IN BOSTON

Will Do What She Can to Break Power of "Elijah" Sandford

Boston, Sept. 17.—"I am overjoyed that the United States immigration officials have made it possible for me to enter the United States," declared Sarah Joseph, the former Holy Ghoster, who left Yarmouth, N. S., yesterday for Boston.

Miss Joseph says she has made up her mind to aid those who are trying to break the power of "Elijah" Sandford. The girl arrived in Boston this morning.

FIGHT FOR A FORTUNE

Cavalieri Got About All That Robert Chanler Possessed

New York, Sept. 17.—By the filing of the Chanler-Cavalieri ante-nuptial contract with the city registrar of Manhattan the opening gun was fired in a bitter legal battle over the possession of a fortune.

The document was filed by W. R. Osborn, attorney for Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer whom Robert W. Chanler married in Paris three months ago after a romantic courtship, which was the talk of two continents.

In addition to deeding to his wife all of his landed property, including thirty houses in Manhattan, Chanler pledged to pay the singer $20,000 a year for the remainder of her life.

The agreement was executed in Paris on May 31, 1910, and was jointly signed by Chanler and his wife before Hanson C. Coxe, deputy consul general of the United States, in Paris.

It is the impression among Chanler's friends that a bitter fight in the courts is inevitable. More than $1,000,000 is involved in the agreement, and it is certain that the trustees of the various estates from which Chanler derives his income will do all in their power to prevent the enforcement of the various clauses.

VREELAND'S ADMISSION

Traction Magnate Helped Campaigns to Tune of $43,000

New York, Sept. 17.—H. H. Vreeland, the traction magnate, and Thomas F. Ryan's right-hand man in the Ryan railroad interests, blandly admitted on the witness stand in the graft probe that in 1903 the Metropolitan Securities company, the holding company for the Metropolitan Street Railway company, paid $25,000 to the campaign fund of the Republican state committee and $18,000 to the Democratic fund.

However, he denied all knowledge of cash apparently sent by him to the defunct brokerage firm of Ellingwood & Cunningham to be credited to the accounts of various legislators. He admitted sending money to G. T. Rogers, the lobbyist and treasurer of the brokerage firm, but declared they were loans only.

YANKEE TRADITION GETS SEVERE JOLT

Mince Pie and Baked Beans Cause Deterioration of Race

Detroit, Sept. 17.—Well-cooked vegetables, rice and meat as opposed to New England mince pie and Boston baked beans has made the "graceful, self-controlled Turk the superior of the nervous, lank New Englander." This was the contention laid down before the Mississippi Valley Medical association by Dr. Fenton P. Turck of Chicago.

"Diet has more to do with the making of great men and with the deteriorating of the human race to the level of the brute than anything else," declared Turck.

"Compare that armor-plate mince pie diet indulged in by all America with the two sane meals a day that are enabling Turkey to produce the finest specimens of physical manhood in the world. Mince pie and beans are bringing about race deterioration not alone in Connecticut and Maine."

ROTHBARTH REFUSES AID

Wants a Speedy Trial and to Begin "Taking His Medicine"

New York, Sept. 17.—Adolph Rothbarth, now in the Tombs awaiting indictment on charges of obtaining several thousand dollars from the Mercantile National, Liberty National and National Park banks, refuses steadfastly to accept bail, although he was visited by A. J. Dittenhoefer, Francis Draz and Frederick Schenck, who offered to go on his bond. He told each that he was unwilling to accept any assistance in the matter of bail.

"I haven't a cent," he said. "I don't want any. I am willing to take my medicine. All I want is a quick trial and to have the public let the grass grow over my memory."

MENACED BY PLAGUE

Thousands of Boston Children Said to Be Infected With Tuberculosis

Boston, Sept. 17.—Between 40,000 and 60,000 school schildren in Boston are suffering from diseases which lead to tuberculosis, while the best experts place the number of those actually suffering from the "white plague" at 5000, according to a report which the Consumptives' hospital trustees submitted to Mayor Fitzgerald.

In consequence of these startling figures the board recommended that all of the children in the public schools be examined by physicians with a view to determining what action the city needs to take regarding the treatment of children in the public schools.

Arrested on Theft Charge of $173,000

RELEASED ON $50,000 BAIL

Teller Fitzgerald Says Another Got $173,000 From Sub-Treasury

Chicago, Sept. 17.—George W. Fitzgerald, charged with the theft of $173,000 from the United States government while employed as associate teller in the Chicago sub-treasury, was released on $50,000 bail.

His release was preceded by a long interview in jail, in the course of which the prisoner for the first time made the declaration that he had a decided idea as to the identity of the person who is guilty of the crime for which he is now in jeopardy.

The prisoner declined to give the name of the person suspected by him, on the ground that he could not prove what he believes, but said he might give it at the trial.

BOTHA TURNED DOWN IN SOUTH AFRICA

Boer Party, However, Gets a Majority In Parliament

Cape Town, Sept. 17.—The general elections for the First federal assembly were held yesterday, and the most dramatic result recorded was the defeat of General Louis Botha, premier and minister of agriculture of United South Africa, in the eastern division of Pretoria, by the Unionist, Sir Percy Fitzpatrick. The chief parties in the campaign were the Nationalists, representing the Dutch interests, under the leadership of Premier Botha, and the Unionists, representing the British and mining interests, under the leadership of Dr. Jameson, ex-premier of Cape Colony.

Both racial and political issues have been so confused, however, that they had little real influence on the results, which thus far assure the Nationalists of a majority. Jameson and many other prominent candidates have been re-elected or returned unopposed.

MUST HAVE A SURPLUS

Unimpaired Capital May Be Required of New Banks

Washington, Sept. 17.—Some important changes in the national bank law may may be proposed to the next congress.

One proposed change is to compel newly organized national banks to provide a surplus and an absolutely unimpaired capital the day they begin business.

Under the present system a national bank with a paid-in capital of $25,000 will spend probably $5000 at the start for fixtures, books and other necessities. That impairs its capital. In some cases it is two years before the bank earns enough to wipe out that amount and have its capital stock unimpaired. Even then it has no surplus.

The idea is to compel the organizers of a bank to provide a 20 percent surplus at the start.

100,000 CHOLERA DEATHS

Awful Ravages of Plague Which Exists In Asiatic Russia

St. Petersburg, Sept. 17.—More than 100,000 victims have been claimed by the cholera plague which is eating its way across Asiatic Russia, leaving a trail of death in its wake.

Word was received here that the province of Amur, in southeast Siberia and separated from Manchuria by the Amur river, is threatened.

The sanitary bureau reports 190,000 cases of the plague during the present epidemic.

BRIEFS

Thomas DeCoste of Pleasant street is spending his vacation in Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Henry H. Schulze of Upland road writes from Cincinnati that her father is seriously ill.

The Ladies' Aid of the First Presbyterian church will meet on Wednesday evening Sept. 21st at the Manse.

Mrs. James E. Paskard of 43 Billings road passed away this morning in her 50th year.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Miller of Cherry avenue is seriously ill at Amherst, where Mrs. Miller has prolonged her visit.

The fall and winter schedule of services will be resumed in Christ church, Sunday, the 18th, with both morning and evening services, and the Sunday school meeting at the usual hour.

Stanly Sherman went through the operation on his nose successfully, and is back in Quincy convalescing. He expects to go back to Amherst next Tuesday for his third year in collage.

The stone wall in front of the Brackett estate on Hancock street recently purchased by Henry M. Faxon, is being removed and the historic 10-mile post now stands alone.

On Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock the Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Thomas Armstrong of 51 Warren avenue. As this is the annual meeting a full attendance is desired.

The Wollaston Kindergarten opens for its fifth year Monday morning at 15 Lincoln avenue. It is supported by voluntary contributions and the committee feel fortunate insecuring Mrs. Marcus Chase as treasurer.

Plans are being made for special evangelistic services to be held during the month of October at the Hall Place M. E. church. Simultaneous meetings of a similar character are to be held in all the Methodist churches on the Boston district.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Bethany church will hold its annual business meeting Monday evening. A social has been arranged in connection with it, and all who attend are promised a good time. The new officers will be elected at the business meeting.

The silver anniversary of Norfolk County Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Bethany church, Thursday, Sept. 22, 10 A. M. 2 P. M. Address by Mrs. K. L. Stevenson, president Massachusetts W. C. T. U. All are most cordially invited to attend.

Walter Sanborn of the Rhines Lumber Company of Weymouth was the man who stopped his auto and offered help after the accident to young Safford Thursday afternoon in front of the High school. A help that was appreciated as he carried the boy to the Hospital in his auto, while the ladies with him waited at the school. Such thoughtfullnes is good to witness in these days when so many autoist have the name of being selfish and reckless.

The services at the Wollaston Baptist church will be unusually interesting Sunday morning and evening. In the morning Rev. J. M. Moore, D. D., secretary of the Foward Missionary Movement for Young People will speak and in the evening Rev. D. C. Holton and wife who are to go to Japan in a few days as missionaries of the Baptist Foreign Mission society will be present and speak. These meetings are held in connection with the farewell services for outgoing missionaries which will be held in Ford hall, Boston, Monday afternoon and evening. All who are any way interested are invited.

☛ Kindergarten and 1st Primary Classes are now in session at Miss Spear's, 1168 Hancock street, from 9 to 11.45.

NEW PUPILS AT THAYER

The Thayer College Council Holds a Meeting

The academy reopened Monday morning under pleasant auspices. As usual a number of graduates were present at chapel. All were heartily welcomed by Dr. Gallagher. Rev. George A. Thayer of the Board of trustees gave a ideal talk on the value of education. At about eleven o'clock alumni and other guests adjourned to Miss Thompson's beautiful home, "Thayer Lands" where lunch was served on the broad piazza. The doors were thrown wide open and one could but admire the artistic interior with its beautiful draperies, oriental rugs, and books. Miss Louise Burleigh assisted Miss Thompson in entertaining the party.

Tuesday afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Gallagher entertained about twenty-five members of the Thayer College Council, an organization composed of former pupils now in higher institutions of learning.

The faculty and the members of the senior and senior middle classes joined them later. Miss Mollie Brown and Miss Helen Josselyn, both of 1904, presided at the table. The following officers were elected: President—John C. Harding, '08, Vice Presidents—Herbert L. Simms, '08, Ethel A. Borden, '09, Secretary and Treasurer—Louise K. Emerson, '08, Executive Committee—Robert W. Beal, '09, Harold S. Crocker, '09, Helen W. Jones, '08, Joseph A. Carson, '08.

ANTI SALOON MEETING.

Sunday evening the service at the Hall Place M. E. church will be held in the interests of the Massachusetts Anti Saloon League. This is an organization that has done and is doing a great deal in the Commonwealth for temperance. It has been more instrumental perhaps than any other organization in obtaining the passage of the so called "Bottle bill" of the last Legislature. The fact that Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, is well known as the popular pastor of the Warren St. Baptist church of Boston, is president, commends the society to the public as worthy of its most hearty support. The service will be held at 7 o'clock. John W. Bailey, Esq., of Topsfield, who is very prominent worker for the League, will speak. A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend this service.

Vol. 25 No. 218 QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 19, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

Aerial Flight from Quincy to the Pacific in 1911

CHARLES J. GLIDDEN OFFERS A TROPHY

And Outlines Route for Aeroplane Journey to Los Angeles, California

Proposes a Flight of 200 Miles Daily

From the Squantum aviation grounds on the Atlantic coast to the Los Angeles driving part on the Pacific coast by aeroplane in a contest for the very newest thing in trophies, the Glidden aero tour trophy, constitutes in brief the plans that will without doubt be made ready for the world's most celebrated event in aviation during the late summer of 1911, was the announcement of the Boston Sunday Journal.

This was originally the idea of America's champion amateur aviator, Clifford B. Harmon of New York. He suggested it to Charles J. Glidden, originator of the now world famous Glidden automobile tours, and Mr. Glidden, who is one of the leading enthusiasts in aviation today, instantly agreed to offer a great trophy and begin the work of organizing a "coast-to-coast aerial tour."

Mr. Gliddens formal letter to the national council of the Aero Club of America, of which Mr. Harmon is the chairman, is as follows:

"To encourage touring by aeroplane I hereby offer your council a trophy (form and value to be agreed upon) to be competed for annually beginning with the year 1911 upon such terms and conditions as you may prescribe.

"The first tour shall start from the Harvard aviation field across country to such point as you may determine. tI shall be open to aviators licensed by you or your affiliated clubs throughout the world."

The tentative plans for the contest, as outlined by Mr. Glidden embrace a daily flight of approximately 200 miles with a time schedule made out by the committee in charge. Each aviator wil be required to carry either a passenger or the equivalent weight, the passenger to be an observer appointed by the national council or its designated agent.

The daily stops, if possible, will be made at the various race tracks or baseball grounds scattered throughout the country, while relief stations will be established at intermediate points. For instance, taking as the first day's flight the 200 miles from the Harvard aviation field at Atlantic to Saratoga, N. Y., relief stations could be established at the State muster field, Framingham the Worchester fair grounds; Palmer; Hampden Park, Springfield; the grounds of the Pittsfield Aero Club, and Albany, N. Y.

In similar fashion relief stations throughout the country would be established. After leaving Buffalo the course would be comparatively free of anything but level prairies, affording a good alighting place practically every mile of the journey. The rules would doubtless prohibit crossing cities and large towns, the aviators making de-tours. As the 200 miles would be covered in about four hours, owing to the greater speed of the aeroplanes, there would be little danger of over fatigue on the part of the competing aviators.

A tentative route outlined is as follows: From Atlantic to Saratoga, N. Y., to Syracuse, N. Y., to Buffalo, N. Y.; to Akron, O.; to Wayne, Ind., to Chicago, Ill.; to Springfield, Ill.o to St. Louis, Mo.; to Kansas City, Mo.; to Hutchinson, Kan.; to Syracuse, Kan.; to Santa Fe, N. M.; to Fort Apache, Ariz.; to Phoenix, Ariz.; to Yuma, Ariz.; to Los Angeles, Ca. This route covers about 3500 miles in sixteen days of flying.

CITY OFFICIALS AS GUESTS

Many Bright Sallies at Dinner to Wm. Norteman

A reciprocity love feast, in which over fifty invited guests participated, was tendered William Norteman Saturday evening. It has been Mr. Norteman's custom during the past seven years to dine the Mayor and councilmen, and this year the city officials showed their love for Mr. Norteman by returning the compliment.

Henry W. French, chairman of committee had charge of the affair and originated the title of the feast. Mr. French made a very witty toastmaster and after an elaborate dinner introduced the speakers.

Among the noteable replies were Mr. Norteman, the Mayor (Honorable Bill) Councilman Joseph L. Whitten, who was joked about putting rubber tires on the steamer; Frank Crane, accused of irrigating the department of the interior with alcoholic beverages, (when he is on the commission of inland water ways) Commodore Robbins, toasted as being owner of the finest house on Houghs Neck, (the Yacht club.)

Senator Sandberg (to be); Representative Langilier, Michael T. Sullivan, democratic candidate for representative from Fifth district; Rednor P. Coombs democratic candidate for representative from Sixth district: Jim Elcock, (the poor we have with us always); Mike Shea (Bro. Mike), was called to represent commissioner of public works; Pete Williams our Chief.

Dick Prout, made many graceful cake walks, and Ira Whittemore did a beautiful frog dance. (full of hops.) Councilman John Moir after perpetual persuasion delivered the goods in an eloquent address, and the only Charley Bryant from Ward Five who arrived late was greeted with much applause.

Councilman Ralph W. Hobbs and many others made an impression with due credit. The tables and cafe, were beautifully decorated with the seasons flowers. Everybody had plenty to eat and,—"all had a good time."

ANOTHER LAUNCHING

Currier a Notable Addition to Merchant Marine

Another launching is scheduled to take place at the Fore River Ship Building Co. tomorrow. The boat to be launched is the steel steamer Currier and was built for the Cuba Distilling Co. of Havana, Cuba. Her sponsor will be Miss Currier, the daughter of Guy Currier, the well known Boston attorney for whom the vessel is named.

A special train for the accommodation of the company's guests will leave Boston at 10 o'clock, and run direct to the Fore River yards, landing passengers near the launching stand built about the bow of the boat. Immediately after the launch a lunch will be served in the third story of the new office building. The new building is not fully completed as yet, but enough so that it may be used for the above-named purpose.

The Currier is a isngle screw steamer constructed of steel to the highest class in Lloyd's Register and specially deigned to be operated in either the molasses, bulk petroleum or general freight trades, a combination rarely met with in cargo vessels. The principal dimensions are 370 ft. by 52 ft. beam, and operating on a draught of 22 ft. 6 ins. the vessel will carry 6500 tons deadweight.

The arrangement of the ship consists in placing the machinery right aft and dividing the dead flat body into five double tanks each bounded by transverse and centerline oiltight bulkheads. A general cargo hold is fitted forward and aft of these tanks, and the steamer has a continuous inner bottom as far forward and aft as practicable. These tanks may be utilized for the transport of either molasses or bulk petroleum for which purpose they have a special pumping system installed for either loading or discharging the liquid cargo. The wing spaces at each side of expansion trunk, together with the forward and aft cargo holds, can be used for the carriage of general freight cargoes together with the oil tanks when not operating in the petroleum trade. For this reason the ship has been provided with two steel pole masts each rigged with four 5 ton derricks for the rapid handling of general merchandise.

Altogether the Currier is a notable addition to the American merchant marine and on account of her adaptibility to such varied trades as those mentioned should prove a valuabe asset to the company operating her.

Teacher—"What is the meaning of the word "procrastinate?"

Sammy—"It means to put off, sir."

Teacher—"That's all right; now compose me a sentence with the word properly introduced."

Sammy—"When a man retires at night he procrastinates his clothes."

POLICE WORK APPRECIATED

Mayor Shea Writes Letter to Chief Burrell and Others

The Quincy police have received many words of praise during the past two weeks for the manner in which they handled the crowds at Atlantic during Aviation week. With the many thousands of people in attendance at the meet, both on the field and in the neighborhood, it was remarkable how free the meet was from objectionable features and accidents. Credit is also due to the efficient service rendered by the Metropolitan police in handling the crowds that thronged the boulevard on every day of the meet.

In appreciation of the good work of the police, Mayor Shea has sent the following letters to Chief Burrell of the Quincy police and Supt. Costello of the Metropolitan police:

Quincy, Sept. 19, 1910.

Frank E. Burrell, Chief of Police, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—I desire to express to you, and the police force of our city, my appreciation of the efficient manner in which you discharged your duties in your various stations during the Aviation meet in our city. As Mayor it is a source of great satisfaction to me that such a vast number of people could visit our city without annoyance or accidents.

Yours respectfully,
W. T. Shea, Mayor.

Quincy, Sept. 19, 1910.

Bartholomew J. Costello, Supt. Blue Hill Division, Metropolitan Park.

Dear Sir:—I desire to express the thanks of the citizens of Quincy for the able work done by the officers of your division during the Aviation meet in our city. The police arrangements were excellent on the Quincy Shore Reservation and the large crowds were handled in a very efficient manner.

Yours respectfully,
W. T. Shea, Mayor.

TODAYS COURT.

Santi Leone was arraigned for the larceny of two rings at Braintree. He was found not guilty and discharged.

Peter Miller was arraigend for the violation of the liquor law at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday.

CITY COUNCIL AT WORK AGAIN

Have Several Hearings and Other Business Tonight

The first regular meeting of the City Council since July 25, will he held tonight. There have been two special meetings, however, in the meantime.

Tonight's business will be largely that of public hearings, three being advertised. The first hearing is on the proposed widening of Sea street, from "the Willows" to Bird street. The plan contemplates widening the street between these two points to a width of sixty feet. It involves a large expenditure.

The second hearing is on a proposed ordinance restricting the use of Crescent street to pleasure vehicles only. There is an order pending before the Council calling for an appropriation of $2,000 to rebuild this street, and if that is done heavy stone teams should be excluded from it. These heavily loaded teams will take Crescent street in preference to Copeland street every time if they have a chance, and the result is that the street would soon be cut up. Should the proposed ordinance go into effect, it is probable that other strets may be added to it from time to time.

The third hearing is to allow the Gas Co., to law mains on Larry place. There is a proposition before the Council to rebuild this street, and if that is to be done the gas mains shoul be laid before the street is rebuilt.

There are several matters on the table which may be taken up and it is possible that the Finance committee may report upon some of the matters before them.

There is but one matter in the calendar. That is the order amending the order appropriating $10,000 for the extension of the sewer system. This order was introduced at one of the special meetings, but as there were not sixteen members present, which were required to pass the order, it had to go over until the regular meeting.

MAYOR NOT A CANDIDATE

Thinks, However, It Is a Good Year for Democrat

The senatorial bee is not buzzing about the ears of Mayor Shea, and for the present at least he is not seeking the Democratic nomination for Senator from the First Norfolk district. Immediately upon the publication of Senator Hultman's letter withdrawing from the contest for the nomination the name of Mayor Shea was brought forward by some of his admirers, who believed that there was a good opportunity this year to elect a Democratic senator from the First Norfolk district.

Mayor Shea tells the Daily Ledger, however, that while appreciating the honor that would be conferred upon him, he will not enter the contest. When asked this morning if he was to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator, he replied with an emphatic no. That he had no aspirations in that direction. He did say, however, that he thought there was a good opportunity this year for the election of a Democrat if the right man was nominated.

We record with sorrow the death of Harriet N. Elting, widow of Edmund Elting, Saturday night at the residence of her sister Mrs. Augusta A. Harlow of Mill street. Funeral services were held this afternoon, the Rev. Charles P. Marshall officiating. The burial will be at New Paltz, N. Y. Mrs. Harlow lost another sister this month, Roxana Inglee, widow of William Inglee, who died in Minneapolis, on the 7th inst., in her 93d year. Each of the ten children of the Shepherd family lived to be over 75 years old. There are now two remaining, Mrs. Harlow and her brother Freeman Shepherd, aged 84. In the district school in Jefferson, Maine, there were at one time, besides Mrs. Harlow, 41 Shepherd children.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Have you noticed since the sucess of aviation in Quincy how anxious Boston is to annex the city of Quincy. Perhaps we might annex Boston to Quincy, but we are not very anxious to do that.

Quincy was the starting point of successful aviation in America, and it will also be the starting point of the Atlantic to the Pacific aerial flight in 1911. Evidently Quincy will henceforth be on the Aviation. Some great plans are being talked for the Quincy field at Squantum.

The Citizens Gas Company of Quincy is doing an extensive business distributing over a million cubic feet of gas per week. This is more than the Charlestown and the Waltham companies together, and practically the same as the Dedham and Hyde Park Company. The Boston Consolidated company reports the sale of 52,664,000 cubic feet to Quincy during the year, 53,074,200 feet to Hyde Park and Dedham, 16,285,000 to Waltham, 14,631,000 to Charlestown and 67,068,000 to Chelsea. The Quincy Company paid 46 cents per cubic feet for its gas, a total of $23,698. Gas is popular in Quincy.

Now that the Census bureau has announced a population of 32,121 for the city of Pittsfield, the returns of Quincy are awaited more anxiously, as it may be nip and tuck. The City of Presidents thought it had overtaken and left behind the city of western Massachusetts, but it seems that Pittsfield has had a great revival and made a gain of 10,355 in the past ten years. In the previous ten years the increase was but 4,540.

Here are the figures of Pittsfield and Quincy:

Census	Pittsfield	Quincy
1910	32,121	*33,000
1905	25,001	28,076
1900	21,776	23,899
1895	20,461	20,712
1890	17,281	16,723
1885	14,466	12,145
1880	13,364	10,570
1875	12,267	9,155

*Estimated.

It will be observed that in 1875 Pittsfield led Quincy by over 3,000 and continued to lead until 1895, when Quincy pushed ahead by only 351. In 1900 and 1905 Quincy increased her lead, but how will it be by the census of 1910?

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Now that the summer season is ended, the churches will take up their work of striving to make the world better. Those who have been enjoying Sunday sports, golf, autoing, yachting, fishing trips and Sunday lawn tennis at country home or beaches will please understand that the summer vacation season is neded, and that which was not sinful then will not be so regarded now.—Natick Bulliton.

DR. SARGENT'S LECTURE.

The first meeting of the Mother's Association for the season will be held on October 5th at 3 o'clock in Bethany church chapel. Dr. D. A. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium will speak upon the subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's body." Every woman in Quincy who is interested directly or indirectly in this subject is invited to attend and hear it discussed by one who is an acknowledge authority on physical development. It is an opportunity which should not be missed. No admission fee.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

THEATRE TRAINS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Wouldn't it be well for the Board of Trade and other organizations when considering the fall and winter train service on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. to give a little thought to the ladies and theatre goers? As the service now is if one wishes to go to a matinee in Boston they must leave the Quincy station at 12.25 stopping all the way, after a hurried luncheon to reach the station in time. On reaching Boston there will then be over an hour to spare which could be put to better use at home. Th trains at 1.14 and 1.19 due at 1.30 and 1.40 (if on time) with the poor service now given the South station by the Boston Elevated, is too late to get to any but the nearby theatres in time nor the beginning of the play. A rtain is needed at one o'clock. Going to the theatre since the changes on the steam road and the stopping of the elevated trains through the subway has become an aggravation.

In the evening it is not much better the trains in being 6.56 due at 7.10 and 7.30 due at 7.45 (if on time.)

The theatre trains out at night do not accommodate being slow and far between. There are only three trains out 10.20, 11.15 and 11.25. A quick train around eleven o'clock would please most theatre goers.

MME. CURIE

Parisian Woman Who Found Way to Produce Pure Radium

GIVES NO INTERVIEWS

Mme. Curie Is Very Reticent Concerning Her Latest Discovery

Paris, Sept. 19.—There is no more retiring scientist that Mme. Curie. A recent communication announcing her success in reducing radium to the form of a metal was sent by her to the academy of science by the hand of another, just when she was on the eve of hastening away to an obscure village by the sea for a rest of a couple of weeks. Then she returned to her unpretentious home at Sceaux for a few hours and then proceeded to Brussels to visit the international exposition.

Her paper before the academy of sciences was extremely laconic. Mme. Curie refuses to add anything to it by way of explanation, and her aversion to newspaper interviews seems never to have been more intense than now.

The world will doubtless have to wait for the fuller information until she has made a further communication on the subject to the academy.

LOWELL HAS OVER 100,000 POPULATION

Beats Albany, Her Closest Rival, by More Than 6000

Washington, Sept. 19.—The population of three Massachusetts cities has been announced. The population of Lowell is 106,294, as compared with 94,969 in 1900, an increase of 11.9 percent.

The population of Holyoke is 57,730, as compared with 45,712 in 1900, an increase of 26.3 percent.

Pittsfield during the past decade increased from 21,766 to 32,121, a gain of 47.6 percent.

All of the cities show a healthy growth, Lowell alone being under the average percent of increase shown by American cities by the thirteenth census, although it now enters the class of cities of first rank, with a population above 100,000.

Lowell passes Albany, her nearest rival in 1900, by more than 6000. She is passed in rank by Dayton, O., Atlanta and Grand Rapids, Mich., of the cities which she outranked in 1900.

AFTER POINDEXTER'S SEAT

Another La Follette May Be Heard From In Next Congress

Washington. Sept. 19.—There may be another La Follette in the next congress. If there is he will be of exactly the same political stamp as the redoubtable insurgent senator from Wisconsin.

Out in the state of Washington W. N. La Follette, a cousin of Senator Robert M., is running for congress and he is running on an insurgent platform.

Furthermore this candidate wants to occupy the seat now held by Miles Poindexter of Spokane. Poindexter is the most emphatic insurgent in Washington and he was sent to congress by an insurgent constituency.

Promising situations can be easily imagined with two La Follettes in congress, one in the senate and the other in the house.

TO RAISE THE MAINE

Experimental Work Finally Begun In the Harbor of Havana

Havana, Sept. 19.—The bottom of the harbor, near the wreck of the battleship Maine, was tested yesterday by boring near the stern of the vessel. Coral rock was struck at a depth of about 100 feet.

Captain Ferguson of the Maine commission, who expects to be ready for the actual raising of the vessel about November, said that the present work is merely of an experimental nature.

American Girl Weds Viscount

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Rich Widow Is Placed Under Arrest In a Vermont Town

Lunenburg, Vt., Sept. 19.—Mrs. J. M. Dodge, a widow, one of the best known women and the largest property holder in this vicinity, is under close guard in her home, charged with the murder of William Heath, 40, of Dalton, N. H.

When the body of Heath was found in the bedroom of Mrs. Dodge, he was lying on his back with a paint brush loosely grasped in his right hand, and a paint pot to the left of his body. The revolver was lying on the top of a bureau with three chambers empty, all bearing marks of having been recently fired.

The bureau was distant about five feet from where the body of Heath way lying and bore no marks of blood, which was spattered on the carpet and furniture near the body.

At the time of the shooting, so far as known, Heath and Mrs. Dodge were the only persons in the house, no servants being employed by the woman under arrest. Heath had been given a contract to paint the interior of the house.

TO AUCTION CHILDREN

Announcement of Pennsylvania Minister Gets Him Into Trouble

Pittsburg, Sept. 19.—There was near rioting at Circleville Saturday evening, when Rev. Thomas G. Boord, pastor of the Wylie Avenue Baptist church of Pittsburg, after advertising that he would sell two of his five children to the highest bidder, made an effort to auction the children off.

The minister never got an opportunity to finish the sale, as 1000 people protested, and the minister was nearly mobbed.

Nor were matters better Sunday when Boord appeared in the pulpit in Pittsburg, for he was subjected to many slurs there from his congregation, many of whom would listen to no explanation. Late yesterday afternoon Boord declared it had been but a joke on his part, that he had intended to illustrate a certain point with the children as examples, but the crowd took him seriously and made trouble.

PERILOUS JOURNEY IS ACCOMPLISHED

Whirlpool Rapids Successfully Negotiated by Larsen

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Captain Claus Larsen, in his little motor boat, the Ferro, made a successful trip Sunday from the foot of the cataract through the Whirlpool Rapids to within a mile of Lewiston, a distance of four and one-half miles.

He started from the Maid of the Mist dock at 4:45 and ran on a rock near the American shore at 5:30. Despite the battering in the Whirlpool Rapids, Larsen went through safely, but his boat was leaking badly at the finish and throughout the trip.

Larsen wanted to continue the trip, but, having accomplished the worst part of the journey, he was persuaded to board a trolley for Lewiston, setting the boat adrift.

ACQUIRED GREAT RICHES

Tomfohrde a Poor Immigrant When He Landed In Boston

Boston, Sept. 19.—Andreas Tomfohrde, millionaire restaurateur of this city, died at his home at Jamaica Plain Sunday. Death was due to a complication of diseases, chiefly diabetes.

Tomfohrde commenced his business in Boston as a poor immigrant with little money, but a great ambition to succeed. He became one of the ten richest men in Boston.

From the first start of his business career Tomfohrde was a believer in the future of Boston, for he made constant investments in real estate, many of them being in the heart of the city. He was born in Germany in 1845. During 1867 he landed in Boston and in 1870 started in business for himself.

He Didn't Borrow.

A reference book on Russian history being needed right on the spot, the literary hack said he guessed he would go around to Clarke's to borrow his. He went to Clarke's, but he came back without the book.

"Didn't he have it?" the man's wife asked.

"He did, but I hadn't the nerve to ask for it. Clarke's plan of advertising book borrowers scared me off. Before I had a chance to mention Russian history he steered me past shelves where every few inches a dummy stood sandwiched in between real books. The labels on all the books were conspicuous, black lettering on white, and they set forth some mighty interesting statistics.

"'Three Musketeers,' borrowed March 23 by John Smith. Not returned.' After I had read about a dozen of those dummy labels I said it was a fine day, wasn't it. Clarke said yes, it was, and I came away. To advertise to subsequent visitors that I had borrowed one of Clarke's best books was a little too much notoriety for me."—New York Sun.

CONFERENCE FOR BOYS

Programs for Afternoon and Evening, Oct. 1

Saturday, Oct. 1, will be a red letter day for the older boys of Sunday Schools. A conference has been planned by the local Young Men's Christian Association and is along similar lines with the State conference held yearly for older Y. M. C. A. boys of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. In addition to the boys' conference, which begins at 3 o'clock, there is also a conference planned for teachers of boys which will take place in the evening.

Seventeen Sunday schools of our city are sending five boys each as delegates to this conference. It is a rare privilege to be a delegate, and will mean much to every boy attending. The strongest speakers to boys in the State have been secured, and will add much to the success of the conference. A glance at the program will convince everyone of the real worth of the gathering.

The registration blanks have been sent out and the delegates from the different Sunday schools are requested to fill these out and have them in the hands of the Superintendent in time to get them to L. H. Clee of the Y. M. C. A. on or before Sept. 26. The teachers and pastors are also requested to fill out blanks and return as above.

This conference is indeed a great scheme, and should be of interest to all interested in Boys and the Church. The program is as follows:

SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

3.00—3.15 Devotional period.
3.15—3.45 Address "Boys in the Sunday School."—H. W. Gibson.
3.45—5.45 Papers by older boys.
1st "The boy and the Sunday school"
2nd, "Why boys don't go to Sunday school."
3rd, "How to get boys interested."
4th, "Week-day Activities."
(A) Athletic Leagues.
(B) Boys Organizations (Epis.)
(C) Organized Classes.
5.00—5.30 Address. "The Boy and Bible Study."
Recreation period.
5.30—6.30 Games in Y. M. C. A. gym, pool, etc.
6.30 banquet.
7.15—7.30, Business lesson.

SATURDAY EVENING.

Group Conference, Boys only.
7.30—8.15, Discussions. "The Obligations of a boy to the boys of the community."—H. W. Gibson.
8.10—9.00, Discussions. "What the Sunday school might do for a Boy."

TEACHERS ONLY.

7.30—8.15. Discussion, "The Sunday school—its opportunity."
8.10—9.00, Discussion, "The Need of Modern Method in Sunday Work for Boys."· Mr. H. W. Gibson

POND HOME VISITORS.

Through the kindness of Mrs. J. J. Feely of Popes Hill and Mrs. W. G. Shaw of this city, a party of nine ladies, members of Unity Circle, King's Daughters, were included in an automobile ride to Pond Home for the Aged, on Thursday Sept. 15. They spent the day ,enjoying a picnic lunch in the open air and later inspecting the Home which is a noble example of King's Daughters work In the early afternoon those of the home who were able were taken for a short auto ride about the town, after which the visitors presented a classical parlor entertainment consisting of piano selections, original poems and songs, all of which were heartily enjoyed; but at the close, in response to a half-timid request from one of the older members for something in popular music, it was an inspiring sight to see two of our most dignified church and concert singers gaily singing "Rings on my Fingers" and then singing and acting some of the most modern of our "Show girl" songs.

A round of old fashioned dance music, jigs and reels, even made some of the young folks step out the time, and after that the hearty thanks of the audience and their beaming faces were convincing proof that they really meant it when they said they had not enjoyed anything so much for many a long day. After presenting each member of the Home with a box of candy, the visitors came away feeling almost as happy as those left behind. Pond Home is indeed a refuge and shelter, the members so tenderly cared for, and the house so well conducted that a visit by any King's Daughter or interested friend is sure to add enthusiasm to the work of maintaining it.

FIFTY YEARS IN MINISTRY

Death of Rev. E. W. Virgin, a Former Pastor

Rev. Edward Warren Virgin, a former pastor of the Hall Place church, died on Sunday at Dedham, where for several years he has been the chaplain of the Norfolk county jail. On two occasions within a few weeks, the venerable Mr. Virgin occupied pulpits in this city, the Methodist churches at West Quncy and Wollaston and both times preached on the subject—"Fifty years" in the ministry." Only a few days ago he officiated at a wedding at North Weymouth, and the day before his death he married a couple at Dedham. He was in his 75th year and had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Virgin was born in Marlboro, June 29, 1836, the son of the Rev. Charles Virgin of the New England Methodist Episcopal Conference (1807-1853), who was presiding elder of the Boston district from 1813 to 1817. He was educated at Wesleyan Academy Wilbraham, class of 1850, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., class of 1857, and Concord (N.H.,) Biblical Institute, class of 1860. Before entering college he taught in the public schools of Ludlow and at Allamuchy, N. J.

In 1860 he joined the New England conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. His first pastorate was at Grafton Center and his last at Wollaston. His appointments had all been in Massachusetts and his pastorates were at Natick, Boston, Worcester, Shelburne Falls, Chelsea, Neponset, East Dedham and Jamaica Plain. He had retired from the pulpit for the past ten years, but very frequently preached in the churches of his own and other denominations. He was a member of the Dedham Ministers' club.

In the Civil War he served three terms in the United States Christian Commission and was in the siege of Chattanooga. He was a member of the G. A. R.

In 1867 he was a delegate from the Mass. State Sunday schoo l convention to the first world's Sunday school convention, which met in Paris He was prominent in Masonry, being a thirty-second degree member. He was raised a Master Mason in Blazing Star Lodge, F. and A. M. of Concord, N. H., June 14, 1860 being a Mason over 50 years.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Consistory and associate prelate of Cyprus Commandery, K. T. Hyde Park.

In 1896 he was appointed chaplain of the Norfolk County House of Correction and had served ever since.

In October, 1875, he was married to Miss Mary E. Harmon of Roxbury, who survives him. Two children, both living were born to them. Edward Harmon Virgin, Harvard 1899, librarian of the General Theological Seminary of New York City, and Miss Elsie Harmon Appleton Virgin of Dedham.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Virgin.

Y. M. C. A. WORK.

The Young Men's Christian Association is having an unusual number of applications for rooms from young men just coming to town. As the dormitory is full it is impossible to place them in the building, consequently the room list carried in the office must be enlarged. The Association would be pleased to receive the names of any persons having rooms to rent to young men. No fee is charged. The only requirements being that the person having the room to rent shall notify the Association when their room is rented and that they renew their application each thirty days, as all rooms are removed from the list and entered at the expiration of that time.

BOYS' CLUBS.

With the approach of the autumnal equinox things are beginning to break out all over the city. The Boys' Clubs of Atlantic and Wollaston under the able direction of Mr. Clee are planning high jinks for their opening. Osgood and Lansing, monologist and banjo entertainers from Boston, have been engaged and a great treat is promised all who turn out for these meetings. The dates are Monday, the 26th, in Atlantic, and Tuesday, the 27th, at Wollaston. The Methodist church in Atlantic and the Baptist in Wollaston have given the use of their vestries to the clubs.

HOUGHS NECK BUDGET

Rev. C. R. McMeekin Working Hard to Improve Conditions

Probably one of the hardest workers to improve conditions at Houghs Neck is the pastor of Union Chapel, Rev. C. R. McMeeken. He is a consciencious, broad minded man , well thought of not only by his parish, but outsiders. The general text of his sermon on Sunday can well be applied not only to Houghs Neck, but districts many miles from here. It was—"Husbands love your wives, even as Christ loved the church." His address was an appeal to the deep thinking man to set apart an hour or two of the Lord's Day for worship, rightly claiming it the duty of every man to show by example some respect for God. He said in part. Some thing about the church may not exactly please you; something about your home may not go just right. You wouldn't leave your home just for some trivial excuse. I appeal to the deep thinker when I say this. Of course there is one class of men who would, but to the man, the real man, duty over-weighs a slight, threfore why is it not a duty to show some respect to God, by entering his house at least once a week. You need a minister in your community to bury your dead, to perform your marriages, to administer to your sick to preach the word of God. You may not always need the same man, but where civilization is, there is the need, and the need supplied, carries the Gospel to the unbeliever, the uncivilized.

Mr. McMeekens remarks were strong, full of soul enthusiasm, and no man could get by them. The parish feels that he is the right man in a much needed place.

The Ladies Aid Society of Union chapel will hold an apron sale Friday, Sept. 23, at 2.30 P. M. The sale will continue through the afternoon and evening. Ice cream and cake will be served.

Miss E. Jacobson of Houghs Neck rendered in a beautiful manner H. C. MacDougals classic "Jesus Lover of my soul" at the Sunday morning service at Union chapel.

The committee of five whose duty it is to present to the public a candidate for the Council is making progress. A majority of the committee held a conference in Associate hall, and submitted eleven names to choose from. These eleven will be sorted out and a choice made Tuesday evening, the next meeting date of the committee. We know who is among the eleven but it would not be justice or fair to print their names prematurely The associates will give out the news at the proper time. Chas. E. Decker.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. G. E. Street and family of Lowell street have returned from Marshfield Hills.

Mrs. J. T. Weeks of Tremont street, returned Thursday from Provincetown where she has spent the summer.

Ex-selectman R. Allen Gage returned to Braintree a week ago after an extended vacation from his general jobbing business.

The many friends of Mrs. Mortimer Galvin of River street will be pleased to learn that she is resting comfortably at the Quincy hospital where she has been convalescing for the past three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac L. Jones of 48 Stedman avenue observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday evening by entertaining a few of their friends. The house in which they live was Mrs. Jones' birthplace and the couple were also married in the same house.

Miss Nellie Belyea, clerk at the store of Mr. A. W. Cass, is now in charge of the dry goods department, and Mrs. Elsie Tonner Damon is the new clerk in the general stor in place of Miss Geddes who has gone to her home in Everett.

George H. Hamblett, acting as a committee of one, appointed by President Wetherbee of the Improvement association, has had the streets in the vicinity of the Braintree station cleared of papers and refuse during the last two months. One man has been employed by the association to do this work once or twice a weew. It is hoped that next summer all the main streets may be cleared up in this way and if people will refrain from dropping papers and waste matter the improvement will be marked and the expense justified.

ANOTHER AVIATION DAY.

Arrangements have been made by B. F. Keith, the well known theatrical man for another day of aviation at the Quincy field on Saturday when Grahame-White, who carried off the principal honors at the Harvard meet will give something new in aero flights. Some of the feats promised are stopping his motor 1,0000 feet above the field and gliding down. Several other entirely new stunts are also promised. The idea of Mr. Keith is to give those who were not fortnuate enough to be numbered among the thousands in the grand stand during the meet to witness the flights and the price of admission will be placed at 50 cents. It was first intended that the admission to the field should be free, but it was found impossible to regulate the crowds sure to attend.

SOUTH BRAINTREE.

Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern will preach his last sermon as pastor of the South church on Sunday, Sept. 25.

Miss Ida Johnston of Tremont street is making an extended visit with relatives in New York.

Mrs. H. H. Snow of Tremont street has returned from an extended visit with relatives in Tilton, N. H.

Mrs. William J. Tirrell of Hancock street has returned from a four weeks' visit with relatives in Salem and Lowell.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barclay of Taylor street are entertaining the formers mother, Mrs. Fred Barclay of Milltowne, Maine.

Dr. F. W. Brett of Summer street is spending a few days in camp with his son Leo Brett at Damariscotta, Me.

Mrs. Harry Thayer and children returned last week from Provincetown where they have been spending the summer and this week have been entertaining friends from Portland, Oregon.

Braintree Council, Knights of Columbas will work the second degree at their regular meeting Sept. 23 at Odd Fellows' hall. The work will be done by Grand knight Dr. C. A. Sullivan and staff.

The members of Amana Rebekah lodge plan to meet at Lakview bungalow, 6 Sunset road with Mrs. R. E. Whitman next Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Willis and family who have been spending the past season at their summer home at Bayside returned to their home on Washington street Friday.

Mrs. Betsey Holbrook celebrated her seventy-eighth birthday Friday. During the day friends from Holbrook, Braintree and Brockton called bringing tokens of their remembrance of the day.

Cornelius Sullivan of Division street has purchased the property adjoining his, formerly owned by Mrs. Robert Brooks. The house is being moved to Liberty street and Mr. Sullivan will build a new one to be rented on the site of the old cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Whitman of Albany, N. Y., are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Whitman of Pond street. They have recently come from the White mountains where they passed a part of their vacation.

Cards have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. James A. Bishop announcing the marriage of their daughter Eva L. A. Porter to Harrison Parker Hobart on Wednesday, Sept. 7, at New Minas, Nova Scotia. They will be at hame after the first of November at 931 Washington street, South Braintree.

Mr. and Mrs. John Connors of Gardner, Maine, are on their honey moon and are the guests of the former's sister Miss Delia Connors of Franklin street. They were married in Gardner on Saturday and came directly to our town. Mr. Conors is very well known here, having been employed in the Hollingsworth & Whitney mills for years and at present is serving the same paper concern in Gardner, Maine, as night superintendent.

At our meeting held Tuesday evening it was decided to present the travelling cabinet to Mayflower lodge of Plymouth, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 27. A special train will leave Braintree and South Braintree about 7.30 P. M. Tickets for round trip on special train and to be used only on this train $1.00. Same can be procurred at lodge room also from E. F. Watkins, John H. Macandrew, H. H. Legg, also Bro. Proctor at South Braintree station. We guarantee the railroad $80, therefore we wish all brothers of Puritan lodge and resident Odd Fellows to go if possible. For further particulars be at lodge meeting next week, also see this column next week.

EAST BRAINTREE.

Miss Alice M. Doane of Bowditch street has returned to Bridegwater Normal school.

Mrs. Theodore Fogg of Hayward street has been entertaining her sister Miss Pauline Hall of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sutter, and Mr. and Mrs. Max Distler of Long Island, and Miss Laura Anderson of East Braintree make the trip to New York in Mr. Sutter's auto, from the home of Mrs. Distler's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Dickey of Liberty street, arriving safely after a pleasant trip.

William Stackhouse of Liberty street has built a large motor boat which was launched at Sheppard's wharf and on Saturday he enjoyed his first trip taking out a jolly party of men. The boat was christened Helen for Mr. Stackhouse little niece, who died at sea a year or more ago. He intends taking a trip to Florida in the boat and will spend the winter there.

The Men's club of East Braintree which meets in the Methodist Episcopal church, on the second Tuesday in each month, held its first meeting after vacation Tuesday evening of this week. Following an excellent oyster supper the meeting was called to order by President Henry M. Storm. A good gathering greeted the speaker of the evening Rev. George H. Parkinson as he arose to deliver an admirable address on The Present Day Patriot which was received with continued applause.

CHAPTER III.

ANOTHER moment and a trig, well groomed soldier, florid faced, muscular, yet burly in build, stepped briskly in and "stood attention." His right eye and cheek were still heavily bruised and discolored. His nose was somewhat swollen.

"How did you happen to be in town, sergeant?" was the abrupt demand.

Fitzroy colored to the brows, but the answer was prompt:

"I understood the colonel to say 'find him,' referring to Trooper Rawdon, Friday night, and I went in Saturday morning thinking to help. Then we couldn't get back, sir."

"My order was to the sergeant of the guard, not to you," interposed Button curtly.

"Sergeant Stowell was looking for a man in uniform, sir, and had never seen Rawdon except in trooper dress and would never perhaps have known him."

"Then how should you?" was the sharp query.

Fitzroy started. "I—had known him longer, sir, and much better. I—had occasion to reprimand him once or twice and knew him and his—pals, if the colonel will pardon me—as none of the others knew him. There was that young civilian Lowndes that went along with us and got into trouble, and—there were others. In fact, if the colonel will pardon me again, sir, I do not hold a high opinion of Trooper Rawdon, and"—

"No more of that, sir," broke in the colonel angrily, "unless you are ready to prove your words."

"Give me two days and half a chance, Colonel Button," was the confident answer, "and I'll show he had something to do with the paymaster's accident or—whatever it was!"

As Captain Sumter said, the ladies had gone no farther than the surgeon's quarters that memorable Saturday, and with Sumter's full consent they had not gone even that far. Friday afternoon he had wired his protest to the father of Miriam Arnold, and with startling emphasis the reply had come early Saturday morning, "I repeat that I desire my daughter to return at once." The tone was abrupt if telegrams can be said to have either tone or manner, but that wire settled the matter. Miriam said she must obey, and nothing short of Dr. Larrabee, senior surgeon of the post, had prevailed against her decision. He himself had met the covered vehicle at his gate and had insisted on their alighting. "Your train is half a day late," said he. "You'll be wiser waiting here than at the frowsy station. Besides, I wish to see this young woman again." So saying he fairly lifted Miss Arnold from the fur robed depths of the dark interior and deposited her on the wind swept path. "Run in," said he, then similarly aided Mrs. and Miss Sumter.

Less than half an hour the trio spent under the doctor's hospitable roof. Before 2 o'clock the wind had increased to a gale. The snow was driving swift and hard. "I checked you just in time," said he. "There'll be no train either way this night." And so by 2 o'clock and just as the paymaster was driving away down the front of officers' row Mrs. and Miss Sumter, with Miss Arnold, escorted by the two medical officers, were struggling across the open space between the surgeon's houses and the rear fence of the long line and presently entering the back gate at Sumter's.

It was an odd arrangement, somewhat peculiar to frontier stations of the day. The inclosure of Fort Cushing was diamond shaped. The entrance gate was at the eastern apex. The hospital and surgeons' quarters stood on a line with this gate, their front perpendicular to the long axis of the diamond. Their rear elevations, therefore, were not far from officers' row. From the front of Sumter's house, around by way of the main gate to the doctor's door—the first to the left (north) of the post trader's—was quite a walk. From back door to back door, however, it was less than 200 paces. "We are near neighbors," Dr. Larrabee had been saying, "though my wife thinks it a long walk on a windy day. I could reach you day or night almost in a minute."

"Is Mr. Lanier sitting up?" Mrs. Sumter inquired. "I thought Dr. Schuchardt was trying to keep him in bed."

"He won't stay," was the answer.

"Dr. Larrabee," finally said Mrs. Sumter, "Miriam says she believes it was all a mere delusion—a dream. She blames herself bitterly and—begs us to think no more of it—to forgive her, but"—

"But why should I attempt to conceal it? You know, and we have reason to know, she did see some one—there in her room who went out like a thief, through the window and away in spite of sentries. Captain Sumter had the snow swept off before reveille. What was the use of advertising it further? Mr. Barker and Mr. Blake saw it, too. They hold it was some garrison sneak thief, looking for jewelry. Yet not so much as a ring, or a pin was touched—only her desk."

"Did she tell of that?"

"No; Kate was the first to see it. She flew upstairs when she heard the scream, found Miriam a senseless heap on the floor, the desk open on the little table by the window, the contents scattered, the window up and somebody bounding and slipping away in the moonlight. Then she heard the challenge and scuffle outside and thought the guard had him and gave her whole attention to Miriam until Mr. Barker shouted from the lower hall."

"And nothing is missing?"

"Nothing. But Captain Sumter wished to have it all kept quiet until he could confer with the detectives in town."

"Miss Kate has a level head," presently spoke Larrabee. "What does she say?"

"Doctor, that is what troubles me. Kate won't say—anything. It's the first time she ever kept a secret from me." And now tears of genuine distress were welling in Mrs. Sumter's eyes.

It was half after 2, and the wind was shrieking through the open space back of the line when Dr. Larrabee, bending almost double, managed to fight his way homeward. Schuchardt, occupant of the adjoining set to his own, had not yet returned. At Sumter's gate the senior surgeon encountered the corporal of the guard, nearly blind and well nigh exhausted. He was searching for sentry No. 5.

"You will probably find Dr. Schuchardt at Lieutenant Lanier's quarters," shouted Larrabee at the corporal, with kindly intent. "Take No. 5 in there and get thawed out. Tell him I think a nip of whisky advisable under the circumstances."

And thus it happened that two storm beaten soldiers presently shoved their way through Lanier's back gate and banged at the kitchen door. Nobody answering, they presently entered, passed through that deserted apartment, and, hearing voices farther on, the corporal ventured into the dark hallway leading through the little frame house, now fairly quivering in the blast. Here he caught sight of two officers—big, powerful men in fur caps and canvas overcoats just pushing forth through the front door into the fierce blast without. One was Dr. Schuchardt, the other Lieutenant Ennis, joint occupant with Lanier of the tiny premises. As Corporal Cassidy later expressed it, he felt "like I'd lost a bulging pot on an ace full." He couldn't run after and beg them to come back, yet he and his comrades were stiff from cold and almost breathless from exhaustion. Suddenly No. 5's carbine slipped from his frozen glove and fell with a crash on the kitchen floor. The next instant the voice of Lieutenant Lanier was heard.

"Who the devil's that?"

"Corporal Cassidy, sir. The post surgeon told me to bring No. 5 in here and thaw him out."

But by this time Mr. Lanier himself appeared in the hall. "Well, I should say! Come right in here, you two. Pull off your gloves and get out of those caps and things. Man alive"—this to No. 5—"why didn't you come before? This is no time to stand on ceremony or stay on post either. My striker's stormbound somewhere. I'd help you if I could, but I can't. Help yourselves now best you can. Rub and kick all you want to; dance if it'll warm you." And all the time he was crowding them up about a roaring stove, where presently he made them sit while he bustled about at a buffet in the adjoining room. "You'll have to help me, corporal," presently he cried. "One hand can't mix and pour and lift. There's sugar, there's hot water on the stove, there's glasses and here's whisky. Mix it hot, and down with it!"

PROPHESIES THEIR DEFEAT

Roosevelt Challenges Enemies to Fight If They Dare

DEFENDS COURT CRITICISM

Quotes His Successor and Lincoln In Favor of Free Comment on Judiciary —Reviews Taft's Work as Chief Executive and Indorses Many of Administration's Acts—Has Something to Say on New Nationalism

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Coming into a stronghold of the opposition, ex-President Roosevelt boldly challenged the opponents of his political doctrines to come out in the open and fight if they dared. He prophesied that if they did they would be beaten.

The former president also warmly commended President Taft as a public official and expressed his approval of a number of the accomplishments of the Taft administration. Roosevelt did not indorse the administration as a whole.

What he did have to say, however, placed him on record for the first time in regard to many of the more important features of it, breaking the silence which he had maintained steadfastly on the subject except for his few brief references to his successor on his western trip.

He also defended his recent criticisms of two decisions of the United States supreme court, made in a speech in Denver, and quoted the words of Mr. Taft, written when he was a judge, to support his contention that the people have the right to criticise decisions of the courts.

"I merely took the view which the learned justice had taken in his dissenting opinion," said Roosevelt. "Those who criticise me are also criticising a justice of the supreme court, Mr. Harlan."

"* * * If I have erred in commenting as I have commented upon the decisions in question, I err in company with Abraham Lincoln, who, fifty-three years ago, was assailed for his repeated criticisms of the supreme court in the Dred Scott case. Let me quote him: 'We believe in obedience to and respect for the judicial department of government. * * * But we think the decision erroneous and we shall do what we can to have it overruled.'

"Nor do I have to go only to the statement of the past for precedents. The President of the United States, Mr. Taft, has served his country honorably and uprightly in many positions—as judge, as governor of the Philippines, as secretary of war, and now as president, for to him and the congress acting with him we owe the creation of a tariff commission; the adoption of maximum and minimum tariff law treaties with foreign powers; the proper treatment of the Philippines under the tariff; the increase in the efficiency of the interstate commerce law; the beginning of a national legislative program providing for the taxing power in connection with the corporations doing an interstate business; a postal savings bank bill; the constitution of a commission to report a remedy for over-capitalization in connection with the issue of stocks and bonds; but few of his services are more deserving of record than what he said in this very matter of criticism of the judiciary.

"Mr. Taft, * * * speaking as a United States circuit judge, fifteen years ago, said: 'The opportunity freely and publicly to criticise judicial action is of vastly more importance to the body politic than the immunity of courts and judges from unjust aspersions and attack.'"

Alluding again to his "new nationalism," Roosevelt put this clean-cut issue to his critics:

"Is any party willing to take the other side of the propositions of which complaint is made? If so, it would be a good thing to have the issue before the people, for in the end the people would most certainly decide in favor of the principles embodied in the new nationalism, because otherwise this country could not continue to be a true republic, a true democracy."

When Roosevelt arrived here from New York the state fair grounds, on which he spoke, were thronged with a crowd of more than 40,000. Roosevelt rode around the mile track at the head of a parade and received a cordial welcome.

Killed by Runaway Horse

Boston, Sept. 19.—Miss Mary Wall, aged 37, was fatally injured last night in front of the home of her mother at 7 Winthrop street, Charlestown, when she was knocked down, trampled upon and dragged twenty feet by a runaway horse. She died a few hours later.

British Steamer Quarantined

Rotterdam, Sept. 19.—The British steamer Saxon Prince, from New Orleans, has been quarantined here on account of the death of the cook and the illness of three others of her crew.

Still Driving Out Jews

Kiev, Sept. 19.—The police have become more active in expelling Jews, who have been ordered back within the restricted territory.

Nearly Two Hundred Chinamen Lop Off Their Queues

FEAST OF THE FULL MOON

Utilized to Discuss Suggestion of Progressive Chinamen Which Has Indorsement of Prince Tsai-Tsaio—Boston Chinamen Concur In Movement as Far as Coming Generation Is Concerned

Boston, Sept. 19.—Chinese residents of Harrison avenue, laundrymen and outside merchants, gathered in Boston's Chinatown yesterday to celebrate the feast of the full moon, one of the oldest religious festivals of their faith, and to decide whether or not the modern Americanized Chinaman should be minus his queue.

There was considerable discussion of the latter question over the chow-maine and chicken omelette, and at the close of the day's celebration about 200 Chinamen cut off their pigtails.

The movement was started by the Chinese publicity association of New York some months ago, and at first caused widespread horror among resident Chinese. Then Prince Tsai-Tsaio visited this country, and he believed so thoroughly in the practical good of the suggestion that he cut off his own queue and returned to his native country without it.

This was a great step in favor of the new movement and the progressive Chinamen who engineered it were not slow to take advantage of the fact. They sent out word that it would be a good suggestion to discuss the matter at the festival of the full moon, and it is believed that the suggestion was adopted all over the country.

Boston Chinamen were about equally divided on the question. Nearly all concurred in the movement as far as the coming generation was concerned, believing that the youngsters should grow up queueless, but they themselves were unwilling to give up the feature that characterizes to them loyalty and reverence for their ancestors.

Leon Bing, who is one of the most influential men in Boston's Chinatown, spoke in favor of the question, but he, too, believes that it should only apply to the growing population, those born in this country. At the close of his talk he admitted that he would be unwilling to give up his own queue.

His partner, Leon Wee, who has just returned from his native land, is an ardent expoent of the new movement. He went to China to bring his wife and young son to this country, and his first act, after the steamer cleared Hong Kong harbor, was to cut the queue from the head of the little fellow. He did not cut off his queue yesterday, but said that he was ready to do so at any time.

Ching Fong, director of one of the largest pottery shops in the city, is a Christianized Chinaman, and so did not attend the meeting. He cut off his queue years ago. He said that the queue was now a mark of slavery, not a mark of loyalty or reverence—that it had long since lost its religious significance, and that the only reason for wearing it was superstition.

Hugh Keon was one of the principle speakers against the new movement. He believes that the modern Chinaman is becoming so Americanized that he is gradually forgetting his native land, her customs and religious observances. He gave as his ultimatum that he would wear his queue until there came to him an imperial edict against it.

The meeting in all the restaurants were exciting, that is after the religious ceremonies were completed, and the feeling seemed to be at high tension. At the conclusion about 200 of the most radical cut off their queues with fitting solemnity, packed them carefully away and bore them out with them.

SPENCER GOES TO ASYLUM

Springfield Murderer Declared by Alienists to Be Insane

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 19.—That Bertram G. Spencer, self-confessed murderer of Miss Margaret Blackstone and responsible for a reign of terror for many months in this city, is insane, was the uanimous verdict of four allenists who examined him, the two representatives of the government agreeing with their colleagues of the defense.

Judge Sanderson, in the superior court, then called Spencer before him and ordered him committed to the insane asylum at Bridgewater for an indefinite term. Should Spencer at any time show signs of recovered sanity he will again be formally examined and, if declared sane, will be placed on trial for the murder.

Church Dignitary Arrested

Lisbon, Sept. 19.—Mgr. Baldomero, superior of the Aldea Ponte friars, was arrested as he was entering the Spanish monastery. The monastery recently was closed by an imperial decree and its occupants expelled and threatened with arrest if they returned to the country.

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER.

New Tailored Suits. Cloths and Heather Mixtures: Frog Fastenings on Coats: New Motor Coats: Silk Hats and Satin Dress Trimmings.

Much advance buying is necessary where there are girls to fit out for school or college, and news of advance styles is a valuable aid in the selection of clothes that must last through the winter.

TAILORED SUITS.

The tailored suit is the main dependence of both the girl and her mother, and many of the best models are already in the shops waiting to be shown to early buyers. Very simple lines, almost no trimming but the utmost perfection of cut and finish characterizes the best models. The coat that is shorter than the knee is the one in favor. About 36 inches is the popular length, though many shorter and a few longer models are worn. The semi-fitting coat is not as smart as the uooser very straight effects, with the centre fronts and backs cut wide and flat looking and very narrow sides that reduce the lines of the hip. Skirts are decidedly narrow, but not ridiculously skimped, and "hobble" styles are only suggested by some of the trimmings on more elaborate costumes. The tailor skirt is plain with few strappings or bands, and is apt to open with a buttoned pocket flap on the left side of the front breadth.

MATERIALS.

Scotch heather mixtures and Boucle cloths with their knotted surface are the extreme novelty of this season. Lord and Taylor is making a great showing of these and of fancy cheviots both in whale and basket weaves, also some extremely smart black and white and gun metal effects in narrow stripes, that are always particularly good looking made up in severe tailored styles. For later and more dressy wear a most enticing line of broadcloths at from $2.50 to $3.50 per yard are being eagerly bought by fashionable tailors and dressmakers.

ELABORATE WEAR.

Suits for more elaborte wear are quite ornate in effect though plain princess lines continue to be employed for these. Great use is made of satin for trimmings, and coats of silk and satin to match elaborate costumes of cloth. Chiffon or crepe are a notable feature of the latest French importations.

LONG COATS AND WRAPS.

The smartest long coat for general wear is a loose belted ulster, of blanket woolens, shaggy and soft and light in weight. Tans are the favorite shade in these garments, but many whites and light colors are also worn. Wraps of broadcloth in various cape and burnouse forms are not much different from the Spring showing of these garments.

The all silk hat is the leading novelty among the advance tailor-made models, and these come in an endless variety of colorings, with self trimmings in the form of huge bows and rosettes, and are both pretty and practical as they will stand an endless amount of wear without looking faded or shabby.

WAISTS.

The waist of chiffon cloth or messaline to match the costume is still the correct mode. The new models are usually made with the waist and sleeve cut in one, and are trimmed with satin when of chiffon cloth or marquisette. The satin one with cloth appliques or braidings of covered cords or simply stitched and with frogs and buttons as their only garniture. Lucy Carter.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Former Bank Treasurer Ingersoll Arraigned In His Home

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 19.—A plea of not guilty was entered by Richmond H. Ingersoll before Recorder Rumery of the municipal court. The formalities of arraignment were held at Ingersoll's home on the four charges of embezzlement for which Ingersoll was arrested on complaint of Charles H. Prescott, president of the York County Savings bank.

As Ingersoll was not well enough to come into court and his counsel, Edward C. Reynolds, decided to waive examination, the arraignment was held at the residence of the aged treasurer of the closed bank.

Bail, which was fixed at $5000 on each charge, or $20,000 in all, was furnished by five friends of Ingersoll's.

Fitzgerald Awaiting Call to Become Candidate For Governor

Boston, Sept. 19.—"It looks as if I might have to take the nomination for governor if Senator Lodge and Governor Draper are going to spend so much of their time talking about me," said Mayor Fitzgerald last night, when asked if he had any reply to make to an attack upon him by the Republican leaders.

When asked to state his position on the nomination Fitzgerald said: "I am waiting for the call. If the Democratic party wants me to stand as the candidate this fall and expresses this sentiment in the convention through its delegates, then I shall accept the nomination and give my best efforts to winning."

MARRIAGE PACT DRAWN ABROAD

Chanler's Lawyer Blocked Cavalieri In New York

STORY OF "BOB'S" WOOING

Made Up His Mind to Marry Actress When He Saw Her Performing In New York—She Kept Him Waiting After Hunting Up His Record—Now Alleged That She Made Verbal Agreement In Paris

New York, Sept. 19.—This is the story of Robert W. Chanler's wooing of Lina Cavalieri, and the real story of the marvelous marriage contract he made with her.

Chanler was sheriff of Duchess county when he first came down to New York with a party of friends. He had in hand the quarterly payment from his $20,000 allowance. He took his friends to hear "The Tales of Hoffmann," in which the Italian singer was making her debut.

At the end of the first act Chanler is said to have turned to his bucolic group and remarked: "I'm going to marry that woman in the leading part." And he didn't even know her name then. He soon spent his time in the city and his quarterly income upon the fair diva as well.

Mme. Cavalieri looked up Chanler in the social directory and found that he stood with the Astors—let alone the Chanlers—at the very top of the list. Then, with the same business-like method that characterized her opening of a beauty shop, she looked up his financial status through a lawyer, and the lawyer told her it was very good.

Chanler made assiduous suit. Cavalieri, having looked him up and raving received his proffer of marriage, said she'd marry him "out of a friendship purely," if he would make an agreement giving her all the riches he had.

Chanler tried to do it. But Edward Perkins, a slim lawyer from Poughkeepsie, was at that conference, and he was lawyer not only for Robert W. Chanler, but for his estate. When he protested Chanler waved him down.

The tentative ante-nuptial agreement wasn't drawn in Paris at all but in New York. Perkins is an astute lawyer. He let Chanler write away to Cavalieri all his entailed property and his entailed income of $20,000 per year, and he let him write in some few vacant lots on Tenth avenue which "Bob" could only get an equity out of himself.

And so it came about that it was a French-drawn compact, instead of an American one that gave Mme. Cavalieri what she is to get out of the Chanler estate. It explains also why Mme. Cavalieri didn't give "Bob" his acceptance until she had reached France.

And that was because while Chanler had tried to sign everything over to her, she'd found that his Perkins over here was such an assiduous lawyer that she would prefer to have the real pact done in form by the maitres of her home land.

It is now alleged that Cavalieri as well as Chanler made an ante-nuptial agreement, though the singer's promise was verbal. In this verbal agreement, the report is that Cavalieri promised to pay all of Chanler's debts if he would settle on her an income of $20,000 a year. The salient feature of Cavalieri's agreement are:

First—That Cavalieri should pay off Chanler's debts, variously estimated from $35,000 to $60,000.

Second—That Cavalieri should free certain parcels of the realty from the mortgage.

Third—That Cavalieri and Chanler should have a common purse, only title to the same should be vested in the wife.

Fourth—That the first $20,000 out of his income should go, as before, to his first wife, Mrs. Julia Chamberlain Chanler, and his two little girls, Julia, aged 12, and Dorothy, aged 6 years. Chanler was assured by Cavalieri, according to members of the Duchess county family, that the question of money never would arise between them.

BOSTON GIRL BEATS NEW YORK SWIMMERS

Rivals Benumbed In Contest Lasting Over Five Hours

New York, Sept. 19.—Miss Rose Pitonof of Boston, aged 16 years, accomplished the most remarkable feat of distance swimming ever seen in these waters by stroking with the tide from the foot of East Twenty-third street to Coney Island light in 5 hours and 8 minutes.

According to the chart this course in river and harbor is 16½ miles, but considering the wide detours which she made, one of which resulted in the sensational finish, she must have traversed all of the 17½ miles at which her performance is estimated.

In water so cold that it benumbed her rivals, she had for unexpected competitors two muscular women whom she defeated with ease, although one of them vied with her to the end of the course.

FOUR MEN DROWNED

Power Boat Founders In Heavy Sea Off Plum Island

Newburyport, Mass., Sept. 19.—Four men were drowned when the power boat Comfort foundered off Plum island. They are: Joseph Baker, 40 years old; William E. Fountain, 38; Perley E. Fountain, 19, and Patrick O'Brien, 38 years old.

Charles S. Fountain, father of two of the men who were drowned, saved himself by swimming ashore. John W. Walton, who, with Perley Fountain and his father, tried to swim to safety, was forced to return to the boat, and was rescued by life savers.

The party, nearly all mill operatives had left Haverhill bound for holiday, left Haverhill bound for Portsmouth. Reaching the mouth of the Merrimac river, just off Plum island point, great waves raised by a brisk northeaster were encountered and finally the boat foundered.

There is much dissatisfaction relative to the new system a certain amount of which is due to ignorance of the facts. An official of the Telephone company will be present to explain the rates and answer questions with regard to them.

The repairs on the First Presbyterian church are progressing rapidly and in a few weeks the congregation can return to a greatly enlarged and improved edifice. Rev. James A. Matheson has been assisting at the various churches about town during the past few weeks. Sunday he was at Bethany in the morning and at the Calvary Baptist in the evening. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon he met with his own congregation in the United Presbyterian church for the regular service.

ADAMS DEFEATS THE RAMBLERS

Close Game on the Ward Three Playgronnds

The Adams A. A. again defeated on Saturday the Ramblers who were claiming the amateur championship of Quincy. Murray Kerr, who pitched for Adams filled Charles Knights position so good that it would have been a credit to Knight who is now playing for the Quincys; while Rice, the Ramblers star pitcher was taken out of the box after Adam had scored three runs in one inning. M. Chapman then went in and pitched and shut out all runs until the ninth, when J. Collins made a hit, stole second, and scored on Clintons hit, winning the game.

EXTRA INNINGS AND A TIE

Copeland Club Give the Quincy Team a Surprise

The Copeland team displayed the best form of the season Saturday afternoon at the Water street grounds when they held the Old Colony League team to a tie score, 4 to 4, for 11 innings, when the game was called on account of darkness. Both teams played fast baseballt and the resul was in doubt during the entire afternoon. "Shimmer" O'Brien and Walter Troupe were on the points for the League champions and both played good ball. Manager Egan tried out his pony battery, Delory and Hebert, and their success against the league team was a revelation to the fans present.

The features of the game were the hitting of pitcher O'Brien, who turned in a single, a double and a homer, and the fieldingof Berry of the West Quincy team.

SPORTING NOTES.

Stan Bates the Makaria "kid" pitcher at the Weymouth fair grounds last Saturday again sustained his reputation as a twirler for the Deweys rubbing the goose oil into the Rocklands of the Old Colony league to the tune of 9 goose eggs and 11 strike outs. Stan has not lost a game while pitching in the Old Colony league; pretty good record for a novice in fast company.

Edward Byrnes of the Quincy High school coach, witnessed the Waltham-Providence football game of Saturday under the new rules, when the former won 56 to 0.

• • •

The best scores at the Wollaston links on Saturday in the medal play with handicaps were made by P. J. Dunkle and J. J. Daniels who were tied at 72. C. A. Price and J. E. McLaughlin were also tied at 81 for the best gross score.

• • •

The game between the McGregors and the General Electrics of Lynn which was scheduled for Saturday was postponed.

The Boston Americans defeated the Rangers 2-1.

• • •

The base ball fans are more than anxious to see that much heralded and advertised game of the first of the season between Charlie Ganzel's Makarias and the Quincys of the Old Colony league before the season closes. The game would pack the Water street grounds as never before. Will Mike keep his promise? The Makarias are ready.

• • •

John G. Anderson, the well known golfer and a former Adams Academy boy is one of the committee of four which will choose the team to represent Massachusetts in the match with Rhode Island. Anderson himself will be one of the contestants. In the recent national championship tournament Anderson was kept out of the semi-finals by W. K. Wood of Chicago the runner up in the finals.

"Ma," asked the little boy, "do you spell napkin with a 'k?'"

"Certainly not. Only knapsack."

And that is how it was that Tommy's aunt received a letter from him, in which he made mention of a "napcin."—Indianapolis Journal.

FORE RIVER VICTORY

Win By Big Score in Game with Charlestowns

It was all Fore River in the soccer game at Quincy Point on Saturday. Charlestown had a good team but they were unable to play well together, each depending on his own resources. And yet, although the score suggests a walkover, every goal was a contest, and the game was interesting if not exciting. Elliot was the most prominent figure on the field. He was in most of the plays and outshone all in dribbling the ball. Hughes and Farrell distinguished themselves in goal getting. The prettiest goal was one made by Hughes. The ball was kicked high in the air by Melville; Hughes, who was standing about five yards from the goal post, butted the ball through with his head as it came down.

Boyle played a very good game at outside right. All carried themeslves creditably, and it looks as if the cup would again be won by the Quincy team.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

FORE RIVER		CHARLESTOWN
Ridge	G	Cameron
McDonald	RB	McLey
Lewis	LB	Fairweather
Ritchie	RH	Hunt
Melville	CH	R. Daly
McGregor	LH	Groden
Boyle	OR	Dawson
Elliot	IR	Real
Hughes	C	W. Smith
Farrell	IL	S. Smith
Carruthers	OL	J. Daly

Score: Fore River, 8; Charlestown, 1. Goals—Hughes 4, Farrell 3, Elliot 1, Dawson 1. Linesmen—Hanmer and Mitchell. Referee—Lamble. Time—2 45 minute halves.

FORE RIVER FOOTBALL CLUB.

The annual general meeting of the Fore River Football club, was held in the club rooms, Friday evening, Sept. 16, there being a large turnout of members. James Frazer presided. The secretary Mr. McVicar having read the minutes of the last meeting, the president called on the financial secretary, who reported that the club was in good financial standing, having cleared off the debt from last season and had a balance on hand, notwithstanding the few games played by the team.

Mr. McVicar submitted his report showing that the team had played 11 games during the past year, having won 9, lost 1, and drawn 1, scoring 53 goals against 16 goals for their opponents. Both reports were adopted.

In addition to winning the above games, teams representing the club had during the season won the first prize medals at Caledonian grove on Labor day and on the same day at New Downer Landing won the first prize in the five-a-side competitions promoted by the Scotch Clans and the Quincy Central Labor Union. Besides getting the second medal in the competition for the Dewar Challenge Shield at the Caledonian games, where the had hard lines in losing to the Boston Americans by the odd goal.

The following office bearers were elected for the ensuing year..

Honorable president—James Gibb, Esq.
President—H. McLeod.
Vice President—J. Frazer.
Treasurer—James Roe.
Financial Secretary—H. McLachian.
Manager of team—A. J. Hamilton.
Corresponding secretary— Duncan McVicar, 660 Washington street, Quincy, to whom all communications should be addressed.

WATER STREET RAID.

Inspector Goodhue with Officers Milford, Farrell, Whalen and George McKay raided the premises of Peter Miller at 57 Water street, Sunday afternoon, about 3 o'clock. The officers found a gang of men at the premises drinking beer and there was a great hustle to get out when the officers entered. They seized two full cases of beer, two empty cases and some empty barrels. Miller was arretsed for vioaltion of the liquor law and locked up. He was arraigned in court.

QUINCY POST OFFICE.

Letters unclaimed for week ending Saturday Sept. 17:

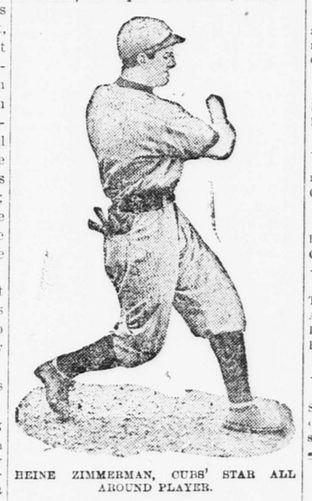

Tom Altham, Mr. Brooke, E. Beranger, Axel Bornholm, A. B. Camp, Mrs. John Crowell, Jak. Dempsey, Mrs. H. H. Dougall, Matteo Foicciruso, William F. Hart, Mrs. W. H. Hayes, Mrs. F. G. Harworth, F. ZIMMERMAN VERSATILE.

Cubs' Utility Man Has Made Good In All Positions.

All positions on a ball team look alike to Heine Zimmerman, the handy man of the Chicago Cubs. One day it is second base, the next a trial on short or third, and just by way of further demonstrating his versatile qualities the batting favorite, better known in diamond lore as "Big City," recently took a flier at the center field berth. No matter where Heine is placed, he keeps right on hitting.

Heine takes just as much pride in his fielding average as in his batting attainments. He's a nervous individual in both branches of the game. Happy in the possession of two of the greatest hands ever brought into major league ball, Zimmie, with his tremendous speed and graceful maneuvers, should on form blossom into a whale, the equal of Tinker, Wagner or Bush. But he's too anxious. This accounts for nine-tenths of the wild heaves credited to him.

It would not surprise any of the Chicago fans to hear of Zimmie drawing a permanent berth in center field before the Cubs are many summers older. Not that Artie Hofman is falling off in his work, but Chance expressed a desire to doff the role of the playing manager, and this transaction is liable to come next spring.

In the event that "Husk" retires to lead his host from the bench the skillful Mr. Hofman in all probability will be shoved over to first. Then if Zimmie shows real class in the field, cavorting between the veterans, Sheckard and Schulte, prospects are bright for Heine breaking into the picture as a full fledged regular.

The utility man is a bench warmer by trade with nine out of ten major leagues, because the regulars, as a rule, manage to keep in playing condition throughout the season. Every club must carry a corps of substitutes, and in this respect the Cubs loom up more favorably than any other club in major league society.

LONDON BOXERS HAVE FORMED A TRUST.

London boxers have formed a union. The objects of the alliance are:

To protect boxers from grafting promoters, to fix minimum scales of wages according to classes, which will be regulated by the drawing power of each boxer; to bring about the recognition of boxing as an art, and not, as some people think, a degrading pastime; to treat all classes the same, and to act as an employment bureau.

Heretofore they have been at the mercy of the managers of the boxing clubs. The boxers say the managers offer a fair sum for their work, but when they crawl out of the ring and line up at the office for their pay they find that the "fair sum" offered has dwindled from what they expect to 75 cents or a dollar.

Another feature of the idea is to insist upon competent referees being engaged by all clubs and promoters.

Thirty Day Meeting For New Orleans.

Horse racing is assured for New Orleans this winter, and the "sport of kings" will be enjoyed over the City park course for thirty days unless the plans of the jockey club go astray. No betting will be allowed, except individual betting, if the persons who visit the track wish to bet that way. No books, slates or any system will be used, so that the Locke law will not be violated in any way.

Five or six races will be run daily, and the purses will average around $200, more or less, depending on the quality of horses contending and the distance of the races. Special purses will be given for special races. It is proposed to open the local meeting on Thanksgiving day, Nov. 24, and extend the meeting over Christmas and perhaps into the new year if it proves successful.

Naps to Play Reds.

President Charles Somers of the Cleveland club recently announced that he had accepted the challenge of the Cincinnati National league club for a post season series to decide the baseball championship of Ohio. The series will probably open with two games in Cleveland, starting Oct. 10.

PARIS SMOKING PIPES.

High Price of Cigars and Cigarettes Revives Old Practice.

Pipes are again in favor in Paris. The high taxes on tobacco have been their triumph. The pipe has invaded the fashionable world, and the reason for this is the increased price of cigars, cigarettes and all high grade tobacco. The sale of the ordinary smoking tobacco for pipes sold in fivepenny packages is daily increasing.

The dealers in pipes are naturally delighted. Three times more pipes are being sold than in any previous year. The man who goes to the seaside or the mountain resorts takes a pipe with him. The pipe enters into the preparations for the shooting season, and even the college students are good customers.

France Likes Horseflesh.

The consumption of horseflesh in France, according to figures, is constantly on the increase. In Paris alone there are 600 meat shops, mainly in the poorer quarters, where horseflesh alone is sold, and the consumption now exceeds 200,000 animals a year, the price of from 10 to 13 cents a pound being a powerful argument to the poor.

Korea Well Populated.

Korea has a population of 12,363,400 natives, 143,045 Japanese and 11,791 foreigners, according to returns published by the Japanese ministry of finance.

Vol. 25 No. 219 QUINCY, MASS., TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

WILL BE AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO QUINCY'S CIVIC CENTRE.

CODDINGTON STREET SITE SELECTED

For New Norfolk County Court House to be Erected in This City

Opposite Public Library and Near Other Public Buildings

Hon. James F. Merrill, chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, informed the Daily Ledger this morning that the board had purchased a Court House site in Quincy. The location selected is the Henry M. Faxon estate on Coddington street, now occupied by Prof. Frank Wrigley, between the residence of the late Henry H. Faxon and the Coddington school, and opposite the spacious grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library. It contains nearly half an acre, having a frontage of 165 feet on Coddington street and a depth of 125 feet, being bounded in the rear by the estate of Peter B. Turner.

The purchase price was $15,000 which was for the land only, Mr. Faxon having the privilege of removing the house and buildings. As the lot contains 20,140 square feet, the purchase price was 70 cents per foot.

Chapter 477 of the Acts of the Legislature of 1910 authorized the Norfolk County Commissioners to expend $80,000 for purchase of land and erection of building, so that a balance of about $60,000 remains for the erection of the new courthouse.

The Norfolk County Commissioners are Hon. John F. Merrill of Quincy, chairman, Silas A. Stone of Sharon, and Evon F. Richardson of Millis, and their selection will be very pleasing to Quincy people, as it adds another public building to our civic centre now well established. Across Coddington street is the beautiful $150,000 Thomas Crane Public Library building, with spacious two-acre grounds, having a frontage also on Washington and Spear streets. On the Washington street front of the Public Library is the new $70,000 Federal Building occupied by the Post Office, and near by the Y. M. C. A. building and the historic Church of the Presidents (Unitarian.) City Hall is within 600 feet, but some day it may be found desirable to take the Faxon estates at the corner of Washington and Coddington streets which contain 31,625 square feet for a new City Hall. This estate adjoins the new Court House grounds, while on the east on Coddington street is the new $80,000 Coddington schoolhouse.

The city has already made an appropriation for the purchase of the small lot at the corner of Coddington and Washington streets, now owned by the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, with a view to improving this civic centre. Another estate nearby which Quincy people hope to see improved soon is tre Nightingale property at the corner of Washington and Temple streets. Perhaps it will be wanted for a Masonic Temple, Odd Fellow's Building, hotel or large business block.

The County Commissioners inform the Daily Ledger that they will go ahead immediately on the plans for the new Court House, and that the house will soon be removed, so that work on the new building may be started early in the spring. The removal of the house will greatly improve the appearance of the Coddington schoolhouse which is now hidden from view.

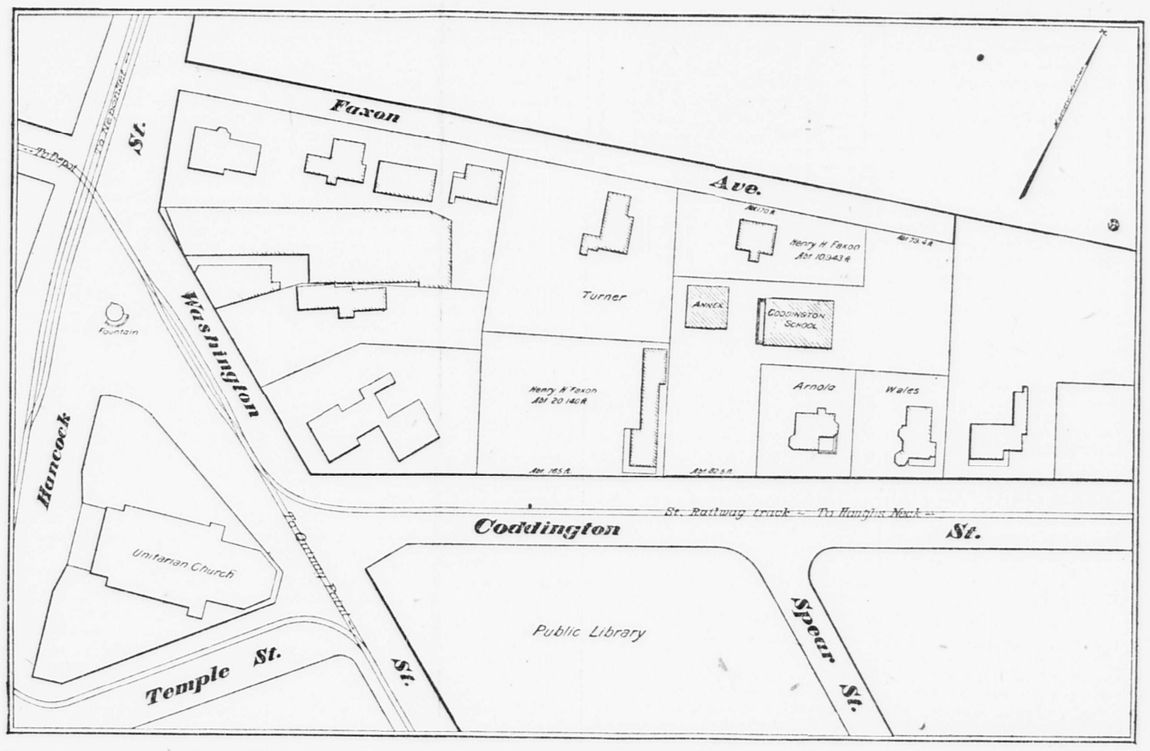

The present justice of the East Norfolk District court at Quincy is Hon. Albert E. Avery of Braintree, with E. Granville Pratt of Quincy and Louis A. Cook of Weymouth as associates. The Norfolk County Probate court also holds sessions in Quincy, and Hon. James H. Flint of Weymouth is judge. All are to be congratulated.

TODAY'S COURT.

Samuel H. Whitmore was fined $10, Joseph P. Morse $10, Fred C. French $15, and George Libby $20 for exceeding the automobile speed limit on the Quincy shore reservation during aviation week.

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCHING

Large Steel Steamer Put Over At Fore River Yard

The steel steamer Currier, built by the Fore River Ship Building Co, for the Cuba Distilling Co, of Havana, Cuba, was successfully launched this morning from the company's plant at Quincy in the presence of a large gathering of officials and friends of the Distilling Co., as well as officers of the Fore River Co., Mayor Shea and others. The sponsor for the latest product of the Fore River Co., was Miss Anne Currier of Boston, a daughter of Guy Currier, the well known Boston attorney, for whom the vessel is named. Miss Currier was attended by her sisters, Miss Sally Currier and Miss Lucy Currier.

The launching party came from Boston on a special train which arrived at the plant shortly after 11 o'clock. By this time preparations for the launch were well under way, and but little remained to be done to send her down the greased ways for her first dip in her native element. President Bowles was out of town but Manager Smith met the launching party as they left the special train, and after presenting Miss Currier with a handsome bouquet of roses escorted them to the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the steamer.

The launching stand was gayly decorated with bunting of the national colors, while suspended from her bow was a streamer of tri-colored ribbon at the end of which was a bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry, encased in a silver mesh to prevent the glass from flying when the bottle was broken.

Hardly had the party reached the launching stand when hundreds of hammers commenced to drive home the wedges which lifed the vessel from her keel onto the greased ways. Then came a shrill whistle and the tap of the hammers ceased, while the workmen below were busy knocking away the shores. This done the keel blocks were split out and all was in readiness for the final act that should send the vessel sliding down the ways.

The signal to saw away the soul piece was given, and then came the sound of the saws as they went down through the planking, the only thing which kept the vessel from sliding. With a crackling sound these were soon rent asunder and the vessel began to move. Slowly at first but rapidly gaining headway. Hardly had she started to move when smash went the bottle of wine against the steel bow, and as the sparkling liquor ran down the bow, Miss Currier, in a clear voice said, "I christen thee, Currier."

This was the signal for three cheers by the party on the launching stand, which were given with a will, their cheers being taken up by those on the ground and by the whistles at the works and on the tugs in the river. It was but a minute from the time that the vessel started down the ways before she was riding gracefully in the water. Here she was surrounded by tugs which took her to the fitting out dock, where she will receive her finishing touches.

It was just 11.45 when the steamer made her maiden plunge. She was prettily decorated with American and Cuban flags.

The launching party remained on the launching stand but a few minutes after the launch. They were then escorted to the new office building on Howard avenue where a lunch was served.

The lunches that usually follow launchings have always been served in the mould loft, but this room is now occupied with the lines of the Argentina battleship so that the lunch room was transferred to the new building which is nearly completed, and afforded the guests an opportunity to see the modern and well appointed office building.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Rev. J. M. Moore, D. D., secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Board of Education, preached at the Sunday morning service at the Wollaston Baptist church. His text was taken from (First) IChron. 12:32. "In speaking of the missionary work being done in China, Japan and Korea, Dr. Moore stated that the facilities for traveling and safety of the missionaries were never better than at the present time, and that there is still a great demand for missionaries.

The kind of men that are needed today for organizations, pastors, and for the church are those who understand the times of today, and who are not wasting their time and effort in this great epochal period. Men who can guide us in the critical hour of the work."

Dr. Moore also said that there is much mission work to be done here at home. We cannot all go to the foreign fields, but we can ever be on the alert to do something, for our Lord and Master.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The insurgents and the standpatters are contributing liberally to political harmony all right.

There is a growing disposition to let Mayor Gaynor pick out any sort of an office that he thinks would suit him.

Senator Lorimer is encountering social occasions in which there is objection to his even figuring modestly as among those present.

Sometimes the London papers score a "beat" on their American contemporaries. Tit-bits, telling a story about "Uncle Joe" Cannon tells its readers that he is "the late speaker of the American Congress."

The launching at the Fore River shipyard today was the eighth large steel vessel in 1910, and the Quincy built fleet now numbers 68. In numbers and in power it is a formidable list, for it includes four battleships, the North Dakota, Vermont, Rhode Island and New Jersey. And the greatest of them all, the battleship for Argentina is being built.

Every day Quincy is advancing. Today it is the purchase of a site for a Norfolk County Court House, which will soon add another beautiful public building to Quincy's already long list. Most of our schoolhouses are now of modern construction of brick and stone, and there are thirteen of them, including a commodious High schoolhouse. Then there are the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Federal Building, over 20 churches some built of stone, the Y. M. C. A. building, several fire stations, a new parochial schoolhouse and other buildings. But the new Court House will help to enlarge our civic centre in the vicinity of the Public Library of which Quincy is becoming proud.

CINCINNATI GRAFT HUNT

Saloonkeepers Who Refuse to Pay Tribute Say Police Hound Them

Cincinnati, Sept. 20.—Official investigation of charges of graft and favoritism in the treatment of saloonkeepers by members of the Cincinnati police department has been begun by Safety Director Small at the direction of Mayor Schwab.

Chief of Police Milliken was ordered to present charges, filed with him three months ago by James Mulligan, a saloonkeeper, in which it was asserted that the police had been attempting to break up Mulligan's business after he had paid weekly tribute for five years for the privilege of keeping open after midnight.

Other saloonists declare that when they stopped paying for gambling privileges they were repeatedly arrested, while competitors who continued to pay were not molested.

GOING AFTER GAMBLERS

New York County Grand Jury Asked to Prepare For Action

New York, Sept. 20.—The county grand jury has been requested by District Attorney Whitman to "clear the decks" for action against the gamblers. Investigation of conditions in the Tenderloin and elsewhere, regarding which Acting Mayor Mitchel recently complained in a letter to Police Commissioner Baker, is consequently expected to begin speedily.

The district attorney made the request during an interview of more than an hour with Foreman Leacroft of the grand jury. Whitman later said that he expected data upon which the grand jury could work to be put in his hands by Baker in accordance with the acting mayor's instructions to the latter.

OUTCOME OF FIGHT OVER BANKRUPTCY

Lynn Man Is Charged With Larceny of $314,403

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 20.—James T. Lennox, junior member of the bankrupt firm of Patrick Lennox & Co., was arrested last night by Deputy Sheriff Wells, charged with the larceny of $314,403.91 from John W. Farrell, Charles Well and Sumner S. Well of Boston. He was released on $50,000 bail, which was furnished by his wife and Fred E. Baker, a real estate man.

The indictment charging Lennox with larceny was returned by the grand jury at Lawrence yesterday. Twenty-five counts are numbered in it.

The indictment and arrest of Lennox is an outgrowth of the bankruptcy of the Lennox firm, which went to the wall during the panic of 1907.

In the indictment it was specifically charged that Lennox has hidden assets of the company amounting to the figure named, and a bench warrant was issued for his arrest by Judge Schofield.

ESCAPE FROM STATE FARM

Two Women Break Long Record by Fleeing In Prison Garb

Middleboro, Mass., Sept. 20.—Two women, Emma Parkman, 29, and Catherine McNulty, 41, both of Boston, escaped from the state farm at Titicut and no trace of them has been found. The police of all the surrounding cities and towns have been notified.

This is the first time in years, and the second time in the history of the farm, that women have escaped. The two women, both serving intermittent sentences for drunkenness, were at work in the kitchen. When no one was about they made their escape. Both were dressed in the regulation prison garb for women. Neither had money.

CHINAMEN IN FREIGHT CAR

Four Supposed to Have Been Smuggled Found In Holyoke

Holyoke, Mass., Sept. 20.—Four Chinamen, whom the authorities say were being smuggled into this country from Canada, were found in a freight car, well provided with food and opium, in the Boston and Maine freight yard in this city by the local police. The Chinamen were taken to the local station, where they are being held for United States officers.

The freight car in which the Chinamen were found was billed from Harnish, P. Q., and consigned to J. Drew of this city.

Drastic Measures to End Strike

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 20.—The Federation of Master Cotton Spinners decided on a general lockout on Oct. 1 unless the Fern Mill dispute at Oldham is settled before that date. In the event of a lockout 150,000 operatives will be affected directly. This action follows the refusal of the Fern mill employes to submit a local grievance to arbitration.

CHARLES R. HEIKE

Accused Official of the American Sugar Refining Company

CLEANING UP SUGAR FRAUDS

Heike's Case Is Disposed of In the Circuit Court

SENTENCE OF EIGHT MONTHS

Fine of $5000 Is Also Imposed Upon "Man Higher Up," Who Will Appeal to Higher Court—Judge Takes Defendant's Age Into Consideration, but Says He Cannot Follow Personal Inclination In Imposing Sentence

New York, Sept. 20.—Charles R. Heike, former secretary and treasurer of the American Sugar Refining company, who has been called "the man higher up" in the Sugar Trust, was sentenced by Judge Martin in the United States circuit court to serve eight months in the New York penitentiary on Blackwells Island and pay a fine of $5000 on conviction of conspiring to defraud the United States government by the underweighing of sugar.

Judge Martin granted a stay of execution of the sentence pending an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals. The court reduced Heike's bail, which had been $25,000 pending sentence since his conviction last June, to $15,000. John B. Stanchfield, Heike's counsel, gave immediate notice that an appeal would be taken.

The court's sentence of Heike is the culminating point in the federal government's prosecution of American Sugar Refining company officials and employes growing out of the extensive underweighing frauds on the Williamsburg docks of the trust, brought to light by Richard Parr's famous raid on the docks in 1907. Four weighers for the company and Oliver Spitzer, their dock boss, were convicted on the first criminal trial in connection with the frauds, and the weighers are still serving out their sentence of a year in the Blackwells Island penitentiary.

Spitzer, who was sentenced to two years in the Atlanta penitentiary, was pardoned during the trial of Heike and of Ernest W. Gerbracht, the refinery superintendent, and four minor employes of the company for conspiracy. He turned state's evidence and his testimony played an important part in the conviction of Heike, Gerbracht, and the checkers found to have been implicated in the frauds. The Sugar Trust, meanwhile, had paid the government more than $2,000,000 out of which it was shown the customs had been defrauded by the underweighing operations.

Heike first pleaded immunity, because of the testimony which he had given before the federal grand jury in another sugar trust proceeding. His plea, however, was overruled by the United States supreme court and he was tried with the other defendants.

Gerbracht was sentenced recently to two years in the Atlanta penitentiary and is to pay a fine of $5000, but it was allowed a stay pending appeal.

In imposing sentence Judge Martin said that as Heike had only been convicted on one count of the indictment charging him with aiding the conspiracy, instead of all six counts, as the other defendants had been, and taking Heike's age (66 years) and his accustomed mode of life into consideration, he would be inclined to suspend sentence altogether. But as punishment must be inflicted as an example, he could not follow his personal inclination, and therefore added the eight months' prison sentence to the $5000 fine.

New Postoffice For Beverly

Washington, Sept. 20.—Beverly is to have a new postoffice which will be in keeping with the importance the North Shore town has assumed since it became the summer capital of the United States. The treasury department has awarded the contract for a $57,000 structure.

CITY COUNCIL

Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

APPOINTMENT.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing George R. Bennett, deputy inspector Ward Six, precinct one, in place of Vernol C. Hallett declined. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Philip L. Savard a sworn weigher. Confirmed.

WATER APPROPRIATIONS.

A communication was received from the Mayor with enclosure from the Commissioner of Public Works, asking for an appropriation of $10,000 for purchase of stock and extension of the Water system. Referred to Committee on Water Supply.

A communication was received from the Mayor recommending the appropriation of $10,000 for installation of water meters. Referred to Committee on Water Supply.

NEW SIDEWALK.

A communication was received from the Mayor relative to a permanent sidewalk on Phipps street between School and Water streets and recommending an appropriation of $900 for that purpose. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Bryant offered the necessary order. Referred to Street Committee.

CLEANING BROOKS.

A communication was received from the Mayor inclosing communications from the Board of Health, one asking for an apropriation of $100 for cleaning brooks, and $350 for purchase of a new scavenger wagon. Referred to Committee on Health.

DOCTOR FOR SCHOOLS.

The second communication was in relation to a medical inspector for the public schools and requesting that action be taken regarding an increase of compensation for medical inspectors. Referred to Committee on Finance.

SEA STREET BOULEVARD.

A public hearing was held at 7.45 on the widening of Sea street between "the Willows" and Bird street to 60 feet.

Daniel Maloney, president of the Houghs Neck Associates, favored. This was the main entrance to the beach, and people should have a good street to travel over.

John Brown objected to taking his land when there was plenty of vacant land on the other side.

John Bleiler said street was wide enough for him, yet for general public he believed it should be widened.

The hearing then closed. Shortly after a large delegation of Houghs Neck people arrived, and after some conference Councilman Bryant moved that all in favor of the widening rise. The result was that 21 favored and 30 opposed.

Still later the hearing was reopened on motion of Councilman Whiton.

Henry . French and Daniel Maloney favored. There had been a misunderstanding. It was not a scheme to move the railroad tracks.

James Whall opposed. He believed if any money was expended it should be to raise the causeway. It also looked like a scheme to injure Babcock street where there was 200 houses where there were but 15 on Sea street. He was afraid people were being mislead. It looked like a collision with the street railway.

Mr. Wood opposed. Sea street was a good road today, but Babcock street was in a deplorable condition.

Mr. Phillips opposed. He wanted it so that people could get to Qiuncy. He had heard that there was a scheme to get the car tracks from Babcock street. This would greatly damage property on present location which was the growing part of the beach.

Mr. Johnson said it looked like a scheme to make Babcock street an insignificant street. Sea street should be widened, however, near the school.

Daniel Maloney said a false impression had been created. There was no plan to move the car tracks.

The hearing then closed.

PETITIONS.

The Mayor forwarded a communication enclosing a petition for the acceptance of Gilbert street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received for the repair of certain parts of Prospect avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Petitions were received from the Telephone Co., for attachments on Sumner, Prospect, Botolph, Freeman and Chubbuck streets and Upland road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petitions was received for the improvement of the sidewalk on the easterly side of Goffe street near its intersection with Granite street. Said improvement to include curbing. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Cherrington presented petitions for extension of water mains and lights at Squantum. Referred to Executive.

Councilman McDevitt presented a petition asking for the passage of the order extending Nelson street from Arthur street to Copeland street. Referrd to Committee on Streets.

A petition for the building of a culvert over the brook on Gilbert street was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Andrew J. Ericson petitioned for refund of $67 which was half the cost cost of edgestones on Cranch street. Referred to Finance Committee.

A petition was received from residents of Houghs Neck asking for a hearing on better police protection. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Branch offered an order for a public hearing Oct. 3. Adopted.

AUTO CHEMICAL.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for $5,000 for the purchase of an automobile combination wagon for the Fire department. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

SEWER EXTENSION.

On motion of Councilman Bryant, the order amending the order appropriating 10,000 for extension of the sewer system was taken from the calendar and passed.

NEW ORDERS.

Councilman Flynn offered an order for $300 for a gravel sidewalk on East Howard street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for a light on Hudson street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Bolster offered order for lights on Bennington and Franklin streets. Referred to Executive.

Coucilman Smith offered an order transferring the pool table license of J. H. Walsh. Referred to License Committee.

Councilman Nowland offered an order for a light on Edgemere road. Referred to Executive.

TAX REFUND.

On motion of Councilman Smith the report of the committee on the order refunding P. J. Murphy taxes amounting to $34.65 was taken from the table. The question was on accepting the minority report of the Finance Committee refunding the amount.

Councilman Bryant opposed. The Tax Commissioners would not allow this refund.

Councilman Smith said this was on case where land had been assessed that did not exist, and the two-year limit did not apply to this.

After some further discussion the matter was recommitted to the Finance Committee.

GAS EXTENSIONS.

A public hearing was held at 8.15 on petition of the Gas Co., for petition to extend its mains on Larry place.

Manager Nichols of the company explained that the petition was in response to requests to have mains laid. There was no opposition and the hearing closed.

Later, Councilman Bryant offered an order granting the location which was referred to the Committee on Streets.

CRESCENT STREET.

A public hearing was held at 8.30 on restricting Crescent street to light vehicles.

W. H. Teasdale favored. Teamsters have a good street in Copeland street, and the distance is about the same.

There was no opposition and the hearing closed.

WOODWARD FUND.

President Hobbs announced that in accordance with the provision of the ordinance he would appoint Councilmen Clark, Branch and Cherrington as the special committee to examine the Woodward Fund.

Adjourned at 9.13 until Monday Oct. 8.

—Mr. Halloran returned from a political meeting with his interest aroused. "here's eight nations represented in this ward of ours," he said, as he began to count them off on his fingers. "There's Irish, Frinch, Eyetalians, Poles, Germans, Rooshians, Greeks an'—" Mr. Halloran stopped and began again: "There's Irish, Frinch, Eyetalians, Poles, Germans, Rooshians, Greeks, an'—ain't it queer I don't remember the other wan? There's Irish, Frinch, —" "Maybe 'twas Americans," suggested Mrs. Halloran. "Sure, that's it," said her husband. "I couldn't think."—Boston Traveler.

CHINA WANTS A WHOLE FLEET

May Award Contract to Fore River Company

The Boston Transcript says editorially: "That foreign Governments do not share the much too common, and altogether unjustified distrust of the American shipbuilder is being made more evident every day. Argentina looked the whole world over and then decided to have her two great dreadnoughts built in the United States; China is sending hither her greatest naval expert to close a deal for a whole fleet; Chile, even though she is rather bound to England, is not yet certain that she will not give the American builder an opportunity to bid on the proposed additions to her fleet.

"In not a single instance has the fear been expressed that the shipyards of the United States are incapable of turning out the finest kind of a product. Muckrakers and defamers in general will realize sooner or later that ranking officers know whereof they speak when they say that ton for ton the American ship, design and construction considered, has no superior.

"The news that China is coming here for her new navy is particularly significant. The Oriental nation has ever been conservative in military matters. Her war prestige received a tremendous blow in the conflict with Japan; it is only lately that she has shown signs of recuperation. She sincerely intends now to revive her naval force. She plans to build modern ships and equip them with modern guns. That she looks to America for aid in this work of reconstruction must be a considerable solace to those who believe in the goodness of all things United States."

BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT.

Col. Wakefield of England, chief of staff to Bradden Powell, founder of the "Boy Scouts" of England, is to be present at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening at 7.30, when he will give an address on the movement as now being formed in America. Every man in Quincy any way interested in boys is most cordially invited. Co. Wakefield leaves Thursday for New York, where a big reception and dinner to both he and Powell will be held. The people of Quincy are most fortunate in securing such a man who is giving both time and money to this movement, and who has been with it from the start. Let us turn out and give our English friend a most cordial reception.

ATHLETICS AT WOODWARD.

A meeting of the Woodward Athletic Association was called directly after the close of school on Monday. Officers for the year were elected as follows:

President—Caroline Sprague, '11.
First Vice President— Margaret Goodspeed, '13.
Second Vice President—Mary Beal, '12.
Secretary—Helen Mitchell, '11.
Treasurer—Isidora Beal, '11.
Manager—Edith Mullen, '11.
Captain—Esther Dasha, '12.

The officers will work in connection with Miss Maccarty, the physical directress of the school.

MRS. MARY PALMER.

Mrs. Mary Palmer died Monday at the home of her daughter Mrs. James C. Mitchell of 335 Highland avenue. She had been ill over six months the last time she was out was in February to attend the consecration services of St. Chrysostoms church to which she was devoted. She was also a member of the Woman's Guild.

Mrs. Palmer was 82 years old and is survived by three sons and five daughters all of whom were present at her funeral, also seventeen grandchildren. Her sons are Charles Palmer of Manchester, N. H., Stephen Palmer of Everett, Harry Palmer of Wollaston and her daughters Misses Elizabeth and Mary Palmer, Mrs. Albert Ballentine and Mrs. Mitchell all of Wollaston and Mrs. William Black of Joliet, Ill.

The funeral services were held Wednesday at 3 o'clock, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra rector of St. Chrysostom's officiated assisted by Rev. Joseph Walther. There were many beautiful floral offerings. The interment was at Richibucto, New Brunswick.

S. OF V. SOCIAL NIGHT.

Col. A. B. Packard Camp 95 Sons of Veterans of Quincy, held their first social night of the fall season at G. A. R. hall last night. It is th e custom of the camp to devote one of its meetings each month to business the other meeting if of a social nature.

Div. Commander of Mass. George M. Tucker of Medford together with Senior Vice Commander White and Past commander Stevens were present. It being the first visit of the division commander to the camp an informal reception was held.

Commander Phillips of Post 88 G. A. R. and Mrs. George N. Gragg and staff of S. of V. Auxiliary were also present and presented the greetings and good wishes of their organizations.

George W. Gragg, aid to the commander in chief and F. R. Tirrell of Abington the division aide, also added to the speech making. Entertainment was furnished by members of the camp and with the stirring sentiments expressed and the fraternal spirit shown, it certainly was an evening of enjoyment.

That our local camp of the Sons of Vererans is in a thriving condition was shown by the number of members present, and it is the intention in the near future to have a "class initiation" when several new members will be added. The "Sons" are an order that appeals to every true American citizen, and is fast showing its strength in the assistance rendered the G. A. R. in our towns and cities, where the G. A. R. posts have shown themselves physically unable to perform their duties of love and honor to the memories of those heros both living and dead who sacrificed so much that this country might live.

Every male over 21 years of age whose father or grandfather served in the Civil war, with honor is eligible to membership in this organization, and all eligibles in Quincy are cordially invited to cooperate in the work of patriotism by joining Camp 95, S. of V.

FATHER CAREY HERE.

Rev. Michael J. Carey, C. S. P., a native of this city and a brother to Councilman William T. Carey, is visiting relatives in this city for a few days. Rev. Fr. Carey has recently been appointed to take charge of the Paulist house at Austin, Texas, and will leave for his new field of labor within a few days.

Since his ordination to the priesthood in the Paulist order, Rev. Fr. Carey has been stationed most of the time in San Francisco. He was there at the time of the disastrous earthquake which destroyed the city, and rendered valuable aid to the panic-stricken inhabitants of that part of the city where his church was located. His appointment to the head of the Texas branch of the Paulists' mission work is an unusual tribute to so young a man.

TO LIVE IN CUBA.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ira G. Ross of South Braintree will be sorry to learn of their intention to locate in Cuba in the near future. Mr. Ross is vice president of the International Fruit and Sugar Co. of Boston, and goes to Havana to fill the position of resident manager of the company. He has sold his estate on Franklin street to Miss Maria F. Ladd of Boston who with her sister will make their home there.

Mr. Ross and his wife will probably board for a time until they have an opportunity to choose a permanent residence. Mrs. Ross before leaving for her new home will go to Omaha, Nebraska, to visit her son S. H. Ross who holds a responsible position in the Bureau of Chemistry, U. S. Department of Agriculture and is chief of the Omaha laboratory.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross while sorry to leave Braintree and their large circle of friends here are looking forward with much pleasure to their life in Cuba. Mr. Ross has visited the locality before on business trips and has made many influential friends on the island. He will enter at once into the life of the people there and to his end he and his wife inend to take up the study of the Spanish language. Mr. Ross is enthusiastic over the commercial future of Cuba and has purchased a well developed plantation of about fifty acres which contains orange and grape fruit groves in full, bearing and also a tract of about ten thousand pinapples.

An attractive feature of he place is a beauiful lake in the midst of the fertile acres and abundantly stocked with fish.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross have been very actively identified with the South M. E. church during their residence in South Braintree and have been most zealous workers. Their fellow members are disconsolate over their intended departure and say that it wil lbe well nigh impossible to get along without them but unite in wishing them Godspeed.

ENGLISH ARE TO TEACH SERVANTS

Brighton Boarding House Is School of Instruction.

GERMANY'S PLAN IS FOLLOWED

Low Rates Made to Boarders Who Act as Tutors to Girls Who as Pupils Do All Housework—Karlsruhe's Experience Shows Good Results and Eventual High Wages.

The servant girl problem is beginning to worry our staid and conservative cousins over in England, and in order to help in its solution the city of Brighton has embarked upon a new venture. With the approval of the town council of Brighton there will shortly be opened in that city a school to train girls for domestic positions.

A house has been secured as a boarding house, the boarders to be teachers. The entire household work will be performed by the students under the supervision of the teachers. Girls will be sent to the house for certain periods to learn every branch of domestic work thoroughly and practically.

The institution of this school is the result of the fact that servant girls are so frequently blamed for the way in which they perform their domestic duties, when as a matter of fact the majority of them have never been properly trained.

German Model Taken.

The Brighton school will be modeled on that at Karlsruhe, in Germany, which is an excellent training school established by the Baden Women's union. At this place several women of limited means are provided with an unfurnished room, coal, light and board and attendance for from $270 a year and up, according to the size of the room. All the work of the house is performed by girls from fifteen to nineteen years of age, who pay about $90 for the privilege.

The girls must possess the necessary qualifications of a good character, a satisfactory education, etc. In cases where the girls cannot pay the tuition in full they are given some help. The tuition is not the chief end of the school, but instead it is constantly borne in mind that the school was established to train the girls to be more efficient and more valuable.

Boarders Are Mentors.

The principal meals are served in a common dining room, though the boarders may have them served in private by paying something extra. The object of the course is to fit the pupils for all round practical service, and no attempt is made to teach them anything superfluous to the sound workable understanding of the duties to be performed.

The boarders take a great interest in the students and frequently are able to get them work. The head of the house is a thoroughly practical, motherly housewife, and a pleasant home atmosphere pervades the place. A girl who has taken a course in this school is able to command a considerably higher wage than a "green" girl and also has a better chance to secure a position.

"LADY SERVANTS" HAVE CLUB

Gives Congenial Society to Londoners In Reduced Conditions.

A club for "lady servants" is soon to be opened in London. The main object of the club, according to the secretary, is to give such servants an opportunity of enjoying the social life of which their position often deprives them.

People would be astonished, she says, if they knew how many ladies have gone into domestic service in the last few years. Many of them belong to distinguished old families, and others are the daughters of doctors, clergymen and lawyers.

The chief hardship in the career of a lady who becomes a servant, it is pointed out, is the lack of congenial society, but she will be lonely no longer. In future she will spend her evenings out at the club.

The club rules permit members to invite male friends to dine at the club and enjoy a quiet rubber of bridge. Members will not be encouraged to talk shop. Bridge for small stakes may be indulged in, and country members on a visit to town will find in the club all the luxuries of a London hotel.

LAST EDWARD STAMPS RARE.

Death of King Caused Destruction of New Design.

The scarcest of all British postage stamps is the twopenny stamp of a new design which was ready for issue at the time of King Edward's death. It was not placed on sale, and the postmaster general has decided to destroy the entire stock, with the exception of a few specimens for King George's album, the British museum and the Postoffice museum at St. Martin's-le-Grand.

Canada Likes American Autos.

Vancouver, B. C., is buying American automobiles quite freely, 250 from Jan. 1 to April 15 of this year against only thirty-five to forty in all of 1909. Few European cars are sold or used there.

PRIEST NOW WANTS WIFE TO RETURN

Consolazio Failed to Get an Audience at the Vatican

Trenton, Sept. 20.—Alphonse M. Consolazio, the young Italian priest who gave up his calling to marry Miss Katherine Johann, and who later left his young bride to go to Italy to appear before the pope and take whatever punishment awaited him, has sent a letter to his wife asking her to return to him. It appears that the unfrocked priest was not successful in his attempt to gain an audience with the pope. He then wrote his young wife, professing his love for her and beseeching her to return.

Franz Johann, the girl's father, intimates that Consolazio will receive a reception, but not the kind he desires, should he try to see his wife. Mrs. Consolazio has appealed to the chancery court for an annulment of the marriage.

Alphonse Consolazio met Miss Johann in Italy two years ago. On May 24 they were married in Atlantic City. The priest subsequently was unfrocked.

The Tempter Won.

When the late Baron Nordenskjold was at Ceylon on the way home from his journey along the northern coast of Siberia he received a telegram from the Russian government asking him whether he would accept from the czar a certain decoration as an appreciation of his services to Russia. For many days the famous explorer wavered, as he was a member of Bjornsterne Bjornson's Anti-decoration club, whose members were solemnly pledged never to accept any decoration from anybody. Nordenskjold, however, could not resist the temptation, so he replied to the telegram in the affirmative. It is not hard to imagine his disappointment when, upon reaching home, a friend of his, a high official, told him the following: "The Russian government was well aware of your antagonistic views in regard to decorations and had, therefore, placed in readiness 300,000 rubles to be paid you in the event of your refusing to accept the insignia, but before paying that sum they wanted to try your firmness. Russia is certainly grateful to you for your failure to live up to your pledge."

Glass Solvent.

Hydrofluoric acid is an acid compound of hydrogen and fluorine. It may be prepared by the action of sulphuric acid upon cryolite in an appropriate apparatus made of lead or platinum. It may thus be readily obtained in a liquid form and is colorless. Its vapors are exceedingly poisonous, and the liquid itself, even when mixed with more or less water, causes severe swellings on the skin. Great care must therefore be taken in working with this acid. Hydrofluoric acid dissolves glass, forming hydrofluosilicic acid with its silica; hence its use for making etchings on glass.—Exchange.

EXPLOSION ON TUGBOAT

Steam Scalds One Man to Death and Another May Die

Boston, Sept. 20.—Ralph Spinney, aged 32, was scalded to death, and Axel Anderson, aged 37, was scalded probably fatally when the main joint of a steam pipe leading from the boiler on the tugboat Vigilant blew out in the harbor near the Graves.

A torrent of scalding water spurted squarely into the men's faces. Spinney inhaled some of the steam and the internal burns caused his death. Anderson has a slight chance of recovery.

Both were deck hands on the Vigilant, which was engaged in towing a dredger. How the joint blew open has not yet been determined.

—A "tipless" hotel is to be opened in New York city for women exclusively and its establishment is due to the activity of Miss Virginia Potter, niece of the late Bishop Potter; Mrs. Henry Ollsheimer and several other influential women. Any employee found accepting a tip in the hotel, which is to be known as the Working Girls' Home, will have to look elsewhere for a job. Room and board may be had from $3.50 to $6 a week.

OVERTAXED

Hundreds of Quincy Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and pains—
Backache, sideache, headache.
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Quincy citizen tells here the way to keep the kidneys well.

Mrs. George McDonald, 123 1-2 Quincy Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have more faith in Doan's Kidney Pills than in any other remedy I have ever known of and it gives me great pleasure to publicly recommend them. For at least six months I was feeling all out of sorts as the result of kidney trouble. I became tired easily and had but little strength or energy to do my housework. Pains through the small of my back annoyed me a great deal. A friend, knowing of my condition, advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug store. A short time after beginning their use, I was helped and I now feel like a different person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood." Chas. E. Condon, Lewiston, Pa., (Mifflin Co.)

BRIEFS

The weather is considerable warmer today than Monday, when top coats did not feel uncomfortable.

The Registrars of Voters will meet in the City Council chamber Thursday evening to add names to the voting lists.

F. H. Crane Sons have found it necessary to build an extensive addition to their hay sheds at Quincy Adams.

Dick Simmons is back at Walsh's Water street drug store after a very pleasant vacation in the vicinity of New York city.

A grocery store has been opened in the Pinel block on Water street, making a decided improvement in the appearance of things.

Miss Laura Frazier of Adams street entertained Misses Helen Connor of Quincy and Mary Leahy of Waltham on Saturday and Sunday.

Alfred Hanson of 420 Granite street is entertaining his friend Harold Lundquist of Jamestown, N. Y., who is on his way home from a three months' trip in Europe.

H. Everett Crane and wife started this week on a two weeks' auto trip. They went first to Concord, N. H. The route from there will be determined only by the laws of chance.

Rev. J. W. Fogeline of New Sweden, Maine, preached at the Swedish Baptist church Sunday morning and gave a very able sermon. In the evening, Dr. J. W. Stenger, a recently appointed medical missionary, gave an address on missions. Mr. Stenger is on his way to Sonth India where he will take up his chosen work.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

(Started Sept. 14.)

After which they were gone, rejoicing in their new found strength, yet reaching the nearest barracks only after a severe struggle and, later still, the crowded, suffocating guardroom, where now some thirty men were huddled in a space intended for twenty at most, where Cassidy and No. 5 were speedily telling to eager, appreciative ears their unusual and rejoiceful experience.

"Well, ain't he the dandy lieutenant, though?" queried Casey of F troop. "And did he give you yer new cap, too, Quinlan? Sure the wan you marched on wid had the mange!"

Cassidy snatched it from his comrade's head. "Mother av Moses! If he hasn't lifted the lieutenant's"— But he broke off short. One glance he had given the band within. There was an instant of indecision, then he whipped his own cap from his head and thrust it on Quinlan.

"I'm a liar," he said. "It's me own he's had."

"Then you wear two sizes, Jim Cassidy, an' both different." Quinlan had pulled the headpiece down and was staring in at the soft lining. "What's this?" he began, when the corporal's fingers closed like a vise on his arm.

"Shut up, Quinlan! The whisky's gone to yer noddle. Come here!" And Cassidy led him, wondering, to the barred corridor without and slammed the door behind them. "Not a word do you whisper of this to any man, Pat Quinlan," said he, never relaxing his grasp.

"God helps those who help themselves," quoth Lieutenant Blake on hearing of the incident at Lanier's quarters, "but God help those who help other fellows, unless the old man likes it." Blake was but a casual at Fort Cushing at the moment, summoned thither as a witness before a general court martial then in session, but there was nothing casual in his friendship for Bob Lanier. Two years' campaigning in Arizona and one in Wyoming had made these subalterns fast friends. Blake was no pet of the post commander. Blake had a way of saying satirical things of seniors whom he did not fancy, and Button was one of these.

About the only officer not to put in an appearance in the club room at the store the next morning, out of doors, afoot, in saddle or adrift in snow, was Lieutenant Lanier. About the first officer Button wished to see was Bob and about the last was Blake. Yet such was the freakishness of fate that the first man to hail him, with ill time jocularity, was Blake, and the last of his officers whom he was destined that day to set eyes on was Bob Lanier.

If it had not been for the startling announcement about the paymaster Colonel Button would have fought that matter out with the doctor then and there. First, however, he had to send forth his mounted men by scores in search of the missing officer and party. This done, he had once more summoned Schuchardt. Then he sent for Ennis and had what they termed a "redhot row."

In his exasperated frame of mind Button had been ready to believe almost any story at the expense of Lanier, and—such is the perversity of human nature—it added to rather than diminished his wrath that his revered senior surgeon should promptly corroborate the statements of both Schuchardt and Ennis and further assume personal and entire responsibility for the episode of Saturday afternoon in Lanier's quarters. That episode had started many a tongue, and one of Button's henchmen, thinking to win favor at the fountain head by mention of new iniquity on the part of the culprit, had deftly enlarged upon it. Snaille, of course, was the fellow at fault, and he justified it on the plea that Lanier was demoralizing two men of his troop. The story he told was that Lanier had been carousing at his quarters with certain enlisted members of the guard.

Nor had Sumter himself much time for domestic duties before the order came for him and his troop to turn out to aid in the search.

Mrs. Sumter had not half finished what she had to say concerning Miriam when the summons came that called the captain forth to join the searching squadron, but he had heard enough to increase the anxiety in his fine, soldierly face. He went up with Mrs. Sumter and looked critically over the damage to the window in what had been Miriam's room. She had moved per force to the front—to Katherine's—room Saturday night, for toward sunset the storm sash was torn out of the north dormer, and the window blew in with a crash.

It was easy to see how and why the storm sash had failed to withstand the buffeting. In his frantic haste and panicky flight the intruder of Friday night had wrenched a hinge from its fastening. The sash had sagged at the windward end, and the rest was easy for rude Boreas.

"That sash is probably somewhere down in the back yard, sergeant," Sumter quietly remarked to faithful Kennedy. "It's under fifteen feet of snow, but when it comes to tunneling look after it, see that it isn't injured, and call me as soon as you find it."

Mrs. Sumter knew the reason of his instructions.

It must have been after 12, for orderly call and mess had sounded in front of the adjutant's office when one of the hospital attendants came floundering up the row from Lanier's and made his way to Sumter's door, a little note in his hand. Mrs. Sumter answered the maid's knock at the door of Miss Kate's room, into which the damsels were now doubled. To the disappointment of that somewhat volatile domestic Mrs. Sumter closed the portal before proceeding to open the missive, but her announcement, "From Mr. Lanier," caused Miriam Arnold to sit bolt upright. It read:

Dear Mrs. Sumter—I've been living since Saturday mainly on your kindness and that delicious fruit. It was more than good of you to take such care of your incarcerated sub, and I'm ashamed to have sent no earlier thanks, but we've been banked in until this morning. I reckon they'll find the paymaster's outfit snowed under somewhere down toward Nebraska, safe, but possibly starving. I'm all alone with nothing to read. If you have anything moral, instructive and guaranteed to soften the unrepentant sinner's heart don't send it, but tell me how you all stood the storm. I hope Miss Arnold is entirely recovered. Yours, most sincerely,

R. R. LANIER.

"The last thing a man mentions in a note is the first thing he wants answered," said Mrs. Sumter sagely. "What shall I tell him for you, Miriam?"

"Tell me what is to be done to him," was the sole reply as the girl settled back dejectedly upon the pillows.

"I've tried to, child," answered her hostess kindly, patiently. "There isn't a court in the army that would sentence him to more than a brief confinement to limits and reprimand." Yet Mrs. Sumter spoke with much less confidence than on Saturday. Had not her husband had to tell her his application for leave was withdrawn, and why? Had not Dr. Larrabee admitted to her that the colonel spoke of misdeeds far more serious for which Lanier must suffer?

CHAPTER IV.

EVEN as Mrs. Sumter strove to assure Miss Arnold that a military arrest was far more portentous in sound that in effect, something in Kate's determined silence and Miriam's insistence added to the effect of these rumors.

Then another thing weighed heavily upon the brave heart of this loving friend and mother. Never had she known her child to be so silent, so strange, as now. Ever since Friday night she seemed to avoid all mention of the affair, to shrink from the subject—she who had ever been frankness itself, she who had never had a thought the mother did not share. She seemed oppressed with some secret.

But why should the situation so strangely affect her daughter? Could it be that she, too, cared for Bob Lanier?

She was writing her reply to his note when Maggie again appeared. "Two gentlemen to see the captain, mum," and Mrs. Sumter hurriedly closed the note and went below stairs to meet them. She knew well who they were and why they had come. A branch office of the Rocky Mountain Detective agency had been maintained long months at the great and growing railway station. They had been summoned by her husband, and that was enough.

They asked to be shown the room, with the storm battered dormer, by this time emptied of its load of snow. They asked to see Miriam's desk. They smiled at the idea of the paymaster being held up and robbed in broad daylight by any gang in their neighborhood.

While they were yet at their work there came sounds of stamping feet at the front door, and in came Sumter, stiff from cold, but brimful of energy.

"Found Scott and his clerk, at least," he cried. "Most dead and half frozen! The driver's gone, I fear. He was blown or pitched off. The mules ran away before the gale. Those inside the ambulance were helpless. Two dropped off behind and are lost. The thing finally capsized and went to pieces, and they managed to reach a little cattle shack two miles south of town. They've found Lanier's striker, too—what's left of him."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Jolt.

A middle aged matron addressed a middle aged woman who sat next to her in the street car, whom she thought she recognized as an acquaintance of her girlhood. "Pardon me," she said, "but wasn't your maiden name Blank?"

"It is," was the icy reply.—New York Sun.

FROM HEAD OF BELLE ELMORE

Lock of Hair Identified by Woman at Crippen Inquest

ACTRESS' CHUM TESTIFIES

Says Doctor's Wife Had Undergone Operation In 1909—Miss Leneve Agreed to Marry Crippen as Soon as He Secured Divorce—Was Under Strain While Waiting For Mrs. Crippen's Expected Elopement

London, Sept. 20.—Another blow was given to Dr. H. H. Crippen's hope for liberty when the wife of Dr. T. H. Burroughs, Crippen's closest friend in London, identified a lock of hair, which was disinterred with portions of the human body in the cellar of the Crippen Hilldrop Crescent home, as being from the head of Belle Elmore, as Mrs. Crippen was known on the stage.

This identification was made at the resumption of the Crippen inquest before Coroner Schroeder and it was indicated that it would be strongly used by the crown at the resumption of the murder trial.

Mrs. Eugene Stratton, a chum of Mrs. Crippen's and a fellow-member of the Music Hall guild, who assisted materially in clearing up the mystery in London, took the stand and testified that Mrs. Crippen told her she had undergone an operation in March, 1909. It was Mrs. Stratton who kept up interest in the search for Mrs. Crippen which finally led to the arrest of the American doctor.

"That is surely from the head of Crippen's most kind wife," exclaimed Mrs. Burroughs, when shown the strand of hair. The lock of hair will likely be introduced in evidence against Crippen later in court.

That a marriage agreement existed between Crippen and Miss Leneve was shown by the testimony of Mrs. Jackman, at whose home Miss Leneve lived for a time after she secured a position in Crippen's office. The witness said that Miss Leneve confided to her that Mrs. Crippen had threatened to elope to America with a man. Miss Leneve, according to the witness, had been told so by Crippen. Miss Leneve then told Mrs. Jackman that she loved Crippen and had consented to marry him as soon as his first wife eloped and he could secure a divorce.

Mrs. Jackman testified that Miss Leneve was under a terrible strain while waiting for Mrs. Crippen to elope. Almost every morning she descended to the breakfast table with her eyes red and swollen from weeping.

Following Mrs. Jackman's testimony, some of which was of dramatic quality, the inquest was adjourned until Sept. 25. Barrister Newton said that he would not put Crippen nor Miss Leneve on the stand when the inquest was resumed nor any other witnesses.

TAFT PROMISES HIS SUPPORT

Roosevelt Needs It In the Empire State Contest

IMPORTANT POLITICAL TALK

Former President Invites Chief Executive to Conference at New Haven, but Question of Presidency In 1912 Is Not Discussed—Taft Willing to Run If He Thinks People Want Him, but Not Otherwise

Albany, Sept. 20.—Although the meeting of President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt at New Haven was apparently successful in its "scenic effect," and something in the nature of a truce has been arranged regarding the New York situation, each will go his own way, after the Empire State campaign is over.

Mr. Roosevelt is said to have let drop the hint that, as to his side of the matter, "something will be doing" after the elections.

President Taft and Roosevelt met yesterday for the second time since the former president's return from Africa. Roosevelt sought the conference with the president. It was plain from all that happened before and after the meeting that Roosevelt and his close political advisers are not a little worried over the situation in New York state, and came to the president for further evidence of his moral support.

This the president was glad to give. He said his position in the New York state fight had been clear from the very first. He said he sympathized heartily with the fight against "bossism."

Mr. Taft reiterated the statements he made in his letter to Lloyd C. Griscom at the time of the Sherman-Roosevelt controversy over the temporary chairmanship. This letter, he added, stated his position fully and accurately and he was standing on it absolutely.

President Taft and Roosevelt did not discuss the question of the presidency in 1912. The president has not been advised as to what Roosevelt's attitude is toward that campaign. From sources close to the president it was learned there was no occasion to discuss this subject. Taft's position is this:

He is willing to run if nominated. If his friends think there is a good chance for him to be re-elected, Taft feels that they will see to his nomination, which cannot be prevented even by Roosevelt. If the people do not appear to want him, Taft will be only too glad to submit to their decision.

It can be said that Tuesday's meeting, while it was of moral advantage to the Roosevelt leaders in New York state, was absolutely barren of results as to any better understanding between the president and Roosevelt as to national issues or their personal relations in view of many recent events.

Mr. Taft is entirely satisfied with the position he has taken. He is not out hunting for delegates or indorsements for renomination. Even the thought that Roosevelt may be in the fight against him does not appear to disturb the president in the least degree. He feels every man is at liberty to do as he pleases, Roosevelt among the rest.

There is no doubt, however, that the shadow of 1912 hung over Tuesday's gathering. There was not the cordiality of old between the president and the colonel. It was the first time they had met since the story was given out at Oyster Bay that Roosevelt felt Taft "double crossed" him in New York and had "sold out to the bosses" there in return for a pledge of delegates in 1912. The president felt the injustice of that story keenly, it is said, and as a result of it the relations between him and Roosevelt can never be the same again.

It came out at the conference, which, in addition to the president and Roosevelt, included Lloyd C. Griscom, Otto Bernard and Secretary Norton, that the Taft administration is to be indorsed at Saratoga. No mention of Taft as a candidate in 1912 will be made.

REMAINS AS PREMIER

Botha Will Not Lose Office Despite His Defeat In Election

Pretoria, South Africa, Sept. 20.—General Louis Botha of Boer war fame will continue as premier of the union of South Africa, according to an official announcement.

This decision has been arrived at notwithstanding losses sustained by the Nationalists in the recent election to the federal assembly and his own defeat by Sir Percy Fitzpatrick.

Gaynor Saves Money For City

New York, Sept. 20.—Economies in the municipal budget under the administration of Mayor Gaynor continue to crop out of reports made by heads of departments and subsidiary bureaus. Supervisor Ferguson of the city record announces that a saving estimated at between $175,000 and $190,000 will be made this year in the publication of the record.

SHRINKS TO $3,000,000

Wyman Fortune For Princeton Not So Large as at First Supposed

Salem, Mass., Sept. 20.—A considerable dwindling in the value of the estate which Isaac C. Wyman of this city left to Princeton university for the founding of a graduate school was apparently indicated in the inventory of his real estate holdings in Masaachusetts and of all his personal property which was filed in the probate court here.

The total mentioned in the inventory is but $859,801, and, while extensive real estate holdings of Wyman in many other estates must be added to this, it is believed now the aggregate will fall much below $3,000,000.

At one time it was believed Princeton would receive as much as $10,000,000 from its alumnus, but later estimates seemed to fix the estates at about $3,000,000.

NOT A PROFITABLE JOB

O'Rourke Will Prove Methods Practicable In Raising the Maine

Havana, Sept. 20.—After inspecting the wreck of the Maine, J. F. O'Rourke, president of the O'Rourke Engineering and Contracting company, said:

"I found the Maine to be in the condition I had anticipated. Had I, upon inspection, discovered three times as many difficulties as I suspected, I would tackle the job with just as much energy and confidence.

"This undertaking, as I have told President Taft, will not come off a profitable one for me, and I don't really want it solely for the sake of the business. It is my earnest wish to prove that my methods are the most practicable as well as to gratify a patriotic impulse."

KNEELING AT WORK WHEN DEATH CAME

Heath Killed by Shot From Revolver of Mrs. Dodge

Lunenburg, Vt., Sept. 20.—It was definitely established at an autopsy that William Heath, the painter found shot to death in the bedroom of Mrs. J. M. Dodge, Saturday, was murdered.

He was slain with a revolver which belonged to Mrs. Dodge and the weapon had been taken from a drawer in the bureau standing in the front hall.

The man had been shot through the back, taken wholly unawares, as the direction of the shot and the wound show that the man was kneeling down busy at his work when he met his death.

Two other bullets were fired and these have been found imbedded in the room. From the three the authorities expect to tell the direction from whence the shots came.

Mrs. Dodge, the rich widow, who owns the house and who was, so far as known, the only person about the place when Heath was killed, is under arrest, guarded by two constables in her own home, the scene of the tragedy.

FIFTEEN SHOTS EXCHANGED

Policeman Has a Running Fight With Brace of Yeggmen

Lexington, Mass., Sept. 20.—Policemen from Lexington, Arlington and Waltham are scouring the roads in this vicinity in search of two yeggmen, who, surprised by Patrolman Maguire of the Lexington force while rifling a building, fired six shots at the officer, wounding him in the leg, in a running fight.

Fifteen shots in all were exchanged between the patrolman and the yeggs, of which number Maguire fired nine and the two burglars six.

The fact that they did not respond to the last five shots of Officer Maguire is taken by Chief Franks to indicate that they were out of ammunition.

HEAVY SEIZURE OF CLAMS

Two Hundred Dozen Cans Held to Be Improperly Labelled

Boston, Sept. 20.—United States Marshal Ruhl seized 200 dozen cans of what were labelled "Little Neck Clams, Extra Quality," libelling the entire shipment, which was on the property of steamship and railway companies.

The goods were consigned to a Boston wholesale grocery concern from Lawry, Me. The government contends that the goods are not of the variety stated on the label.

Honors For War Aviators

Paris, Sept. 20.—General Brun, minister of war, announces that the aeronauts who took part in the army maneuvers will receive special recompense for their services. Those on the active list will be promoted, while the reservists, Latham and Brequet, will be given the Legion of Honor.

Lightning Hits New Clay Statue

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 20.—Lightning struck the statue of Henry Clay in the Lexington cemetery, shattering an arm and leg of the figure. The memorial was unveiled in July and took the place of a similar monument which was struck by lightning in July, 1903.

SPANISH ARMADA BULLION SOUGHT

Scientific Search Made Off Scottish West Coast.

PRIZE'S VALUE $37,500,000.

Mull Islanders Thrilled by Operations of "Pieces of Eight" Syndicate of London—Diver Gets Weapons and Naval Articles, but Jewels and Gold Are Still to Be Found.

Tobermory, a popular summer resort on the island of Mull, off the west coast of Scotland, is having the time of its life.

The transient population, which is almost boosting the roofs off the hotels and boarding houses, has its attention centered on the diving operations which have for their object the fishing up of bullion estimated to be of a gross value of $37,500,000 and supposed to have gone down in the Spanish armada treasure ship Florencia, known in historical records as the "high gallery decked Tuscany galleon," which sank during a terrific storm in Tobermory bay just 322 years ago.

William Fitzgerald, submarine engineer and inventor of London, and Lieutenant Colonel M. K. Foss, also of London, who is superintending the quest on behalf of the "Pieces of Eight syndicate," are the magicians after the ideal of the sightseeing visitors.

One of Famous Armada.

Scattered by the shot, the fire ships and the merciless tactics of Drake and Hawkins and their men in the Dover strait, the Florencia was one of the 150 Spanish war vessels that were driven to the "inhospitable and insolent north." Then, caught in that hurricane which Philip II. called the "contention of God," the galleon with all her wealth of guns, treasure and humanity went to the bottom of Tobermory bay.

Periodical attempts, more or less successful, have been made to locate the treasure ship, and the local relators of history and prophets of past days have conspired to invest the sunken galleon with fabulous wealth.

But if Mr. Fitzgerald, assisted by a daring diver of the name of Daniel Mackenzie, doesn't bring up the loot this time it will not be for want of method. As a matter of fact, by the time that the six months at his disposal for the search have expired the area within which the 1,000 ton galleon of the armada is thought to be resting will be a honeycomb of perforations to a depth of eighteen feet in the bed of the bay.

Spanish Relics Found.

Diver Mackenzie has been right on the job from the moment he donned the submarine helmet and first dropped down below the surface of the briny within a hundred feet of the steamboat pier. A series of preliminary dives yielded this harvest:

First Dive—Small sword, much corroded, in wooden scabbard; several iron articles.

Third Dive—Stock of one of a ship's anchors.

While similar interesting relics, including powderhorns and hawse pipes and incrusted sword blades, have been dragged ashore daily with which to feast the eyes of natives and visitors alike wild stories have fluttered about. Rumor had it one day that "Mac" had fished in the gold chest of the unfortunate Marquis of Sidonia, instead of which it was only a porcelain ointment pot incased in metal.

Then it got noised abroad that an admiral's sword flashing with rubies and diamonds had been brought to the surface. Great race by the populace, transient and native, to the shore front. "Mac's" find was but an ordinary bayonet incased in a wooden sheath.

So Tobermory still is waiting for a glimpse of the lockers of Spanish gold.

ROYAL HEIRS DRESS SELVES.

Queen Mary Inculcates Feeling of Independence In Children.

Queen Mary of England dislikes children to be pampered and petted to the extent of spoiling, and she has seen to it that her own children shall not suffer in this respect. She has been a Spartan mother and has insisted that they shall cultivate a spirit of independence.

As soon as their small fingers can wrestle with tapes and buttons the youngsters are made to dress themselves. Princess Mary now has a maid of her own, but the maid was not allowed until the small lady had mastered the art of managing without help.

Oil In New Brunswick.

An English company which has been drilling for oil in New Brunswick province, Canada, found large quantities of gas at about 1,000 feet. Three wells, with a reported supply of 7,000,000 cubic feet a day, have been capped till pipes can be laid to Moncton, twelve miles distant. It is also to be piped to St. John, where $1.75 a thousand cubic feet is now charged for artificial gas.

HOUSEHOLD RECEIPTS.

Egg Soup. Beat three eggs until light ,then add one-half cupful of thick, sweet cream, and one cupful of milk, pour over this two quarts of boiling water, set on the fire until it comes to a boil, season to taste, then pour over broken bread in the tureen, and serve.

Bean Cutlets. It is often hard to find ways of using the left-over beans. We like this method. They are nice for lunch or breakfast. Press two cupfuls of cold baked beans through a sieve, season to taste with salt and pepper, add one beaten egg. This blends the mass. Form into cutlet shapes, roll in beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs and fry brown in hot fat, or just roll in flour or meal and fry brown. A nice addition is to pour a tablespoonful tomato sauce over each cutlet as served.

Chocolate Loaf Cake. Cream one cup of butter, add two and one-half cups of sugar and beat to a cream. Beat the yolks of five eggs light, add to the butter and sugar, with one cup of milk and three cups of flour in which four level teaspoons of baking powder have been sifted, the stiffly beaten whites of five eggs and two teaspoons of vanilla flavoring and two squares of chocolate melted. Bake in a moderate oven.

Fried Corn. Cut the corn off the cob, leaving the grains as separate as possible. Fry in just enough butter to keep it from sticking to the pan, stirring very often. When nicely browned add salt and pepper and a little rich cream. Do not set near the fire after adding the cream.

INCUBATOR BABIES DIE

Doctor and Wife Who Exhibited Them at Fair Are Arrested

Louisville, Sept. 20.—Dr. Douglass Snyder and wife of Pittsburg, who were arrested after the death of three incubator babies at the state fair here, have been released on $500 bonds. The three tiny victims were buried in Cave Hill cemetery at the expense of the doctor.

The physician and his wife were arrested on warrants, sworn out by County Attorney Bullitt, charging "unmerciful exposure of a child" and "exhibiting for gain or reward an infant under 6 years of age."

"Mother Power" Is Needed

Newport, R. I., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the venerable authoress, spoke for nearly half an hour here on "The Increased Opportunities for Women to Render Public Service," before the Civic League of Newport. Mrs. Howe, who is 91 years old, showed no signs of fatigue as she concluded her remarks. She said that "mother power" is the force needed in the world today.

Many Violent Deaths In Hub

Boston, Sept. 20.—Fifty violent deaths is Boston's record for the past forty-nine days. This was disclosed when the homicide bureau began to prepare the evidence for the inquests that will be held Friday.

BRIEFS

The special committee of the City Council financial investigation will meet tonight.

Walter P. Pinel of 71 Franklin street left Quincy Monday for a week's stay in New York city.

Among the ladies who are attending the W. R. C. encampment at Atlantic City are Mrs. Joseph W. Hayden and Mrs. Alexander M. Smith.

Albert H. Briggs and family of 231 South Central avenue returned from Scituate on Monday where they have been spending the summer months.

Rev. Hjelpe president of the Swedish Congregational churches in the United States, gave an address Monday evening at the Swedish Congregational church.

Ex-Governor Burleigh of Maine and family were in Quincy on Monday and paid a visit to the President Adams birthplaces. They were very much pleased and promised to come again soon.

The reception to Miss Alice E. Webb and Guy Herbert Cole, which was to be held directly after their marriage, Wednesday evening, is to be postponed on account of illness in the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ccavo (nee Mantia) of South Walnut street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a little daughter who arrived Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Scavo was one of the June brides of last year.

The high wind Monday caused a number of boats in Quincy bay to break their moorings. Several of the smaller boats came ashore including the power boat Tululu which went high and dry and gave the yachtsmen a hard job to get her off.

The "Thelma Girls" will hold a special meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Anna Gilcoine of Sumner street. Arrangements will be made for their first dancing party which will probably be held the latter part of October.

GAS AT NINETY CENTS.

The Malden Evening News says: "The announcement in our news columns today that the Malden and Melrose Gas Light Company is soon to reduce the price of gas to 95 cents and later to 90 cents is characteristic of this progressive company. This reduction comes of the management's own volition, without the usual nagging and pushing which was necessary to get the old management to come to time. The Tenney interests have developed the properties under their control with fine business capacity and an appreciation of the public's needs. They have found what too few public service corporations realize that to be successful they must first care for the people's interests and be fair to them. The success of such companies is gratifying to customers as well as stockholders.

CUP NIGHT OF THE Q. Y. C.

Banner Year for Trophies in Big Contests

The Quincy Yacht club is planning for a grand wind up of what has been the most successful season the club has ever known. The celebration which will be held Sept. 29 will include a banquet, to be followed by the presentation of six cups and three championship pennants that have been captured by Quincy yachts the present season.

The most interesting of the cups is the President Taft cup which was won by Charlie Adams with the Harpoon in the Spanish-American match at Marblehead.

Then there was the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge cup, which was raced for in Hull bay, and brought home by Charlie Adams with the Harpoon. This is not the first time that ex-Mayor Adams has brought the cup home from its temporary custodian, for in 1908 with the Manchester II he won in the series held at Marblehead. In 1909 he defended the cup in Quincy waters with the Crooner, but she not fast enough, and the trophy was captured by the Boston club.

In the club's catboat class, every trophy and pennant for this season, including the Interbay cup, was won by some yacht of the Quincy club. The interbay cup, more familiarly known as the Thomas Fleming Day cup, raced for in Narraganset bay, was captured by Rear Commander F. F. Crane's Iris, and W. W. Arnold's Dolly III.

The Dolly also brought back from Narragansett bay the catboat championship pennant, while the Iris won the special cup offered by the Edgewood club for a special race between yachts of visiting clubs.

The Dolly also gets the Y. R. A. of M. championship pennant in Class D, and the Corinthian midsummer series cup was captured by Edgar W. Emery with the Mudjekeewis.

The Interstate 18-foot class raced for mornings in the Corinthian midsummer series was captured by a yacht enrolled in the Quincy club.

Last, but not least, comes the Dorchen II, owned by Albert W. Finlay, which also won the cup at Marblehead in her class.

MARRIED SIXTY-THREE YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. James Frank Glover of 515 Middle street, Braintree, observed their 63d anniversary on Monday. Probably this is the oldest married couple in this vicinity if not in the state.

Mr. Glover formerly resided in Quincy, which was his birthplace His wife is a native of Weymouth. Both Mr. and Mrs. Glover are in good health and age seems to deal gently with them. The husband is nearly 91 but despite his extreme age busies himself about the grounds, cultivating his own vegetables and flowers.

George B. Glover ,a resident of Quincy, is their only son. The old people live with their daughter, Mrs. Jennie F. Hawes. Mr. Glover has always been a man of temperate habits and to that fact is attributed his long life and good health.

LAUNCHING

After the lunch, General Manager H. G. Smith welcomed the guests in a few words. He expressed his regret at the unavoidable absence of President Bowles, and said it was a pleasure to see so many present. He hoped that this would be the first of a large fleet of similar vessels and was also pleased that she bore the name of so distinguished a gentleman. He then called upon Mayor Shea to extend the welcome of the city.

The Mayor said Quincy was always glad to have such a distinguished company in the city. We have our airships at Atlantic. Here you have your warships, and at City Hall we have our hardships. It was a pleasure to see the ship bear the name of Currier, and if she only makes as good a record as he has done, there is no doubt of her success.

General Manager Smith then proposed the health of the sponsor, Miss Currier, which was followed by three cheers and a tiger for the fair sponsor.

Guy Currier for whom the ship was named was glad and proud to have a namesake in this ship. She was not a battleship, but a merchant ship. Let us hope that she is but the fore runner of similar craft whose American cargoes, are in American bottoms, flying American flags, and manned by Yankee seamen which will enter all ports of the world.

Other brief remarks were made by Nelson B. Mayer, General manager of the Cuban Company.

LOCAL SPORTS.

The Free Lance of Westville, N. S., in its issue of Sept. 15, says: "Messrs. Jimmy Michael and Walter Troupe left for Quincy, Mass., on Tuesday, after spending the holiday season in town. They are both good fellows and made many friends in these parts. As ball players they are experts, and the fact that Westville did so well in the County League series is in no small measure due to their efforts to that end. Messrs. Michael and Troupe are especially worthy of commendation in this respect that they took the best of care of themselves, led clean lives and proved themselves "sports" in the true sense of the word. This may be a back-handed compliment but the point we desire to make is the fact that Jimmy and Walter played the game, and at the same time eschewed booze and kindred evils.. They were 'bounced' at the depot before the train pulled out and were the recipients of some gifts from admirers as well."

Death Was a Live One.

While on the way to the race track in New Orleans one day several winters ago an undertaker named Mr. Dooley passed a funeral procession on its way to the cemetery. Dooley had a friend with him, another Irishman, who exclaimed, "Sure, death always wins," There happened to be a horse entered that day named Death, and he won with ridiculous ease. Dooley winning a good bet on him. Dooley told all his friends of the incident, and they all went out to the course the next time Death was entered. He won every time he started for thirteen races. It was near getaway day, when every one was packing up ready to take the last train for New York. The horse was sold that afternoon at an auction sale, and the buyer was Mr. Dooley. He hitched him a month later to a hearse, and the horse became frightened and ran away and was not stopped until the graveyard was reached. After the burial Dooley had the horse shot and buried near the cemetery. "You're a dead one now, Death," said Dooley, "but a live one in those thirteen races."—Baltimore American.

DISMAL CITIES MADE CENTERS OF BEAUTY.

Kansas City, Memphis and Syracuse Among Kessler's Handiwork.

Soon after George E. Kessler was born in Germany in 1862 his parents noticed that a handful of posies amused him more effectively than anything else. That discovery was significant. The family came to this country in 1885, and young Kessler was educated in the New York public schools.

Then he went back to Europe for a special course in engineering, forestry and botany. When he returned to the United States he headed for Kansas City, where he announced that he was able to make a boulevard out of a dump heap.

That was in 1892. Now Kansas City has thirty-eight miles of boulevards and 500 acres of parks. The cost was $9,000,000, but Kansas City is glad she spent the money.

Mr. Kessler is a landscape architect, but his field is that of cities and not that of isolated residences or a once in awhile cemetery. In the beginning he transformed Kansas City from a rugged, hilly, dirty town out in the west to "that pretty Kansas City," a place of boulevards and parks, of playgrounds and breathing spots.

There does not appear to be much of the dreamer about Mr. Kessler; but, just the same, he does dream, and those visions have resulted in giving Kansas City one of the best park systems in the country, remolding the vacant and dirty lots of Memphis into public gardens, beautifying Syracuse, N. Y.; creating a butterfly metamorphosis for Indianapolis and making and restoring the world's fair buildings of St. Louis and then showing the city how to create a boulevard system worthy of the size of the place.

That is not all. The natural beauties of Pensacola, Fla., are being added to by him. Fort Worth, Tex., is being converted into a city where a visit would not be complete without a trip over the boulevard system.

Kansas City, Kan., the little sister of the larger city on the Missouri side of the state line, is being made to conform with the example of its neighboring municipality. Workmen are busily tearing down the shacks and replacing them with drives, flowers and shrubbery in many other cities, and even tourist catering Denver, which asserts itself as "the Queen City of the West," has realized that parks are necessary.

JULY 4 DEATHS ARE FEWER.

Only 131 Fatalities, but Number of Injuries Was 2,923.

Although the list of deaths and accidents due to the celebration of the Fourth of July is appalling, the "sane" observance of the day in 1910 shows a notable improvement in this respect, according to statistics compiled by the Journal of the American Medical Association. The decrease in accidents is most marked in those sections where restrictive legislation has been put in effect.

"Two thousand, nine hundred and twenty-three persons were injured July 4 this year, of whom 131 died," the Journal says. "Sixty-seven deaths were due to tetanus, nineteen were killed outright by firearms, eleven by explosions of powder, bombs or torpedoes, six by cannon or similiar contrivances, while twenty-six, mostly little girls, were burned to death by fire from fireworks.

"Startling as is this showing, it is the best since 1903, when the Journal began keeping its record. In 1903 4,449 persons were injured, of whom 466 lost their lives, 406 of them dying from tetanus. The grand total for eight years shows that 37,526 persons have been injured, of whom 1,662 died."

WOMEN CABBIES ARE HUMANE

Horses Much Better Kept Than Men's, Paris Finds.

The League for the Protection of the Horse, which exists in Paris, slight as may seem the results it obtains, has been making an inquiry into the lot of the Paris cab horse, and its report of the result lays special stress on the superior condition of horses of cabs driven by women as compared with those driven by men.

The women cab drivers were found to be uniformly kind to their horses and scarcely ever to use the whip, and were often seen giving them some little delicacy to eat. At one of the largest stables where cabs are let to drivers the league was told of a mare named Rosette which was so vicious and bad tempered that no driver was willing to take her out. One of the women drivers asked for her and treated her so well that she became a tractable and useful animal.

$10,000,000 TO AMUSE PARIS

Tax Figures Indicate Total Spent During 1909.

Parisians spent more than $10,000,000 on public amusements in 1909. The figures are official, being known because of the tax for the poor levied on all public entertainments. This tax is now paid by the public, the managers having raised their prices a year ago sufficiently to cover it.

Jersey Schools Rank High.

New Jersey maintains its high standard of public schools at an average cost of about 20 cents a day per pupil.

Great Britain exports about one-quarter of the coal it mines.

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND

Charley Dooin Talks About Work Behind the Bat.

EASY WHEN TEAM IS WINNING

When Pitchers Are Not Going Well and Club Is In Rut Work Is Hard. How He Breaks Up Hit and Run Play.

No. XXIV.
By CHARLEY DOOIN.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Would I advise any youth to take up backstopping? My answer to that question is, Yes. Good receivers are hard to get, and catchers who are both good behind the plate and who are workers all through the game are still harder to find. It isn't so much the ability to receive the ball from the pitcher or to throw the runner out at the bases as it is the energy and snap that one puts into the game from start to finish. It's a cinch to catch a game when the side you're on is winning. I'd rather do it than anything else I know. But I always was a hard loser, and, although I never give up hope, it always breaks me up when we come out at the wrong end of the score board. To be a successful ball player in the big leagues you have got to fight—yes, fight—every minute of the game, to take every chance that comes along, putting your whole heart and soul in getting away with it, to work and never give up until the last man goes out.

Star Catchers Scarce.

Coming back to the position of catcher, good backstops are hard to find. In fact, there are several clubs in the big leagues at present that would pay handsomely for a star receiver. As I said before, catching is easy when your club is winning, but if your team is in a rut and the pitchers not going well you have hard work. The true test for every backstop comes when there are men on bases and you are up against a fast team.

The Hit and Run Play.

The man behind the batter has to keep his eye on the runner all the time and try if possible to read his signal to the man at the plate when he is going down to second. Then you give the signal to the pitcher to waste a ball, and you can generally catch the runner napping. It's the only way to break up the hit and run play I know, and, although the crowd may howl at the pitcher for putting wide ones over and wasting balls, it pays in the end, for it keeps runs down if you can catch a man napping at first or get him on his way down to second base.

Touching Man at Home Plate.

When a player is coming tearing for the home plate the only way to get him is to dive for him and reach him before he reaches you. I nearly always stand inside the line and when I get the ball lunge my whole body at the runner. Then he can't hurt you, for with shin guards and a heavy chest protector the catcher is pretty safe.

Has Always Been Catcher.

From the time that I was old enough to play ball, barring a few times when I played in the outfield, I have always been behind the plate. Although Charley Comiskey once told me that I'd make a better tailor than I would a backstop, I've managed to keep there still. Buck Ewing gave me my preliminary training, and when I was eighteen years old I signed with the Indianapolis team. That season I was the whole show. The club was the proud possessor of twenty-one pitchers, so in warming up that bunch I gained considerable experience.

Schultz to Play Professional Football.

Germany Schultz, the big center of the Michigan football team for the past three years, is to go into football professionally this fall. He has agreed, it is reported, to play center rush and captain the Oakwood eleven of Cincinnati, which is one of the strongest semiprofessional teams in the country. Games will be played on Sundays in Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Pleasing the Sultan.

Kaid Belton told the following story, which illustrates exactly the attitude of the sultan of Morocco toward the French:

One day the sultan asked a lady, the wife of his dentist, to play one of the pianos that were in the room of the palace. She played several pieces, one of them at length catching the sultan's fancy, whereupon the following little dialogue took place:

Sultan — That piece is very nice. What is it called?

Dentist—It is the "March on Cadiz." It was written to commemorate the Spaniards driving the French out of Spain.

Sultan—What! Were the French in Spain?

Dentist—Yes.

Sultan—How many of them?

Dentist—About 200,000.

Sultan (In a surprised tone)—And the Spaniards drove them out?

Dentist—Yes, every one of them.

There was a slight pause while the sultan was thinking hard, and then:

Sultan (quietly)—Play it again.

Saved by Her Voice.

When traveling to Paris with some other ladies on one occasion Mme. Grisi had a thrilling adventure. At a small wayside station a man entered the carriage, and it soon became evident from his threatening gestures and eccentric behavior that he was a dangerous lunatic. Though her companions were panic stricken, Mme. Grisi retained complete presence of mind and with the utmost composure began to sing. At once the maniac was quiet. His whole attention was riveted on that magnificent voice, and he remained the most appreciative of listeners until the train reached the next station, where he was secured. It transpired subsequently that he was a maniac with homicidal tendencies who had escaped from an asylum.

Well Settled.

GRAHAME-WHITE TO FLY FROM QUINCY TO BROCKTON FAIR

PROMPT ARREST FOR FALSE ALARM

Chief Williams Takes Robert Keith to the Police Station and He Is Locked Up

Sentenced to Three Months in House of Correction

The fire department was called out three times Tuesday afternoon, twice on bell alarms, both of which were false, and once on a telephone alarm for a lively fire in a cottage at Rock Island.

The first alarm was rung in from Box 612 at 2.50, and gave the Central station steamer a long run for nothing. The recall came in very soon.

The second alarm sounded at 4 o'clock, from Box 28, at the corner of Hancock and Greenleaf streets. This also proved to be a false alarm. While at the fire some of the gypsy moth men pointed out a man to Chief Williams as the party who had sounded the alarm. The Chief turned about and drove back. Near the residence of Dr. Hunting he overtook a man and without ceremony he took him into his wagon and thence to the police station, where he was locked up for sounding false alarms. He stoutly denied having pulled the alarm, but the gypsy moth men declare that he did. He gave his name as Robert Keith, aged 31 years.

While at the police station he was recognized as the man the police had been looking for. Several complaints had come to them from the Fore River district of a man hanging about there, and he was supposed to be a tramp. He had managed to keep out their way however.

Keith is said to be married but his wife does not live with him. She, however, is at present employed in a house on Winter street.

Chief Williams and the police think that Keith also pulled in the alarm from Box 612. He says that he had been to Neponset and had walked to Quincy. Assuming taat he had pulled Box 612 he would have just about time to re ach Box 28 at the time that was sounded. He was arraigned in court this morning.

Shortly before 10 P. M. a telephone call was received at the Central fire station for a fire at Rock Island. The call was first sent to the Houghs Neck station and then to the Central station. A fire alarm box has been ordered for this section, but has not as yet been connected.

The steamer and combination responded. The fire was in an unoccupied but furnished cottage belonging to Mr. Donahue of Jamaica Plain. It started for some unknown cause in the rear part and worked up to the second story where considerable damage was done to these rooms.

The Houghs Neck combination was able to handle the fire all right, and did so, but was rather short of men until the Central station apparatus and crew arrived.

The loss is estimated by Chief Williams as $200.

In court this morning Keith was arraigned for ringing a false alarm of fire. He pleaded not guilty, but Lysander Beaton and Joseph Malley testified that they saw Keith break the glass on Box 28, open the box, and pull the hook. He then closed the door and walked away. The court found Keith guilty, and sentenced him to three months in the house of correction.

SCHOOL BOY RUN OVER.

Joseph Dasha, a Washington school boy, was run over by an automobile shortly after school let out Tuesday afternoon. He was running up the street when the auto came along and ran over his foot. Fortunately the injury was not very serious, but the foot is swollen and will trouble him for some time. After the accident occurred, the boy was taken to the Fore River store, and when it was found that no bones were broken, he limped home.

GALAHAD BROTHERHOOD.

The opening meeting of the Galahad Brotherhood was held in the Parish house of Christ church Tuesday evening. The session was largely attended and a great deal of business was done. In fact, the meeting proved to be a midnight session. Three new members were taken into the organization, A. Pearce, F. Wrigley and G. Grant. Plans were discussed relative to the course of study which will be pursued during the year.

A great deal of interest is being shown among the members in the 1911 movement of Greater Boston. All the suburban towns and cities are included in this vast missionary enterprise, and the Galahads are preparing to do their share toward making it a success.

Meetings will be held twice a month in the Parish house. Business, a jollification and refreshments will be the order of things. This is a growing organization which is doing great good along social as well as spiritual lines and those who are promoting it are to be congratulated for their efforts.

FOWLER CHAPTER.

Fowler Chapter Brotherhood of the Hall Place M. E. church held its first meeting for the season Tuesday evening in the vestry at 8 o'clock. Richard Moyle presided and after devotional exercises introduced as the speaker of the evening Wesley A. Halfyard, leader of the well known Smith class of Mt. Bellingham M. E. church, Chelsea. Mr. Halfyard gave a most inspiring address on revival work among men, illustrating his points by reference to the remarkable men's revival conducted last winter in his church. The meeting of the brotherhood was very helpful to the men present and proved a good beginning in the preparations being made for revival meetings to be held during October by this church.

FINED AT DEDHAM.

In the superior court at Dedham on Tuesday, Frank A. Moran and Christina Lee entered a plea of nolo on the complaint against them for keeping a liquor nuisance at Quincy and were fined $100 each, which they paid.

Daniel Robinson of Quincy was sent to the State farm for drunkenness.

—We are not the most civilized people in the world. Life is not so safe in this country as in many of the other countries which we much deride. Property is not so well guarded here as in many other lands. What is the lesson of all these terrible tragedies? We do not know, except that the law is not enforced and that lawless men in high official station have taught the people that when the law stands in the way of the accomplishment of some possibly worthy purpose the law may be disregarded; the law may take care of itself, if it can.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

FREE SHOW FOR QUINCY

Grahame-White in Flights to Brockton Fair

The easiest way for C. Grahame-White, the aviator, to transport his aeroplanes to the Brockton Fair is to fly there from the Quincy Aviation field. His arrival on the opening day of the fair in this spectacular way would be a great feature, and also a free show for the people of Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Avon, Montello and Brockton, as that is the direct route from the field.

As the distance is about 18 miles it will take Mr. White only about 20 minutes to make the flight in his Bleriot monoplane.

As he is to exhibit with both his machines at the Brockton Fair, he will make a flight in each, and it will be interesting to note the difference in time for the monoplane and the Farman biplane.

Whether he will go over on the opening day of the fair or before, has not been announced, and may not be, so it would be well to be on the watch.

At the Aviation field only a part of one of the large tents used as hangars remains, and this houses the two White machines, and the Harvard biplane which has not yet made an ascent.

Since the meet closed, the field has been almost deserted, but employees of Mr. White and Quincy police are on duty night and day to protect the machines from vandals. A few people have been permitted to inspect the machines, and they consider themselves very fortunate.

The field has been cleaned up and is ready for the next event. But outside the field along Squantum street there is need of several big bonfires. Perhaps it will be necessary for the Board of Health to make a visit and act, as at some places there is now quite a stench and a litter which needs attention.

QUINCY SUBSCRIBERS NOT CONVINCED

That Their Telephones Will Cost Them Less Under the Proposed Rates

Representatives of Company Before Board of Trade

The Quincy Board of Trade devoted Tuesday evening to a consideration of the proposed telephone rates for Boston and vicinity. There was a representative gathering of business men present, including officials of the Fore River shipyard, the Gas Company, granite firms and merchants.

Two representatives of the New England Telephone Company were present to enlighten the Board, and did not return to Boston until the 11 o'clock train. They were L. P. Lanthier ,the division contract agent and William J. Burden, the special representative of the commercial department.

Mr. Lanthier explained the workings of the new rates as compared with contracts now in force, and both gentlemen without reserve answered a fire of questions from the gentlemen present. The representatives of the company claim that the receipts of the company will be reduced $700,000 annually in the Boston district by the new rates, and the Massachusetts Highway Commission concede that the loss is $400,00. The company, however, hope to recoup from new subscribers on existing lines, and thereby prevent such a large loss.

The representatives of the Telephone company wanted it distinctly understood that the new rates did not originate within the company. That the company is now under the supervision of the Massachusetts Highway Commission ,appointed by the Governor. Because of petitions to the commission for revision of rates, the commission had held hearings, and now recommended these rates, which was really a mandate.

No rates would be entirely satisfactory to everybody. Those subscribers who have been transacting a large amount of business over residence telephones would be hit by the new rates, also some of the largest houses of Boston, some of which were now paying less than a cent for their calls, when three cents should be minimum. Everyone would pay under the new rates for just the service rendered. Those who used the telephone but little would pay less than at present. Those who average ten calls or more per day would and should pay more.

Under the new contracts ,all four-party lines would be abolished, and there would be one and two-party lines. Divided ringing would also be subsitiuted so that when two are on a line, the bell for B will not ring when A is called or vice versa. The company claim that they will give better service for less money.

REMONSTRANCE.

Many present took exceptions to this claim, and could not be convinced. They claimed that the district was going to be decreased from 44 exchanges to five exchanges, and that the tolls would more than offset the apparent reduction in rates. Tolls to Boston would be reduced from 10 cents to 5 cents, but in place of free service to "Suburban" exchanges as at present, subscribers must pay 5 cents to some, 10 cents to others, and perhaps 15 or 20 cents to others,—five cents for each eight miles.

At present there is no charge to these exchanges:

Arlington	Belmont
Braintree	Brighton
Brookline	Cambridge
Canton	Charlestown
Chelsea	Cohasset
Dedham	Dorchester
East Boston	Everett
Hingham	Hull
Hyde Park	Jamaica Plain
Lexington	Lincoln
Malden	Medford
Melrose	Milton
Needham	Newton North
Newton South	Newton West
Norwood	Quincy
Randolph	Reading
Revere	Roxbury
Somerville	South Boston
Stoneham	Wakefield
Waltham	Wellesley
Weymouth	Winchester
Winthrop	Woburn

It was admitted that where a subscriber was frequently calling the above exchanges it would cost him more than at present, but the agents of the company claimed that by taking a measured service at less cost the addition of the tolls would not in most cases bring the cost up to the present total. Where a person has a measured service he can include within his limit calls outside his district to Suburban exchanges.

Under certain Boston contracts subscribers in Boston will be unable to talk with their homes in Quincy without payment of tolls.

It was brought out by questions that there are 1685 telephone subscribers in Quincy (exclusive of Atlantic); that only 18, business houses and 19 residences have the unlimited Metropolitan service. That there were 160 coin box telephones in Quincy, at $30 and $21. The average number of daily calls on residence telephones in Quincy was 4 to 5.

A vote of thanks was extended to the representative of the Telephone Company for kindly coming to Quincy and explaining the rates. They promised to come again at any time if more light was wanted.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The political overturning of the state of Maine which has always voted the same way for more than fifty years without a substantial break, has created untold astonishment and set many minds to thinking of what it all means. It means that first of all, the spirit of insurgency is overwhelming throughout this country. In the Eastern states those radical changes are drifting towards Democracy and in the middle West these changes mean the overthrow of what is called the "Stand pat" Republicans in favor of the Progressive Republicans, who are led by Roosevelt, Bristow, Cummings and La Follette. This country is now going through what is really a battle with the masses against the privileged classes.

It has always been the endeavor of a few to ride upon the backs of the many and this country is no exception to the rule. We have the railroads, the Beef Trust, the Sugar Trust, the Coal Trust, the Steel Trust, the Coffee Trust and a number of other corporations who are trying to impose on the public and enrich themselves unjustly.

These corporations dictate the prices they pay for raw material and dictate the prices that the consumer must pay for the finished articles. For instance, the Beef Trust dictates what the live stock ranchman shall receive for his stock and what the consumer shall pay for his beefsteak and pork chops.

This condition of things practically gives the trusts of the country the right to run their hands into our pockets and do as they please, and has become unbearable and the movement that is sweeping over this country is a strike at the bosses of the Republican states of the North and the Democratic States in the South, and it will teach our Senators and Congerssmen, as they have never appreciated before, that they are sent to Congress to serve the people and to be their servants and not their masters.

The fact of it is, the House and Senate are full of corporation lawyers and members of the boards o fdirectors of trust companies, but it looks as if the next Congress would have clean Democrats and Republicans to pass laws and govern our country.

TO SLEEP.

Olive Tilford Dargan.

O, gentle lover of a world day-worn,
Taking the weary light to thy dusk arms,
Stealing where pale forms lie, sun-burnt and torn,
Waiting the balm of thy oblivious charms,
Make me thy captive ere I guess pursuit,
And cast me deep within some dreaming close,
Where hopes stir not, and white, wronged lips are mute,
And Pain's hot wings fold down o'er hushed woes;
And if ere morn thou choos'st to set me free,
Let it not be, sweet jailer, through the door
That timeward opes, but to eternity
Set thou the soul that needs thee evermore;
So I from Sleep to Death may softly wend
As one would pass from gentle friend to friend.

BAKER MAY LOSE HIS SCALP

Police Commissioner's Dismissal Is Recommended by Mitchel

New York, Sept. 21.—Acting Mayor Mitchel has recommended that Police Commissioner Baker be removed on the ground of unfitness in permitting gambling to flourish in the city unchecked. Mitchel says that Baker, in a letter to him, showed insubordination. The acting head of the local government says that Mayor Gaynor has identical views with him in Baker's case.

"I saw Mayor Gaynor at St. James and laid before him the entire police situation, including Commissioner Baker's letter to me on Sept. 17," said Mitchel. "The mayor requested me not to make the letter public and to leave the police matter in abeyance until his return, which he promises will take place within a few days."

BRIDEGROOM 84, BRIDE 80

Cortland, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Henry C. St. Johns of Leonardsville, 84 years, and Miss Myra W. Cushing of Little York, 80 years old, were married Tuesday.

The wedding is the result of a romance that began sixty years ago. The two were engaged and a day was set for their marriage. Something happened to prevent the ceremony and the bride-to-be could not be prevailed upon to name another day. She remained in single blessedness and her lover waited for her until he was 55 years old, when he married another.

A year ago his wife died and the early courtship was reopened and proved successful this time.

ITALIANS HOPEFUL AGAINST CHOLERA

Result of Liquefaction of Blood of St. Januarius

Naples, Sept. 21.—The phenomenon of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius took place after prayers lasting fifty-five minutes in the presence of a great multitude. The people interpret the rapidity of the liquefaction as proof that the peril from cholera is over.

In the great church at Naples there are preserved the head and some of the blood of Januarius, bishop of Benevento, who was beheaded for the faith near Puteoli. The blood, as his acts relate, was gathered from the ground by a poor woman at the time of the martyrdom, and enclosed in two small glass phials. On several occasions, it is recorded, his relics were carried in procession during eruptions of Vesuvius.

The standing miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius consists in bringing the congealed pieces near to the head, the phials being placed on the altar and prayer being made. After a longer or shorter interval the blood becomes liquid and flows.

AFTER HEATH WAS KILLED

Mrs. Dodge Said She Didn't Know Gun Was Loaded, Says Neighbor

Lunenburg, Vt., Sept. 21.—The first definite link in the chain of evidence against Mrs. J. M. Dodge, the rich widow accused of the murder of William Heath, was supplied by Guy Garvin, one of the first to reach the house after the revolver shots were heard that caused the most mysterious tragedy that Vermont has ever known.

"I didn't know it was loaded," was the exclamation of the hysterical woman, as Garvin rushed into the house, as nearly as he could recall her words.

Garvin lives almost opposite the Dodge residence. He was right behind Rev. H. C. Howard, the first person to enter the house after the murder.

GALLAGHER CASE DELAYED

Meanwhile the Assailant of Gaynor Is In Jail Hospital

New York, Sept. 21.—According to a statement issued by the office of Pierre P. Garven, prosecuting attorney of Hudson county, it is not probable that the grand jury will take up the case during this month of James J. Gallagher, held for attempting to kill Mayor Gaynor.

Before the prosecutor can do anything in the matter he has first to receive a physician's certificate declaring that Gaynor has entirely recovered from the effects of the bullet wound inflicted by Gallagher. No witnesses have yet been subpoenaed.

Gallagher is now in the jail hospital, where he has recently been operated on for an abscess.

HOUGHS NECK BUDGET

Sea Street Widening and Other Improvements

(Special Correspondence.)

The committee elected to present candidates for nomination to the City Council from the Houghs Neck district held their second meeting in Associates' hall Tuesday evening. The whole committee was present and discussed the names of the strongest and best men who would be likely to please the entire district. These men who have been suggested, will be approached and asked to run and the strongest of the selection will be supported to the fullest extent. If the enthusiasm of the committee proves contagious, and can affect votes in the same manner, only success can come at the caucuses.

At the recent mock trial at the Casino, it was Mr. Johnson of Babcock street, who read the lines charging the jury:—Now, gentlemen, you have heard the case. I repeat, you have heard the case, but you will probably do as all juries do—as you please. Now, we think our honorable City Council, while they love us dearly, will act along those same "do as we please lines" concerning Sea street. But hold, gentlemen, this worthy scribe would submit for your approval an interview held with the Babcock street leaders Tuesday night. To the writer they said—"You may say through your column, (and here the Ledger was complimented for living up to its motto, 'Honesty in everything') that we do believe that Sea street should be the recognized, and first improved street of our district, and we do not now hold out against it. But we do fight for our cars to run on our street, and we do fight for improving the causeway. We look for immediate improvements in this direction from the present Council, and we look for more in other directions from other Councils in years to come. If any inference can be taken as to misinformation of the immediate removal of the tracks to Sea street in case of the Sea street question going through, the "misleading" points to some pretentious person who sat at the repetorial desk in Monday's Council. If Mr. Phillips' eyes were followed during his address and the general titter among the audience, and the shifting of feet and hands of the repetorial desk, and the inclination of Speaker Hobbs' head in that direction were significant, no investigation of the guilty need further proof.

The committee on dedication of the school house, will hold a meeting Sunday and discuss brass bands and other features—but in the meantime—has anybody seen contractor Crowley? Has anybody seen his men? We do not know. We cannot say. We have forgotten! !

Mr. Donohue's cottage on Rhoda street was partially destroyed by fire Tuesday night. A telephone call from Harry Ives, and constable Pennington, both of which came in about the same time, brought out combination 3. Driver Malone was obliged to take his wagon up Sea street to Post Island, thence to Kilby street, then to Rhoda street, taking about 20 minutes. This opens another protection question, easy access to Sea street, which is food for immediate thought. We will say something later. The Quincy steamer made a good run. Their men gave ample assistance but Combination 3 handled the job all right. The wagon returned at 12 P. M.

John Delaney is building a house which is a good model for future boulevard builders. It is the kind of house we need to make winter prospective residents take notice and settle. J. W. Webster and Son of Centre street are the builders and the house reflects much credit to their trade.

Angus Brown was visited Tuesday and insists that sometime when the doctor isn't looking he will crawl through the window and make for Houghs Neck, so as to take in the political fight. Angus is looking fine; he eats well, and sleeps well; but at this stage of recuperation gets somewhat fretty. He wil be back among us by Oct. 1.

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street. Quincy Adams house built in 1631 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erecteld June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse. Admission may be secured on application to W. E Dewhurst, sexton, 3 Maple street. A fee is asked for attendance, etc.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7, 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

Presidents Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Dorothy Q. House.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy, Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Owned by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Open free to the public on Saturdays, from 11 A. M., until 4 P. M. Other days admission charged.

Myles Standish Cairn.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

UNDER ARREST AS "BADGER WORKER"

Florence Burns, Once Tried For Murder, Is Again In Trouble

New York, Sept. 21.—Florence Burns Wildrick, who, as Florence Burns, was tried ten years ago for the murder of Walter Brooks in the Glen Island hotel, and was freed through the disagreement of the jury, was arrested on a charge of being a participant in what was characterized by Magistrate Steinert as "one of the boldest badger games" ever attempted in the city.

Edward H. Brooks, a real estate salesman, was also arrested and held in $3000 bail on a similar charge.

Charles W. Hurlburt, a lawyer, made the complaint. He charged that he was lured to a house in West Twenty-fifth street and there accosted by Brooks and another man, who accused him of a crime against the woman and forced him, under threats of death, to sign papers admitting his guilt and turning over his account in a bank to the men.

He was held prisoner all night, he said, and then taken for a long automobile ride, during which he managed to escape.

LEFT FATE TO CARDS

Love Smitten Youth Loses and Blows Out Brains With Shotgun

Joliet, Ills., Sept. 21.—John Paveglio, 19 years old, staked his life on the turn of a card and lost. He then blew out his brains with a shotgun charge.

Despondent, it is believed, over a love affair, Paveglio went to his room, took up a pack of cards, drew one and looked at it. Then he dropped the pack, according to a younger brother's story, took the shotgun from beneath his bed, placed the muzzle in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Paveglio, it developed, had been accustomed since childhood to making decisions with the aid of cards. His relatives believe that, meditating suicide, he determined to leave his fate to the cards and drew an unlucky one.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Oriental Styles Hairdressing Popular This Fall

Season one of Plumes, Black Satin and White Tulle

It would be rather interesting to go back into the old days and find out whether the subject of coiffures was as thrilling in interest as it is now.

There is no reason that it should not have been, for Marie Antoinette and the ladies of the American colonies certainly evolved some wondrous styles in hair dressing. To go further back, there were days when the pyramid reached as high as Haman's gallows, and other days when braids and pomade, curls and puffs were the chief joy of the women of fashion.

It is possible that women accepted the elaborate coiffure without much talk or protest, but I doubt it. It is more probable that the first writing on stone had something to do with the hair and the new gewgaws that were worn in it.

Medusa herself seems to have paid a good deal of attention to her lively coiffure, and possibly she set the fashion in serpentine coils.

There does not seem o be much of a return ,as far as fashion goes, to the flat peasant coiffure of last Fall. Yet some of the best dressed women continue to wear it, and Paris is rather given over to it.

It may be that it is such a simple mid-summer coiffure, not necessitating roll or puffs or waving that women have adopted it for comfort.

It is the ideal hot weather hair dressing but Paris has not been troubled with this kind of weather, which is the one flaw in the argument for it continued popularity.

In America only those who were at the cool resorts could stand even the minimum of artificial hair this Summer, for the weather reduced them to the state of caring little what they wore.

The heat and humidity took out even the tightest waves, puffs and swirls raised the temperature about five degrees, and so women went in for simple coiffures that were often unbecoming a fault which did not trouble their wearers as much as it would under any other kind of weather.

To go back to our mutton, however the swirl, which means the flat hair dressing of nearly any kind, achieved through any method, is in second style, although it is worn by many well-dressed women.

The high crown is the thing in coiffures. There is a certain sweep and carelessness to the Grecian hairdressing which is really only intended for youthful faces, but which is worn by all.

It is not new, and yet it was not seen last Winter in America as much as it was talked about. It is quite true that he high-crowned coiffure was in evidenec but it was not what they are now wearing.

The present style keeps the hair flatter all round the head than the other style did and then swings it into a shower of curls right in the middle of the crown.

Mary Garden dressed her hair in this fashion when she sang "Thais," and wore the wide, strong band of metal with jewels around the head to keep that flat line.

This is the mode that prevails now, and it is much cooler and more comfortable than the monstrous shapes we have followed which called for a feather bed pompadour and dozens of pillows and bolsters in the form of additional puffs.

To a majority of the women the flattening fillet is not becoming. They can wear the classic coiffure if their unconfined hair is allowed to gently wave away from the forehead. It may be parted in front or at the side, but it must not be held down with an ornamental band.

Yet it is the band ,or fillet ,that is classic. It is a gorgeous touch to the costume. It is made to match the gown unless it is of cloth of gold or silver, when it is worn with anything.

White tulle ,the kind that does not tear easily is used by many who cannot, stand the ornamental fillet. Young girls sew these tulle bands thickly with seed pearls, sometimes in a haphazard fashion, again in star or crescent designs.

By the way, this is rather a pretty suggestion for a girl who wants to make something attractive for a debutante. She must be sure that it will suit the face of the wearer, for, as every artist knows, there are certain kinds of faces that look their worst under clouds of white tulle.

Whatever kind of fillet is used, pearls play an important part. In truth, we are rapidly returning to that always charming method of ornamenting the hair by decorating it with festoons of small, evenly shaped pearls, crossing them over the brow, winding them around the Psyche knot or using them as an elongated barrette.

Plumes are added to pearls when one wears an especially distinguished head-dress. They stand upright at the front or back, according to the face and the line of the neck of the wearer.

One of the best ways known to lift the hair in the middle so that it will hold that cascade of curls is by odd puffs pinned under one's own hair. This method has come into general practice for lifting the hair above the ears or at the back when the shape o fthe face makes it impossible to wear the hair entirely flat.

This is consfdered much better than an even full length roll, as hairdressers have taught women that it is inartistic to lift the hair evenly off the face. Nearly all features require the hair built up higher in one spot than another, and irregularity is more to be desired than regularity.

For this reason odds and ends of puffs in different sizes are sold instead of rolls or crepes. Wherever the wearer fancies that she wants her hair higher she holds it up with a comb and runs a puff under it.

The latter only requires a tiny hairpin to hold it in place, and its even curve is better under the hair than any kind of a rough roll.

This might prove a good suggestion to women who dislike the warmth of the latter, and who have enough hair o ftheir own to be made into puffs, or have discarded puffs that can be used. The fashionable woman of today seems to have about a dozen or more puffs of soft hair well brillantined and rolled into a neat surface in the hair box. These are held together at the underside with an invisible hairpin ,or they are made in the usual way on a string. They are used under and over the hair, sometimes with the ends caught in ,again with them loose so as to form curls. The yare very light, these puffs and they do not add to the weight of the coiffure to any appreciable degree.

When one can wear the fillet it is quite impressive and gives the coiffure a decided brilliancy for evening that is always to be commended. It does away with the need of an invisible net, for it holds in place all the straggling ends and keeps the coiffure taut.

This is evidently to be a season of plumes and pearls, added to hats, gowns, wraps, as well as the coiffure.

I have already referred to the fashion of adding a panache of white plumes to the fillet in the hair, or they are arranged in the Prince of Wales method, if one likes it better.

These are also put on the Hindu turbans that are holding their own in a remarkable manner. The quaintest ones have these feathers upstanding at the back, and it must be confessed they are more quaint than pretty.

The gowns of the day are showing quantities of pearls swung around and over and about the figure in such a manner that one has a dread founded on experience that we will see far too much of it before Christmas comes.

Festoons of pearls are strung across the bodices; lattices of them make the sleeves, bands of them constitute the shoulder strap, and ropes of them are used for girdles.

Marabou and tiny ostrich tips in bands and rosettes of tendrils are all used on wraps and gowns as trimming. These, with pearls ,are rather a good accompaniment for black satin and velvet, both of which are in first fashion.

Imagine a gown of black velvet over a narrow puffed underslip of black chiffon with a white lining under this ,the edges trimmed with bands of tiny white ostrich tips, the bodice draped with small pearls, the sleeves made of pearls, and a queer kind of court train or Watteau plat dropping from the shoulders and caught in at the bottom of the skirt, of chiffon cloth, quite full and broad and edged with the white tips.

If you want to complete this costume in your mind's eye then add to it a Parsee turban of black chiffon cloth edged with white tips, caught with an immense cabochon of cut jet beads over the left eye, and rising from this a huge sweep of white ostrich plumes with a white egret in the centre.—Anne Rittenhouse in N. Y. Times.

FALL RENOVATIONS.

The fall has come to be the moving season as well as the time when most people do any important household renovation and the choosing of new wall decorations confronts a great many people. Papers have a way of looking so very different when enticingly displayed by the decoration, and hung on ones own particular wall, that the results of even a very painstaking selection are often far from satisfactory.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS

A few points that everyone has perhaps heard, and quite forgotton to use at the critical moment, would prevent many disappointments if kept in mind. Don't cut your house into dabs of color—a blue room, a green room, a pink room, etc. Use tones of one color, rather soft neutral tones, that don't clash with ones household belongings, but are complimentary to them and to your own personality. Don t choose wall hangings and carpets that glare at you when you enter the house. These should be only backgrounds to set off the other contents of the rooms becomingly, including the human contents. Don't have a wall that makes your complexion appear washed out and yellow. You are more important than your mural decorations every day in the year in your own home.

SOME TRENDS IN FASHION.

There are, of course, fashions in decoration as in other things, and just now there is a decided vogue for stencilling, for hangings and upholsterings, as well as for walls. This work is, of course, done on plain backgrounds and materials. Often the same design is stencilled on both walls and upholsteries, or the idea is reversed, with excellent effect; thus a figured wall will have some of its pattern repeated in stencillings on the plain draperies, or the figured draperies will furnish a motive for the stencilled decoration of the walls.

AN ARTISTIC ROOM.

A dining room recently done over here at a very moderate cost has the walls hung in "Sanitas," the washable wall hanging that has become so popular with discriminating people who like durable, sanitary decorations that are at the same time handsome and artistic. A warm red burlap surface, with a fleur-de-lys figure was selected for this wall, the portieres and screen being of Forrest tapestry, and the window draperies of thin silk stencilled with the fleur-de-lys pattern. Crossed scarfs of linen crash stencilled with the same design, outlined and embellished with a little coarse embroidery, were used on the old oak tabe.

THE BATH ROOM.

The bath room and kitchen in the same house were hung in white tile patterns of the same washable hanging, with a border of Dutch figures in delft blue in the kitchen, and of a delicate rose design in the bath room, where green and white cotton rugs harmonized with the color scheme.

THE VOGUE OF GRAY.

One sees a great deal of gray used for walls, especially in elaborately furnished drawing rooms, and in bedrooms where chintz or cretonne draperies and cushions are used. This is usually the shade known as French Gray, quite light and with a hint of pink in its make up. Cold dark grays absorb so much light that they make even a sunny room seem gloomy, while under artificial light they are positively vault-like. Too dark walls are depressing, too light walls, unless relieved by borders or panels are vapid. Medium shades in quiet tones are generally most satisfactory and livable. One tires very soon of any marked decoration. Walls and hanging should correspond in color or pattern.

BIG PLANS FOR BOYS

A Week of Pleasure Arranged by Y. M. C. A.

The opening week of the Boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. is to be held the week of September 26. Great things have happened in past years but the greatest of greatest is the program for this season.

On the evening of September 26 the Atlantic extension club opens in the Atlantic Methodist church. Osgood and Lansing monologists and banjo men are the entertainers and every boy between 14 and 17 in Atlantic is invited.

Tuesday, September 27, the Wollaston club opens in the Baptist chapel with Osgood and Lansing again as entertainers. Both these men are the best to be had in or around Boston, and every boy in Wollaston is invited to attend.

Wednesday, September 18, the South Quincy club starts business in Clan McGregor hall. Entertainment will be the best ever presented to Quincy boys.

Thursday, September 29, at the Y. M. C. A. an evening for Employed Boys. Gile and Wheeler of oBston will be the entertainers, and a plunge in the new swimming pool is also an attraction. Every employed boy in Quincy is invited.

Friday, September 30, at 7 P. M. the big time for Juniors. Dudley Prescott of Boston ,the most original and most wonderful entertainer now before the public, is the strong attraction for the evening. A swim for every boy attending is the second part of the program. No live boy could miss such an offer.

"Bill the Hobo" will be at the Y. M. C. A. the morning of October 1, at 9 o'clock, and every boy in Quincy should come and see "Bill" and hear of his life.

A conference for older boys and teachers of the Sunday schools will take place Saturday afternoon and evening, Oct. 1.

Older boys' meeting Sunday, Oct. 2, with a strong speaker and musical program. Come on, fellows, take everything in and make this a great year.

The Weather

SHERMAN HAS MAJORITY

Roosevelt Loses His Fight In the Up-State Primaries

Albany, Sept. 21.—A clear majority of fifty-five votes for the selection of Vice President Sherman as temporary chairman of the New York state Republican convention over Theodore Roosevelt is claimed by William Barnes, Jr., as a result of the up-state primaries Tuesday.

Barnes gave out a statement in which he says: "I have done what I could in the public press to warn Republicans of the Roosevelt danger and at the primaries to secure delegates who will not rush madly to the worship of false gods. We have won."

WATER POWER LEFT UNUSED

Canada's Resources In This Line Without Limit.

To the practical engineer who visits Canada nothing is so astonishing as the enormous extent of the waterways and the tremendous possibilities of the yet unharnessed water powers for the supply of electrical energy.

Considering the recent utilization of power from the Niagara falls over a large area of Ontario, it seems almost incredible that only 516,000 of the 25,652,000 horsepower which it is estimated can be produced in Canada is as yet in use.

In Ontario the water power is computed at 3,130,000, nearly 10 per cent of which has been developed. The province of Quebec, however, owns two-thirds of the entire water power of the Dominion, of which as yet a bare fraction has been utilized.

PUPILS TAUGHT TO SHOOT.

Austrian Government Provides Appropriation For Schools.

The Austrian government has decided to give instructions in rifle shooting in all the secondary schools. The experiment will be started by the Eighth army corps, which has its headquarters in Prague.

The sum of 50,000 kronen has been appropriated for the experiment. Rifles and 100,000 cartridges will be provided free, while a further supply of 50,000 cartridges will be supplied at cost price.

Champlain Stocked With Salmon.

An effort is being made to stock Lake Champlain with Pacific coast salmon. 20,000 young fish having already been put out. Anglers claim that these fish are going to furnish most of the sport in the future and that they will grow rapidly in eastern lakes.

A Great Military Feat.

Nonza, in Corsica, is very proud of the story of a great military feat performed there long ago. It is told in "Romantic Corsica," by George Renwick.

The French in 1768 had subjugated all the northern cape with the exception of the tower of Nonza, which for a considerable time sustained a close siege. Attacking parties were driven back by a fierce fire, but at last the garrison agreed to surrender if allowed to march out with all the honors of war. This was conceded, and old Captain Cascella appeared, staggering under a load of muskets and pistols.

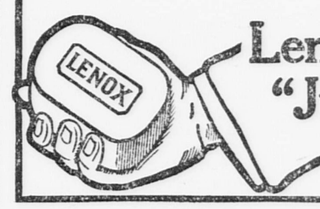

"Why is the garrison so long in coming out?" asked the French commander.

"It is here, sir," replied Cascella. "I am the garrison."

"Peddler's Acre."

Lambeth "old" church has numerous historic monuments, and in one of the windows is the full length figure of a peddler with his pack, staff and dog. This is supposed to represent the unknown person who presented "Peddler's acre" to the parish upon condition that his portrait and that of his beloved canine companion should be preserved in the church and that his dog should be buried in consecrated ground.—London Saturday Review.

Lanier of the Cavalry
Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

(Started Sept. 14.)

By this time Kate had come downstairs.

"Have they found Rawdon?" she asked fearfully.

"No, not a sign of him anywhere!"

"Is that the young fellow that those sergeants have been hunting for?" asked one of the detectives. "We managed to find out about him. He was in town as early as 3 o'clock Friday, and he left on No. 6 that night."

"Do you mean to tell me," said Sumter, gazing blankly at the speaker, "that he wasn't out here when—this—happened?"

"Not unless he had wings! That train leaves at 11:40."

Another day went by. Major Scott and his clerk, under Larrabee's skillful touch, were gradually regaining strength and beginning to answer questions. The ambulance was curtained in even at the rear, through which the two scared troopers had managed to slip to their doom. Not until the snows melted in the spring and the contents of the ravines should be revealed was it likely they would be heard of again. The railway was still blocked. The wires were still down. Fort Cushing stood isolated from the outer world, and no less than five of its garrison were absent and unaccounted for. The two men detailed to drive in with the paymaster, two bucchanalians who, being in town when the storm broke, had dared each other to face the gale and tramp out, and finally a young trooper named Cary, who had arrived with the same recruit squad that brought them Rawdon and had been on terms of friendship, if not, indeed, of intimacy, with him.

Along toward dusk on Tuesday others of the searching squadron sent afar down the valley had come back, reporting that the ambulance mules were found, huddled together, half starved and still half harnessed, in a log shack or shelter to which their instinct had guided them after their heels had made chopsticks of the running gear. The ambulance body was snowed under somewhere and nowhere in sight. The driver, a civilian employed in the quartermaster's department, had totally disappeared. Scott, the paymaster; Thomas, his clerk, and Rafferty, Lanier's soldier servant, or "striker," as then called, were still half dazed.

One more unfortunate, the driver of Foster's sleigh, was in trouble. Not until two hours after the dance had he turned up with the missing equipage, a cock and bull story, and a case of what the corporal called "jag." He swore that, having got chilled through, waiting, he just thought to get one hot whisky at the store. Sentry No. 6 said he'd mind the team while the driver went in, and the next thing he knew "they'd run'd away, hell for leather," and he, their driver, had to follow two miles to Flint's ranch, close to town, where he "might have taken a nip or two more." It was his first offense and Foster forgave. It should be remarked, however, that No. 6 declared that it was not he with whom the driver left the sleigh, but two "fellers"—i. e., troopers—who happened to be near the store.

There were sorrow and estrangement at Sumter's. Never before, as Mrs. Sumter declared, had Katherine ever had a secret from her mother. Moreover, Miriam Arnold was affected in precisely the same way. She shrank from all mention of that mysterious affair of Friday night.

Wednesday night when Sergeant Fitzroy returned to the post and asked to see the colonel that officer, who was at dinner, sent answer that he would be at the office at 8 o'clock and, further, sent word to Captain Snaffle to be there at the same hour.

A spell of sharp cold had followed the blizzard. The young people of the garrison were out in force at night rejoicing in the snow sports. The men had made some famous slides over at the bluffs, and the children along the officers' lines were playing hide and seek about the drifts and tunnels at the northward end of the parade.

Captain Sumter had been sent for and was admitted to a five minute talk with the colonel at his quarters and came away with a grave and troubled face to a ten minutes' conference with his gentle wife that left her sorely worried and distressed.

"Ask Kate," he said as once more he set forth into the night. "I've got to tramp and think this over before I do anything further." And at that moment Kate and Miriam had gone in to talk awhile with Mrs. Stannard.

It was just about a quarter of 9. The lights at the office were still burning, for the colonel had intimated that he might be back. Barker was bending over his desk and wondering why the colonel should be colloguing with Snaffle, Crane, Sergeant Fitzroy and sending for Cassidy and Quinlan. That was a queer "outfit" of Snaffle's at best. It seemed odd that the most pronounced "Britisher" in barracks should be a sergeant in the troop commanded by the nearest thing to an Irishman among the captains.

Barker was busy with these reflections when the colonel once more entered. The adjutant rose, but at a signal resumed his seat and waited.

Full fifteen minutes the colonel went striding up and down the long apartment. Twice he muttered something about its taking Snaffle and his sergeant an unusually long time to do a simple thing, and at last, as the trumpeters were heard, with much stamping of feet and blowing of hands, gathering for the old time nightly "walk around" that preceded tattoo roll call, Button abruptly turned on his adjutant and said:

"Barker, how long have you known Mr. Lanier?"

"Ever since he joined, sir."

"And you knew him in his cadet days?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you told me you never heard of his writing to newspapers?"

"Never sir," answered Barker. "I believe it impossible for him to have had anything to do with those—inflammatory articles about the campaign."

"You consider him absolutely square—above a lie—or a trick of any kind?"

Barker faltered just one minute. What did the colonel mean by a trick? Mischief there had been once or twice. Tricks had been played, and one only this last summer during the campaign—a trick, too, that if truth were told Lanier should have known about. At least it had been played for his benefit and had "pulled the wool" over the colonel's eyes.

"I consider him as square a man as I know and utterly above a lie of any kind," was the final answer.

"And yet you hesitate. You know or have heard rumors," said Button suspiciously.

"I have heard rumors and slanders, Colonel Button," was Barker's probably injudicious reply.

"Well, here," said Button impulsively—"here are you and Stannard and Sumter, three of the 'old liners,' as you are called in your respective grades, and I see plainly enough you three are tacitly condemning my attitude toward Lanier. Now, I've had enough of this. There is nothing that requires a commander to show his hand to his subordinates, but as matters stand in this regiment—oh, come in, Major Stannard. I sent for you purposely, and Sumter as well, to meet me here at tattoo." The two seniors solemnly entered the presence. "As I was saying to Barker, as matters stand in this regiment some half a dozen at least of the men referred to as its 'representative officers' are apparently resentful of my arrest of Lieutenant Lanier and attribute my course to pique, because he saw fit to show himself at the hop I declined to permit him as officer of the guard to attend. You think possibly that because men like Captain Snaffle, Lieutenant Crane and one or two of that set have been in consultation with me the matters at issue are beneath your notice. They at least are loyal to their commander and to the best interests of the regiment. Now I mean to show you. Mr. Barker," said he impressively, "go to Lieutenant Lanier and say that I desire his presence here at once."

And Barker took his cap and cape and departure without a word.

DETERMINED UPON SAFETY

Murray Talks With Supervisors of State Banks

CO-OPERATION IS OF VALUE

Would Have National and State Examiners In Particular District Meet Frequently and Compare Ways, Means and Methods—Directors Should Be Required to Attend Directors' Meetings

Washington, Sept. 21.—The supervisors of the state banks who spent a week here returned home much impressed with the suggestion of Comptroller of the Currency Murray that from this time on there be close co-operation between national and state bank supervision. Many of the state supervisors announced that they would, with the consent of their superior officers, at once have state examiners begin consulting national examiners.

Comptroller Murray believes that the banking business of the country can be vastly improved by a co-operation between the national and the state examiners. He points out that what the people want is safe banking; that they are not concerned as to whether a bank is a national institution or a state institution so long as it is safe.

If the plan of Comptroller Murray is carried out, the first step will be to have national and state examiners in a particular district meet as often as possible and compare ways, means and methods. The country is divided into districts for national bank inspection, and it is pointed out that it will be feasible for the national examiners in any particular district and the state examiners for the territory embraced in that district to have frequent conferences. It is hoped that in time state examiners will be required to report on a blank such as is used by the national examiners. Each national examiner now makes a report covering the following heads:

1—Number of banks which have gone out of the system in his district.

2—Number of banks examined more frequently than twice a year because of their unsatisfactory condition.

3—List of banks which the examiner recommends being examined more frequently than twice a year because of their unsatisfactory condition.

4—List of defalcations occurring in his district.

5—List of financiers of questionable methods whose operations extend into the district covered by the examiner.

6—List of doubtful and questionable paper in which officers and directors are interested.

7—List of doubtful and questionable paper of persons or firms other than officers or directors.

8—Large and extended lines of credit in which officers and directors are interested.

9—Large and extended lines of credit to persons or firms other than officers or directors.

10—Topics which the comptroller would take into consideration with a view of improving the service.

If Murray can exert any influence on state authorities in the matter of requiring directors of state banks to attend directors' meetings, he intends to do it. He says that a board of directors that will not meet with a representative of the government, or with a representative of a state, to go over with him in detail the condition of a bank and agree with him to correct every condition which is in violation of law or of bad banking, is not a fit board of directors to manage a bank chartered by the federal government or by a state.

Comptroller Murray, since he made the discovery that only about 2500 of the 7000 national banks have no by-laws, has determined that every bank within his jurisdiction shall adopt by-laws covering at least the following points:

1—At least monthly meetings of the board of directors.

2—The appointment of an examining committee.

3—The appointment of a discount committee.

4—The approval by the board of directors at the monthly meetings or oftener of all loans and discounts.

5—The recording of such approval in permanent form.

POSSE WAITS IN VAIN

Thought That Robbers Were Cornered In a Bennington Bank

Bennington, Vt., Sept. 21.—With shotguns and revolvers aimed at the building containing the First National bank at North Bennington, an excited posse of officers and citizens spent some time awaiting the appearance of burglars who were supposed to be inside.

Finally someone suggested that it might be advisable to make a search of the interior of the building, and when this had been completed with the utmost caution, it was found that the midnight marauders had fled and that the bank's funds were intact.

A small amount of money was missing from the postoffice, which is located in the same building.

RUM QUESTION IS PARAMOUNT

Bryan's Reason For Refusing to Follow His Party

WILL NOT SUPPORT DAHLMAN

Says Candidacy of Head of State Ticket Menaces County Option and Early Saloon Closing Laws—Question Troublesome Now, but Would Be Much More Embarrassing With Presidential Election on Hand

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 21.—In a statement in which he declares that the crusade which he feels impelled to wage against the liquor interests of the state and nation overshadows a personal and political friendship of two years, William J. Bryan last evening announced he had bolted the head of the Democratic state ticket in Nebraska and would not support James C. Dahlman for governor.

Mr. Bryan says he regrets that he is compelled to take the stand he does—his first departure from political regularity—but says he feels it his duty to do so because of the position taken by the Democratic nominee on the liquor question.

The statement does not indicate that Bryan will support the candidate of another party, but announces that he is a pronounced advocate of county option and the early saloon closing law, both of which he insists are menaced by Dahlman's candidacy. The statement is as follows:

"In speaking for the state ticket I shall not be able to present any arguments in favor of the election of Mr. Dahlman. His position on the liquor question makes that impossible. I regret this exceedingly, for he has been a political and personal friend for two years, and it would give me pleasure to speak for him if I could endorse the policy for which he stands, but he has chosen to make the liquor question the paramount issue and makes his appeal on that issue.

"Possibly it is just as well to have these things clearly presented, so that it may be settled this year instead of two years hence. Troublesome as the question is now, it would be even more embarrassing if presented in 1912, when a presidential election is on hand.

"If Mr. Dahlman is elected, it will be a declaration by the voters of the state against county option and against the 8 o'clock closing law. If he is defeated it will be a declaration in favor of county option and in favor of the 8 o'clock closing law.

"In other words, the voters now have an opportunity to decide whether the state shall go backward or forward on the liquor question. To present arguments in favor of going backward would not only contradict what I have already said on the subject, but would embarrass me in the fight that I expect to make hereafter to save our party from the odium of being the representative of the liquor interests."

WILL KEEP HER "ZOO"

Woman Minister Refuses to Yield to Demand of Neighbors

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Rev. Mary H. Munford, pastor of the Munford Memorial Baptist church, refuses to give up her "zoo," consisting of a dozen rabbits, numerous cats, a score of dogs, a few guinea pigs, one monkey, a parrot that recites scriptures by the yard, to say nothing of trained rats, mice and a flock of pigeons large enough to turn day into night.

The woman minister has made it a religious habit of giving a home to the homeless animals. Yesterday the neighbors complained that they are unable to sleep. The authorities started to raid the "zoo." Rev. Munford objected. She is defying the authorities and says she will keep her pets.

MARRIED BUT NINE DAYS

Bride Wants Divorce Because Husband Is Not Attentive Enough

Newton, N. J., Sept. 21.—Although a bride of only nine days, Mrs. Edward Sylcox, who was Charlotte Kent of Branchville, sought a local police justice to see if she could not get a divorce or have her marriage annulled.

She said her husband was not attentive enough and that he pleased her better as a suitor than a husband. She was advised in a fatherly way to try to adjust matters. Mr. and Mrs. Sylcox were married by Rev. A. L. Smith of Branchville.

Toy Airship's Long Journey

Milan, Sept. 21.—A toy airship, liberated by a French boy during the sports at Carmaux, near Bordeaux, descended in the outskirts of Turin. A note attached shows that its 600 miles' journey over the Alps was accomplished inside of twenty-four hours.

Election Frauds Suspected

Chicago, Sept. 21.—State Attorney Wyman has issued subpoenas for two men who are suspected of election frauds in the recent primaries, and a grand jury investigation will be started.

NEW JOB FOR ELLIS

Trust Buster Slated For Membership In Court of Commerce

Washington, Sept. 21.—Wade H. Ellis, who was detailed from his job as the administration's trust-buster to go out into Ohio and become President Taft's personal representative at the head of the Republican state committee, is slated for the appointment as one of the members of the new court of commerce, according to inside information here.

One of the matters to be considered by the president and his cabinet advisers at their house party here next week is the selection of the members of the new court, but it is said to be already settled that Ellis will be given one of the five judicial plums.

HE WORRIED POLICE FOR MANY WEEKS

Worcester's Boy Burglar Gets Indeterminate Sentence

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 21.—Upon his plea of guilty to six counts of breaking and entering and larceny, Raoul Trudell, aged 15, the boy burglar whose operations during the past six weeks mystified the police of Worcester and surrounding towns, was given an indeterminate sentence at the Massachusetts reformatory by Judge Utley in the municipal court here.

The police have already recovered 573 different articles stolen by the boy. Most of this plunder was recovered from pawnshops in Providence. Trudell refused to tell the police what disposition he had made of the rest of the plunder.

USE AND CARE OF AUTOS

Will Be Taught In Gloucester High School Free of Charge

Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 21.—The offer of John H. Hammond to establish a course for automobile instruction in connection with the studies at the high school, for the benefit of those pupils interested in mechanics, was accepted at a special meeting of the Gloucester school board last night.

Mr. Hammond will at once place in commission a high-powered automobile and an expert machinist and chauffeur for instruction in the use, caring and repair work on automobiles in the school.

The Gloucester high school will be the first institution of its kind in the country to teach the use and care of the auto to young men free of charge.

SONS GET $12,000

Mrs. Bradley's Suit to Have Brown's Will Broken Is Settled

Salt Lake City, Sept. 21.—The suit of Mrs. Anna Bradley to break the will of the late Arthur Brown, at one time United States senator from Utah, will be settled by the payment of $12,000 to Mrs. Bradley's sons, according to an announcement by attorneys for both sides.

Brown was shot and fatally wounded by Mrs. Bradley in Washington, Dec. 8, 1906. In his will he specifically denied the paternity of the two children. The estate amounts to something more than $70,000.

Young Bicyclist Killed

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 21.—The five occupants of the automobile driven by George H. Hatchard of Hull, Mass., have been detained by the police pending a coroner's inquest to fix the responsibility for the death of Richard Burnham, aged 9, who, while riding his bicycle, was caught between the automobile and a trolley car and instantly killed last evening.

Thirty Thousand Miners Resume Work

Kansas City, Sept. 21.—Thirty thousand coal miners of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, who had been on a strike for five months, returned to work, all the mines in the southwest having resumed operations under a two year contract.

NO THOUGHT OF SURRENDERING

Taft Will Retain Leadership of Republican Party

NOTICE OF HIS INTENTIONS

Friends Say It Is Amply Outlined In Statement After Meeting Roosevelt at New Haven—Slight of Administration on Colonel's Western Tour Not Forgotten by Chief Executive—Will Stand In 1912 If Nominated

Washington, Sept. 21.—President Taft's friends are inclined to throw up their hats and shout. They interpret the outcome of the meeting between the president and Theodore Roosevelt at New Haven to mean that the president has decided to fight. The president's attitude, if it is correctly understood here, is that unless the people say no, he intends to be the leader of the Republican party.

The whole story is condensed in this announcement made from the president's train: "Mr. Taft is willing to run in 1912 if nominated. His friends say that if the American people want him for a second term, not even Colonel Roosevelt can prevent his nomination."

The president's friends say no clearer notice of his intentions could be given. The notice is particularly cheering to those friends of the president who had been led to believe that he was more than half inclined not to fight for the leadership of his party and for renomination in 1912.

Persons here who are in the confidence of the president say that he was only waiting for an opportunity to make clear the course he intends to pursue. That opportunity came when Roosevelt rushed across Long Island sound to ask for the president's support in the bitter contest that is now on for control of the Republican party in New York state.

It is very generally understood here among intimate friends of the president that he said to Roosevelt what he said to the general public later through the newspapers, that he has no thought of surrendering the leadership of his party unless the people indicate that they do not want him to lead. By taking such a stand, the president has, according to his friends, put Roosevelt in a position where he must either openly fight for the leadership of the party or must fall in behind the president as a high private.

The president's admirers are particularly pleased with the position taken by the president in the conference with Roosevelt on the New York political situation. Everybody is saying that it was characteristic of the former president to make the dash he made for help from the president.

It is being pointed out that on his long western trip Roosevelt refrained from even mentioning Taft until he had discovered that Republicans were resenting his slight of the administration. At no time, however, did he give the administration his full indorsement. Naturally the president resented such treatment from his former friend. Public men are saying that under the circumstances no one but Roosevelt, in a political extremity, would have rushed to the president begging help.

The appearance of Roosevelt in New Haven, as the president's friends view the situation, was particularly pleasing to the president, because it afforded him an opportunity not only to make his position clear to his predecessor in office, but to let the public as a whole know that he still has some light in him. It is being pointed out that Roosevelt must have carried an olive branch to the meeting.

The one significant proposal he made was that the New York state convention should unreservedly indorse the Taft administration. In return for this, he expected the president to give out a statement or write another letter favoring Roosevelt's control of the convention. This the president did not do. He insisted that the letter he wrote to County Chairman Griscom a few weeks ago stated his position fully, that he had nothing to add to it.

Apparently there was no opportunity for controversy as to whether the New York convention shall indorse Taft for renomination. He does not want such an indorsement; he did not even want it in his own state. His attitude is that the spring of 1912 will be time enough for the Republican party to say whether it wants to back him for another four years more.

MEAT DEALERS INDICTED

Salem and Beverly Concerns Charged With Giving False Weights

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 21.—Eight indictments against meat concerns in Salem and Beverly on charges of giving false weights were returned by the Essex county grand jury in a final report to Judge Schofield. The indictments are against the following:

FARMERS BUILD OWN RAILROAD

Hundred Mile Electric Line Under Way In Missouri.

JERSEY COW IS TRADEMARK.

Agriculturists and Prospective Patrons Take All Stock to Bar Possibility of Corporation Monopoly—Bonus Stock Convertible Into Freight and Passenger Fares.

Southwest Missouri farmers are taking kindly to the idea of popular ownership of public utilities—so much so, in fact, that they are building their own electric railroad.

This road runs from Springfield to Joplin, with a branch line from Mount Vernon to Pierce City, the entire line to be 100 miles long. It has been named the "Jersey route," a Jersey cow having been adopted as the trademark, and all rolling stock and stationery will bear the big cow arranged as a coat of arms. There will be five freight locomotives, a hundred freight cars, eight double truck coaches and sixteen trailers.

The farmers and actual patrons will take up the stock and arrange it so that there will never be an opening for a company or corporation to monopolize the line. The plan was suggested by J. I. Woodfill, a retired railroad man, who now lives on his farm near Springfield and devotes his time to perfecting schemes for public improvement in his section.

Other Attempts Failed.

Several attempts have been made to promote the same line along well worn principles of interurban road building, but all failed for the reason that they could not interest the farmers in the enterprise.

But Mr. Woodfill, being himself a farmer and in close touch with the agricultural interests of his section, undertook to show the farmers what it meant to their farms to have the road built and soon convinced them that it would advance the value of their land, estimating by a strip two miles wide, $32,000 per mile.

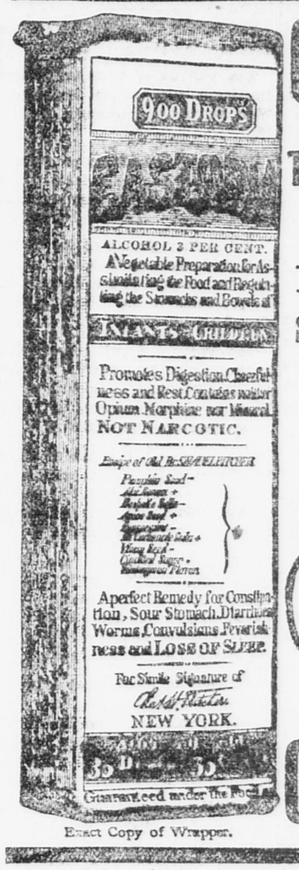

The farmers fell in with Woodfill's offer to put the deal through for them. After securing the right of way and subscription of $2,000 a mile from farmers he induced a broker to look the proposition over and secure funds to construct the road. This has been done, and the enterprise is taking shape.

To Develop New Sections.

Bonds are to draw 8 per cent and to run fifty years. One of the new and taking features of financing is that no stock is given away with the bonds save to the purchasers of common stock. The stock thus given away is convertible into coupon books and can be used to pay freight and passenger fares, thus securing business for the road before it is built. There are 252,030 persons in the territory traversed by this road. Moreover, the territory tributary to this line is a dairying and fruit growing section, and much business will be developed where now transportation is too remote to make a success. It also will take in Paris Springs, where will be established a health resort.

It has been little more than six months since this scheme was first launched, and the road will be in full operation by the middle of 1911.

—Hundreds of thousands of men and boys throughout the United States, in country, village, town and city, are learning how to operate an automobile engine. This is developing in them a knowledge of and love for mechanics. It is turning the American boy, who had been disposed to drift away from engineering and mechanical pursuits, to an acquaintanceship with mechanics. The world's advancement is based on mechanics.—Baltimore Manufacturers' Record.

AT ANY COST.

That Boston must have its own steamship lines to South and Central America ,to take advantage of the great growth of trade which will follow the opening of the Panama Canal, was the contention of William S. McNary, Democratic candidate for Congress from the 10th district expressed Tuesday night at rallies at Grove hall, the Ward 24 ward-room, Codman square and Hibernian hall, Mattapan. These lines should be established at any cost, he declared, that Boston may get its share of this rich trade.

Different From a Mountain.

A certain Philadelphian who is at once a minister of the gospel and a registered physician had an amusing experience in his attempt to corner a Christian Scientist. Every time they met this Scientist took occasion to scoff at medical science and to dwell upon the wonders that could be performed through faith.

"You are convinced that through faith you can do anything," said the medical man one day.

"Yes," he replied; "faith will move mountains."

A week later he was in the doctor's office with a swollen jaw, due to toothache.

"What, you here?" the doctor exclaimed, with feigned astonishment.

"Oh, doctor," he said, "I have suffered agony all through the night. I simply can't stand this pain any longer!"

"Have you tried faith?" the physician asked him. "You know you told me faith could move mountains."

"But this is a cavity, doctor."

It Was Excusable.

"That druggist acted grouchy when you interrupted his compounding to buy a stamp."

"What of it?"

"A business man should always smile."

"Oh, I don't know. You can't expect a man to be a hypocrite for the sake of a two cent sale."—Kansas City Journal.

GRAND CUP CELEBRATION

Prominent Yachtsmen to be Guests of Quincy Club

Notices have been sent out by the Quincy Yacht club for the grand cup celebration, reception and dinner at the club house Sept. 29 to Hon. Charles Francis Adams, 2d, Arthur Adams and Thomas Nelson Perkins, the crew of the Harpoon; Thomas Fleming Day, donor of the Day cup; the cup committee of the Boston Yacht club, the donors of the Interbay Cabin Cat Boat Association cups, and the officers of the Narragansett and Barnegat. Bays Yacht Racing Association.

A reception will be held at 6.15 and the dinner will be served at 6.45 by Whittemore. Music during the reception and dinner will be furnished by Monk's orchestra. Members must secure tickets for themselves and guests not later than next Monday.

A special meeting of the club has been called for Oct. 10, to see if the club will amend the by laws so as to give the executive committee power to authorize and make contracts, but not to make the club liable for any debt beyond the amount of money at that time in the hands of the treasurer not needed to discharge prior debts or liabilities.

Also to see if the by-laws will be amended so as to make ten members constitute a quorum; to see if the club will authorize the issuance of bonds not to exceed $11,000, and to authorize the executive committee to issue a mortgage to cover such bonds and to see if article nine relative to the titleship of the club property shall be striken from the by-laws.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN PRAISED.

England Admires American Wife's Devotion to Political Leader.

The loyalty and wifely devotion of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, wife of one of the greatest figures in English political circles of today, is the talk of two continents. Before her marriage to the British statesman she was Miss Mary Endicott of Salem, daughter of the late Hon. William C. Endicott, who under President Cleveland was secretary of war.

Some years ago Chamberlain was suddenly taken sick, and during his illness, which even his most intimate friends feared was his last, his wife was ever by his side. She seldom left the sickroom, and, although there were nurses, she insisted on caring for him herself. She was to him what Mrs. Gladstone was to England's great premier in his last sickness.

And now that Chamberlain is better—much better, it is said—she has even a harder task to perform, for the old warhorse is longing to jump into harness once more, and it is her work to keep him quiet until he is really fit.

In the great campaigns which her husband has fought and won she has been his best friend and adviser, and during the crisis attending the windup of the Boer war she was his greatest help.

CUT ROADS TO WIDEN FARMS.

Iowa's Governor Has Plan to Enrich Hawkeye State.

Governor Carroll of Iowa has proposed that the width of that state's roads be cut down from sixty to forty feet and that the strips of land thus saved be turned over to the farmers for cultivation.

He believes that forty feet is wide enough for a country road, that such a road will be better and more easily cared for than the wider one and that the twenty extra feet now is simply wasted.

The title of this land, if the plan is carried out, naturally vests in the owners of land adjoining the roads, as the state's right to it is simply for high way purposes, so the measure will be popular with farmers. It is estimated that 8,500,000 bushels of corn can be added to Iowa's crop and $3 per capita to her wealth if this land is farmed.

OPIUM INDUSTRY DYING OUT.

China Reports Few Poppy Fields Left In Entire Empire.

The growth of the poppy from which is made the opium that has paralyzed the development of the Chinese race has been almost stopped in two provinces of Manchuria, Heilungchiang and Kirin.

There now exist only a few poppy fields in out of the way places where formerly thousands of acres were cultivated. Since the government forbade poppy cultivation there has been a great reduction in the number of opium smoking dives and a great increase in applications for assistance in breaking off the opium habit.

WHO IS THE BEST SOUTHPAW?

Leading Left Hand Twirlers In Big League Sized Up.

VAUGHN GIVES GREAT PROMISE

Few Pitchers Have More Natural Ability Than New York Americans' Youngster—None Stands Out as Did Rube Waddell In His Palmy Days.

It is easier to separate the strictly first class right hand pitchers from those who are not in that class than to draw the same line in the left hand division. There are half a dozen or so right handed pitchers who would be named almost unanimously, with, of course, differences of opinion as to the best of this lot, but among the left handed twirlers there is no small circle that stands out so prominently. Try to pick out the best southpaw in the big leagues and you find yourself wondering over the list of a dozen and wavering as to which are the tiptoppers.

In the northpaw brigade are Mathewson, Walsh, Ford, Johnson, Coombs and Brown, who undoubtedly stand out more prominently than any others and who would easily carry a majority of the votes were there a vote on the best six. For day in and day out work and having everything they are at the top of the heap. But who is the best left hander or who are the best left handers in the business? There wouldn't be any such unanimity in naming the chosen few. More pondering would be required to arrive at a decision.

None Stands Out Like Waddell.

would say "Eddie Plank." But there isn't any port sider who looms up the strong, solitary, in a class by himself figure that Rube Waddell did when he was the king of the southpaws.

New York has three of the best left handers in the game—Vaughn of the Highlanders, Wiltse of the Giants and Rucker of the Superbas. This is Vaughn's first active year in fast company, and he hasn't earned the reputation that comes from a long period of consistent work, as has Wiltse.

Vaughn Has Good Repertory.

Vaughn has speed, change of pace, control, good breaks, as good a repertory as the next pitcher, a cool head and doesn't get rattled. He is probably the most promising young left hander in the game today. Were he more alert he would be better off, but he has a fine physique and, all things considered, comes nearer having the best natural equipment of any of the southpaws. Were all the left handers thrown in the market none would command a bigger price.

Wiltse is very consistent, a high class craftsman with splendid curves, long head, exceptional control and lots of pluck. He is steady, a good man to send in in a trying moment and the best fielding pitcher by far among the left handers. With a more rugged physique he would be at the top of the heap. Rucker has more on the ball than any other left hander except Vaughn, but tends toward unsteadiness and inconsistent work in the box. Leifield has shown lots of strictly first class work, but with a tendency toward being erratic. Sallee is another left hander with all the wrinkles of pitching, but his habits do not conduce to success and interfere with his innate skill.

Doc White is one of the best left handers. So are Karger, Pfiester and Plank. Plank, White and Wiltse are conspicuous not only for good service, but for long service. Washington has a good one in Gray, and Johnny Lush of the Cardinals and Mattern of the Bostons are good men who would be still better with stronger teams behind them.

A Large Representative Gathering This Morning

The Norfolk County Woman's Christian Temperance Union is holding its "Silver Anniversary" in Bethany church today. The morning session was called to order by Mrs. Ida S. Brown of Wollaston, president of the organization.

Mrs. James Matheson conducted the opening devotional service after which Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis gave the greeting, to which Mrs. Emily Moye responded for the Union. Reports from the various officers and committees followed this.

Mrs. Katherine L. Stevenson, president of the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union, conducted the noontide devotions and the morning address was given by Mrs. E. B. Lamb. Miss Carrie Follett Spear gave a solo at morning session and will give another selection this afternoon.

About 80 ladies were present at the morning session, and most of them stayed to lunch which was served at 12 o'clock.

Dr. Edwin N. Hardy will have charge of the devotional service this afternoon. Following this there will be a business session, when officers will be elected and the delegate to the National convention will be chosen.

Mrs. Stevenson, the State President, will deliver the address of the afternoon. She is a very talented woman and has an enviable reputation as a speaker and those who plan to attend this meeting have much in store.

The concluding event of the day will be an exhibition by the Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis.

"It's a dispensation of Providence," said Mrs. Bluebow, "that the nights are so long in Russia."

"Why so, my love?" queried Aristophanes.

"Why, the people can have such long evenings to study the language."—Washington Capital.

THE NEW 'PHONE RATES

State Highway Commission Defends Its Report

Chairman Parker of the State Highway Commission says that the commission has been giving conferences to complainants against the new schedule of telephone rates, recommended by the commission and accepted by the company recently, and according to him the conferees have gone away satisfied that the revision is not as bad as their previous ideas had painted it. He lays the complaints to lack of understanding of the intent and scope of the rates.

This is the way Comr. Parker explains it: "The extensive user of the telephone, such as the concern which has been carrying on its business largely by phone, has been getting his service at the rate of about a quarter of a cent a call, while the company needs to get an average of about 3 or 3 1- 2cents in order to pay dividends. As a result, the smaller user has had to pay something like 10 or 15 cents for calls instead of 1-4 of a cent.

"One of these large users came in and told us the new rates would mean an increase of some $2000 in his telephone expenses. That was practically an admission that he had been getting his service for less than he should, while others were paying more. The complaints of the ordinary smaller users I consider due to a lack of understanding of the new schedule. After complaints have had conference with us, they go away satisfied with our explanation of the new rates.

"With regard to the ordinary user who is complaining, the new rates mean that the man in Waltham, say, who has been accustomed to calling up his mother-in-law in Roxbury or some place outside the zone contiguous to the Waltham one toll-free, will now have to pay to do so. This is in the interest of the ordinary user, the majority of whose calls are within his own zone, and such users form the vast majority of users to be benefited by a general schedule of rates.

"We are offering conferences to leaders or members of town or other mass meetings held in protest against the new rates."

—California has adopted a novel method of coping with insect pests. It has established a bird farm, where insect-destroying birds of all kinds are raised and set at liberty. Good results are reported from the undertaking, which is a practical form of conservation that might be adopted elsewhere for the protection of fruit and shade trees and garden crops.—Milford Gazette.

STUNTS FOR SATURDAY

Attractive Program Arranged by Grahame-White

The program announced by B. F. Keith for the Quincy Aviation field on Saturday is one that is sure to attract another large crowd to Squantum. The achievements of that English aviator, C. Grahame-White, have been heralded far and wide, and his stunts in airships are certainly fascinating. People of New England, however, have not seen all his stunts as an outline of the program will show:

BLERIOT MONOPLANE.

Dive from a hight of 4000 feet with the engines stopped.

Attempt to break the world's speed record by going at a speed of more than 70 miles an hour.

Spectacular demonstration of soaring from the ground at sharp angles.

Attempt to beat the world's record for altitude, now over 8000 feet.

If the weather is cloudy Mr. Grahame-White will go high enough to disappear from sight behind the clouds.

FARMAN BIPLANE.

Switchback flying.

Skidding in the air.

Flying with both hands off the control levers.

Birdlike demonstrations of gentle alighting.

Riding an invisible roller coaster around the field.

Dive from 1000 feet with a passenger, with the engine stopped.

Quick turning at sharp angles.

Exhibition of soaring from the grounds from within a space of 30 feet.

Shooting the airchutes.

Corkscrew glide from a high altitude.

Knocking down ninepins placed on the ground without alighting.

Exhibition of accuracy by lighting on a pocket hankerchief.

Attempt to blow up the battleship on the field.

Grahame-White says of the exhibition: "What really induced me most to respond to Mr. Keith's invitation to give a popular demonstration Saturday was the fact that he put it on the ground of an educational exhibition and at a price within the means of all.

"I will introduce a great many features in flying next Saturday that have never yet been seen in this country. I did not have time to do them during the meet, being so busy in the contests. One thing I can promise, and that is an attempt to beat the record of the French aviator, Morane, in his Bleriot monoplane. He did 70 miles an hour. I shall have the same kind of a machine and am confident I can do 75 miles an hour with it."

RAISING OF THE MAINE.

A Washington dispatch to the Boston Advertiser says:

That the raising of the Maine is a task calculated to task the abilities of the ablest engineers, and one that might cost a large sum of money, is apparent from the statement of Col. William M. Black of the army engineer corps. The keel of the ill-fated vessel is embedded in the mud in Havana harbor to a depth of from eight to 10 feet. Col. Black was sent to Havana by the war department with Capt. H. B. Ferguson of the engineer corps to make preliminary examination of the condition of the wreck. He has just submitted his report to Gen. Bixby, chief of engineers.

In the first place he found the Cuban government exceedingly anxious to assist him. Senor Sqanguilly, the secretary of state, Senor Chalons, the secretary of public works ,and President Gomez himself all earnestly expressed the desire. They placed at Col. Black's disposition the floating plant and personnel of the department of public works, turned over the Cuban reservation in Casa Blanca for use as a storage plant for materials, and assigned Manuel Lombillo-Clark, a capable engineer in charge of harbor works ,to assist the American engineers. Free entry of wrecking material and plant was also granted.

NEW ERA IN SHIPBUILDING

Fore River Company May Build More for Cuba

When the tank steamer Currier, named for Guy Currier, a Boston lawyer, slid down the ways at the Fore River ship yards at 11.45 o'clock Tuesday, an event of much importance to the ship building and marine interests of Greater Boston and the entire State of Massachusetts took place. The Currier, which was built for the Cuba Distilling Company, doing business between Cuba and the United States, was the first steamer to be built in Massachusetts for the foreign trade for half a century. So much has been said about the decline of shipbuilding and the poor showing of the American merchants marine in general during recent years that this launching takes on added significance, especially as the company intimates that within a short time it may place an order for a sister ship, and it is the intention of the Fore River officials not to stop there with their merchant ship building programme.—Boston Transcript.

But this ship will not fly the American flag, or be controlled by an American company. It is American ships that are wanted for the foreign trade.

THE KING IS INSANE

Giuseppi Romeli Puts Up a Big Claim

Guiseppi Romeii, who has caused the Quincy police considerable trouble, and who claims he is "the King of the world," has been committed to the State asylum for the criminal insane at Titicut.

Romeii first came into prominence some months ago, when he made a savage attack on Court Officer Marden in the cage at the district court. Early this year he again bobbed up and gave Officer Hinchon a tussle before he was subdued. Officer Hinchon was called to remove a man who had held Fuller's blacksmith shop against all comers. The officer did not anticipate any trouble, but when he entered, Romeii put up a fight and the officer was considerably clawed before he subdued the man.

In court he was sentenced to the State farm but appealed. Wednesday he was examined by Dr. John W. Pratt and Dr. Francis L. Babcock at Dedham jail as to his sanity. In his own language Romeii said: "I am not insane. I was born into this world and of course I own property. All the property that belongs to the government, including this building, is mine. This property belongs to the king of the world. I am the king of the world."

The physicians claim that "the king" is insane, melancholy and quarrelsome. The complaint against Romeii was for being an idle person. After hearing the report of the physicians, Judge Dana sentenced him as noted above.

—New Orleans and San Francisco propose to spend five or six millions each on expositions to celebrate the opening of the Panama canal, and incidentally, to give themselves little booms. It would be proper enough to celebrate that event with some ceremony, but the place for that is on the spot, not several thousand miles from either terminal of the canal. As for boosting themselves, the "terminal" cities of New Orleans and San Francisco could spend ten or twelve millions to better advantage than by sinking them in rival shows. As the means for booming a city the arrangement of an exposition is about as effective as is the coming of a circus to a country town. The effect on local prosperity is about as great, and as evanescent, in one case as in the other.—Philadelphia Record.

COLE--WEBB WEDDING

Quiet Marriage Because of Illness of Bride's Father

The wedding of Miss Alice E. Webb and Mr. Guy Wadsworth Cole took place at the home of the bride, 213 Washington street at 2.30 Wednesday afternoon. William G. Webb, a brother of the bride, acted as best man, and Miss Carrie Cole of Bridgewater, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Only the immediate family was present to witness the ceremony, owing to the illness of Mr. James H. Webb the father of the bride. The reception which was postponed on that account also, will probably be held a little later. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of the Bethany Congregational church performed the ceremony. The simple ring service was used.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole were the recipients of many beautiful and valuable gifts. After a short wedding trip they will reside in Dedham, where Mr. Cole is in the drug business. Mrs. Cole was very popular here in Quincy, and her friends will regret her departure from the city.

RECENT DEATHS IN THE CITY

Grand Army Veteran and Spanish War Veteran in List

Louis M. Soule, a long resident of Quincy and a veteran of the Grand Army, passed away Wednesday at a Boston hospital, aged about 64 years. Mr. Soule was employed by Cyrus Patch C. Son for many years until his health failed. H eenlisted in Co. G of the 45th regiment in September 1862 afterward serving in the 2d Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. He was a member of Paul Revere post, 88, G. A. R., and leaves a widow.

Mrs. Mary Cahill, widow of George Cahill, a former well known resident, died at her home, 94 Water street, on Wednesday, aged 72 years. She leaves two step sons, Peter and George D. Cahill, and two daughters. One of her daughters, Miss Annie M. Cahill is a teacher in the Willard school.

John J. Barry, son of Mr. Patrick J. and Mrs. Mary Barry of Atlantic, died at his home 132 Sagamore street, Wednesday, aged 30 years. Mr. Barry served with Co. K, 5th regiment, during the Spanish war, and was a member of the Spanish War Veterans.

Timothy J. Corcoran, son of Mr. Jeremiah Corcoran of 7 Grove street, died Tuesday at the Eye and Ear infirmary, Boston ,aged 22 years. His death was due to blood poisoning brought on by picking a pimple on his face near the eye a few days ago. Soon after picking the pimple his face broke out and he was taken to the hospital. He was a prominent member of St. Mary's C. T. A. society, who attended his funeral this morning from St. Mary's church.

John T. O'Neil, who was formerly engaged in the granite manufacturing business at the corner of West and Willard streets, died suddenly Wednesday at Forrest Hills, where he has resided for several months. He was 54 years of age and leaves a brother and two sisters. His brother is Thomas M. McNeil, and his sisters, Mrs. Thomas Sheahan of Crescent street, and Miss Elizabeth McNeil a teacher at the Willard school.

RULLOW TO GO FREE

Russian Government Has Done Nothing to Support Claim

Andrew Rullow, arrested at Squantum, also known as Julius Wezosol, the alleged fugitive from Russia, whose case comes up on continuance tomorrow will be discharged then by U. S. Commissioner Hayes, says the Globe. The time limit of 40 days, which, under the treaty with Russia, the United States holds an alleged fugitive for the receipt of evidence expires then and nothing has been received to support the demand of the Russian government.

It is understood that the Russian government believes that at the time of the crime which he is accused of having committed, Rullow was studying music in Geneva. When arrested, Rullow was charged with the theft of $50,000 or 100,000 roubles. It is said that Rullow was trying to effect the sale of some of the roubles, which have been seized. The Russian government is believed to have cancelled their payment.

CHRISTMAS FOR LABRADOR FOLK

The last shipment from Boston direct to Dr. Grenfell's headquarters at St. Anthony, northern Newfoundland, will be made Sept. 27. Friends having any Christmas message for the poor of that country should send it to 42 River street, Boston, before Sept. 23. Clothing for children, even second-hand if in good repair, as well as books and toys will be happily received.

NICKERSON WITHDRAWS

Will Not be Candidate for the Legislature

Ex-Councilman Nathan G. Nickerson of Ward Five whose name will appear on the ballots at the caucuses next week has written the following letter which is self explanatory:

Mr. W. N. Chase, Chairman of the Republican City Committee, Quincy, Mass.

My dear Mr. Chase:—At the solicitation of a large number of my friends I allowed my name to be used as a candidate to the Legislature from our district. On further consideration, believing that this would not be beneficial to the Republican party, I have decided to withdraw. Not being familiar with the law and consulting Mr. Harrison A. Keith, City Clerk, I find it is impossible to have my name withdrawn from the official ballot, and I take this means of publicly stating that I am not a candidate, and will not accept the nomination under any consideration.

Yours very truly,
N. G. Nickerson.

Representative Louis F. R. Langelier of Ward Six will now have a clean field for the Republican nomination and will be reelected.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A Cleveland justice declares that picking pockets is not robbery. He is evidently a bachelor.

A tenth of the Indian population is now at school. That is right; we are glad to see the Indians get something for their money.

The Treasury Department says it is going to stop coining gold. So far as we have been able to note this sort of coinage has been stopped a long time now.

A New Jersey justice rules that to procure a marriage license a man must be "sober and in his right mind." That will bar a good many of them, anyway.

The School department of the Daily Ledger, on page two of this issue, will be found of unusual interest. There are several innovations and live topics both under High school notes, the Woodward Institute, the Parochial school and other schools. It is a regular Thursday feature of the Daily Ledger.

We hear no criticism of the location selected for the Court House site. If it is well adapted to the needs of the courts it is very satisfactory to the people generally. The need of the removal of the building occupied by Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company is more than ever, as it hides both the public Library and the Court House.

It seems that Quincy is a "City of Ships" as well as the "City of Presidents" and the "Granite City." At the launching of the Currier this week Mayor Shea jocosely remarked that "We have our air-ships at Atlantic. Here you have your war-ships, and at City Hall we have our hard-ships." Never mind "Bill" as long as there is good fellowship, and you have the friend-ship of the voters. The Ship of State does not need you in the Senate as much as does the City of Ships in the Executive chair.

The city should not be extravagant in its expenditures for water extensions. In a growing city like Quincy where new localities and streets are being opened up every year the needs may be numerous, but $30,000 has already been appropriated this year, and where it is borrowed on a 30-year loan the cost is over $60000. The sum of $30,000 should have included both water meters and extensions, so that some progress could have been made in metering. Now the City Council is asked to appropriate $10,000 for water extensions and $10,000 for meters. Better combine the two and make it $10,000 for extensions and meters and borrow on a ten year loan.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The Greater Boston scheme of course could not be forced down upon citizens of the outlying suburbs against their will. Any plan of consolidation must be dependent upon their acceptance of an act upon referendum. This certainly makes any possible process one of education. For we cannot today discover that there is one community on the border of Boston which would vote for annexation. To get them in will require, if it is ever acomplished, a showing of definite benefits and a guarantee against increase of burdens or undesirable attachments.—Boston Record.

—The savings banks depositors of New England have to their credit enough money to buy at par the capital stock of all the banks in the United States, and still have left a balance twice as great as the savings banks deposits of the whole South, Maryland included. Native stock's inherited habits of thrift have been communicated to an increasing percentage of foreign extraction.

WOULD REOPEN ADAMS ACADEMY

Former Pupils Now Dislike to Pass That Way

Editors of Daily Ledger:

Quincy has always pointed with pride to the things which connect her with a wonderful past, the sites, landmarks and buildings which bear the name of those who have given our city her fame and reputation. Visitors are shown the Presidents houses, the Dorothy Q house, and the Church of the Presidents. They are told that different organizations make good use of the birthplaces of the Presidents and the Dorothy Q house. The church is still used for religious purposes and the tombs of the Presidents and their wives are shown to those who have an interest in historical affairs. And standing on the steps of the church, the guide points out the old burial ground with its historic associations.

But what of Adams Academy. The guide can tell of the historic associations of this too, but of what use is it standing there occupied by nothing but memories of the dead? How is it rendering any better service to the city than the old burial ground?

When President John Adams gave the funds for this school it was with the understanding that it should be used for education along classical lines, and for many years his wishes were carried out under such masters as Mr. Dimmock, Mr. Tyler and Dr. Everett. And now the old school house is closed, the work has ceased and those who have studied within those walls dislike to pass that way.

What an infinite improvement it would be if some of the boys of our city could go there to gain knowledge along classical lines or along any lines which would train them for citizenship? Is there not an opportunity offered those who have obtained in that old school the inspiration which gave them success in life, or which has started them on the road to it? To start the work afresh and enliven those dead memories is a task for those who love the Academy, a golden opportunity to pay that debt of gratitude which would otherwise remain unpaid. The Alumni association is large and should be prosperous.

If a movement were started to rededicate the school, all who have loved and respected these men who have conducted work there, all who have gone forth better fitted to meet the world, should answer the call and lend a hand in fulfilling the desire not only of the founder but of those noblemen who gave their lives in the service of the school.

But if it should not be deemed expedient ,or if the possibility of raising the necessary funds for reopening the school should be slight, there is another alternative. The time will soon come if it is not already at hand, when the High school will need an auxiliary. Aside from opening it as a private school to what better use could the Academy be put? To be sure it would be modernizing the old institution, and there are those who would tell us that it would be in opposition to the wishes of President Adams, and not in accordance with the stipulations with which the bequeathment was made.

Now Mr. Adams was a man of ability, a man of brains or it is not likely that he would have been elected President of the United States. As time goes on customs and ideas must necessarily change, and it is becoming more and more evident each year that the spirit rather than the letter of the law is to be followed. The ablest and deepest thinkers of our generation have decreed this. Why not make an application of this principle to the present case.

If President Adams could speak to us down through the years would he not say that the Academy must be used? He was an economical man, a sane man, a wise man, and he would not be satisfied with having the school serve only as a marker of the birthplace of John Hancock, worthy as that object is. The boys of our city should be within its walls, improving their minds and learning the principles of citizenship for which the President stood so resolutely.

But argument is of little avail if not followed by action. Let every alumnus exert his influence toward having the Academy put to some good use, if not as an institution of learning, at any rate as a fitting memorial of days that have gone by. And when our visitor shall come again we can point with pride to the little schoolhouse and say with a great deal of satisfaction in answer to their question, "Yes, it is being used." Within ,the very walls are saturated with the learning of the years and need but the spark of life to kindle once again the fires of youth. And once this is accomplished, the light of knowledge must needs soon shine forth.

Alumnus.

Quincy, Sept. 20, 1910.

THE NEED OF WORK.

Life Without It Would Be Absolutely Tedious and Lustreless.

The complaint of being overworked is oftener heard than the lament that life is tedious and lustreless because of insufficient occupation. Many men seem to relish hard labor, addressing themeselves as eagerly to any task before them as a person who is famished sits down at last to a square meal. They are not content to wait with folded hands till work is assigned them; they are always on the still hunt for an additional opportunity of service. They are their own severest taskmasters, and not eye servants, watching the clock till the long day is ended and they can hurry away from the workbench with impunity. A man's work, if it is worth anything, is always larger than himself. The man who first climbed the Matterhorn kept on trying after seven successive failures. . Gore, the blind Senator from Oklahoma, realized his ambition because, helped by his wife, he was determined to win in spite of his handicap. Edison had the brain of a great inventor, but some of his results were due as much to perspiration as to inspiration. His wonderful achievements were not the fruition of casual effort or happy accident; he worked without reference to office hours, and he finally got what he was after.

When Benjamin Jowett was master of Balliol they brought before him a young Siamese princeling who was making a miserable failure of his career at Oxford. The rumor ran in college circles that before the examinations the scion of royalty had received from his father a telegram: "Fourteen youths of the nobler sort have been sacrificed as a propitiatory offering." But the desperate measure was of no avail, and the prince had been "plucked" by the examiners.

"How many hours a day do you work, sir?" asked Jowett sternly.

"Oh, master, I work very hard. Sometimes I work as much as four hours a day."

"When I was your age I worked thirteen," said the great scholar. One who was present at the interview says that the impressiveness of his answer was not diminished by the prince's response: "But then, master, you have such a very big head!"

President Eliot used to tell the students at Harvard College that they would find their greatest pleasure in work, impressing upon them that in work there was as much fun to be found as at play. He likewise taught that innocent diversion had its place in the well-ordered life of every human being: that those who had no opportunity to play were likely to grow up spiritually as well as physically crippled; that Providence never intended that the poorest should toil unremittingly or that the rich should amuse themselves unceasingly.—Boston Courier.

WHY HE ADVERTISES.

A prominent business man of Michigan explans why he advertises and why he uses newspaper for that purpose as follows:

"I advertise in the newspaper because I am not ashamed of my goods, or my work and to let people know about myself, my store and my stock because I cater to the intelligent class and they read the newspapers and I believe in increasing my business; because I can talk to more people through the newspapers at a greater distance in less time and at a more reasonable price than in any other way; because my newspaper advertising has brought me greater returns for the least expenditure of any advertising I have done; because I know my ad. is seen and read by everyone in the house where the paper goes."

—Those who are fond of oysters will have to pay well for them this season but it is also true that while the price has been raised owing to the pure food laws, the cans also contain almost solid oysters and not half water as was often the case in the past. Ninety-nine oyster beds in Rhode Island, covering 1,500 acres have been condemned by the shellfish commissioners of Rhode Island, because of the pollution of the water, and the oysters will have to be moved to cleaner beds before they can be sold.—Exchange.

GIRL OF 8 SPEAKS IN FIVE LANGUAGES

Winifred Stoner Rivals Harvard Pupil Who Matriculated at Age of 11, but Still Likes Dolls and Outdoor Romping.

Taught Latin From Cradle Days Instead of Nursery Rhymes and Published Volume of Jingles When 6 Years Old.

LITTLE Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr., the linguistic wonder of Palo Alto, Cal., seems in her accomplishments to surpass all records of precocity.

The recorded feats of intellect of Thomas Babington Macaulay, Thomas De Quincey, John Stuart Mill, Margaret Fuller, Charlotte Bronte and other famous characters of history pale before the fact that this little girl, only eight years old, can carry on a conversation in English, French, Spanish, Latin, Esperanto, Japanese, Russian, German, Polish and Italian, while in the first five she can think as well as talk.

Her only known rival in early intellectual development is William James Sidis, the boy who at the age of eleven years entered Harvard last autumn. But the accomplishments of Sidis are more especially in mathematics and philosophy, while little Miss Stoner shows her femininity by her acquisition of languages. Withal she is a healthy, normal child, as fond of dolls and play as any other little girl who knows only one language.

Parents Well Educated.

The father of little Cherie, as her parents call her, is Colonel J. B. Stoner of the United States marine hospital service, at present in command of the United States marine hospital at Port Townsend, Wash. It was from Port Townsend that the mother and child went to Palo Alto in search of a better climate. The mother is a daughter of the late Lord Sackville-West, British ambassador to the United States during President Cleveland's first administration. Mrs. Stoner is president of the Women's Esperanto Association of North America and is an authority on the subject of the proposed international language.

"Her advancement," said her mother, "is not due to anything but the way in which she was educated. I began with her when she was three weeks old, developing her both mentally and physically, and the effect of the teaching and method is apparent. The method used is the training of William James Sidis, the Boston lad. The secret is to make their training play for them.

"At the age of three she could operate the typewriter. That is a wonderful method of training a child's mind. In writing on the typewriter she not only learned to operate the instrument, but she learned also to spell and to memorize what she was writing. Cherie began to compose verse when she was three years old, and one of her poems written at that age was published in Puck."

When little Winifred was summoned she showed all the bashfulness of a child. She came into the room half concealed behind her mother's skirts.

Personal Pathos In Verse.

"Will you recite a poem?" suggested Mrs. Stoner.

Little Miss Poetess chose one of her own efforts. This was her verse:

One day I saw a bumblebee bumbling on a rose,
And as I stood admiring him he stung me on the nose.
My nose in pain it swelled so large it looked like a potato,
So daddy said, though mother thought 'twas more like a tomato.
And now, dear children, this advice I hope you'll take from me,
And when you see a bumblebee just let that bumble be.

"She wrote that after she had been stung, but the pun was not intentional, I think," said Mrs. Stoner, who would limit the scope of her daughter's talent.

The poem on the bumblebee is one of the pieces published in the book of "Jingles," which Miss Winifred Sackville Stoner published at the age of six. The child's most precocious and autobiographical poem is the second in the little book. It is called "A Great Surprise" and was "written for mother and daddy."

On the nineteenth day of August in the year of nineteen two Most kind and gracious Mme. Stork right over Norfolk flew
And brought to my dear mother there a wonderful surprise,
A little red brown baby girl with large blackberry eyes.
Now mother she had asked the stork to bring to her much joy
And drop a bundle at her door containing a wee boy,
But when the stork made a mistake and brought just little me
She thought that I was better far than any boy could be
And wrapped me in a blanket which she'd planned for my wee brother
And which my dear "Ma Mie" had knit to help my busy mother
And changed the name of Lionel to little Winifred,
And all the things for brother planned she gave to me instead.

That tells of the arrival of little Winifred at Norfolk, Va., eight years ago. It practically gives the date when her education began.

Taught From Birth.

"When did you first start to teach Cherie?" was asked.

"As soon as she was born," replied Mrs. Stoner. "That is the secret of her training. Children's minds are like wax, subject to an impression. In her nursery I placed beautiful pictures on the walls and reproductions of beautiful statues, not expensive works of art, but the models of the best.

"Then from the first she was accustomed to the best literature. We did not recite the silly nursery rhymes to her, but only the best. Instead of telling her the usual stories that are told children I related to her the stories from the Bible and from mythology. When Cherie was three months old I would read to her from the Latin writers. I would recite for her such poems as 'Crossing the Bar.'

"When she was six months old she could walk, and when she was eight months old she could talk," related Mrs. Stoner. "When she was a year old she could scan from Virgil, and at two years she could read. She did read when she was a year and a half old, but I think then she did not really read, but used her memory. From the first I taught her languages."

Cherie said her favorite play was "The Merchant of Venice," but her mother opined that it was "The Taming of the Shrew." The child's knowledge of mythology led her to name her kittens after the three graces, and when two more came she dubbed them Zeus and Aphrodite. But her two dolls bear the prosaic names of Charley and Lucy, and they are being "taught" by their infant mother as Mrs. Stoner teaches Cherie.

Educators Are Interested.

Throughout the country college professors and educators have taken the utmost interest in little Cherie's development. Professor George Macloskie of Princeton university has studied her, and not only that, but shared the honors with the child at a recital at the Esperanto congress at Chautauqua, N. Y., when the little miss was seven years of age. At the age of four the child received a medal from Dr. Zamen, founder of Esperanto, for her proficiency.

The little girl is not a fit subject for the public graded schools, for, while she has the historical and language education of half a dozen college graduates, her mathematical training, unlike that of young William James Sidis, her Boston compeer and hero of the fourth dimension, is not unusually precocious—for her. She can only do fractions and decimals, while most children of her age are learning what numbers look like. She is learning arithmetic by correspondence with Professor F. R. Hornbrook of Chicago.

HOME BUG CATCHER WINNER

Oregon Man Successfully Invents Protector For Orchards.

In the country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregon man who probably had his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species patented a trap for the pests.

A barrel has pieces cut out of the upper portion and is half filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odoriferous fruit. On top of the barrel is placed a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that keeps the basin from falling off the barrel hangs a lantern.

In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the lantern is lighted, and bugs will come from afar to flutter against it and meet their death in the liquid below.

Phones For Freight Trains.

Freight trains on one of the leading eastern railroads are to be equipped with telephones. In case of a breakdown between stations it is often difficult to communicate with the dispatcher, and it is expected that the telephones will do away with the delays due to this cause.

GEMS EASILY IMITATED.

Buyers of Sapphires and Rubies May Get Artificial Product.

A gem expert of the British museum in a lecture the other day warned lay buyers of precious stones against investing in sapphires and rubies, which, he said, could now be produced artificially in such perfect condition that the difference between the product of the mine and that of the laboratory was all but imperceptible.

The latest synthetic stones indeed are so perfect that even under a microscope their genuineness or not as a natural product cannot be positively guaranteed.

European pawnbrokers are very chary of lending money on rubies especially, and consequently there is a slump in the value of that stone. The Russian czar suffers in pocket by this, as he owns one of the finest collections of rubies in the world. The St. Petersburg court jewelers estimate the loss in value of the czar's rubies at $4,000,000. Some time ago he tried to take out a policy of insurance on them, but no company would accept the risk.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

The School Department of the Daily Ledger is published every Thursday. It is not now confined to High school notes but includes the High, the Woodward, the public schools, the Parochial school, and other schools. The Daily Ledger invites the cooperation of teachers and pupils and also graduates and others to make this department interesting.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The formation of a High school athletic association was discussed Monday morning when all the pupils were assembled. Head Master Howlett spoke in favor of such an organization. He believed that it would give the school a definite working basis for the support of the athletic teams. In the majority of the High schools of the State the experience has been that by means of an organized association the interest in athletics was made more general ,as each one could feel that he had a part to play, and the financial question was very much simplified. In past years money has been raised by voluntary contributions from the scholars and the merchants about town. If an athletic association were formed and the pupils did their part by joining it, the whole idea of the thing would be changed for the better. There would not have to be any begging, and the nominal fee which would be charged for membership would be within the means of everybody. An organization which is self supporting always has greater self respect and creates greater interest in the object for which it strives.

Hammond Pride, '09, started for Amherst Saturday. In his freshman year Pride distinguished himself as a student and there can be no doubt but that he, as well as all the others who have gone there from our High school, will support its good name with credit.

Allison Marsh, '09, returned to Amherst college Monday. "Ell" is making good not only in scholastic lines but in athletics. Last year he was on the heavy gym team and the swimming team, and played on his class baseball team as well. We can expect to hear good reports of him later.

The new lunch room opened very successfully Monday morning. At the opening of school all the pupils were summoned to the assembly hall where Mr. Howlett explained the plans. When the scholars went to their home rooms they found the following menu written on the boards:

Sandwiches, 2 for 5c.
Cocoa with cream and 2 graham wafers, 5c.
Sweet chocolate, 5c.
Milk, 2 cookies, 5c.
Bananas, 2 for 5c.
Tomato soup, 5c.
Vanilla ice cream, 5c.

When recess time came the novelty of the thing as well as the pangs of hunger led a large crowd to the third floor to sample the various articles of food mentioned on the bill of fare. The seating capacity of the lunch room is 400, and the hall was well filled with customers, all of whom seemed to be well satisfied with the new scheme. No food could be taken out of the lunch room. This restriction was made for sanitary reasons and the wisdom of the precaution should outweigh the desire for more freedom on the part of the scholars.

Another phase of the lunch room question is the matter of ground restrictions. Formerly the pupils could go as far as Merrymount road to the south ,this enabling them to get lunch at the stores. Now that means have been provided within the school, it is no longer necessary for the scholars to go outside for lunch and thus the boundary has been shortened so as to give them only the freedom of the school yard at recess.

The boys seemed to be the best customers and this is not surprising, since the reputation of having superior appetites has always been a source of pride to boys in general.

The woman who is assisting the head of the department has been in similar work at the Woman's Industrial Union in Boston, and understands it thoroughly. After the lunch room is in good working order even better satisfaction than is felt at present, will follow. A number of the girls in the domestic science department have been acting as waiters and although no definite arrangements have been made yet, probably those who serve in this way will be given their lunches at least.

Many of the pupils take their own lunches from home and eat them outside the school. It is not desirable that they should go up to the lunch room for that purpose as the customers are liable to take up all the space. It has been estimated that all the pupils and teachers could be served during the recess period under ordinary circumstances provided that the customers went out as soon as they were through.

The frequent reference to successful corps of cadets in other suburban High schools brings the matter of the formation of a company in our own High school to our attention. Military training is helpful both as a means of physical development and for disciplinary reasons.

The Quincy High school is free from over-organization. They are few if any clubs in connection with the school and a company or two of cadets would be an asset to it. There are many boys in the school who feel that they are not good enough athletes to try for any of the teams. All these should have some definite form of exercise. This would open a new field of activity for them and would undoubtedly prove to be a great benefit to all. And aside from all these things the training received might prove invaluable to many of the pupils in after life. Why not organize a corps of cadets in Quincy High school? This does not necessarily mean, prepare the boys for the army, but it does mean, give those who are studious, those who are lazy and those who are growing rapidly give them a chance to straighten up and develop symmetrically. Attention! Forward march!

Coach Byrne of the High school football team witnessed the Waltham-Providence game last Saturday. The new rules intimidated both sides for a time, but during the latter part of the game one or two new plays were tried. The three intermissions of three minutes each gave the players sufficient breathing space, and the tendency seemed to be to work harder while the play was going on, since the periods were so much shorter than under the old rules. Near the end of the game Waltham tried a forward pass but the ball did not go 20 yards and was brought back and given to the Providence team. Waltham proved altogether too stiff a proposition for the Rhode Island team and defeated them by a score of 56 to 0.

The Lynn evening school opens next Monday the 26th. The sessions will be held Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 6.30 to 9.30. High school, grammar and elementary courses will be offered and special instruction will be given in drawing. In general the same idea will be followed as in the Quincy schools.

Owing to the conditions last year, football has been prohibited at Bridgewater Normal school by a vote of the facutly. The chief interest of the pupils who are athletically inclined will be in basket ball.

Middleboro High school will be represented by a football team as usual. Dalton Penniman is the manager for this year. The first game on the schedule is one with Plymouth High school on Oct. 1.

Gymnasium work for both High and grammar school pupils in the town of Easton started this week.

The football candidates have been practising daily in preparation for the opening contest with Cambridge High school next Tuesday. The average weight of the team will be higher than usual this year, probably reaching as high as 155 pounds. The line will average 170. So far the candidates for the positions on the line have been rather disappointing. The ends however, are fast and sure, H. Chapman showing up particularly well. The centre of the line is where the trouble comes. The men lack knowledge of the game, and all are slow. Moreover, they do not seem inclined to work. Coach Byrne cannot make them realize that if they do not get hardened and work off a little fat they will be more liable to receive injury. The new material does not lack in weight but in speed and accuracy there is much to be desired. There is less trouble with the backfield, and by the time of the opening game it should be whipped into pretty decent shape.

In the scrimmages, when the second team was given the ball, the superior weight of their opponents proved their undoing, but when the first team had the ball, the lighter men in turn seemed to be equally successful in stopping varsity. The line could not make holes for the backs, and not only that, but they acted as stumbling blocks for them.

The game with Cambridge should be a good one, provided that the line can be brought to life. Mr. Cleveland's boys will come with a team possibly a little stronger than the home team, but if the men will only get down to work, the chances for victory will be good.

The first game means much to any team. If it results in a victory, the whole season's work will be better, provided of course that the victory is well earned, and on the other hand, defeat serves as a damper unless that defeat comes hard. Thus it appears to be up to the line to brace up and obey orders.

There has been some difficulty owing to the lack of suits and shoes. A collection was taken this week which brought $40 into the treasury, but a great deal more can be used immediately to advantage.

All these things point to great discouragement all round, but school spirit can surmount all obstacles, and here is a chance for its demonstration, not only on the part of the team but in the student body as a whole.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

All the graded schools in the city are represented in the new class at Woodward, with the exception of the John Hancock. South Quincy sends more than any other section of the city, while Wollaston, West Quincy and Ward One average about the same. Atlantic and Quincy Point fall some distance below the average. In addition to those coming from the Quincy schools there is one from East Weymouth and one from Boston, but both born in Quincy. The number coming from the different schools is as follows: Adams, 12; Willard, 10; Massachusetts Fields, 6; Lincoln, 6; Cranch, 6; Coddington, 5; Wollaston, 4; Washington, 3; Quincy, 2; Gridley Bryant, 1. In general the distribution of this class is about the average ,although there are a few more from the outlying districts than usual.

The entering class at the Woodward Institute numbers 59, the largest that has ever entered the school. Following is the list of names ,all being Quincy born:

Kathrene Adams	Hilder Ellison
Alice Ash	Abbie Emery
Alice Beal	Mary Ferguson
Ethel Beal	Mildred Fleming
Gladys Bishop	Ruth Fratus
Helen Bishop	Edith Freburg
Marie Boisclaire	Ruth Galvin
Esther Boyson	Mary Goodhue

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Since the opening of the St. Johns school on Phipps street many applicants for admission have appeared and all have been accommodated, although some of the rooms are crowded. Two rooms on the second floor will be used as soon as the chairs and desks arrive. These were promised for last week but there has been a delay in shipment, and it was necessary to procure folding chairs for use until the new fittings arrive. One room has 86 pupils, another 81, a third 76, and so on.

When the two new rooms are ready for occupancy, there will be a redivision of the grades, making an average of fifty to a room. At present there are over 450 scholars and in January it is likely that the 500 mark will be reached.

There is an abundance of room in the school and the trouble comes chiefly in getting the equipment delivered. The third floor is wholly unoccupied at present. It is arranged differently from the other two, in the centre is an assembly hall and on either end the regulation recitation room. The assembly hall is so arranged that it can be divided by putting up a partition and made into two recitation rooms. This will probably be necessary in the course of a few years, since the rapid growth of the school is assured.

At present there are pupils from East Braintree which is of course outside the parish, and there is at least one Protestant child in the school.

There are six sisters teaching in the school, including the Sister Superior, who has generall supervision over all the grades. When the two new rooms are ready at least two new teachers will be required. The Sisters occupy the Convent which is adjacent to the school. Both buildings are so constructed that they can be enlarged when necessary.

The schoolhouse is only half the size it will eventually become. All the recitation rooms are on the Phipps street side. Along the other side is a corridor running the full length of the building on all three floors. The other half of the building can be attached on that side and the corridors will be common to both halves.

All the woodwork in the building is hard pine with a mahogany stain. The walls are covered with green burlap to a height of four feet. The upper part is tinted with green, all of which harmonizes very well with the mahogany stain on the woodwork. Specialists tell us that green is the most restful color for the eyes, and thus is the best for use in the schoolroom. The work on the inside of the building is nearly completed and the grading is being hurried through as quickly as possible.

It is Father Coan's intention to have a thoroughly equipped playground back of the school toward Gay street. There is splendid opportunity for a handball court, running track, baseball ground, swings, seesaws and many other things which children enjoy, and probably these will be put in if not this fall at any rate in the spring. On the roof of the school building outdoor classes can be conducted, or it can be used for various purposes such as light gymnastics, etc.

The basement will be given over in part to the Holy Name society. Bowling alleys, billiard tables, a reading room and numerous other advantages will be offered to the members. Entrance can be made by a lower door, so that it will not interfere with the school at all.

The whole arrangement is excellent. Mr. Untersee, the architect, has designed many of the churches and schools on the other side of Boston, and also planned the Brookline gymnasium, which is considered perfect architecturally. Everything in connection with the building is in good taste, and is also practical, which is of course the first requisite.

When the grading is completed, and the new walks are put in, the appearance of the school will be greatly improved from the outside, and the general effect should be very artistic. Once again we take pleasure in congratulating Father Coan upon the success of this enterprise.

OTHER SCHOOLS.

The Greenleaf school opened Monday morning for its 39th year. Miss Wright has engaged the same corps of teachers for the coming year and the outlook is very promising for success in all ways. The entering class is larger than usual and practically all below the graduating class of last year are back. If the opening can be taken for an omen, the auspices are favorable for a prosperous year.

The free evening schools of the city will be opened a week from Monday. The Adams and Willard buildings will be used Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings for instruction in English. The High school building will be used four nights a week for classes in drawing, cooking, sewing, dressmaking, business, arithemtic, penmanship, spelling, correspondence, elementary bookkeeping and civil service.

Another year at the Quincy Mansion school for-young ladies will soon open. The regular course of study at this excellent school requires four years. The elective studies include ancient and modern languages, Latin, Greek, French, Italian and German; physiology, physical geography, physics, chemistry, biology; logic, mental and moral science; art; music. Pupils are not required to take more than eighteeen periods of regular study per week, nor are they allowed to take more than twenty periods unless for some good reason, as, for example, when many of the studies are review work. Six hours of the day are devoted to study or recitation and one hour of the evening to study.

At a meeting of the Thayer Academy Athletic Association which was held recently, Joseph Lincoln of Quincy was elected secretary.

The free kindergarten school at Wollaston was reopened on Monday with a large attendance. Thirty-four children between the ages of four and six appeared on the opening day and within the next week or two this number will be increased to forty or more. This work is in charge of a kindergarten committee of fifteen of which Miss Fannie Johnson is chairman. The school, which is located at 15 Lincoln avenue is taught by Miss Grace Parker. A senior in the Kindergarten Normal school of Boston is assisting her. The children are given as much outdoor work as possible. Each one has his own plot of ground for a garden which is cultivated with the help of the teacher. This is the fourth year of kindergarten work in Wollaston and each year has proven more successful than the last. Undoubtedly this year will be the best of all.

In another column will be found a letter relative to the reopening of Adams Academy, which will be of interest to the alumni and others.

The total enrollment of Thayer Academy at Braintree this year is 93. There are 37 new pupils including Claudea Rupp Wilson, Emily Elizabeth Beattie, George Forsythe Jennings and Noah Phillips Hardy of Quincy.

MRS. STORER'S NEW EVIDENCE

Produced In Returning to Attack on Roosevelt

QUOTES UNPUBLISHED LETTERS

Says Her Husband Was Asked to Visit Pope and Urge Him to Make Archbishop Ireland a Cardinal as Personal Favor to the Then President—Roosevelt Sought Berth In Navy Department, She Declares

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 22.—The Republican prints today a letter from Mrs. Bellamy Storer, written in France, Sept. 6, reviewing the controversy between the Storers and Mr. Roosevelt, concerning the former president's alleged authorization of the former ambassador to Austria-Hungary to visit Pope Pius X and ask him as a personal favor to the President of the United States to make Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul a cardinal.

Letters written by the archbishop in 1903 and 1904, hitherto unpublished, are quoted by Mrs. Storer to show that at repeated interviews in the White House between the archbishop and the president, Roosevelt acknowledged that he had commissioned Storer to act as his personal envoy at the Vatican in behalf of the archbishop.

Mr. Roosevelt has hitherto publicly denied that Storer was ever authorized to represent him in this manner, and the Ireland letters now published by Mrs. Storer have the effect of making much sharper the issue of veracity between the Storers and the ex-president.

Mrs. Storer's letter to The Republican also seeks to prove, on the testimony of Ireland, that President Roosevelt promised to make Storer United States ambassador either at Paris or London; and there is included still another letter alleged to have been written by Roosevelt to Storer, just after the presidential election in 1896, in which Roosevelt asked Storer to see President-elect McKinley and urge him to appoint Roosevelt assistant secretary of the navy.

This last letter seems to confute a recent assertion in The Outlook that Roosevelt never sought a public office, except when he sought a presidential nomination in 1904.

PARADE OF VETERANS

Eighteen Thousand Grand Army Men March at Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 22.—The grizzled veterans of the Union army, bent with weight of years but with the spirit which won them many a victory on the battlefield, marched in review here.

These members of the dwindling Grand Army of the Republic, which is holding its annual encampment here, were acclaimed all along the flag-bedecked avenues by the biggest crowd that ever saw a parade in Atlantic City.

Eighteen thousand is the estimated number of veterans who passed the grand stand and received the salute of their commander-in-chief, the Vice President of the United States and the governor of New Jersey.

AFTER LONG SEARCH

Boston Indian Discovers Daughter Is Queen of Gypsy Camp

Pittsburg, Sept. 22.—After searching almost every state in the union for a period of a year and a half, Peter Gies of Boston, an Indian, found his 16-year-old daughter at Linhart, near East Pittsburg.

The girl was with a band of gypsies and having married a son of the chief had been proclaimed queen of the band. Gies upon greeting his daughter found he had been a grandfather for forty-eight hours.

"Lizzie" Gies, according to the father, disappeared from their home in Boston early in 1909, and it was thought then that she had been stolen by gypsies, who were encamped nearby.

The Cookbook.

Whipped cream is the best sauce to serve with shortcake.

A dash of curry is believed by some epicures to be an improvement to fried and poached eggs.

A cup of milk added to the water in which oatmeal is cooked makes it much richer and adds a great deal to the flavor.

A spoonful of sugar added to the water for basting meat will give it a rich brown color, and the flavor will be much improved.

You can't a mule, you know,
If the cranky, measly long-eared mutt
Just doesn't care to go.

BRIEFS

Registration tonight at City Hall.

Joint caucuses of the Republican and Democratic parties next Tuesday.

A daughter was born on Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon of Adams street.

Congratulations are being received by Mr. and Mrs. G. Hillman Eggleton (Maude B. Cameron) of Francis terrace on the birth of a daughter, Wednesday, Sept. 21.

Souvenir postals are being received from Arthur W. Stetson who is at Atlanta, Georgia, attending the 66th annual session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F.

At the executive meeting of the East Norfolk C. E. Union held Wednesday evening, Miss Ida L. Thomas was chosen delegate to the State convention which will be held in Springfield next week.

Every one meeting E. B. Langley of Hancock street wonders why he is wearing such a happy smile. When it is known that a little daughter arrived at his home Wednesday night the reason is plain. After nine years of married life the little one is very welcome and he says he's willing to walks the floor o'er nights he is so proud at being a daddy.

CAREY FOR GOVERNOR

Democratic Ticket In Wyoming Is Headed by a Republican

Sheridan, Wyo., Sept. 22.—The Wyoming state Democratic convention nominated former United States Senator Joseph Carey, an independent Republican, for governor.

The platform was constructed to show approval of Carey, and is notable in the absence of any condemnation of the national Republican administration. It favors the initiative, referendum and recall, the Oregon direct primary law and the Australian headless ballot system.

SOUL-DUTY.

Harry R. Blythe.

Whether in tears or laughter
My paths of life shall run,
And whether in the hereafter
Goal, or no goal be won:

Whether life is deception
Or some mad real thing,
Whether a rose-reception
Or thorns that prick and sting:

Whether the love that lingers
Or love that flies away,
Whether the moving fingers
Shall write of pain or play:

Still, in the land of living
The while I pass it through,
The best I must be giving,
I must be strong and true.

Doctor and Nurse Drowned

Littleton, Mass., Sept. 22.—Dr. O. N. Dages of Boston and Miss Monai Gibson of Manchester, N. H., a nurse, were drowned in Fort pond here. Miss Gibson and Miss Lona Westover, who were in bathing, got beyond their depth and when Dages sought to rescue them he was pulled down by Miss Gibson and they drowned together, while Miss Westover escaped.

DANGEROUS TO PUBLIC WEAL

"Pork Barrel" Legislation Is Denounced by Taft

DAYS SHOULD BE NUMBERED

Condemns Selfish Combinations of Majority Seeking to Spend Money For Temporary Benefits—Legislation Should Always Be For Whole People—Suggests Improvements of Ohio River From Pittsburg to Cairo

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—President Taft delivered an address in this city on the occasion of the opening of the Ohio river dam. Referring to dangerous legislation, the president said:

"The evil of the corrupt control of a congress or a legislature by private interests is manifest and always calls for condemnation. But there is another kind of legislative abuse as dangerous to public weal in certain of its aspects as corruption, and that is the selfish combination of the representatives of the majority of the constituencies to expend the money of the government for the temporary benefit of a part or with little benefit to the whole.

"It is the duty of the majority and the minority to legislate always for the benefit of the whole people, and any enactments that look to the selfish exploitation of less than the whole at the expense of the whole, and without the benefit to the whole, is a species of legislative abuse that comes very near corruption in its effect, and is perhaps more dangerous than corruption, because of those who support its defense.

"The days of the pork barrel should be numbered. The country is roused against the corporate or corrupt control of legislative agencies, but it is doubtful whether the constituencies as yet are able to perceive the higher obligation on the part of themselves and their representatives not to use their votes in combination to appropriate to a part that which belongs to the whole."

Taking up the cause of the day's fete the president said:

"Today your are celebrating the opening of another great improvement which must in the future have much to do with the business growth of the city. I mean the improvement of the Ohio river from Pittsburg to Cairo.

"The distance from Pittsburg to Cairo, by way of the Ohio river, is 967 miles. During the months of February, March and April, the river is full and has a depth of certainly nine feet from one end to the other for purposes of navigation. During the months of August, September and October the river is low, and in many places at low water the depth is considerably less than six feet.

"Notwithstanding the difficulties of navigation during these months, and, indeed, during other months of the year, for the variations are not confined to the months stated, there is today a transportation of freight on the river amounting to over 9,000,000 tons, and in the carriage of coal, the cost per ton mile, that is the cost for carrying a ton of coal one mile, is four-tenths of a mill—a lower rate in transportation than is known elsewhere in this country.

"The Ohio river drains an area of 210,000 square miles, and in that area is a population of 125,000,000. At the head of the river is the greatest iron manufacturing centre in the world, and in its immediate vicinity is one of the greatest coal-producing territories. Along the river, from its source to its mouth, are the seats of various manufacturing industries, and the country tributary to the river produces various kinds of agricultural products.

"Not only do the products differ between one end of the river and the other, so as to suggest profit in exchange, but the river empties into the Mississippi and by the Mississippi is brought into water communication with the south, where the products are so distinctly different from those of the north and so much in demand for consumption there as to lead to the rational expectation that if the navigation of the two rivers were made practical and more economical than railroad communication there would be a much greater trade than now exists. The plan to improve the Ohio river in its character looks especially to the development of this up-stream trade.

"The official plan recommended by the army engineers provides for fifty-four new locks and dams, which, arranged with reference to the existing locks and dams, will make the up-stream navigation in ordinary heights of water something like lake navigation, from Cairo to Pittsburg, and will preserve for the twelve months of the year a constant depth of nine feet. The uncertainty with reference to the depth of the water in the river has greatly hindered the use of the river for continuous transportation."

EMPEROR MUTSUHITO

Conspirators Are Said to Have Planned His Death

PLOT TO KILL MIKADO

Would-Be Assassins Are Foiled and Placed Under Arrest

Tokio, Sept. 22.—A plot has been discovered to assassinate Emperor Mutsuhito and the plotters are already under arrest, according to a sensational publication in the Hochi Shimbun, which states that the men will be given secret trials.

It is understood that a rigorous censorship has prevented the publication of so much as a hint of the conspiracy until last evening, when the Hochi Shimbun assumed responsibility for the alarming announcement. The paper's assertions are not without a show of authority.

According to the paper the assassins planned to accomplish their end while the emperor was visiting the military school just outside the capital. The plot was discovered in time to protect the emperor and the plotters were seized at once.

THREE INDICTED IN POISON CASES

Action Relating to Deaths From Drinking Wood Alcohol

West Kingston, R. I., Sept. 22.—The Washington county grand jury reported indictments for manslaughter and maintaining liquor nuisances against John and Caterina Cisco and John Difanti, in connection with the whisky poisoning in Westerly last April. None of the defendants was present and Judge Brown ordered that they appear and plead to the indictments on Monday.

Both the Ciscos and Difanti are charged with having sold the so-called "wood alcohol whisky" which caused the deaths of two of the fourteen victims of the poisonous liquor, the Ciscos being held responsible for the death of Daniel T. Sullivan on April 13 and Difanti for the death of Michael Reilly on April 25.

OLD GUARD SHAKEN UP

Roosevelt Forces Carry District Which Is Represented by Barnes

New York, Sept. 22.—Old Guard leaders who are fighting for control of the Republican state convention at Saratoga next week were admittedly surprised when the news reached them that the supporters of Theodore Roosevelt had carried the Schenectady county Republican convention and had instructed its delegates to the state convention to support Roosevelt for temporary chairman and to support direct primaries.

Schenectady and Albany counties comprise the Twenty-third congressional district, which is represented on the Republican state committee by William Barnes, Jr., one of the most aggressive of the Old Guard leaders, and hitherto regarded as invincible.

WILL USE "SEARCHLIGHT"

Ballinger to Tell on Others When the Proper Season Arrives

Denver, Sept. 22.—"When I get foot-loose from public office, I intend to devote a part of my time to giving to the American people some idea of the purity of the lives of my traducers," said Secretary of the Interior Ballinger at a banquet given in his honor by the Denver chamber of commerce and the real estate exchange.

"The public is entitled to know the hidden springs of inspiration which gushes in torrents of 'uplift' patriotism from these self-appointed moralists, and I shall heartily enjoy using the 'searchlight' when the proper season comes."

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

(Started Sept. 14.)

Just as Barker neared Stannard's, at the head of the row, two cloaked and hooded forms hurried forth, and Barker almost collided with them.

"Oh, good evening, Miss Kate! Good evening, Miss Arnold!" was his embarrassed greeting. Then, with attempt at jocularity for which he later could have kicked himself: "I'm just in time to see you home and head off hobgoblins and hoboes. Indeed, I beg pardon," he blundered on. "I'm just bound for Lanier's. Any message?"

"You might say we wish him speedy deliverance," answered Kate Sumter.

Silently Lanier heard the summons. There was no reason why he should not go, said the doctor. "The air will do you good," he added, "and we'll be here when you come back."

Ten minutes more and for the first time since Friday evening the accused officer stood in the presence of his colonel.

"Mr. Lanier," said Button presently, "I am free to say that I have had grave reasons for forming a most unfavorable opinion of your conduct. It has been my intention to forward charges of a serious nature against you and to urge your trial by general court martial. But such is my regard for these gentlemen that I stand ready to abandon my views and adopt theirs on your simple word. Can I say more?"

There was a moment of silence. Then Lanier spoke, "It depends, sir, I think, upon what you wish me to answer."

Button colored. Turning to his desk, he took from an envelope several newspaper clippings. "Do you care to say what part you took in their preparation?"

"I took no part."

"You do not know the author?"

"I took no part, sir. I do not wish to say that I do not know the author."

"Then permit me to infer that you know him—a member of this command, for no one else knew the facts—and you shield him?"

"I am shielding no man, Colonel Button."

"Yet you know the author and you will not tell?"

"What little I know came in such a way that I cannot tell," was the resolute answer.

"Enough said—or refused to be said—on that head. We will go to the next. Who personated you the night you left your troop at Laramie and went, contrary to orders, to that frolic at the post?"

A look of amazement came into the young officer's face. The answer came slowly, painfully:

"I took part in no frolic, sir. I went contrary to an order that had held good while we were out on the campaign, but that we did not suppose was binding there. I went to the post that night to help a fr—a man who—who needed money for an immediate journey. No one personated me to my knowledge."

"I have the written report of the officer of the day that you were there asleep at 11 p. m. Subsequently I learned that you were away from taps until nearly reveille."

"You could have heard that from me, sir, and why I was gone, if need be."

"Officers who make comrades and intimates of enlisted men take chances that"—

"Colonel Button, I protest"—

"Protest you may, but listen you shall," was the instant rejoinder. "It is well known you interfered with a noncommissioned officer in the proper discharge of his duty. That was last June, and it was in behalf of that young man Rawdon. It is well known that you were hobnobbing with other enlisted men here. It is well known you lent civilian clothing to your protege for his latest escapade"—

"Colonel Button—gentlemen," cried Lanier, "this is beyond all right!" Indeed, Stannard and Sumter were on their feet in expostulation, but the colonel's blood was up. Bang went his bell, and the orderly fairly jumped into the room.

"Call Sergeant Fitzroy," said he, and in another moment Fitzroy stood before them, a civilian coat and waistcoat hanging on his arm.

"Briefly, now, sergeant, where did you get those?" demanded Button.

"From the room that Trooper Rawdon occupied in town, sir. It's the suit he wore about town last Friday." And, so saying, he held them forth. Lanier slowly took the coat, astonishment in his eyes; glanced at the tag inside the collar, bearing the name of his own New York tailor.

"YOU DO NOT KNOW THE AUTHOR?"

"It is enough like mine to deceive anybody but—the owner," said he.

"Do you mean to tell me"— began Button indignantly.

"That this is not mine?" interposed Lanier. "Yes, sir, and that one very like it will be found in my closet at home."

"Mr. Barker will go with you, and you will resume your confinement—in arrest." And Button in his anger was lashing himself to language his hearers never forgot and that some could hardly, even long months after, forgive. "In my time, as a young officer, nothing tempted one of our members to violate an arrest, but you"—

Pale as death Lanier faced him.

"Surely, sir, a cry for help—that I thought might mean fire"—

"There was no cry for help," interrupted the colonel. "There was no sign of fire. Even if there had been it should mean nothing to a man of honor when ordered in arrest. That is the only creed of a gentleman."

The adjutant led his stunned and silent comrade home.

His Interference.

The twists and turns taken by faking horse dealers to get out of their bad bargains are proverbial. A little incident illustrative of the tribe took place recently at a stable on North Broad street, where an irresponsible settler had succeeded in palming off a defective horse on a too easy buyer. The new owner turned up with the horse a few days after the purchase and angrily exclaimed, "Didn't you say this horse was perfectly safe and wouldn't trouble anybody?" The dealer coolly asked, "What's the matter with the horse?" The dupe replied: "You know well enough. He interferes badly." With a curt "Well, he doesn't interfere with anybody but himself, does he?" the fake dealer brushed the matter aside, and the purchaser found himself without a remedy.—Philadelphia Record.

Valuable.

"That stock you want to sell to me is worthless."

"It's been worth a lot of money to me," replied the honest promoter.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NO DEFENSE IS PRESENTED

Crippen's Counsel Reserves It For Formal Murder Trial

PRISONER REMANDED TO JAIL

Ethel Leneve, Charged With Being Accessory After the Fact, Jeered by Crowd of Women and Girls—Financial Affairs of Alleged Slayer Gone Into at Police Court Hearing—Testimony of Miss Curnow

London, Sept. 22.—Following the police court hearing of Dr. H. H. Crippen and his alleged accomplice, Miss Ethel Leneve, charged with the murder of Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore, the American doctor was committed to jail to await trial for his life before the central criminal court. Miss Leneve was also remanded.

Crippen will be formally charged with his wife's murder when arraigned and Miss Leneve will be charged with being an accessory after the fact. Barrister Newton, counsel for both, did not present his defense at the hearing, saying he would reserve it for the formal murder trial.

A crowd of women and girls followed the "Black Maria," containing Miss Leneve, on its way to court, and yelled their opinion of her as the carriage rolled along. A crowd of men and women were clustered about the door of the court.

As the pale and trembling girl was led shrinkingly in, the crowd hooted and jeered at her. Miss Leneve held an open umbrella before her face and partially escaped observation, but she could not escape the torment of abuse which was heaped upon her. The crowd was the largest in the history of the trial.

The financial affairs of the Crippens were gone into in line with the prosecutor's opening assertion that the doctor at the time of Belle Elmore's disappearance was pressed for funds and that the death of the woman was to the monetary advantage of the husband.

It developed that the "Curnow," to whom Crippen's $185 check was made payable, is Miss Marion Curnow, who succeeded Crippen as manager of the London office of the Munyon medical concern.

The manager of a bank testified that Mrs. Crippen notified the institution on Dec. 15, 1909, of the withdrawal of the joint account which she maintained there with her husband.

Miss Curnow took the witness stand. She testified that the poison alleged to have been purchased by the doctor, traces of which were found in the mutilated body in the cellar, was not used in the office. She admitted that Crippen frequently bought drugs for his own use. Miss Curnow said that Crippen after giving her the $185 check said:

"If anyone inquires for me, you are to know nothing, say nothing."

The witness further testified that Crippen left several packages with her with instructions to give them to Miss Leneve "if anything happened to him."

FRAUD IS CHARGED

Chanler's First Wife Files Suit to Block Gifts to Cavalieri

New York, Sept. 22.—The validity of the famous pre-nuptial agreement between Robert W. Chanler and Lina Cavalieri, his bride, is now certain to be tested in the courts.

Chanler's first wife, Julia C. Chanler, who obtained a divorce from him in the French courts in 1907, filed suit here in behalf of herself and children to set aside the agreement on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and undue influence and that it was not the free act of Chanler.

Mrs. Chanler the first has an agreement of her own with her former husband providing for the payment of $10,000 yearly for her support and $5000 yearly for the support of each of her daughters.

Thieves Make Off With Day's Receipts at County Fair

Gorham, Me., Sept. 22.—From the ticket office in which were four persons, and with Chief Dresser of the Portland police standing outside the door, a person or persons unknown carried away a tin trunk containing $2000 in bills, representing the larger part of the receipts for the first day of the Cumberland county fair.

The theft was accomplished without a slip-up, and the police and fair officials have absolutely no clue as to where to look for the money.

PRISONER SHOOTS SENTRY

Paroled Man Who Helped Him Gets Away From Fort Preble

Portland, Me., Sept. 22.—James H. Chewing, of the 107th company, Fort Preble, located at South Portland, a sentry in charge of two prisoners, was held up and shot by one of them with a 32-calibre revolver yesterday afternoon.

The sentry had James H. Strickland and a prisoner named Donnelly out in the woodshed at work, when Strickland suddenly pushed a revolver into the guard's face and ordered him to throw up his hands and his gun away.

Just then Raymond B. Oliver, a paroled prisoner, came along, and Strickland ordered him to pull the bolt from the sentry's gun, which was done, rendering the gun useless. Oliver than ran.

Strickland then fired at the sentry, the ball passing through his scalp. Strickland was captured within 300 yards of the shooting on the reservation. Oliver has not been captured.

FORTY-TWO PERSONS KILLED

Frightful Result of Collision of Interurban Cars In Indiana

Forty Wayne, Ind., Sept. 22.—Forty-two persons were killed and seven were seriously injured in a head-on collision between two interurban cars seven miles north of Bluffton at a sharp curve. The cars in collision were a north-bound local car crowded to the steps, and a south-bound "extra" car from Fort Wayne. They met while both were running at high speed.

The collision is said to have been caused by misunderstanding of orders in regard to the south-bound "extra" car's taking a switch near Kingsland, so that the north-bound car could pass it.

The motormen of the two cars did not have time to set brakes when they sighted each other. The heavily loaded north-bound car was crushed and the bodies of the dead and injured were strewn on either side of the track amid the wreckage.

STATE LAW CALLED CONFISCATORY

Two-Cent Fare In Minnesota Held to Be Invalid

St. Paul, Sept. 22.—Filing his findings in the Minnesota commodity freight and 2-cent passenger rate case in the United States circuit court, Special Master in Chancery Otis held those rates to be unconstitutional and confiscatory.

This finding of Judge Otis, unless overruled by the higher courts, destroys the rate-making power of the state of Minnesota through the warehouse and railroad commission and has somewhat general effect in establishing federal rate supervision as against state rate supervision.

Judge Otis, in his finding, recommends a decision and decree in favor of the complainants on all points and finds each measure complained of in violation of the commerce clause of the federal constitution, and also that the rates are so low as to be confiscatory and in violation of the fourteenth amendment.

BECAUSE WOMEN LOVE HIM

Michigan Minister Feels Obliged to Resign His Pulpit

Detroit, Sept. 22.—Rev. G. D. Chase, pastor of St. John's Methodist church, at St. John's, will resign his pulpit, because, he says, too many women of his flock are in love with him. The worst feature of the case, he declared, is that the women who think they love him are indignant because he can't and won't love them.

"I never made love to any woman outside of my own family," Chase declared. "Some of the members of the church need a wet nurse more than they need a pastor."

It is said a petition for his removal was circulated by two women who loved the pastor in vain.

CHEIRO AT LOWEST EBB

Adventurer Once Worth Millions Is Now Declared Bankrupt

London, Sept. 22.—After clearing $1,000,000 by palmistry and blackmail in Boston, New York, Newport, Paris and London, and having swindled Count Rudolph Festetics of Hungary out of 1,000,000 francs, "Chiero" was yesterday declared a bankrupt worth $50.

His fortune gone, debts of $216,330 standing against him, a sentence of thirteen months' imprisonment hanging over him in Paris, and hated and feared by thousands of women dupes in two countries, this adventurer has come to the lowest ebb of his fortune.

Lewis Wins In New Jersey

Trenton, Sept. 22.—Vivian M. Lewis was nominated for governor on the first ballot at the Republican state convention. He received nearly 700 votes as against about 300 votes that were cast for the three other aspirants for the nomination. These were Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Pierre S. Garven and William P. Martin, the latter a candidate of the progressives.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Professor William James, at Any Rate, Can "Come Back"—Little Irritations Prove How Big Boston Is—Rubber Culture on New England Hillsides is Now a Possibility—Airships and Suffragists Keep Bostonians Looking Upward and Not Down.

Everybody knew that Professor William James would soon be holding converse from across the great divide, and sure enough, at each seance in spiritualistic Boston he has had something to say. The late philosopher appears very sincerely to have believed that he might thus reveal himself after death. He was not a man to appreciate keenly the skit of one of his colleagues which last term greatly amused some of the Harvard boys:

"Eanie, meanie, minie, mo,
Catch Palladino by the toe.
If she hollers this will show
James' notions are not so."

How big is Boston? is a question thousands of people in eastern Massachusetts were trying to guess for the sake of winning a prize offered by an enterprising newspaper when suddenly the announcement came from Washington. Without reference to the figure that was given, everybody who has occasion to look around here knows that the city is so big that the streets become ever more and more congested; that the problem of finding a modestly decent home at anything like a reasonable rent grows severer each year; that the land in every direction for miles around is filling up with suburban houses; that the number of great events which depend for their success on their popularity with a multitude of people increases each year. From these and other signs it is easy to guess that the real Boston, the one composed of the people who work and shop within sight of the Golden Dome, is already one of the world's chief cities, and in some respects, as uncomfortable as any of them.

Raise rubber on your farm may be sensible advice to New England farmers before many years have passed. Boston's admirable Arnold Arboretum the new world's most extensive museum of living trees, is just now experimenting with a rubber tree believed to be capable of living in this neighborhood. It comes from central China where it grows on mountain sides in a climate not so unlike that of this part of the world. It has already been reared experimentally in Paris at the Jardin Colonials. The collectors for the Arboretum, who have been at work in China the past three or four years, sent over a few of these trees a short time ago. They have been planted out of doors on the southern slope of Bussey Hill and there in this bracing autumn weather they may be seen any day with their glossy green foliage. If they successfully weather the Boston winter it will appear to be pretty probable that the farmer will make no mistake who secures a few cuttings and begins at once to grow a rubber orchard for the benefit of his children and his own old age.

The Boston 1915 exhibition, minus, one may hope, some of those dreadfully inartistic signs, is likely very soon to be transferred almost bodily to the great town planning exhibition exposition which is being arranged for London. Like so many other Boston movements, this one started things even bigger than itself. Out of it grew directly the city planning exposition at Berlin last winter, and now the affair which will bring together before the eyes of the public of the world's largest city the results of what is being done in various countries to make city life better worth living.

Airships and suffragists conjointly kept staid Bostonians on the lookout and lookup during Aviation week. Both aeroplanes and orators suffered somewhat from the elements, but not at all from want of public appreciation. On Tuesday night when the suffrage band returning from their state wide campaign, were about to open their big meeting on Boston Common, the heavens also opened in advance and so copiously that only a man in a macintosh and a dog stood under the historic elm to greet them. The weather man—if it had been a weather woman perhaps things would have gone perfectly—vouchsafed somewhat better conditions for the meetings in Charlestown, East Boston, South Boston and Roxbury. Finally after a threatening day came the windup in the glorious evening on the Common when the young English women who have been in the Massachusetts campaign during the past month and the other eloquent speakers had their opportunity before a vast polyglot crowd. They made their points tellingly and with apparent impression on the men as well as the women of the audience. One well dressed young fellow became so interested that he forgot he was not at a political caucus. "Good boy—you're telling the truth," he shouted as Miss Margaret Bondfield rounded up one of her impassioned arguments. Then as he noted that that didn't sound just right he ejaculated "Good girl" and looked sheepish. Many of the faces seemed to express approval when Miss Bondfield declared that women will have to do their share of the hard work of politics: "If women imagine," she said, "that they are going to get any of the glory or any of the responsible positions in political life without also its hardships, they are mistaken. We are not asking that women be given a new toy. We expect the burdens as well as the privileges." Ethel Angler.

FOR HEBREW IMMIGRANTS

Shakers' Property May Be Cut Up Into Small Farms

Enfield, Con., Sept. 22.—The passing of the picturesque Shaker community in this town is believed to be presaged in negotiations which have been undertaken by representatives of the Baron De Hirsch fund for the purchase of the property of the north and south families, which includes twelve buildings and about 548 acres. While an offer of $150,000 for the property has been refused, negotiations are still in progress.

The Hirsch fund of $2,500,000 was founded to encourage agriculture among the immigrant Hebrews and if the property is secured it will be cut up into small farms and leased to poor persons of the Hebrew race. If the Shakers leave it will be to go to the community in New York state.

BODIES SWINGING IN THE MOONLIGHT

Italians Conspicuous In Strike Are Lynched at Tampa

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 22.—While being taken to the county jail Castenge Ficcarrotta and Angelo Albano, prominent Italians, who made themselves conspicuous in the cigar strike here, were taken from deputy sheriffs, hurried to some woods nearby and hanged from a tree.

Both were arrested early in the evening, charged with being accessories to the shooting of J. F. Easterling, bookkeeper of Bustillo Bros. & Diaz, several days ago. They were locked up in the West Tampa barracks, but shortly after 8 o'clock were taken out, placed in a hack and started toward the county jail in Tampa. They were accompanied by Deputy Sheriffs Evans and Bryan.

At Howard and Grand avenues a squad of armed men halted the party. The officers were made to get out. The prisoners, handcuffed to each other, were then ordered to alight. The officers hurried to a telephone and sent a message to police headquarters. When Police Chief Woodward arrived no one was in sight. He found the two bodies swinging in the moonlight.

MRS. DODGE'S ODD REQUEST

Asked Widow of Slain Man to Dine With Her In Death House

Lunenburg, Vt., Sept. 22.—The day after Mrs. J. M. Dodge had, in the opinion of the police, shot and killed William A. Heath, she invited the newly made widow to be her guest at dinner in the room next to the bedroom where the blood of the murdered painter stained the floor.

Mrs. Dodge, prostrated by the turn of events, had two women nurses summoned to her yesterday. They are virtually her guards.

The accused woman has changed greatly in the past twenty-four hours, and unless she rallies considerably it is doubtful if she will be equal to the ordeal of the hearing.

IN SITTING POSTURE

Skeleton of Supposed Indian Unearthed by Diggers at Nahant

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 22.—Workmen digging a trench to lay pipe through a new street in Little Nahant came upon a skeleton which had evidently been in a sitting posture. Dr. Thomas Dwight of the Harvard medical school viewed the skeleton and pronounced it to be that of an Indian.

The bones are now in the Lynn police station. They will probably be taken to Harvard.

Bomb Plot In Portugal

Lisbon, Sept. 22.—The seizure of a bomb factory followed the discovery of a wide-spread anti-monarchial plot with secret ramifications throughout Portugal.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Quincy People Know How to Save It.

Many Quincy people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Quincy citizen's recommendation.

Nicholas Albanese, 16 Gilmore street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by attacks of backache for some time, often while at work sharp, shooting pains darted through my loins, causing me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my sight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies, but did not receive relief and as a last resort, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and in a short time after using them, I was helped. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

BRIEFS

An unusually large number of deaths are reported today.

James Batts of Chicago is in Quincy with Joseph T. Hayes renewing old acquaintances.

Miss Grace Hodge of Town hill spent the week end with relatives in West Medford.

The westerly side of Hancock street, from School street toward City Square, is being resurfaced.

Mrs. Mary Minnehan of Norwood, aunt of Rev. P. A. Hayes is the guest at his home on Phipps street.

Mrs. Richard Moyle of Nightingale avenue left this week for Westerly, R. I., to attend the funeral of her nephew, who passed away on Monday.

A mass meeting will be held Saturday evening in City Square under the auspices of the Socialist Labor party. Arthur E. Reimer of Boston will be the orator.

The Walther class of the First Baptist church, Wollaston, will meet Sundays at 12.15 in the auditorium. All men over 21 years of age cordially invited.

A "Membership" meeting will be held at the Hall Place M. E. church, Friday evening at 7.30: Members of the church who are unable to be present are asked to send a short note in greeting to the pastor, to be read during the service. This service is to be held in preparation for the revival services to be held during the month of October.

—Framingham's great prosperity is undoubtedly due to the enterprise of its Board of Trade. If five thousand dollars is wanted for a land location, it is forthcoming, simply as a good investment for the town. Then we have an idea that Secretary Potter is reaching out for every industry in sight and that makes all the difference in the world.—"Natick Bulletin.

IMPROVED SERVICE WANTED

And Everybody to Pay Only His Share for Telephones

Editor of the Quincy Ledger:

I had the pleasure, Tuesday evening, of reading two articles on the subject of telephone rates; one, the Ledger's account of the discussion of the subject by the Board of Trade, and the other, a column editorial in the Boston Transcript, which I commend to the attention of your readers. The greater part of the newspaper items on this subject of late, have been kicks from those who are to pay more for their service than they are at this time.

The Transcript cites a case where a man claims his service will cost him two thousand dollars annually more than it has, and why? Because his present cost per call is one-half a cent, while the cost of the service to the Telephone company is at least two and a half cents.

I surmise that the vociferous howls which are going the rounds of the press are of those who, as in the case of the Boston man, are getting service now at less than cost, but who in the future, are to be assessed for what they use. Authorities agree that the income of the Telephone company is to be reduced when the new rates are in force, from $400,000 to $700,000 per annum.

Certain classes of service are to be had at a higher cost than now. It, therefore, stands to reason that other classes are to be cheaper, and there is a multitude in these classes who are not shouting their woes to the public but who are anxious for the improvement which will accompany the new rates.

Personally, I have never had a telephone in my house. I do not need one for the transaction of my daily business, but I would like one for emergencies. Why have I not had one installed? Because, unless I take the more expensive service, I am obliged to hear the bell calling three other parties on the same line and am likely, when wishing to call, to find an extended conversation going on with one of the three co-users of my line.

The fact that I cannot talk to the whole of eastern Massachusetts for nothing, under the new rates, does not alarm me, and statistics show that 81 per cent of the residence subscribers are likewise unterrified. How many non-users are in my position is, of course, unknown, but their influence is for the new rates.

We have, in the past few years, had to listen to many childish complaints regarding public service of various kinds. I recall Boston people who protested against a tunnel connecting the railroad stations for fear a passenger from New York to Maine might get through Boston without spending a cent, and what is the result? People travelling between the north and south suburbs waste half an hour or more getting across the city and the railroads run two trains daily from New York to Maine which do not come to Boston at all.

I have not heard of any concerted movement on the part of Boston people to insist that the railroads discontinue through trains to Washington or Chicago and I don't know of any travellers to those points who will stop over night en route in order to spend the price of a night's lodging in the city which they may reach in an evening. There are still many people who will insist that the other fellow pay his share in the game but who are not so willing to pay their own.

Fred L. Eastman.

Wollaston, Sept. 22, 1910.

The Fashion of the House.

A servant girl happened to be engaged at a farmhouse where the mistress was known to have a hasty temper. On the first Saturday night the girl was at the farmhouse she was told by the mistress to clean the boots ready for Sunday. The mistress on coming into the kitchen later on saw that the girl had cleaned her own boots first. So she took them up and threw them into a tub of water that was standing by and bounced out of the kitchen. The girl said nothing, but when she had cleaned the other boots she threw them also into the water.

"Whatever possessed you to do that, girl?" asked the mistress on coming again in the kitchen.

The girl simply replied:

"Well, ma'am, please ma'am, I thought it was the fashion of the house, ma'am!"—London Tit-Bits.

Not Hungry.

"How do you like this oatmeal soup?" inquired the barber.

"Seems nourishing," replied the customer, "but I've had my breakfast."—New York Journal.

Granite Cutters Union Is Considering Changes

A meeting of the Quincy branch of the Granite Cutters' Union was held Wednesday evening at which time changes to be requested in the existing agreement with the Granite Manufacturers' Association were discussed. There is nothing to give out for publication however.

There are three branches of the Union in Quincy and before the proposed changes are presented to the manufacturers they must be ratified at a joint meeting of the three branches.

Under the existing agreement any changes desired by either party must be presented before Dec. 1. This gives them three months in which to come to an agreement as the present agreement expires March 1, 1911. It is also reported that some changes desired by the Manufacturers' Association will also be submitted.

SPORTING NOTES.

See School department today for sports at Quincy High and other schools.

The annual golf tournament of the B. A. A. will be held at the Wollaston golf club. Montclair, beginning next Tuesday and continuing through the week. Tuesday will be devoted to a qualifying round at 18 holes, with prizes offered for the best gross and net scores. The 16 best scores will qualify for the championship gold medal of the B. A. A. The first round of match play will begin Wednesday, the second and third rounds to be played Thursday and Friday. On Saturday the 36-hole final will be played.

Another Aviation day in Quincy, on Saturday, thanks to the enterprise of B. F. Keith of theatrical fame.

It looks as if Harvard would have another left-footed punter, as Felton, the star kicker of the freshman team of a year ago, and who is a very promising candidate for this season's varsity, boots the ball with his port propeller. Left-footed kickers are more desirable for a team than right, for defensive teams generally break through on the left side of their line to block punts. Plays for blocking kicks are therefore constructed to operate on that side ,and when a left-footed booter is encountered, the regular formation is of little use, for the whole left side of the defensive line can break through without having a chance to block a left-footed punt.

MUD HUTS OF IRELAND FAST BEING REPLACED.

James Bryce Assisted by Beginning England's Loan to Owners.

The mud edifice is becoming a thing of the past in Ireland. It was more or less picturesque in descriptions of the landscape, but it was and is certainly insanitary and often unfit for the abode of human beings.

It still exists too numerously, but it has been the aim of the Irish representatives for a generation to abolish it in favor of habitable cottages. More than a quarter of a century ago the first laborers' act was passed. From 1883 to 1906 20,000 cottages were erected for the laborers. Local authorities had power to borrow money from the government, repayable by installments, and build the cottages with the proceeds, letting them at a charge which covered the cost.

The work was slow because the rate at which the money was borrowed was too high to enable the cottages to be let without loss to the rates at a price that laborers could pay and because, as is usual in this red tape ridden country, a vast amount of money had to be spent on procedure, which means in the end law costs.

Then James Bryce came along and before his departure for Washington made his chief secretaryship memorable by an act which has done as much for the laborers since his day, and done it better and cheaper, as was done in the previous quarter of a century.

Procedure was simplified, and the money was lent upon favorable terms. Ireland got a loan of £4,500,000 ($22,500,000) at 3½ per cent, covering both interest and sinking fund, with other financial advantages thrown in, and cottages could be erected and let to the laborers at rents as low as a shilling and sixpence and even a shilling a week.

But the money is now all gone, and some thousands of laborers are still in the mud edifices comparable to the kraal and the wigwam. The Irish party has been pressing the matter in parliament and has induced Mr. Birrell to let them have another £1,000,000.

SMUGGLING ART STILL PRACTICED

Customs Officers, Not Coast Guard, Now Feared.

AMERICA IS ACTIVE CENTER.

New York Officials Nearly Fooled by Shipment of Contraband Lace Concealed Beneath Corpse In Leaden Coffin—Diamonds Worth a Million Dollars Annually Escape Duty.

Many years ago there was in Cornwall a very interesting duck pond. In appearance it was a small circular basin of water, on which the ducks swam in ordinary fashion, while the owner stood and watched them with proprietary pride. He would invite the revenue officers to dine with him and take them out to admire this among other attractions of his garden.

But when the excise men left a strange thing would happen. The duck pond would swing round on a pivot and reveal a spacious cavity beneath, in which were stored many kegs of good spirits on which duty had never been paid.

Smuggling is not conducted in this manner now, nor are cargoes run during dark nights into the coves and caverns of our coasts. The risk is too great, the coast guard service too thorough. The smugglers of those old romantic and unscrupulous days have long lain in their graves. We have become less romantic, if not more scrupulous.

Smuggling Desire Still Keen.

But the desire to baffle the customs is by no means extinct, any more than is the wish to make great and speedy profits. Smuggling was always a fine art with the more intelligent of its votaries. It has become even finer now, though perhaps few of its devices are more ingenious than this Cornish duck pond.

It is natural that countries with high tariffs should suffer more from smuggling than those where few articles are taxed, and America has been compelled to enact a very severe penalty, though even that is not a sufficient deterrent.

It is believed that about a million dollars' worth of cut diamonds are smuggled into the United States yearly, yet the customs officials of America are among the sharpest in the world. The stones have been introduced within hollow walking sticks, in revolver cartridges, in babies' rattles and sugar candy images.

A very curious tale is told with regard to the smuggling of a quantity of valuable lace. It happened not long ago.

The authorities in New York were warned that there was to be an attempt to smuggle this lace by the old dodge of a coffin. The ship arrived, and there were the bereaved relatives in the deepest mourning in charge of a leaden casket. Although the certificates were in perfect order, the officer insisted upon having the coffin opened. The relatives violently protested against such an outrage, but this only confirmed the suspicions of the customs man.

Lace Under the Corpse.

The coffin being opened, imagine the official's horror when he saw that it really did contain a body. He was on the point of apologizing and ordering the casket to be resealed when he happened to catch sight of a suspicious eye watching him from behind a mourner's pocket handkerchief. It was enough. He had the body removed, and hidden below it was lace worth several thousand dollars. The corpse proved to be that of a pauper bought for the occasion.

Lace is the great bugbear of the American customs. It is of high value and difficult to detect, while women, who are chiefly intent on smuggling it, are more awkward to deal with than men. The right of search can always be exercised, but it leads to unpleasant scenes and sometimes to the searching of innocent persons.

The difficulty is increased by the fact that women of the highest American rank do not scruple to smuggle, and to interfere personally with these is a delicate job. It must be done sometimes and has had some startling results. Women have been caught not only thickly bandaged with lace, but concealing valuable sables among their underclothes.

On one occasion hundreds of costly ostrich feathers were discovered sewed within a woman's petticoat. The fair Americans are very keen, and they do not like to return from Europe empty handed.

SKIRTS FOR KOREA BACHELOR

Trousers Once Reserved For Married Men of Hermit Kingdom.

It was once the custom in Korea that a man was not allowed to attain to the dignity of trousers until he married. The bachelor was forced to wear skirts as one who possessed no definite position in society. Moreover, the law prohibited marriage unless the man was able to support a wife in the station to which she was used, so that the skirt also served as an index of income.

QUARTERBACK AND NEW RULES

Where Will Coaches Play the Little Field General?

FORMER POSITION ELIMINATED

Promise of Four Big, Fast Men Behind Line This Season — Coaches Will Not Know How to Play Their Hands Before Middle of October.

Where will the quarterback be played?

There is not a football coach who is not giving this question deep thought. One of the many clauses that the rules committee saw fit to insert in the 1910 code is responsible for this new coaching worry. This clause says that the man receiving the ball from the center may advance forward. Naturally the checkerboard gridiron has passed. There is no need for it. The quarterback does not have to run five yards on either side of the center before crossing the line of scrimmage.

Certainly this does away with the quarterback. He would be a hindrance. Last year he was the most important man on the field. He opened the lever of the football machine and directed it forward. Of course a man will have to call signals, but there the quarterback function ends. The quarterback that the game has known since its inception in this country is no more.

Four Men Behind Line.

A place has to be found for him behind the line. Incidentally there will be four big, fast men behind the line this autumn instead of three and a little quarterback, as has been the case. How will these four men be played? Will they be lined across the field or stand in a tandem on the line? The question is a hard one.

A rule provides that a man to make a forward pass or onside kick must stand five yards behind the line. The forward pass and onside kick promise to attain high development this year. These plays will be used very frequently. This means that a man will have to be kept on that five yard mark. This may be the berth for the despised quarterback. At any rate, coaches will play probably one or two men five yards behind the line. The amputation of the quarterback means a saving in speed that might counterbalance the added distance the men would have to take behind the line. At present it's all a gamble. The coaches will not know how to play their hands until the middle of October.

Idea Not a New One.

The idea of playing one or two backs five yards or more behind the line with the others near it is not a new one. Pennsylvania used such an attack in the Cornell game last year. Hutchinson was needed in the quarterback position to run the team. He was also needed in the fullback's position for runs off tackle and around the ends. So they taught the players special formations for that game. The four backs were abreast. They could end run, forward pass or kick. This year it will be the same, but the new clause will let the formation hit the line too.

Trouble For Conference Teams.

As the conference college teams cannot begin practice until Sept. 20, the coaches inflicted by the rule are in anguish. Minnesota is an example. The Gophers open their season on Sept. 24. This gives Dr. H. C. Williams exactly four days in which to teach new football with all its varied rules, condition his players and develop an attack and defense. Williams thinks the labors of Hercules were childishly simple.

HERE IS THE LATEST WRINKLE IN PITCHING.

The newest wrinkle in pitching is reported from a little league in Kansas—the employment of two pitchers on the same batsman—and from all accounts it is quite a winner. One of the teams in the little league has a pitcher who possesses such terrific speed that the catcher of the club can't hold him and also carries a hurler of wide curves—slow, soft curves—that could be caught by a Chinaman. The fast pitcher drives in two strikes on a batsman and then retreats to center field, while the slow curver, who has been guarding center, hurries to the slab. The curve pitcher sends the third strike curling over and trots back to the garden, while the fast boy returns to take two shots at the next batsman.

Tommy Burns Now a Promoter.

Noah Brusso (Tommy Burns), the former Canadian lacrosse player and heavyweight champion pugilist of the world, who has organized an Indian lacrosse team for a trip to Australia, has engaged as manager and coach for the outfit Jimmy Murphy of the Torontos. Tommy figures that his popularity, with the added attraction of a team of Canadian Indians, would mean heavy business in the antipodes, and the trip will be made during the coming winter.

Changes of Time.

I've wandered to the storeroom, Tom; I've looked among the files
To find, perhaps, a jest or two to coax the latest smiles,
But what was there to greet me, Tom—what quiddity, what not?
Alas, I could not use the stuff of twenty years ago!

I combed those ancient files with care to to find the slightest wheeze,
So that who read might call his wife and shriek: "Ho! Look at these!"
But, though the stuff was pretty sad, I calkilate and vow
These things will look a whole lot worse in twenty years from now.

FISHERY INTERESTS INDEBTED TO QUINCY STATESMEN

HOW THE ADAMSES GOT BEST OF ENGLAND

Work of Quincy Presidents Paved Way for New Treaty on Fisheries at the Hague

Words of John Quincy Adams Recalled by S. J. Elder

The prominence of Quincy statesmen of old in International treaties is emphasized by the recent conference at the Hague about the fisheries. A special to the Boston Globe says:

SAMUEL J. ELDER

Senior Counsel From America at The Hague

The United States has won a substantial victory in the fisheries arbitration with England, and a Boston man, Hon. Samuel J. Elder, played a conspicuous part in the greatest international drama of the century, the North American-Atlantic coast tribunal at the Hague. Seven questions were submitted to the permanent Hague tribunal, and Mr. Elder argued on questions 2, 3, 4, 6 and 7. These questions, it so happened, were decided in favor of the United States.

In an interview Mr. Elden said in part:

"During the last 70 years the discussions between the United States and Great Britain have been recurrently acute and have brought into play the abilities of statesmen of highest order in both countries. A list of the names of those who have taken part in these discusions includes names which figure most prominently in the annals of both countries. It is of interest to Massachusetts that its statesmen have borne so large a part in this discussion.

QUINCY PRESIDENTS.

"Taking Boston as a center, we find that within a radius of 20 miles have lived a very large majority of the men whose contributions to the subject matter have been under daily and hourly consideration during the 10 weeks' argument. John Adams and John Quincy Adams at Quincy; Mr. Webster at Marshfield, Mr. Everett at Winchester, Mr. Boutwell at Groton, Judge Dwight Foster at Beacon Hill, Richard H. Dana and Mr. Lowell at Cambridge have figured more conspicuously than any others, both in the diplomatic discussions of three-quarters of a century and in the discussion before this tribunal.

"While speaking of this small locality from which these men come one cannot but advert to the fact that counsel for the United States, coming both from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, have never for a moment thought or spoken of these men other than as great Americans, and of the fisheries and the controversy as the property of the entire country and part of its history.

TRAVELLING STAFF ARRIVES

Presented to the Quincy Knights of Malta

John Adams Commandery Knights of Malta, at its regular convocation Thursday evening received the "travelling Staff" of which an account appeared in the Daily Ledger last week. It came from King Oscar commandery, Boston, and was accompanied by a large number of members from that commandery and others. S. K. C. Albion Wester of King Oscar commandery, made the presentation speech, which was responded to by George H. Jaques, the local sir knight commander.

The "staff" has became an elaborate as well as beautiful souvenir. There are 25 emblems suspended from its cross arms, each representing a commandery which had the custody of the staff for a time. It is on its official rounds and will remain in Quincy for a few weeks. Each commandery places on it an emblem representing the order, the design also suggesting the principal industry or matter of interest in that particular city or town. John Adams commandery will probably fashion its emblem out of Quincy granite and engrave on it either a battleship or some historic landmark, in addition to some symbol of the organization.

F. H. Wilson, the grand recorder, was present and gave an instructive address on the state of the order, saying that it was gaining strength numerically and financially to his entire satisfaction. John A. Bamford, the grand deputy, who has recently been re-appointed, also spoke, calling attention to the unity of purpose which the order and the church had and the importance of bearing that fact in mind rather than regard the order as a purely secular organization. To be a true Knight of Malta meant supporting the doctrines of the church.

Louis M. Campbell, past grand commander, and several others spoke. It was an enthusiastic meeting. A collation was served.

ONE LESS CONTEST

Walkover Now for Republican Representative Nominations

Political surprises are to be expected daily now, but they are found only in the Daily Ledger. The Ledger was the only Quincy paper of Thursday to print the letter of ex-Councilman Nathan G. Nickerson, declining to be a candidate for Representative in the Sixth Norfolk district. It is customary in the Quincy districts to give a Representative three terms, and as there was no good reason why Louis F. R. Langelier of Ward Six should not have that honor, Mr. Nickerson does well not to precipitate a contest which might engender ill feeling between Wards Five and Six. Although Mr. Nickerson's name will appear on the Republican ballots, it is distinctly understood that he will not be a candidate this year.

This leaves the only contests among Republicans in Wards Four, Five and Six, for nominee for Congress and for delegates to the Senatorial convention. This is just the same situation as in Wards One, Two and Three, which constitute another Representative district, as Representative William R. Thomas has no contest.

The Democrats who also hold caucuses next Tuesday, have contests for Representatives in both districts, —Michael T. Sullivan and Archie Thayer in the Fifth district; and Rednor P. Coombs and John J. McDevitt in the Sixth district. But the greatest contest among Remocrats is for the Congressional nomination, between Messrs. O'Connell, McNary and Curley.

LARGE CONTRACT RECEIVED.

The Tubular Rivet and Stud Company of Quincy was awarded a large contract this week by the government, being one of the 352 firms which will furnish millions of dollars' worth of supplies for the coming year to the army arsenal at Rock Island, Ill. There are 29 concerns in New England that receive contracts, nine of this number being Boston firms. It is estimated that the total money value of these contracts will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. This arsenal, besides turning out regular supplies for the army, also conducts various and numerous experiments.

STREET RAILWAY CONFERENCE

Employeas Want New Bill of 30 Cents Per Hour

Representative of the employees of the Old Colony street railway held a conference with President Sullivan at the Boston office Thursday, over the proposed new agreement which the employees have asked shall prevail after Oct. 1, when the present agreement expires.

It is understood that the employees have asked for a closed shop a nine-hour day, a 20 percent increase, and some other matters. If the new agreement should be adopted it will do away with the present sliding scale of wages, and will provide a flat wage of 25 cents per hour for the first year of employment, and after that a flat rate of 30 cents per hour, with no increase for longer service.

The new agreement when made will effect about 3500 conductors and motormen employed on the Old Colony and Boston & Northern systems. Thursday's conference is reported to have lasted about an hour, and was probably but one of similar conferences to be held. Nothing was given out as to the outcome of the conference.

The present wage scale starts at 21 cents for the first year and advances until after the third or fourth year the men receive 25 cents per hour for a ten-hour day.

It is not thought that there will be a strike or tie up of the railway lines, but that an agreement will be reached by the first of the month.

Buying a Piano Is Serious Business

The average persons who goes to buy a piano are largely influenced in their decision by what some one tells them. Too many times the size of the commission to be received on the sale plays too important a part in the recommendation of the adviser.

At this store we pay no commissions—we give our piano customers sterling value at lowest prices. It would be poor business policy for us to misrepresent as our whole business is at stake. We are building up our great business by fair treatment and honest values.

If you contemplate the purchase of a new piano we urge you to learn what we have to offer in the famous Mathushek Pianos.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Looks like the Ballinger whitewash has soured.

Governor Hay of Washington insists that there are two sides to the conservation question. Can it be possible that Gifford Pinchot has been misled?

Lo, the poor Indian is between the devil and the deep. If he puts his claim in the hands of an agent, he gets skinned 10 per cent. If he waits for the Government to give him what is coming to him, he doesn't get anything at all.

The school department of Thursday's Daily Ledger was unusually newsy this week, and was not confined to one or two schools. There were over two columns of High school notes. A half column from the Woodward Institute, nearly a column about the St. John Parochial school, a column letter relative to Adams Academy, and also notes about the free evening schools, the Greenleaf school, the Quincy Mansion school, the Wollaston kindergarten, Thayer academy and other schools. We hope next week to include something from each of the grammar schools of the city, and invite the cooperation of teachers pupils and graduates.

One of the important new matters introduced at Monday night's meeting of the City Council was the order offered by Councilman Whiton appropriating the sum of $5,000 for an automobile fire wagon. Nearly every up to date fire department in the state now has one of these valuable pieces of apparatus ,and those that do not already have them are getting them. This is something that Chief Williams has long desired, as it will enable him to maintain a flying squadron.

It is a well recognized fact that every minute saved in getting at a fire is important, and when an alarm is sounded the apparatus strives to get to the scene at the earlest possible moment. It is to accomplish this very purpose that fire alarm boxes are placed about the city, and that the apparatus is hauled by horses. While they make good time in responding it will be readily acknowledged that still better time could be made with an automobile fire wagon.

Chief Williams, in conversation with a representative of the Daily Ledger, said that if the Council should give him an automobile chemical and hose wagon ,that it would probably be located at the Ceneral station on Quincy avenue, and that he should have a flying squadron that would answer all alarms. In addition to carrying chemical tanks it would carry hose and a sufficient crew of men to handle a fire in its incipient stage.

Quincy's department today with its new steamer and combination hose and hook and ladder trucks is well equipped to cope with fires, and when the twenty or more new fire alarm boxes, authorized by the Council this year are installed the city will be well covered ,and all that will be needed to make the department complete will be the automobile fire wagon and more firemen.

It will be remembered that it was Councilman Whiton who introduced the order in the City Council for the new steamer and also the order for the new automoible police patrol and ambulance wagon.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The stale remark that the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer has been thoroughly disproved by observation of facts in the United States. We must admit that with the congestion of population in the great cities certain depths of bestiality and misery have been reached that were unknown before the last half century began. These are mostly incidental to the way in which our immigration laws are made and administered; but, take the bulk of the population together ,there was never so much comfort, wide-spread intelligence and something like the enjoyment of luxury as may be found today in every state in the union. As for instance, we ride from Boston to Worcester in the commonwealth of Massachusetts, the question constantly asks itself, where do all these well fed, well clothed, well housed people get the money which they evidently earn and spend? In New England alone the savings banks have on deposit more than three billions of dollars. The agricultural products of the country last year were over eight billions of dollars. These vast sums represent the comfort and competence of the common people.—The Christian Register.

President Taft has suffered much from misrepresentation and the hysteria of the summer has made something of a victim of him, but this will run its course. In the end, though his political fortunes may not mend as he and his friends would like, the wisdom of his general attitude and sober purpose will be vindicated. In the larger view of his obligations to the country, Mr. Taft will grow stronger and attain a sounder popularity in the proportion that he stands pat as faithful custodian of the constitution, gives to the country a law-abiding, law-enforcing administration and continues at once conservative and progressive.—Haverhill Gazette.

PRELATE LOSSES $2500

Porter Finds Fat Pocketbook and Is Given Reward of $5

New York, Sept. 23.—The timely discovery by Benjamin Jackson, a negro porter, of a fat wallet on the French line pier, was all that prevented Mgr. Fouchet, bishop of Orleans, France, from sailing for home penniless.

The bishop sailed on the liner Lorraine, after attending the recent Eucharistic congress at Montreal. He discovered the loss of his pocketbook, containing about $2500, just as the ship was casting loose, and a great hubbub followed.

Jackson, meanwhile, had found the wallet and was gloating over its contents when two detectives discovered him. A quick restoration followed, and Jackson drew as a reward a $5 note.

MYSTERY IN SUICIDE OF BOSTON WOMAN

Registered at Montreal Hotel Under an Assumed Name

Montreal, Sept. 23.—Mystery surrounds the suicide of Mrs. Bernon K. Mumford of Boston, whose body was found hanging to the door of a bathroom in her suite in the Hotel Corona here.

Boston dispatches indicate that the members of the dry goods firm of which Mumford is a partner can throw no light on the mystery, and that, when Mrs. Mumford was in Boston recently, she appeared to have no troubles and to be happy.

The wealth of the Mumfords and their social position in New England only serves to deepen the mystery in the case. Why Mrs. Mumford came here cannot be ascertained, as she apparently had no relatives or friends in the city. Mumford is at present in Minnesota.

Mrs. Mumford registered at the Corona hotel as Mrs. J. M. Brown of New York.

A LACK OF EVIDENCE

Steamer Stowaways Charged With Trespassing Are Released

Boston, Sept. 23.—Nineteen foreigners, arrested on a charge of trespassing and put on trial in the Charlestown municipal court on a charge of attempting to defraud the White Star line, were released, Judge Bragg ruling that no evidence had been given to indicate that they were guilty of the charge. The men had been taken off the liner Canopic on Sept. 14.

One man, Mario Ferlazzo, was held for the grand jury because evidence was introduced to the effect that he had conspired with two sailors on the Canopic with intent to defraud the White Star company.

Roosevelt's Intentions as Sized Up at Washington

WAITING FOR STAGE SETTING

Will Come Out For Taft When Psychological Moment Arrives, but Indorsement Will Relate Only to 1912—Cannot Risk Incurring Charge That He Had Betrayed His Friend—How It Is Reasoned Out

Washington, Sept. 23.—Among the guesses on Theodore Roosevelt's plans and purpose the following in the Washington Star is interesting:

A number of prominent Republicans visiting Washington this week have expressed belief that when Theodore Roosevelt finds a stage setting to his liking he will make a dramatic declaration in favor of the renomination and re-election of President Taft. An ideal Rooseveltian opportunity for such a pronouncement, it is pointed out, will be presented at Saratoga next Tuesday if the former president triumphs over the old guard and is chosen temporary chairman of the New York Republican convention.

There is bound to be some kind of a sensation in the speech he would deliver as temporary chairman, it is declared, and nothing would create quite so great a stir as for Roosevelt to declare for Taft as the 1912 nominee.

Those by whom this belief is entertained do not acquit the former president of ambition to serve again in the White House. They hold that if he makes such declaration its chief purpose will be to further his ambition.

This is the way they reason it: Mr. Roosevelt wants another chance at the presidency. He would like, of course, to be elected in 1912, but is young enough to wait until 1916. He knows he could be nominated in 1912, if at all, only after the bitterest kind of a pre-convention fight—a fight which would leave wounds that might bleed at the November polls and encompass his defeat. Even were he able to defeat Taft for the nomination and to be elected two years from now, he would never be able quite to cleanse his escutcheon from the charge that he had betrayed his friend.

And then the reasoning proceeds: All these considerations, except the disinclination of New York to prostrate itself at his feet, were palpable when Roosevelt returned from Africa, but to have declared then and there for another term for Taft would not have been at all the Rooseveltian way of doing things. Besides, after his year's absence from the country, there was not upon his return anything worthy to be dignified as a Roosevelt faction within the Republican party.

In order that he might have something other than himself to deliver over to the Taft camp, it was necessary that a Roosevelt following should be built up. The country, it is declared, knows how adroitly this has been done, aided and abetted by the mystery with which Roosevelt has shrouded his attitude toward the Taft administration.

The clamor for Roosevelt in 1912 having gone up, and not being in such volume as to threaten to sweep everything before it, the former president must capitalize it in whatever way will be most to his advantage. Roosevelt has too good an insight into politics to believe, especially after his hard fight in New York, that he has only to wave his hand and Taft will be swept aside.

To enter a contest with Taft for the nomination and be defeated would destroy him utterly. To appear at the psychological moment as the champion and the savior of Taft would crown him a hero among heroes.

Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly believes, it is argued, that a word from him would still all opposition to Taft's renomination. That he intends to say that word is the belief expressed. But he intends to say it at the moment it will do Roosevelt most good.

ROOSEVELT'S PREDICTION

Says His Victory at Saratoga Convention Is Already Won

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The utter rout of the "Old Guard" by Theodore Roosevelt at the Republican state convention in Saratoga is predicted by Roosevelt himself.

At the conclusion of a long conference at Sagamore Hill with half a dozen of his lieutenants, Roosevelt said: "I think I may be reasonably safe in saying that we shall have 100 majority."

All through the fight, which began with the Sherman incident, Roosevelt has refused to express any opinion as to the outcome, and none was expected from him now, but the reports he received yesterday afternoon convinced him that it was all over but the shouting.

Dates for the winter season of Alpha and Union Halls are being rapidly booked at the present time.

DRAFTING OF A PLATFORM

The Only Work at Convention of New Hampshire Democrats

NEW PRIMARY LAW IS TESTED

Chairman Claims That Railroad Attorneys Have Defeated Democratic Candidates For Governor Year After Year—Affairs of State and Nation Considered In Statement of Principles and Policies of the Party

Concord, N. H., Sept. 23.—The party convention provisions of the new direct primary law in New Hampshire were tested for the first time when the Democratic state convention was held in this city.

Under the new law the candidates of both the Republican and Democratic parties for state and county officers and congressmen were made at the joint primaries held Sept. 6. The only thing left for the Democratic state convention yesterday and the Republican state convention Sept. 27 was the adoption of party platforms. The ratification of the direct nominations is not required. The delegates to the two conventions also were elected by the people at the primaries. The law further stipulates that the nominees for the leading offices shall attend the conventions.

Eugene E. Reed, Democratic nominee for congress from the First district, was chosen as presiding officer of yesterday's gathering. He attacked what he termed "the machine management" of the Republican party and the Boston and Maine railroad and declared that the paid attorneys of the railroad in New Hampshire have "year after year defeated our candidates for governor, using the power, influence and wealth of that great railroad corporation to establish in the Republican party that exceedingly effective machine that has stifled all efforts to accomplish popular reforms."

Mr. Reed dwelt on the high cost of living, charging that it was due to "unprecedented extravagance in the administration of public affairs in state and nation" and "a tariff bill framed in the interests of the trusts with an extraordinary disregard of the rights of the people."

"The Democratic party," he said, "remains the hope of the people for the preservation of the republican institutions of this country."

The committee on platform presented a report which was adopted unanimously and without discussion as follows:

We demand immediately downward revision of the tariff in the interests of the consumer; parcel post; adoption of the federal income tax amendments; the election of United States senators by the people; the elimination of one-man control of congress, as expressed by "Cannonism;" effective trust regulation; conservation of natural resources, and the passage of the White mountain forest reserve bill.

We demand economy in state expenditures; effective abolition of the free pass; revision of tax laws so as to equalize tax burdens; fair express rates; legal and just freight rates, and the legal machinery to secure them; the abolition of the railroad commission and the election by the people of a commission to supervise all public service corporations, and that the attorney general be required by law to represent the public in all matters in controversy before said commission and upon appeals therefrom; publicity of campaign contributions; retention of the direct primary law, amended by striking out all fee requirements; the economical construction and maintenance of good roads throughout the state; a graduated automobile tax to be expended on said roads; genuine local option; employers' liability law; enforcement of labor laws; initiative and referendum.

We condemn Republican extravagance and corporation interference and domination in the affairs of the state; we denounce the hypocrisy of that party in the past and we point to its broken pledges of the last two legislatures.

Clarence E. Carr, the candidate for governor, spoke in part as follows:

"The 'local issue' of Cannonism, high cost of living, and an unrelieved tariff has been heard from in Maine. The same 'local issue' obtains in every state in the union. We have heard from it in Massachusetts, New York, Kansas and Ohio. It is a 'local issue' in New Hampshire. The president, seeing his party dilemma, advocates tariff changes. An ex-president, with the courage of opportunity, demands the same thing."

Eloping Priest a Suicide

Madrid, Sept. 23.—Rev. Father Novedo, a professor in a Capuchin college here, committed suicide at Lorca when overtaken by the uncle of a woman with whom he eloped. The priest shot himself.

Bodies Found In the Maine

Havana, Sept. 23.—Forty-five divers, under Chief McDurham, have begun work on the Maine. Several bodies have been found in the cabin, but remain untouched, following Captain Ferguson's orders.

BIG HAUL ON INITIAL TRIP

New Steam Trawler Foam Makes Catch of $3,000

The new steam trawler Foam, built at Quincy, returned from her first trip to Georges banks, Wednesday with 80,000 pounds of haddock. This good initial catch augurs well for the success of the vessel. It is seldom that even the Spray has reached that figure, and Capt. Michael Green is well pleased with his new command. The boat had only been out since Saturday. This catch is valued at about $3,000.

Dealers' prices per hundredweight at T wharf were: Haddock $3.75 at 4.50, large cod $6 at 7.50, small cod $4.50 at $7.50, hake $4.50 at 5, cusk $3.50, pollock $4.60 at 5.50. Swordfish brought 19 cents a pound.

Another Fast Destroyer

Lewes, Del., Sept. 23.—The oil-burning turbine-driven torpedo boat destroyer Terry developed 32.183 knots an hour on her standardization trials over the measured mile course off Lewes. The speed is 2.688 knots in excess of the contract requirements of 29½ knots.

QUARRYMAN SERIOUSLY BURNED

Clothes of Charles Henrickson Set on Fire By Premature Explosion

Swingle's Quarry the Scene of The Accident

An accident, which might have been fatal, occurred at 3.45 Thursday afternoon in Swingle's quarry, West Quincy. The men were blasting a large rock in the quarry hole after the usual method. A big charge would smash the rock all to pieces so three small ones are substitutes Charles Hendrickson was the workman on the job. He had exploded the first two and had just put in the third charge when the explosion occurred. Evidently there was a spark remaining from the second charge for there was an instant flash before Hendrickson had the charge fairly in.

By chance the foreman had gone down into the hole just a few minutes before. When the third explosion occurred he did not notice that anything was wrong for a moment or two, but as soon as he sensed the situation he acted promtly. Rushing to the place of the accident he began tearing off the burning clothes from the man and thus saved his life.

Hendrickson was badly burned about the face and arms, but the doctor is optimistic of his recovery. For about five minutes after the accident the telephone wires were kept hot, and the ambulance and Dr. Thomas Dion were soon at the quarry. Hendrickson was carried to the City Hospital.

After the accident, the injured man walked up the ladder and went over to the engine house with the assistance of one of his comrades where the men did what they could to relieve the pain of the sufferer. Although gunpowder burns are generally very treacherous, it is hoped that Hendrickson will be brought around all right, since medical treatment was applied so soon after the accident. At the City Hospital this morning he was reported as having spent a pretty fair night.

ADAMSES

award upon the fishing interests of the country, it is necessary to say a word of the history of the question. Nearly everyone you talk with thinks of the controversy as relating to the so-called 'headland theory' or the question of 'bays.' The dispute is, however, more far-reaching than that—that question, being only one of the seven submitted to the tribunal, and in practical effect the least important to our fishing interests.

"At the end of the revolutionary war, in settling the terms of peace, John Adams, one of the U. S. commissioners, insisted that the fishing rights of the new country should be recognized in their fullest extent. He said he would not 'put his hand to any treaty' which did not guarantee them. He said that New England had 'spent more in blood and treasure than all the rest of the British empire' in the securing of those rights which had been largely the cause of the French wars.

THE RESULT.

"The result was that the treaty of 1783 recognized the right of American fishermen to fish not only on the banks of Newfoundland, but gave them the right in the waters of his majesty's dominions in North America, together with the right to dry and cure fish at various specified points. These rights were as freely exercised by United States fishermen until 1818 as they had been while the colonies were a part of the British empire.

"The extent of the industry at that time and its enormous value, especially to New England, can hardly be appreciated after the lapse of a century. The wealth of New England and its ability to purchase from abroad depended largely on the productiveness of the fisheries and the trade in cured fish carried on with Spain and the Mediterranean ports. If the story could be told no doubt many of the New England fortunes of today were founded on the fisheries of that period.

"After the war of 1812, it was claimed by Great Britain that these rights were abrogated under the principle of international law that all treaty obligations terminate with a declaration of war.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

"John" Quincy Adams, one of the American commissioners at Ghent, on the other hand, contended with characteristic vehemence that the American fishing rights, under the treaty of 1783, did not rest on obligation or contract, but were received as a part of the partition of British empire in North America; that they were no more canceled by the war of 1812 than were the boundaries of the United States changed, but that they subsisted through any war and could only be lost by the voluntary action of the government of the United States. The result was that the treaty of Ghent was signed without any fisheries article, the United States claiming and Great BPritain denying everything.

OUGHT TO FIGHT.

"The 'Jaseur incident' shortly followed, in which a British war vessel of that name forbade the American fleet to fish within 60 miles of the coast of Nova Scotia. This act was speedily repudiated, but the British government asserted that its intention was to prohibit U. S. fishermen from fishing anywhere within the coastal waters of his majesty's dominions in North America.

"Various seizures were made, and for two years the situation between the two governments was one of increasing irritation. John Quincy Adams, then secretary of state, told the British minister at Washington on the street one day that 'he believed that they should have to fight about it and that his opinion was that they ought to do so'; all of which was solemnly reported to the home government, with the comments by the British minister.

LONG DISCUSSION.

"The upshot of it all was the treaty concluded at London, Oct. 20, 1818, the interpretation of article I of which was the subject of the present arbitration. While the fishery article of this treaty is in the briefest possible compass, the history of the previous 100 years, as well as of the years which have succeeded, were distinctly relevant to the determination of the meaning of the treaty provisions and occasioned the extreme length of the discussion. The opening argument for Great Britain alone occupied two weeks, the opening for the United States the same length of time; and the entire discussion 10 weeks.

C. M. BRYANT FOR SENATOR

Now Prominently Mentioned by Quincy Republicans

Since the withdrawal of Senator Hultman from the senatorial contest the name of Councilman Charles M. Bryant has been frequently mentioned for the nomination. Councilman Bryant has not openly avowed himself as a candidate, but it would not be at all surprising if at the convention he was brought forward.

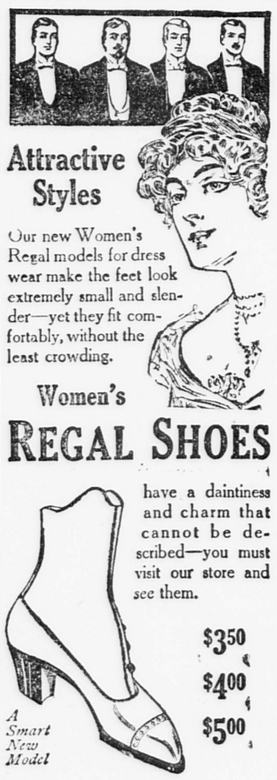

Ex-Representative Barnes of Weymouth is a candidate for the nomination, but he is not looked upon as being a strong man. Many Democrats declare if Mr. Barnes or Councilman Sandberg should be nominated that the Democrats could win by placing a strong man in nomination.

Councilman Sandberg has always had a strong following in Quincy, but his entering the contest was looked upon as a scheme to defeat Senator Hultman, and although the latter has withdrawn, the bad feeling between the two gentlemen still remains, and would work against Councilman Sandberg should he carry the convention.

Should Councilman Bryant decide to enter the convention, with all these facts recognized, there is an excellent opportunity for the mantle to fall upon the ex-Mayor's shoulders. He has always been a great vote getter and should he be nominated he would be elected almost without an effort.

It is well known that Councilman Bryant is considering entering the convention, and it would not be surprising if he made public anouncement of that intention at any time. The caucuses will be held next Tuesday to elect delegates.

ELA—LITTLEFIELD.

Miss Catherine Plummer Littlefield of East Milton and Mr. Louis B. Ela of Wollaston were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Granite place Wednesday evening. Rev. George H. Credeford, formerly of East Milton performed the ceremony. The double ring service was used. Miss Jessie Plummer of Nashua, N. H., acted as maid of honor, and Mr. Joseph Mitchell of Wollaston was the best man.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon over white silk and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Mr. Willis O. Littlefield, the father of the bride, gave her away.

The decorations were made by the girls of the Alpha club to which Mrs. Ela belongs. The color scheme of green and white, the club colors was carried out in nearly all the rooms.

After the ceremony a reception was held during which the guests were enabled to see the gifts which were numerous and valuable.

Mr. and Mrs. Ela after their wedding trip will reside at 197 Farrington street, Wollaston. Mr. Ela is employed in the Wollaston post office.

BRIEFS

"Autumn begins" today.

Next week the nights will get the best of the days.

A candy kitchen will be opened in the Johnson building.

Next week the cry will be on to Brockton and its great fair.

Miss Marjorie Penniman of Revere road is on a visit to Winthrop, Me.

All eyes will be on Quincy again tomorrow to see Grahame-White fly.

A special meeting of the City Council to draw jurors will be held tonight.

Senator and Mrs. E. C. Hultman are in New York this week, where Senator Hultman was called by a business engagement.

Did you read "the Educational Field" department of the Daily Ledger on Thursday? Over five columns about the Quincy schools.

The change in the location of the entrance to E. J. Murphy's drug store is a great improvement, and also gives him another show window.

The next meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks will be an important one as the vacancy caused by the death of Exalted Ruler, William J. Coleman will be filled. It will also be a lodge of sorrow as well.

A few friends surprised Miss Abbie Livingston at her home on Thursday evening. Friends from New Bedford, Cambridge, South Framingham, Boston and Quincy were present. A very social evening was spent. Games were played and refreshments served. Miss Rogers from Boston officiated at the piano. Most of the friends left on a late train for Boston.

At the Middlesex South Agricultural fair held at South Framingham, Tuesday, George L. Haupt of the Fore River works had six of his cocker Spaniels at the dog show, who gave a very good account of themselves by bringing back to Quincy six firsts, one second, one third and six special prizes, consisting of one bronze medal two silver medals, one sterling silver trophy and two gold trophies. "Mayhurst chorus Lady" won the last six.

FORTUNE OF $1,500,000

Awaits Naval Hospital Appretice If He Fulfills Requirement

Washington, Sept. 23.—Horace L. Keeler, the 22-year-old Richmond, Ind., lad, who is said to have been left a fortune of $1,500,000 by a grandfather, is now serving as a hospital apprentice at Newport, R. I., for future naval service.

Keeler's fortune hinges on his earning not less than $75 a month until he is 25 years old.

Crazed by Excessive Study

Boston, Sept. 23.—Christopher Royce, son of Professor Josiah Royce of Harvard, said to be the possessor of the most perfectly trained mind in America, died yesterday at the Danvers insane hospital, the victim of overstudy. Royce was 28 years old. He had been confined in the Danvers institution since January, 1908.

RELEASE UNDER SMALL BONDS

Taken to Indicate Weak Case Against Mrs. Dodge

BAIL OF $5000 FURNISHED

Deputy Sheriff Who Is Nephew of Woman Accused of Killing Heath Becomes Her Bondsman—Counsel Says Slayer of Heath Is a Man and Will Be Brought to Justice—No Motive for Crime Yet Established

Lunenburg, Vt., Sept. 23.—Mrs. J. M. Dodge, released on bonds of $5000, left her home here yesterday afternoon for the first time since the murder of William Heath in the Dodge home last Saturday afternoon.

Her temporary release under small bonds and the apparent unconcern of her counsel indicate that the case of the state is regarded as weak, although it is admitted that no clue to indicate the presence of another person in the house at the time of the tragedy has been discovered.

Significance is attached to the amount of the bond, as small sureties in a capital case are allowed under the Vermont laws if the state is unable to show premeditation or if the presumption of guilt is great but the proof is small.

Mrs. Dodge waived examination late yesterday. The bonds were furnished by Deputy Sheriff Dodge, the woman's nephew, and by Julian Bell, her son-in-law.

Attorney General Sargent refused to give any information whatever in regard to the case, and it is believed that he realizes that the state has little chance of convicting the accused woman.

Harry W. Blodgett, Mrs. Dodge's junior counsel, has, it is thought, come upon some clue as to the identity of the real murderer, upon which the police are now working. He has been quoted as saying that before the case is ended the person who killed Heath will be named and brought to justice.

If, however, anything has been learned that may lead to a discovery of the murderer, the authorities have carefully refrained from making it public. In the reported interviews with Blodgett, he committed himself only enough to say that the guilty person is a man.

So far as known, the government has no information beyond the fact that Heath was shot in the back, and that Mrs. Dodge appears to have been the only person in the house with him at the time. Another weak link in the state's chain of evidence is the fact that as far as Mrs. Dodge is concerned no motive for the murder can be found.

The officials of the government are no longer working on the suggestion of Mrs. Dodge that if Heath did not shoot himself someone secreted in the house without her knowledge must have done the murder and then escaped. When the shots were heard many of the neighbors ran out and, it is said, the place was observed from all sides. No one, however, was seen to leave the house.

JOB CONSIDERED UNLUCKY

Men Working on Building Strike After Two Sudden Deaths

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 23.—Following the sudden deaths of two men from heart disease, ten others, employed in the construction of a house in East Thirty-third street, have gone on strike, declaring the building is unlucky.

Twenty-four hours after James Cunningham signed a contract with Joseph Kreft for the latter to do the painting and decorating of the house, the former was found dead, a victim of heart disease. Twenty-four hours after Cunningham's death, to the minute, Kreft dropped dead, also a victim of heart disease. Then and there the other men employed on the building quit work and refused to go back.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

CHAPTER V.

ENNIS and Schuchardt started at sight of Lanier's white face. Ennis sprang to his side. "Help me off with these," he said, "and bring a lamp. Come upstairs, Barker." There were but two sleeping rooms aloft in the little bachelor set. Into this room marched Bob Lanier and threw open the door of the single closet wherein was hanging uniform and civilian garb in some profusion. Ennis held the lamp on high, and with his free hand Lanier began throwing out the contents—a new uniform dress coat, an older one that had done duty for the three previous years, two sack coats or "blouses," etc. Then appeared a suit of evening clothes, carefully handled. The closet was well nigh empty, and Lanier faced them with the simple words, "It's gone!"

"What's gone?" demanded Ennis.

"Why, that dark gray mixture sack suit I brought from leave last year. It always hung way back in here."

"Who wants it now, I'd like to know?" demanded Ennis.

"Our colonel, who accuses me of costuming Rawdon for his getaway."

Then Barker spoke: "It's only fair to the colonel to tell the rest, Bob. Rawdon's box, that he left for safe keeping with a friend in town, had not only the suit you saw at the office, but a new fur cap with your name in it. The day of the storm Quinlan came over to the guardhouse after his visit here wearing a new cap instead of his old one, and Cassidy swooped on it, thinking it yours, for it was here he got it, and the name in that cap was Rawdon. It leaked out somehow. Fitzroy hunted the story down."

"The name was burnt out when Cassidy brought it back to me," said Lanier slowly. "He claimed that in lighting his pipe"—

"Poor Cassidy lied every way he could think of to save you," said Barker ruefully. "It's the young cad you befriended and helped along that's tricked you in the end."

"Roped Rafferty in, too, I suppose," said Schuchardt.

"Rafferty, doubtless, to the extent of bribing or wheedling him out of Bob's new cits"—

"But those were not mine that Fitzroy had!" burst in Lanier.

"Of course not. He's left you a worn suit in place of the new. Where'd he steal that one, I wonder? There isn't another officer of your size and build at the post. But, here; I've got to go back and report, and my report will be in these words: 'Mr. Lanier will be robbed too.'" And Barker made for the stairs.

"One moment," called Ennis. "You said Bob wasn't the only man this fellow had tricked. Do you mean"— He paused suggestively.

"I mean—yes—that there's more than one man and there's at least one poor girl in the garrison to mourn that fellow's loss, and be d—— to him!" And with that Barker was gone.

Button listened to his adjutant's report with something almost like a sneer. Stannard and Sumter heard it with grave faces, but without a word. Snaffle, who had drifted in, sniggered with obvious triumph.

"Gentlemen," said the colonel, "you have not heard the half of what I know, and every day brings something new. This comes in from Laramie today, brought with the mail that lay over at the Chugwater during the storm. Read that, Stannard." And Stannard took the paper and glanced over it, blinked his eyes, sniffed and said, "I've heard about that case, and I'll take Lanier's story any day against that fellow's affidavit."

"Major Stannard," said Button severely, "you are speaking contemptuously of your superior officer."

"Colonel Button," answered Stannard, with high held head, but with firm hand on his temper, "I am speaking contemptuously of my superior officer's informant, not of the commanding officer of Fort Laramie. If you care to look you will see that he quotes, not asserts, that 'this money was advanced to Mr. Lowndes on Mr. Lanier's statement that the young man was summoned home by the serious illness of his mother and that he, Mr. Lanier, would be responsible for the transaction. Mr. Lowndes has never repaid it, and Mr. Lanier when appealed to four weeks since not only refused to make it good, but abused and cursed me for simply asking for what was my own.'"

"Very good, gentlemen," answered Button, rising in obvious chagrin. "It is quite evident in your opinion Mr. Lanier is a persecuted saint and I am an abandoned sinner, but just as soon as I can reach Omaha this case shall be laid before a general court martial."

The men were mostly in bed, as they should be at such an hour, but there had been an informal dance, and many of the sergeants were still at the hop room. Beyond this brightly lighted building and about in the rear of the infantry barracks at the westward end was the slide into the creek valley, wherein so many of the officers' children had been coasting early in the evening and where now—nearly 11 o'clock—half a hundred young people of both sexes, wives and daughters of quartermaster's employees and of the elder sergeants, attended by their gallants from the garrison, were having a merry time of it. The moon shone in brilliance. The night air, frosty and still, was full of exhilaration. The officer of the guard, merely cautioning the revelers to control their impulse to shout, had gone on his way with implied permission to keep up the fun, and presently other officers appeared upon the brow of the bluff, interested observers.

The veterinary surgeon, a gray haired man of nearly sixty, who presently came toiling up the hillside, touched his fur cap front in salutation to tall Lieutenant Ennis and begged leave to speak a moment with Dr. Schuchardt, whom he led slowly away.

Ennis had attentive ears for the chatter and gossip of a neighboring group that had suspended their sledding for the moment and were curiously watching the pair.

"There's no more the matter wid Dora Mayhew than there is wid me,

"WHY DIDN'T YOU JUMP WHEN THEY TOLD YOU?"

'cept one," said a red cheeked maid of "laundress row" to the eager group about her. "She's been daft about that young dude, Rawdon."

"Yes, an' deef to Cockney Fitz," laughed another.

And Ennis, turning quickly, noted the group, four young noncommissioned officers and three of the garrison girls, all of them toying with the name of good old Mayhew's bonny daughter, she whom that veteran English horseman had taught and guarded with such jealous care. Well had Ennis known of Sergeant Fitzroy's aspirations. Few in the regiment had not, and few there were who did not know that in spite of Mayhew's avowed dislike for him the girl had for a time encouraged.

Then in April to Fort Frayne had come this handsome young fellow Rawdon, with better looks, better manners and even, as it seemed, better money, for Rawdon was lavish where Fitzroy was "near," and the favor of the young girl, who had toyed with the Englishman, turned from him to this unknown.

And in this web Bob Lanier had become deeply involved. Ennis was sorely worried.

"Where did you say she was now?" Ennis heard the doctor ask as they rejoined him.

"She went to speak with Mrs. Stannard, but said ladies were there, so she came back awhile ago. I could hear her crying in her room before she went the second time." And poor Mayhew's head was drooping.

"And you wish me to see her tonight?"

"If you'd be so good, doctor. She'll soon be home. I was going over in search of her now."

"Wait," said Ennis. "Listen!"

There was a flurry among the revelers a few rods away. Two men had run toward the corner of the nearest barrack, looming black against the northward sky. Others could be seen hurrying after them. Then—could it be? Yes, sharp and clear came the sound of a shot from away over toward the hospital—another nearer, another still nearer—and distant shouts and then the blare of the trumpet.

"Come on! It's fire!" said Ennis and sprang in pursuit of the leaders.

CHARLES S. HAMLIN

"Declaration of Principles" of Candidate For Governor

TALKS TO AGRICULTURALISTS

Hamlin States His Political Creed at Franklin County Fair

Greenfield, Mass., Sept. 23.—Charles S. Hamlin, who is a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, was the principal speaker in connection with the sixty-first annual fair of the Franklin County Agricultural association here, stating his political creed.

He said he believed in direct nominations; constitutional amendments to enable the people "in great emergencies to put their seal of approval or condemnation on any proposed legislative measure;" direct election by the people of United States senators; an honest and just apportionment of legislative and senatorial districts; direct nominations for state, county and city offices; consolidation of many of our state commissions; expert investigation of the various departments of our state government; a purchasing agent of supplies for state institutions; arbitration in wage controversies; an immediate opening of the tariff question at the coming session of congress in December.

ARRESTS ARE MADE IN THREE CITIES

Alleged Counterfeiters Rounded Up by Secret Service

Boston, Sept. 23.—What the federal authorities believe was a widespread attempt to flood the eastern section of the country with counterfeit greenbacks made in New Bedford came to light in the arrests of seven alleged counterfeiters in New Bedford, Manchester, N. H., and Passaic, N. J. The men are charged with making and passing $2 bills.

All seven men were arraigned before the United States commissioners in the three districts and each was held in $2500.

For some time Secret Service Agent Ahern of Boston has been directing a hunt for the men responsible for the counterfeit notes which were seen in large numbers in Passaic, New Bedford, Fall River and Manchester. The counterfeit was what is called a "split bill," too dark to be called a good imitation.

GREAT CARGO OF TEA

Steamer at Boston Brings Two Thousand Tons of Formosa

Boston, Sept. 23.—Two thousand tons of tea, mostly Formosa, probably the largest single shipment of tea ever brought to Boston, came in the British steamer Wyneric, which arrived yesterday afternoon from various Japanese, Chinese and Philippine island ports. This is the second great cargo of tea to come to Boston within a week, another steamer arriving last week with about 1500 tons.

Aside from the tea, the Wyneric's cargo included large shipments of hides, human hair, porcelain, spices, matting and other far eastern stuffs.

HELD FOR WIFE'S DEATH

Boston Man Charged With Beating Woman While Drunk

Boston, Sept. 23.—Ellen Tierney, wife of Michael C. Tierney, 58, died at the City hospital yesterday.

The police charge that Tierney returned home late Wednesday frenzied with liquor and, on being reprimanded by his wife, he struck her several times on the face. As she fell to the floor partially stunned by his blows he kicked her on the head with his heavy boots, inflicting a fracture at the base of the skull.

Lightning Kills Four In Colorado

Colorado Springs, Sept. 23.—Lightning killed four persons during a storm in the vicinity of Fastonville and Elbert.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

TREMONT THEATRE.

No comedy of the present generation has received such universal commendation as has "The Fortune Hunter," presented by Cohan and Harris at the Tremont theatre last Monday night. With John Barrymore in the title role and the original New York company in his support this play bids fair to equal the records it has established both in New York and Chicago. The simple story it tells, the directness of its theme and the bits of pathos throughout topped by comedy that is pure and refreshing, make of it an entertainment that leaves a pleasant memory and a feeling of being better for having seen it. The moral of the play does not obtrude, is not seen but rather is felt and realized in the retrospect that is bound to come. In its seeing "The Fortune Hunter" is pure, constant enjoyment that sends one home happy and contented. The part of Nat Duncan, "The Fortune Hunter," might have been written for John Barrymore it fits him so gracefully and naturally. Miss Mary Ryan is the winsome daughter of the old druggist-inventor who has been "a failure in everything," and this druggist ,a lovable irresponsible ,is a beautiful character type as played by Forrest Robinson. The banker's daughter, she of the coveted fortune, is played by Miss Eda Bruna, whose chum, a village girl type is played by Miss Kathryn Marshall. The broker who proposes the scheme is acted by Francis Bryne and the other principal parts are played by John C. Brownell, Charles Fisher, Walter Horton, Sydney Ainsworth, Edgar Nelson, C. H. Crosby, George Centre, Seth Smith and George Spelvin.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Through arrangements entered into last week between B. F. Keith and Claude Grahame-White ,the aviator, Bostonians will Saturday at the Harvard Aviation Field, have an opportunity to see a demonstration of aerial navigation under conditions different from any which have obtained since this form of sport became popular all over the world. Mr. Grahame-White now proposes to give on what he considers the best aviation field in the world, a demonstration of the possibilities of aerial flights that will prove really sensational. Most of the work being done on the field itself. While he will make some high flights and perform such feats as stopping his motor at a height of about 1,000 feet above the field and gliding down, within full view of the people ,a great part of the work will be done directly within the enclosure. The exhibition will begin about two o'clock in the afternoon and be continued until five or six.

CASTLE SQUARE.

It will be a week of laughter at the Castle Square beginning on Monday. "When Knight Were Bold," which Mr. Craig will then produce for the first time at that theatre is the merriest of merry farcical play. Those who have seen it say that it is a continuous scream, and that its whimsical plot of the gay young man who dreams that he is a knight in old-time England, beset by enemies, fighting duels and conducting himself generally as the people of these days are reputed to have done, is the funniest of stage characters. What player could be better adapted to the part of Sir Guy than Donald Meek; He will encounter George Hassell, as Sir Brian Ballymote, an Irish gentleman, in a duel, and his adventures will prove continuously mirth-provoking. Miss Mary Young will play the role of the fascinating heroine, and there will be good roles for every one of Mr. Craig's players. Special scenery will give a picturesque stage setting to the varying scenes of the play.

GLOBE THEATRE.

Douglas Fairbanks in his new starring vehicle, "The Cub" has made good with a vengeance and the crowds which are nightly packing the Globe theatre, Boston, furnish the best evidence in the world that the satirical melodrama of a Kentucky feud is a sure-fire success. Without exception the Boston newspapers last Wednesday pronounced William A. Brady's offering as the best kind of vehicle for young Fairbanks and the professional critics seem to have voiced the opinion of the thousands of playgoers who have already witnessed a performance of the screamingly funny play. That a feud, as lasting and as deadly as is depicted in "The Cub," could have had its inception in a dispute over two pigs has caused no little doubt in the minds of playgoers of serious inclinations and unacquainted with existing conditions in a region about which few persons know anything. Yet less than a year ago young Thompson Buchanan, the author of "The Cub," then himself a sub reporter on the Louisville Courier-Journal, was sent into the Kentucky mountains to "cover" a feud in which twenty-two men were killed—and the start of that real feud was a pig.

ON THE STAGE.

Quite the busiest actress this season is Mary Boland, who is playing the title role in "Smith" with John Drew. She has twenty-eight different entrances, quite the largest number for any prominent part in several seasons. In addition, she has fifty-nine different "props" to look out for in the course of her lines.

Boston has gone wild over "The Arcadians," the critics hailing it as an even more successful piece than "Florodora" or "The Merry Widow." It is being played there by the original New York company, including Julia Sanderson, Ethel Cadman, Connie Ediss, Percival Knight, Frank Moulan and Alan M. Mudie.

Rare songs, like rare poems, are sometimes found in the most obscure places. The greatest hit in "Our Miss Gibbs," entitled "Come, Tiny Goldfish," was discovered in a heap of old manuscripts in Paris, by Fred Wright, three years ago, when he was searching for a duet for "The Prince of Pilsen," in which he was then starring in the French capital.

The despairing head of the house often wonders whether there will ever be a limit to the ingenuity of women in inventing new styles of hats, but at all events there is no end in sight this season, with the increasing feminine fondness for the Chantecler modes. Quite the latest among these is the White Hen hat which Marie Tempest has originated. While summering in the French capital Miss Tempest attended a performance of "Chantecler." When the white hen came on, in beautiful contrast to the color of the other birds, a French women sitting beside her exclaimed rapturously, "Wouldn't she make a wonderful winter hat?" Miss Tempest immediately took the suggestion to a fashionable milliner and had him make up a winter bonnet of the wings of white Leghorn hens. Eight birds in all were used to provide enough to cover the peach basket frame. So if the style is generally accepted, as Miss Tempest believes it will be, the wingless chickens will be common at the restaurants this fall, and boarding house guests will no longer have to endure "chicken wing" luncheons.

William A. Brady will send his first musical offering to Boston when "The Girl and the Drummer" opens at the Majestic theatre, Oct. 3. "The Girl and the Drummer" is a musical version of George Broadhurst's famous farce, "What Happened to Jones." The music is by Augustus Barratt and the piece was staged by William J. Wilson. Herbert Corthell has the role of the adventurous Jones and Vera Michelena that of the prima donna.

Monday evening, Oct. 3, Liebler & Co., will present at the Shubert theatre Frances Hodgson Burnett's play of cheerfulness "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" with Miss Gertrude Elliott in the leading role of Rags. Miss Elliott has already achieved a distinct success in the part in London.

When Marie Doro comes to the Park theatre Sept. 26 in "Electricity" Boston will have the opportunity of judging between the literary merits of William Gillette and his nephew, Winchell Smith. Mr. Gillette is the author of "Electricty" and Mr. Smith the author of "Love Among the Lions" which comes to the Hollis tomorrow night.

GREAT MECHANICS FAIR.

A shoe-making plant of the very latest type will be one of the big features of the great Mechanics Fair to be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, from ten o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night, from Oct. 3 to Oct. 29. Over 3,000 square feet of floor space will be devoted to this single exhibit. Sixty machines, with the necessary crews, will be busily engaged all the time the exposition will be open, in one of the greatest, most interesting exhibits ever made anywhere. One can watch for hours, the fascinating evolution of a dainty shoe from the embryonic state in which it is "mere leather and thread" to that prefectly finished most artistic article which has contributed so much to the comfort and commercial prosperity of the world. The entire exposition will be of the same high grade of excellence with over 200 practical working exhibits of manufacturing goods in various fields of endeavor. Keeping them goodly companionship will be what may be called the entertaining features of the exposition all of which will be free and with no extra charge for seats. They may be judged from the fact that the famous United States Marine Band will for the first two weeks, give the afternoon and evening concerts in Grand hall and at the same time the Edna Frances Simmons Ladies' Orchestra will play morning, afternoon and evening in Exhibition hall. The art loan exhibit will show paintings and sculpture estimated to be worth many hundreds of thousands of dollars, and in the "Rock of Models" will be found a display to which columns of description might be devoted without doing the subject justice.

—Spokane County Good Roads association will give a series of demonstrations of good road building with lectures by officers of the state association and prominent men in other parts of the country identified with the movement ,at the third International Dry Farming exposition at the fair grounds in Spokane the week of October 3. The purpose of the exhibit is to interest and educate formers, township supervisors, county commissioners and others in the improvement of existing highways until permanent good roads can be built. The exhibit will include five roads, each 24 feet in width and 50 feet in length, of oiled and plain macadam, gravel and other materials, constructed so that each layer, from sub-grade to top-binder, may be examined. Culverts of metal and concrete will be used to illustrate the method of drainage and there will be demonstrations of scrapers, rock crushers, gasoline rollers and other devices and machinery.

PLUNDERED SAVINGS BANK

Teller Who Got Away With $1200 Is Sent to State Prison

Boston, Sept. 23.—Judge De Courcy, in the superior criminal court, sentenced John H. Cullen, a teller at the Union Institution for Savings, to state prison.

Cullen had pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling $1200 of the bank's funds and the courtroom was crowded with his friends, who joined with the attorneys in urging clemency for the defendant. It was pointed out to the court that he had been a man of generally good habits and one who had a family.

After De Courcy had been asked to take these facts into consideration he replied that robbing a savings bank was so serious an offense that it demanded a state prison sentence. He said, however, that he was willing to give good reports some weight. The court then imposed sentence of from four to eight years' imprisonment.

MASKED WOMAN REAPPEARS

Creates Alarm Among Residents of a Canadian Town

Richmond, P. Q., Sept. 23.—Persons in this town are greatly alarmed over the reappearance of the mysterious masked woman who a few nights ago attacked Mr. Elliott, a wealthy grocer. The woman, who was seen by several persons, went to the home of one of the residents and demanded money of him. When he refused she threatened to do him bodily harm, but she disappeared when the occupants of the house held an iron bar over her head.

It is believed that the mysterious "masked" woman is either a man or a female confederate of two suspicious men who have recently been seen lurking around the neighborhood where the woman has sought to obtain money. The police are in a quandary over the matter and have made no arrests.

SERIOUSLY WOUNDS WOMAN COMPANION

Wealthy Man Then Takes His Own Life by Hanging

Cleveland, Sept. 23.—As the end of a close acquaintanceship of unknown duration, B. W. Yates, a wealthy Detroit business man, shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Fred Singer in a Rocky River wine room, and two hours later hanged himself in the county jail.

Last night the woman's attorney, Frank Billman, was closeted with Yates' two sons for several hours. The results of the interview were not made public and the three absolutely refused to discuss the shooting or its cause.

Yates was 48 years of age and married. He was chairman of the board of directors of the Business Men's Publishing company of Detroit, was owner and manager of a hotel and possessed extensive lumber holdings.

Mrs. Singer, formerly a resident of Detroit, but later residing in a Cleveland hotel, is the wife of a traveling salesman.

'PLANES MORE VALUABLE

German Government Drops Experiments With Dirigible Balloons

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The German government has decided definitely to abandon the Zeppelin airships and confine its whole attention to aeroplanes.

This is the result of the experiments with both aeroplanes and dirigible balloons in the recent army maneuvers and in secret trials at Metz, and also of trials with aeroplanes at the brigade maneuvers of the guard regiments, which foreigners were not allowed to attend and where the kaiserine was the only civilian present.

The announcement that Germany will now utilize aeroplanes, like the French, is contained in a semi-official note to Krupps.

MAY BE ACTIVE HEAD

Byrnes Is Made Vice President of Boston and Maine Road

Boston, Sept. 23.—Timothy E. Byrnes, vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, has been appointed vice president of the Boston and Maine. The appointment was made by Acting President Mellen, who also heads the New Haven.

While Byrnes is nominally to be vice president of the Boston and Maine road, it is understood that he will be the active head of its affairs.

Death In Hotel Fire

Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 23.—Joseph Christopher, a porter, was burned to death, and another employe was injured in a fire here which destroyed an annex of The Elms hotel, occupied by the servants. The loss will be about $5000.

Lenox Soap— "Just fits the hand"

Try This RICHMOND

Suds-Maker Free

You simply turn the faucet and the RICHMOND Suds-Maker delivers thick, hot suds. It does not in any way interfere with the hot water faucet and can be easily attached to it. It gives you instead, two faucets—one for clean, hot water—the other for thick, hot suds.

Think of the dozens of ways this ingenious device will cut down the work in the kitchen! Learn what it means to save hundreds of steps every day—to always have thick, creamy soap suds on tap. The "Richmond" Suds Maker gives you any quantity of soap and water thoroughly united in scientific proportion—it is always ready to meet your instant needs. It puts an end to the drudgery of dish washing—simply place dishes, silver, glassware under its creamy suds for an instant, then just rinse and wipe. It puts an instant, automatic end to waste, to unsightly soap dishes, to the nuisance of using up the odds and ends of soap. Use any kind of soap.

Just call on the plumber whose name appears below and ask to see the RICHMOND Suds-Maker. He will let you take one home to try. Use it ten days—then if you think you can spare it, return it, for the trial places you under no obligation to buy. This is your chance to learn about the greatest convenience, money and time saver you can install in your kitchen. Call today.

Sergt. Barry of the police department has been confined to his home this week by illness.

Congressman O'Connell will inaugurate his whirlwind campaign in City Square tonight at 7.45. He then goes to Milton.

Sympathy of many friends will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. G. Hillman Eggleton on the death of their infant daughter born on Wednesday. The little one passed away Thursday evening. Mrs. Eggleton was Miss Maud Cameron.

The bright little son of one of Quincy's well known lawyers, who recently travelled on the train where there was a colored porter, was much interested in the man and watched him intently whenever he passed through the car. He could stand it no longer and appealed to his father thusly: "How does he know when his hands are dirty?"

The Appalachian Mountain club which numbers several Quincy people among its members is having an autumn excursion of ten days through the Adirondacks. The committee plans to climb Giant, Sebille, Gothics and Marcy mountains. If the weather permits ,a camping party will spend the night at Upper Au Sable Lake, climbing Mount Marcy the following day. The party returns to Boston Sunday morning Oct. 2.

POPULAR AT WEST QUINCY.

The funeral of Timothy J. Corcoran, one of West Quincy's popular young men, was held this morning from St. Mary's church. The services were very largely attended, the members of Division 4, A. O. H., and the St. Mary's Temperance society, of which he was an honored member attending in a body. Mass was celebrated by Rev. William Duffy with the Gregorian mass by the regular choir. After the services the remains were escorted to St. Mary's cemtery by the two organizations and a host of friends. There was an unusually large number of beautiful floral pieces, testifying to the young man's great popularity.

THE W. C. T. U. ENCOURAGED

Quincy Convention Did Great Deal of Good.

The County Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union which was held under auspices of Quincy branch, was eminently successful in all particulars.

The addresses by women of national and even international prominence were well received and enthusiasm in the work prevailed. Mrs. Lamb's address as well as Mrs. Stevenson were excellent. Mrs. Stevenson emhasized particularly the need of temperance in this country with reference to its effect o nthe people in other countries. The merchants and sailors go to these countries where an effort is being made to christianize the inhabitants, and teach them habits of intemperance. Mrs. Stevenson has travelled through many of the foreign countries herself and in most of them the missionaries have told her that where all the people were comparatively temperate 10 years ago, today they are following the example of the Americans, who go there to do business and incidentally to destroy their happiness.

At the afternoon session there were many more than in the morning probably 200 people were present during the course of the afternoon.

The election of officers took place at this session. The same officers were reelected for another year since it was felt that their service was invaluable. Miss Augusta Crehore of Canton has been treasurer of the organization ever since its foundation twenty-five years ago.

Mrs. Ida S. Brown, the president of the County Union, was chosen delegate to the National convention, which will be held in Baltimore in November.

At the roll call practically every union in the county was heard from. There are unions in the majority of the towns in Norfolk county all of which are under the direct leadership of the county union.

The work of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis deserved especial commendation. At the opening of the morning session she delivered an address of welcome which was excellent. The last thing on the program was the exhibition by the Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion under her supervision. The speaking of the president of the Legion, Kenneth Johnson, and of Leslie McCormick of West Quincy showed careful preparation and good training. Both boys spoke very well, and impressed the visitors favorably. Mrs. Davis has been president of the local union, but feelin gthat she could not attend to her duties as well as she would like, it was necessary for her to resign. At the meeting she was elected honorary president.

The acting officers of this union are: Mrs. E. A. Penniman, president; Miss Eva H. Kimball, secretary and Miss Amelia Bumpus, treasurer.

This union supports the Legion of boys of which Mrs. Davis is superintendent. This is their first duty. In addition they do other work to aid the NoLicense League and various temperance societies in the vicinity.

The Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion, which is in the charge of the local Union, is a useful organization. Meetings are held twice a month, the first and third Thursdays, in Protection hall at 4.15. At these they are taught the songs and cheers and drills which are given frequently about the city and they do much toward keeping the cause of temperance before the eyes of the public. At the meeting their exhibition was very pleasing to all who were present and the singing was exceptionally well received.

The convention, as a whole, will do a great deal of good in vicinity, and its influence will be felt when the convention is forgotten.

The local union was very fortunate in meeting with such ready response to the appeal for help in running the convention, and they feel deeply indebted to these friends in time of need. Both the president and secretary were obliged to be away, and the committee who had charge of the convention did good work and deserve great credit for its success.

☞ A regular reader of the Ledger says she finds it hard to keep up with the many bargains offered by H. L. Kincaide & Co. She sees something in today's paper and intends to call at the store and before she gets there another Ledger arrives and something new is advertised. One has to hustle to keep up with the Kincaide Co.

SCOUT MOVEMENT.

Col. Wakefield, chief scout of England, stirred up great enthusiasm by his address at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Clee has been elected secretary of the movement in Quincy. It will be his duty to confer with the various boys' organizations about town and ascertain how many would like to enter into the project of a scout movement in Quincy. If sufficient interest is shown plans will be formed for starting an organization. Good citizenship is the aim of the scout movement. The oath the boys take when they are sworn into membership requires them to do their duty to their country and their God.

The movement was started in England by Sir Baden Powell 3 years ago, and is three months old here in America. Quincy is the first small city to hear Col. Wakefield and will probably be the first to organize a company if it is deemed expedient to do so here. The national headquarters are in New York city.

The boys are divided into groups of ten under a scout master. They are taught about the flag ,the country and various useful things such as tying different kinds of knots, cooking, etc. In the summer scouting parties can be formed.

The movement is avowedly nonreligious, but much will depend upon the scout masters as to what will be taught. When the boys first take he oath they are in the Tenderfoot class. Examinations must be passed to become second and first class scouts. The movement is making rapid progress in America and in England it is already wide spread.

ALDEN KINDRED.

Those in town who are members of the Alden Kindred and those interested in its developement doubtless will be pleased to know that the executive committee held a meeting Tuesday afternoon at the office of the president, Vernon A. Field of Boston. The matter of having the members of of the Alden family present the opera Priscilla in various cities and towns in this vicinity with the object of raising funds with which to construct an Alden memorial building at Plymouth was definitely settled. Various plans for the next reunion were discussed and the committee in charge intend to make it an interesting one with added new features. Votes of thanks were sent to John W. Alden of Duxbury for extended courtesies at the many reunions held at the old homestead in the past and thanks were also voted to be extended to Mr. Wright of Duxbury whose lands have been used on various occasions.

NINETY-SECOND BIRTHDAY.

Wednesday was a very pleasant day for Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Dyke of 58 Hancock street, South Braintree. It was the 92nd anniversary of Mr. Dyke's birth and during the day and in the evening many friends called to offer congratulations and presents and express the wish that he live to enjoy many years of health and happiness. Mr. Dyke is a charter member of Puritan lodge, I. O. O. F. and Amana Rebekah lodge. Delegations from each called. The former presented him with a box of cigars and the latter brought a large basket of fruit, boxes of confectionery and boquets of flowers.

Saturday his only grandson, Harold Curtis Dyke and wife of New York city, who have been spending the past season at their summer home in Mattapoisett came to honor the approaching birthday it being impossible for them to be present on the twenty-first.

Anthony Dyke, the son of Anthony and Mary Curtis Dyke was born in North Easton, Sept. 21, 1818. His parents removed to Braintree when he was quite young so that he received his education in the Braintree public schools. He followed the sea for twelve years and then took up railroading remaining active in that business for fifty-eight years. He was a fireman on the Capt Cod railroad, then later he entered the employ of the Old Colony railroad and rapidly gained promotion serving them as engineer for years.

Before the consolidation of the Fall River railroad with the Old Colony Mr. Dyke ran the well known steamboat train from Boston. For twenty years he engineered the trains from Boston to Plymouth and later the Boston and Newport trains. In all his railroad life there never was an accident which injured a person, a rare record for any man similarly employed. After forty consecutive years of faithful service he was given easier employment and in 1906 was retired on the pension list.

He has been twice married, but married his present wife Dec. 25, 1855, fifty-five years ago. He has two sons Henry H. Dyke of Worcester and William C. Dyke of the Sailors Snug Harbor, Staten island, New York.

Mr. Dyke is one of the oldest members of the Rural lodge of Masons of Quincy, a member of Pilgrim chapter, R. A. Masons, Abington Council and Old Colony commandery of Knight Templars, also a member of Puritan lodge I. O. O. F. and the Amana Rebekah lodge. He is at present the possessor of the gold-headed ebony cane which the Boston Post provided for the oldest registered male voter in the town. It was presented to him Aug. 14, 1909, by R. Allen Gage chairman of the board of selectmen.

Aside from some deafness and rather poor eyesight Mr. Dyke enjoys good health and may be seen walking the streets most any pleasant day. He loves reading and enjoys sociability so that the celebration of his last birthday will always remain a pleasant memory.

VERY LARGE REGISTRATION

Candidate McNary Claims a Big Majority

It was a busy session that the registrars of voters had Thursday night, for it was the last opportunity to get names added to the lists before he caucuses. The total number added was 122, and friends of William H. McNary make the claim that 84 of the names are his supporters. Of the names added Ward Six leads the list with 37 names and Ward One was second with 26 names. Ward Five added 17 names, Wards Two and Three 16 each and Ward Four 10.

A list of the new voters will appear in the Daily Ledger of Saturday.

SENTENCED FOR LARCENY.

Clarence Blackstone of Quincy was sentenced to three months in the house of correction by Judge Avery in the district court this morning for the larceny of $40 from the Johnson Lumber Co. Blackstone was employed by Peter J. Williams as a teamster. Early in September he was sent to Johnson's lumber wharf to do some teaming for that firm. He was sent out with a load of lumber and a C. O. D. bill for $40. He collected the money, and then visited Chief Williams collected what wages was due him and left town with $50 in his pocket for parts unknow.

Chief Williams told his son to keep a look out for Blackstone, and if he saw him in Boston or elsewhere to turn him over to a police officer. Thursday night his son spotted Blackstone near Music hall. He followed him until he met Officer Broberg, to whom he told his story, and Blackstone was placed under arrest. Blackstone took an appeal, and if he makes restitution before the superior court comes in he may get out of the jail sentence.

DUST-PROOF COAL-BIN.

A dust-proof coal-bin will be a joy forever. The way to make it so is to double-board the partition around it, placing good, thick sheathing paper, well lapped, between the layers of boards. Another good way, which requires less lumber, is to use one thickness of tongued and grooved boards, and paint the joints with white lead before they are put together. This makes a tight partition. You must be careful that the carpenter fits the partition closely at floor and ceiling. A door in front of the ordinary side boards ,where you shovel the coal out, will better keep out the dust.—Suburban Life.

—The barn at the Hingham Almshouse burned Thursday afternoon, including three horses eight hogs and thirty tons of hay.

ARM BROKEN.

James Dreghorn of 55 Hancock street, who sustained a painful accident on the afternoon of Sept. 9, is getting along as well as possible but will be incapacitated for five or six weeks. Mr. Dreghorn who is employed as a passenger brakeman by the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R., completed his day's work when he received orders to take an extra train to handle the crowds at the aviation meet. To save time he attempted to board a string of empty cars which was backing around the "Y" at Braintree but failed to reach the hand rail and was thrown violently to the ground, breaking his left arm very close to the elbow joint.

Mr. Dreghorn felt a peculiar numbness in the injured member but thinking he had merely struck the crazy bone was going on about his work when a hurried glance showed him that the arm was broken. Instead of going to his home he very pluckily walked across lots to the office of Dr. C. H. Gould of Braintree who bandaged the bone in place and advised him to go to a Boston hospital which he did the next morning.

The doctors at the hospital made an examination by the X ray and found the large bone broken off sharp and clean about an inch or two from the elbow joint. Mr. Dreghorn while unable to work is not prevented from being up and around. He states that in all the years of his service on the railroad this is the first time he has been injured. He is very cheerful and bears his enforced idleness with as good grace as possible.

"HIAWATHA" PRESENTED.

A large audience assembled Sept. 16, at the home of Dr. J. W. Watson, Washington street, South Braintree, to witness the performance of an adaptation of Longfellow's Hiawatha. The play was given on the lawn and was presented largely as a pantomime although some of the lines were recited by the players. Miss Annie K. Dyer read the poem in a charming manner while at the same time the action was interpreted in a most skilful and delightful way by the young ladies who composed the cast.

The lawn was arranged to represent a glade in the forest. On one side burned a camp fire and on the other stood a large wigwam while in the background loomed the big woods. The stage setting was ideal and a series of charming pictures was presented to the audience as the play progressed under the soft light of the September moon. The costumes and make-up were in excellent taste and all the parts so well taken that it would be difficult to select any one for especial excellence. After the performance ice cream was placed on sale and the financial returns of the evening were very gratifying.

The affair was under the auspices of the Amo society which is an organization for benevolent work composed of well known young ladies of South Braintree. The proceeds of the evening will be used in the work of the society.

The novel entertainment was prepared after a lot of hard work and much credit is due Dr. and Mrs. Watson for their efforts which resulted in such a clever exhibition. The play was arranged and under the general supervision of Mrs. Watson while the doctor was stage manager and had other duties too numerous to mention. The cast:

Minnehaha, Miss Florence Perry
Hiawatha, Miss Gladys Gould
Nokomis, Miss Mildred Nickerson
Little Hiawatha, Miss Mary E. Scott
Pau-Puk-Keewis, Miss Ruth Robbins
The Arrow-Maker,
Miss Evelyn Bridgham

A WORLD'S EXPOSITION.

When New Orleans made up her mind to go into the business of organizing an Exposition to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal it was determined to call it a "World's Exposition" and to make the appeal to all the people. It is not a real estate promoting scheme, nor is it a political proposition; the purpose is simply to make it convenient for the assembling of the greatest possible number of people for purposes of mutual advantage and improvement.

A California paper sneeringly remarked that the people of the South "are too poor to travel," which is not true. If it were true, however, it would furnish the best possible reason for locating the Exposition in New Orleans, in order that it might be accessible to thirty-millions of people who might easily come here, but could under no circumstances find the money to visit California.

Indeed the poor people are the ones who make expositions successful. The rich care little for them, but are able to visit them wherever they may be held. The poor people are the ones who need expositions and who assure their success; hence the logic of the San Francisco newspaper furnishes the strongest possible argument in favor of New Orleans.

—General regret will be felt at the retirement of President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine Railroad. He has been a commanding figure in the railway world, and has always taken such a broad view of questions which came before him that the Boston & Maine has escaped many of the troubles which have afflicted other lines. It is to be hoped that Mr. Tuttle's absence will only be temporary.—Banker & Tradesman.

Grahame -- White Day at Quincy Aviation Field

ANOTHER BIG CROWD TO SEE THE SPORT

Popular Price Does Not However Draw All The People Inside the Grounds

Attempts to Break Records in Speed and Attitude

The morning prediction was unsettled weather for Saturady and Sunday, with showers. It did look threatening and unfavorable until 10 o'clock, but then the sun shown brightly and it looked more encouraging for Keith's day at the Quincy Aviation field with C. Grahame-White as the star attraction.

Before noon the crowd of people began to arrive as it was announced that the gate would be open at 12 M., and first come first served in the grand stand, no seats being reserved.

Between 12 and 2 P. M. several extra trains arrived from Boston and hundreds of cars on the Boston Elevated and the Old Colony street railway were pressed into service to transport the thousands of people, all anxious to see another day of aviation. Supt. Gammons had about 20 cars on the Squantum branch alone, and a large number of extras between Neponset and Atlantic, and Quincy and Atlantic.

Of course there were none too many cars to transport the people, for the big event had been well advertised all over New England, and they responded en masse.

Early in the afternoon City Square as well as Neponset and Atlantic became congested, but the people were moved rapidly toward the Aviation week desired to enter the grounds and occupy the grand stand, as the price was only 50 cents, where $2 was the former charge. But there were crowds outside also. The weather is not all that can be desired and at 2.00 rain was theatened.

The program is an attractive one and includes 17 stunts.

BLERIOT MONOPLANE.

Dive from a hight of 4000 feet with the engines stopped.

Attempt to break the world's speed record by going at a speed of more than 70 miles an hour.

Spectacular demonstration of soaring from the ground at sharp angles.

Attempt to beat the world's record for altitude, now over 8000 feet.

If the weather is cloudy Mr. Grahame-White will go high enough to disappear from sight behind the clouds.

FARMAN BIPLANE.

Switchback flying.

Skidding in the air.

Flying with both hands off the control levers.

Birdlike demonstrations of gentle alighting.

Riding an invisible roller coaster around the field.

Dive from 1000 feet with a passenger, with the engine stopped.

Quick turning at sharp angles.

Exhibition of soaring from the grounds from within a space of 30 feet.

Shooting the airchutes.

Corkscrew glide from a high altitude.

TO VOTERS OF TENTH DISTRICT

Open Letter from Candidate William B. Willcutt

(Advertisement.)

On Tuesday, Sept. 27, you will be called upon to select your candidate for the Republican nomination to Congress in the 10th District. It is therefore essential that every businessman and thinking Republican in this district should know the records of the men they are asked to support and what they stand for, and I trust that you will afford me the privilege of stating the facts in this matter through your newspaper to your readers.

Let me state briefly that I was born in Boston and educated in the public schools. My business, briefly speaking is manager for an Iron & Steel Company and president of a Bolt & Structural Works. I simply make this statement so that those who do not know me may understand I am not a practical politician. I served in the Boston Common Council in 1906 and 1907, was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1908 and 1909, and had the pleasure both years of voting against the merger of the N. Y., N. H. & H. and B. & M. R. R. Am now a member of the Republican State Committee.

My entry into this campaign is to allow the Republican voters to do their own choosing and not to have a candidate selected for them. My record as a Republican is open for the inspection of all, and while it may not have met with the approval of the "Republican bosses," it has been approved by the people of my own ward. My fight against the "machine" or "boss" rule has brought upon me the title of an insurgent, or I believe since Theodore Roosevelt has returned we are now called "progressive Republicans."

It is common report and knowledge among the Democrats of the 10th District that two years ago a good, straight Republican could have easily defeated the Democrat nominee. The "machine" or "bosses" however, of this State refused to believe this information, and are again insisting that the nomination be handed to Mitchell Galvin, without the consent or without consulting the voters of the 10th district. Here is where they and I differ. The man who votes the Republican ticket at the primaries and on election day is the Republican party. The man whom he elects is sent there to represent him. He is only powerful so long as those who send him there allow him to remain. Consequently, the voters should dictate and not be dictated to.

I will only touch for a moment upon my opponent, Mr. Galvin. His only public record which I am able to find, is that of a Democratic officeholder of thirty years standing.

The statement being circulated that if I should receive the nomination it would be impossible to be elected is absolutely untrue, and uncalled for, as I know that a straight, progressive Republican can redeem the district, no matter which Democrat may be against him.

WM. B. WILLCUTT.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A surprise party was tendered to Robert Pratt at his home on Coddington street last evening. Games were played and refreshments served. Robert was presented a signet ring in behalf of those present. Among the guests were: Mildred Williams and Marian Campbell of Newton, Esther Beckford, Dorothy Lowe, Ethel Joy, Elsie Burrell, Mildred Bonney, Marion Bill, Mary Stuart, Wilmer Wilson, Marion Keast, David Melville, Enoch Lindberg, Kenneth Smith, Fred Ward, Alvah Innis, George Jennings, Edgar Parker, Winthrop Sherman, Edward Hayden, Henry E. Prescott and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gragg.

EMPLOYMENT OF MINORS

State Police Get After Those Not Examined

Members of the State police were in Quincy on Friday and visited the manufacturing places where minors are employed, to see if the minors had the proper certificates. As a result of their visit the employment of 25 or 30 minors was prohibited until they have met with the requirements of the law in relation to the employment of minors.

Under the old law all that was necessary was for a minor to get a certificate from the School Committee. Under the law passed by the last Legislature, however, a minor in addition to having the School Committee's certificate, which is now issued by the truant officer, Charles H. Johnson, must have a certificate from the school medical inspector that the child is physically able to perform the duties. The minors found at work by the State police had neglected to do this, and their employment was therefore forbidden.

The Daily Ledger called attention to this new law some weeks ago and advised parents who contemplated having their children go to work, instead of going to school; to have them examined. Ie seems, however, that they neglected to do so.

The medical examination of children under the new law is much more thorough and exacting than under the old law, and the school examiners are not inclined to do extra owrk required without more compensation than they now receive This fact Board of Health brought to the attention of the City Council last Monday evening.

TODAY'S COURT.

ALL FOR FIVE JURORS

City Council Has Difficulty in Getting Quorum

Considerable difficulty was experienced by the City Council Friday night in getting a quorum for its special meeting to draw jurors. In the absence of President Hobbs, the meeting was called to order at 7.35 by Councilman Bryant. There were but seven members present at that time. Councilman Gardner raised the point that there was no quorum present, and the President ruled the point well taken. The City Messenger was instructed to round up enough members for a quorum.

After some time had elapsed the required number was obtained, and at 8.20 the meeting was again called to order. The roll call showed a quorum present, the absent members being Councilmen Bolster, Cherrington, Flynn, Histen, Hobbs, Loud, Moir, Nowland, Richards, Snow and Woodward.

On roll call Councilman Bryant was elected President protem.

A venire was receive for the drawing of five traverse jurors, and the Mayor, City Clerk Keith and Councilman Clark drew the following: Wm. B. Glover, William Kelley, Howard G. Hinkley, Michael O'Neil and Hugh P. Tracy.

The meeting adjourned at 8.24.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

F. Hardigan, a driver on one of H. L. Kincaide & Co.'s furniture wagons, was injured this morning on School street. The horse shied at an electric car which was passing ,and as the wagon veered it struck a telegraph pole breaking the shafts all to pieces.

The shock of the collison threw the driver to the ground. He was picked up and taken to a nearby store where a physician soon came to his aid. It was found that Hardigan's right leg was fractured and he was taken to the City Hospital in the police ambulance. Mr. Hardigan is a resident of Hough Neck.

FAREWELL TO MR. PLUMMER

Woodward Teachers and Pupils Give a Reception

A farewell reception was given to Frederic W. Plummer last evening by the faculty and the three upper classes of Woodward Institute. In addition to the present faculty which, of course includes Horace W. Rice, the new principal, were the pupils of the three classes and a number of former teachers who served under Mr. Plummer in the school. Mr. Barbour, superintendent of schools, was also present.

After an informal reception in the music room, a number of the pupils gave an entertainment consisting of songs, piano and violin solos, readings. Miss Walker, Miss Beale, Miss Reed, Miss Bjorkman, Miss Dasha and Miss Fallon furnished the program.

Refreshments were served by a number of the girls, after which Mr. Plummer was presented with a picture. The evening closed with dancing which lasted until 10 o'clock.

Mr. Plummer will move to Chelsea shortly, as soon as his new home is ready for occupancy. After nine years of service in connection with the school, he will be missed greatly in Quincy, but Chelsea is to be congratulated for its acquisition, and there can be no doubt but that he will meet with the same success there as here and will make a host of new friends. He began his duties in Chelsea this month.

FUNERAL OF SOLDIER BOY.

The funeral of John J. Barry, former member of troop F. of the United States calvary was held this morning from the church of the Sacred Heart at Atlantic, mass being celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe. The services were largely attended and there were many beautiful flowers about the casket which was draped with the American flag. The burial was at St. Marys cemetery. Mr. Barry enlisted in the regular army at the age of 21 years, and was assigned to troop F. 12th U. S. Cavalry, and served during three enlistments receiving an honorable discharge while ill in the Presidio hospital at San Francisco, where he had been removed from the Philippine Islands where he contracted a fatal illness by drinking water.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The days are getting shorter and shorter but such is not the case with the hours of the political spell-binder. His duties grow more arduous as the date of election approaches and the air is full of speeches forecasts, etc. One political party predicts dire results if the other side wins, and so it goes. When the smoke of the battle of ballots has cleared away things will probably go on as before and the campaign orators can take a much needed rest.

Galveston, Texas, and Chelsea, Mass. both of which cities have had catastrophies since the census of 1900, report losses by the census of 1910. The figures for Galveston are 36,981 against 37,789 in 1900, a loss of 808. The Chelsea figures are 32,452 against 34,072 in 1900, a loss of 1620.

But for her misfortune Chelsea would have been today a city of 40,000 people but now Quincy has passed her. In 1875, 1880 and 1885 Chelsea was twice as large as Quincy, but since then Quincy has been rapidly overhauling her, and in 1905 was only 9,213 behind.

Here are the census figures since 1875:

Census	Quincy	Chelsea
1910	*33,000	32,452
1905	28,076	37,289
1900	23,899	34,072
1895	20,712	31,264
1890	16,723	27,909
1885	12,145	25,700
1880	10,570	21,782
1875	9,155	20,737

*Estimated.

It does seem as if the City of Quincy has much of which to be proud, both in history for nearly 300 years and in achievements of today. One day it is the success in aviation, another the launching of a battleship or large steamer, or a contract for a new one; again a new public building or a generous public bequest for a public library, hospital, nurses home school or park. Then the solid work of the Quincy Presidents is often recalled in the framing of the Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, and in International treaties.

We are proud of John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence who was also the first Governor of Massachusetts under the Constitution. We are proud of Bunker Hill monument built of Quincy granite and designed by a Quincy man. Also of hundreds of other memorials and buildings of Quincy granite.

We are proud of figures which point to rapid increase in valuation, population and improvements generally. We are proud of our No-License record and the absence of saloons. We are proud of our city government and our legislators. Proud of our public schools and school buildings, of our Thomas Crane Public Library, of our endowed City Hospital, of our Merrymount and Faxon parks, of our churches and pastors, of our Federal building of our Y. M. C. A. Proud of our record in the Civil war and the Spanish war. Proud of the battleships built in Quincy, of the submarines built in Quincy of our industries, our seashore, our scenery, our beautiful streets and trees, our men and women, our boys and girls. The City of Quincy can well afford to be optimistic.

DR. SARGENT'S LECTURE.

The first meeting of the Mother's Association for the season will be held on October 5th at 3 o'clock in Bethany church chapel. Dr. D. A. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium will speak upon the subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's body." Every woman in Quincy who is interested directly or indirectly in this subject is invited to attend and hear it discussed by one who is an acknowledged authority on physical development. It is an opportunity which should not be missed. No admission fee.

GOOD JOB ON 87TH BIRTHDAY

Preston P. Kittredge Saws Downs a Large Oak Tree

One of Quincy's smart young old men is Preston P. Kittredge, who on Thursday passed the 87th milestone in his eventful life, and unless looks are very misleading he will live to see many more years of active life. The interesting event he celebrated with his son Edwin, who is 57 years of age was cutting down and sawing up one of the oldest red oak trees in the city. The tree was located on the estate of C. W. Guy, the well known furniture man on Butler road, and was 5 feet 9 inches in diameter at the butt, and 90 feet tall. It is said that the tree was over 300 years old, as well as being the biggest oak tree in the country.

In sawing the tree a five-foot cross cut saw was used, and the logs were split with old-fashioned betles and steel wedges. The feat is a remarkable one for a man of Mr. Kittredges age.

Mr. Kittredge was born in Billerica and came to Quincy Feb. 7, 1846, his cash capital at that time being just 70 cents, and he says that he has never seen the time since then when he did not have at least that amount in his pockets. His first occupation on arriving in Quincy, which was to be his future home, was to let himself to the late Lloyd G. Horton for a year to drive one of his baker wagons. As a matter of fact, however, he worked for Mr. Horton for thirteen months, during which time he says that he sold 11,000 loaves of bread. Leaving the bakery business he worked in Weymouth for six years with D. Clapp, manufacturing boots.

He then entered the employ of the late Richard Newcomb as a carpenter, for whom he worked one year and then commenced the carpenter business for himself, which he carried on for twenty years. The last house he built being that located on the old homestead on Washington street which he occupied for many years. During these twenty years he had charge of the repairs of the Fore River and Back River bridges, at the same time carrying on a large farm at one time having as many as a thousand hogs on his farm. From 1887 to 1891 he was in New York state returning to Quincy in the latter year.

Twelve years ago he sold his farm at Quincy Point to E. Y. Perry, and shortly after it was cut up into house lots and is now one of the thickly settled sections of Quincy Point, including Broadway and other streets.

He now resides on Washington street and is apparently as active and spry as ever. He says that the only organization he ever belonged to was Know Nothings, but he has not always adhered to the principals of that party He began to read the Patriot when he firs came to Quincy and has read every issue since that time. He has also been a regular reader of the Daily Ledger. His wife who is 78 years of age is also remarkably smart. His children are Edwin and Henry P. Kittredge and Mrs. Drake.

BRAYTON DIES WITH BOOTS ON

Passes Away as He Declared He Would Do

AN OLD TYPE OF POLITICIAN

"Blind Boss" Wielded Powerful Influence in Political Affairs of Rhode Island—Served Creditably in Army and Had Been Postmaster of Providence—Admitted to the Bar at Late Period in Life

Providence, Sept. 24.—General Charles R. Brayton, known as "Boss" Brayton, died in the Jane Brown hospital. He was 70 years of age and totally blind. Brayton was taken to the hospital on Aug. 29 with a broken hip, the result of a fall in his office. Dr. Budlong declared, however, that death was due to diabetes, from which Brayton had suffered for several years.

The "Boss" of Rhode Island had been living for some time with his wife at the Crown hotel in this city. He did what he always declared he would do—died with his boots on. He had been at work as the power behind the throne in Rhode Island politics right up to the time he was taken to the hospital.

Brayton had been totally blind for half a dozen years and had been partially blind for about fifteen years. The loss of his eyesight was caused by cataracts.

General Brayton was a lawyer by profession. He was born at Warwick, R. I., on Aug. 16, 1840. He enlisted as first lieutenant in the Third Rhode Island volunteers and subsequently was in the heavy artillery. He was promoted to captaincy on Nov. 28, 1862; a lieutenant colonel Nov. 17, 1863, and a colonel April 1, 1864. He was mustered out of the service on Oct. 5, 1864. He was brevetted a brigadier general of the United States volunteer service on March 13, 1865, for faithful and meritorious service during the war.

General Brayton studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1891. He became postmaster of Providence, which position he held from 1874 to 1880. He became a member of the Republican national committee in 1904. His residence was Warwick, but he had been living in Providence for some time. His office was in the Banigan building, but he spent a great deal of his time at the state house.

Nearly forty years ago he began to attend national conventions and at any time he could have been elected a member of the national committee, but he always preferred to be in the background, where he was able to exert the greatest amount of influence.

After the choice of the delegation to the national convention in 1896 the members held a meeting and insisted that Brayton should be the member from Rhode Island. He was also urged to take the place by many strong and influential friends who thought it would be something in the way of honor and reward due him for his loyal services.

Nineteen years ago Brayton was admitted to the bar as a full-fledged lawyer. He had been for many years fully equipped with legal knowledge, and few, if any, laws or amendments were passed by the general assembly that he did not know personally what the full text and intent were.

General Brayton was a large man of wonderful physique, and noticeable anywhere he appeared. He was, and to a large degree, magnetic and attractive. He had never sought an office, though he had the reputation of having put many other men into them.

It is believed that he was admitted to the bar at a later period in life than any other person in the history of the state. He was over 50 at the time he took his successful examination.

General Brayton had an excellent war record, and as a Grand Army man he was long considered a peer among them. He was also a leading member of the Masonic fraternity.

He was constantly in attendance at the legislature, and no single man in the state exerted so strong an influence there as he at all times. He was aggressive, fearless and kindly, and is said to have never broken his word.

For years, although holding no state position, he occupied an office in the capitol at Providence, from which he directed legislation. He was ordered from the state house time after time, but went there when he pleased, his headquarters being in the office of the sheriff.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house. Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

(Started Sept. 14.)

"Fire!" echoed the cry from barrack to barrack as the men poured forth into the night, and then as Ennis rounded the corner and came in full view of the wide open parade with the long line of quarters beyond his heart leaped for his throat in wild dismay. "My God, lieutenant, it's your house!" panted a racing trooper. "My God! And Bob's all alone!" sobbed Ennis as he sped through the snow.

All Ennis saw as he came staggering round to the rear of the flaming furnace that once was a house was a wild eyed girl being led away by a group of sympathetic women. The colonel was bending over Bob Lanier, just emerging from his third involuntary plunge in the drifts and sputtering objurgations on his would be benefactors.

"In God's name, Lanier," almost wailed the colonel as at last that young gentleman, likewise singed and scorched and dripping, yet preternaturally cool for one just out of a blazing hell, found his feet and faced his commander—"in God's name, why didn't you jump when they told you? There was nothing but snowdrifts below."

"There was a colonel coming," said Bob, with a grin of mingled anguish and satisfaction, "who held that sort of thing to be breach of arrest."

As to the origin of the fire, Bob Lanier merely said that he had turned the lights low in the sitting room and, obedient to "Shoe's" orders, had gone up to his roost, too wrathful and amazed over what had occurred even to think of sleep—to think, in fact, of anything but the colonel's words. So absorbed was he as he slowly undressed he never noted the sounds from below until his room of a sudden seemed filled with smoke, and, throwing open the door, he was amazed to find the hallway ablaze, the stairs impassable. Running to his dormer window, he yelled fire at the top of his voice. Sentry No. 5 heard and came running down the back fence, saw the peril, let drive a shot and gave a yell that roused every one at the hospital, poor Rafferty, half crazed, half dressed, coming leaping along among the first.

And there at his back window, choking with smoke and tossing out clothing and other belongings, stood Mr. Lanier. Some men went searching for ladders up the line of back yards, the post hook and ladder truck being, of course, on the far side of the garrison. There being no extension and sheds to this little box, as to the larger quarters up the line, other men began shouting and Lieutenant Grayson imploring Mr. Lanier to jump, for already the flames had burst through the windows below. Then came the episode the regiment laughed over, swore over, talked over, many a long year thereafter. To Grayson's appeal Bob's only answer was calm and deliberate:

"Give my compliments to the colonel, will you, and tell him that, my quarters being all ablaze, I'd like an extension of arrest?"

Then Sumter and Stannard came in, tumultuous, and ordered him down, and Blake and Curbit and the rest of the card party came tearing after them and berated him for an absurdity and implored him not to be an ass. And then a bright tongue of flame licked in through the transom behind him, and the door panels burst from the heat, and all the room at his back suddenly blazed with fire, and then went up the cry from that agonized girl, at sound of which Lanier started and strove to climb to the little window sill, with a lurid sheet lapping down about his head, and then a brace of young Irishmen, Cassidy foremost, came scrambling up a human pyramid smoking and singeing below them. They reached the blazing eaves and burst through the fringe of flame, dragging Bob forth and on to the edge and then tottered all together into that blessed mound of snow beneath, fast melting in the glare of that fiery furnace.

And thus were we brought to the morning of Thursday, the sixth since the eventful night when Miriam Arnold's shriek had alarmed the garrison; Miriam, whose voice had now been heard a second time, upraised in frantic dread and appeal, but this time for the young soldier who on the previous Friday night, forgetful of his arrest, had rushed forth at her cry, but this night had to be dragged; Miriam, who now lay sick from maidenly shame that in one wild appeal to save her lover she had so betrayed herself.

With Thursday noon came resumption of telegraphic communication and the long stalled railway trains from east and west. With Thursday afternoon came "wires" from Arnold, the father, begging to know had his daughter started, and back went the electric message that she neither had nor could nor would for a week, "full details by post." With Thursday evening came stacks of belated letters, "with whole bales of newspapers," said the stage driver, to follow, and with Thursday midnight, long after every one had gone to bed, there came a tapping at Major Stannard's storm door and presently a fumbling at the bell knob, a clanging of the bell.

"What now?" thought the sleepy major as he scuttled downstairs in slippers and dressing gown.

"It is Mayhew, sir," said a solemn voice. "I've come not hoping, only praying, I may find my daughter here."

"Good God!" said Stannard. "Come in." And he led forthwith his aged and trembling comrade within doors, seated him by the still glowing stove in the front room and struck a light. In less than a minute Mrs. Stannard, too, had joined them, her kind blue eyes filled with tender pity and sorrow. Poor motherless Dora had no lack of friendly counsel and fond, womanly sympathy when once she could be brought to lay her burden there. And now, with his gray hairs bowed in sorrow to the dust, poor Mayhew had come to tell his piteous tale. Ever since young Rawdon had gone with the paymaster she had been fitful and nervous. Ever since their coming to Cushing four weeks agone she had been watching, waiting, listening, often weeping, and when letters came for her with the postmark of Fetterman or Laramie, Red Cloud or the cantonment in the hills he could not but note her feverish eagerness and her instant escape to her own room to read her treasure alone. Oh, yes; he knew they must be from Rawdon. He had liked the lad, knew there was good stuff in him, and he could not bear that fellow Fitzroy, who was a military loan shark, a man who fattened on the needs or weaknesses of his comrades.

But—God! He had never looked for this. Oh, where had she gone? And why? He had found her at home and in tears after the fire. Then that afternoon, some time, somehow, she got a message or a letter and then kissed him and said she would be better in bed. At 11 o'clock old Chloe's sobbing aroused him. Dora had disappeared.

They lost no time, those men of the field and the frontier. Stannard was dressed and out in twenty minutes.

Had she fled to join anybody? was the question that racked so many a heart, for, with the possible exception of gentle Mrs. Stannard, the girl had made no confidant.

It was this, full fifteen minutes after Lieutenant Field and two of his men had trotted off to town, that started old Stannard and big Jim Ennis down the valley from the veterinarian's, through "Sudstown," where girls and women were huddling and whispering at the news. They came to the long cavalry stables, standing gable ends to the north, like so many companies in close column, and at the sixth of these, farthest from the bluff whereon stood the barracks and quarters, they stopped and banged at the door. No answer, even when the sentry came to their aid and hammered with the butt of his carbine.

"I'll have him out," said the corporal of the guard and ran round to the south end and presently came back triumphant. He had roused the two orderlies. The burly major strode in, big Jim Ennis at his heels. The sergeant's door flew open before them. The room was empty. Fitzroy and Fitzroy's furs were gone. Nor was that all. Two empty stalls stood close at hand.

"I thought so," said he, then grabbed the nearest orderly by the coat collar. "Who took Lieutenant Foster's sleigh and team," demanded he, "and how long ago?"

"Sergeant Fitzroy, sir," came the answer, with a doleful whine, "just before the third relief, at half past 11."

"No time to see the colonel now!" said Ennis. "Major Stannard, I've got to gallop into town, but a dozen men, if need be, should trail that sleigh."

"Go it, boy," was the instant answer, "and I'm behind you."

HOME ENDORSEMENT

Hundreds of Quincy Citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsement the public expression of Quincy people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Quincy reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in faraway places. Read the following:

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch street, Quincy, Mass., says: "About five years ago I began to suffer from kidney trouble. I had pains in my back which were very severe at times and cold or damp weather aggravated my suffering. I knew that my kidneys were at fault and used everything I could think of in an effort to obtain relief but to no avail. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I finally decided to give them a trial and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before I had taken the contents of two boxes, the backache was a thing of the past and I felt better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Bad Breath

"For months I had great trouble with my stomach and used all kinds of medicines. My tongue has been actually as green as grass, my breath having a bad odor. Two weeks ago a friend recommended Cascarets and after using them I can willingly and cheerfully say that they have entirely cured me. I therefore let you know that I shall recommend them to any one suffering from such troubles."—Chas. H. Halpern, 114 E. 7th St., New York, N. Y.

SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT

The Ladies' Aid society of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church gave their first supper and entertainment of the season. The vestry was beautifully decorated with golden rod cut flowers. The young ladies who waited on the tables were Miss Edna Smith, Miss Mary Beale, Miss Alena Kilpatrick, Miss Alice Beale, Miss Emily Keeler, and Miss Agnes Kinneburgh. The ladies of the church feel well repaid for the work they have done for the supper was well attended.

The entertainment consisted of several readings by Rev. John Garland among which were selections from Dickens, "Tale of Two Cities," from Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" and "How Rubie Played" and "The Three Locks of Hair." There were several solos by Mr. H. B. Lowe which were appreciated by everyone. His accompanist was Miss Holbrook, Miss Mary Beale accompanied by her sister, Miss Alice Beale played several splendid selections on the violin.

Sultan of Sulu Arrives to Take a Look at Our Country

New York, Sept. 24.—His Highness Hadji Mohammed Jumalul Kiram, erstwhile Sultan of Sulu, and maybe the highest living type of a "good loser," arrived in New York today on board the St. Louis, of the American line.

The sultan, who is the only sure enough, regular union monarch who bows to the Stars and Stripes, is coming to take a first look at the country which benevolently assimilated him back in 1898 and to meet the president.

Incidentally, he may do a little spending, for he drew his vacation money in advance before he left home. They say that in the left pocket of his trousers the sultan is carrying something like $500,000 worth of pearls that he wants to sell in America.

Twelve Persons Killed In Wreck on Rock Island Road

Clayton, Kan., Sept. 24.—Twelve persons lost their lives and eleven others suffered injuries in a wreck of a Rock Island passenger train, the result of a cloudburst, which carried out a steel bridge and turned what is normally almost a dry bed into a torrent many yards wide.

The water washed out nearly a thousand feet of track also. The train, running at full speed, plunged into the gap. The locomotive and the mail car went into twenty feet of water.

The chair car almost telescoped the smoker ahead of it. Several passengers in these two cars were killed almost instantly. Others were carried into the raging stream with the wreckage and drowned.

Japanese Eloper and White Girl Arrested In California

San Francisco, Sept. 24.—While on their way to Seattle, where they intended to be married, Kunia Toda, a Japanese, and Miss Mabel Reed, both of Smithville, Utah, were arrested in Oakland. The girl is in the care of the Y. W. C. A. awaiting the arrival of her father.

The young Japanese who eloped with Miss Reed is a well educated man, and it is said that he at one time was an officer in the Japanese army. Toda, who is 27 years old, conducts a ranch and chicken farm near the farm of Reed. He has lived on his ranch for two years.

BRIEFS

The Wollaston M. E. church is to hold its annual "home gathering" re-reception on Wednesday evening.

George W. Glover of Lincoln avenue is on an extended business trip west as far as Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cleaves of Revere have moved to 51 Warren avenue.

An adjourned annual meeting of the Wollaston W. C. T. U. will be held Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. eGorge A. Brown of 263 Farrington street.

Judge Charles F. Jenney the former senator, will preside for the first time in Suffolk county next week at the Superior criminal court.

Miss Grace McKinnon observed her fifteenth birthday anniversary last evening, and received a gold locket and chain.

Miss Helen Rhines of Miller Stile road is studying at Boston University this year for the degree of master of arts.

The funeral of John T. McNeil was held Friday from St. Mary's church, mass being celebrated by Rev. Francis Walsh of Reading, a nephew of the deceased. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of James H. Thayer was held from his late home, 70 Columbia street yesterday. Services were conducted by Rev. R. J. Davis of the Calvary Baptist church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic carried off some prizes as usual at the autumn exhibition at Horticultural hall, Boston. He had a fine exhibit of seckle and bartlett pears, immense peaches and apples also grapes.

John Kilmartin, a retired grocer, died at his home 50 Crescent street this morning. The funeral will be held Monnay morning from St. Mary's church. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, Mrs. Frank Goodhue of Phipps street.

It is understood that the Republicans of Ward One are to support the first list of delegates for the senatorial convention. This was the Hultman list and it is believed by sending this unpledged list to the convention they will be able to act with more freedom and for the best interests of the city.

The Hospital Aid Association resumes its work, after the summer vacation, by holding the first of its monthly meetings at the home of Mrs. Theophilus King, Adams street on Thursday, Sept. 29, at half after two o'clock. A full attendance is hoped for, as much important work is to be done. Come yourself and bring a new member.

The funeral of Louis M. Soule was held Friday from his late home, 130 North street, and was attended by many of his friends including a delegation from Paul Revere post, 88, G. A-R. Services were conducted by Rev. Charles P. Marshall of the Washington Street Congregational church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

☞How about Peterson's coffee have you tried it?

CONGRESSMAN O'CONNELL

Opens His Whirlwind Tour City Square

The cost of living was the main theme of Congressman O'Connell last night in his open-air rally in City Square, which opened his whirlwind tour of the Tenth district, which includes Quincy, Milton and wards of Dorchester, Roxbury and South Boston. Before 7.45, the advertised time, some of his spell binders arrived from Boston, and two of these made brief addresses. Both spoke from automobiles and defended the labor record of Mr. O'Connell, and argued that it would be better for the district to send an experienced legislator.

Promptly at 7.45 Congressman O'Connell arrived and the other speakers left for Milton. Mr. O'Connell said he was in to win, and believed he would. He proposed to conduct a gentlemanly campaign. He quoted the high prices of corned beef, round steak, beef for stew, flour ,coal, etc., and said it was now impossible for people to make both ends meet. The only remedy, he said, was to remove the tariff on food stuffs. Luxuries only should be taxed. He predicted that the next Congress would be Democratic, and emphasized the importance to the district of having an experienced representative. He said the ward politicians had been against him, and he did not have the backing of "the interests," but he appealed as in the past to the common people. (Applause and cheers.) Mr. O'Connell was off in his auto before the town clock struck 8.

QUARRY ACCIDENT.

There came very near being a serious accident at Swingle's quarry this morning when the rigging of a new derrick broke letting the boom fall. The derrick was carrying a grout boat full of dirt from the new quarry when the break occurred. Mr. Swingle and his foreman were standing by with four workmen and the boom missed them only by a few feet as it came down. The derrick was capable of carrying twelve tons but there must have been a broken strand in one of the ropes. The load was about twelve feet from the ground when the rope broke.

Grahame-White at Brockton Fair.

The management of the Brockton Fair has secured the famous English aviator, Grahame-White, to fly each day of the Fair, October 4, 5, 6, 7.

This striking feature has been secured at a cost to the management of $15,500, and patrons of the big fair will have an opportunity of seeing this famous man-bird for the usual price of admission.

This is the biggest and most expensive attraction ever secured by any fair in this country, and as a drawing card cannot be beaten.

LOCAL SPORTS.

Base ball today at playgrounds in Wards Three and Four, and association football on Water street base ball grounds. The Makaria team play at Milton.

Lonergan, captain of the Quincys is in Norfolk, Va., on a vacation. He went to New York as coach of the Boston typos and at the conclusion of the series with the New York team the Boston aggregation went to Norfolk taking their coach with them.

Fat Pickings For Robbers Who Enter Home of Boston Sleuth

Boston, Sept. 24.—Jewelry, consisting of gold watches and gold and diamond rings, valued at about $2500, was stolen from the suite of E. S. Goss, a store detective employed in this city, in the Lamson, a fashionable apartment house in Cambridge.

The police believe that false-key workers, well acquainted with the family, are responsible for the break.

Payne For Thirteenth Term

Lyons, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Sereno E. Payne, co-author with Senator Aldrich of the new tariff law, in accepting his thirteenth renomination to congress from the Thirty-first district, made a speech in defense of the Tariff and of President Taft's administration.

—Woburn had a $15,000 fire early Friday morning which destroyed the Woburn National Leather Company factory.

OUTDOOR SPORTS INDOOR PICNIC

Children of First Church Sunday School Have Good Time

In order that the members of the Sunday school of the First church might contribute toward the furnishing of the chapel of the church, the annual Sunday school picnic was omitted this year. The children were promised an indoor picnic however in its place. This was held Friday afternoon in the chapel and proved to be so successful that other similar affairs will probably be held during the coming winter months.

The picnic was held under the direction of the officers and teachers of the school and was participated in by over 100 of the school. They gathered at the chapel shortly after 4 o'clock, bringing with them a basket lunch. During the first of the picnic there was a series of outdoor sports, held indoors, such as running races, potato races, etc., which afforded a good time for the children. The sports were held under the direction of Jack Pfaffmann and Paul Blackmur, and prizes were given to the winners in the several events.

At 6 o'clock the school with their basket luncheons adjourned to the dining room where the good things were partaken of. Here ice cream was served by the teachers. The picnic was a grand success and the children had a jolly time.

WILLIAM F. BAKER

He Blames Mayor Gaynor For Laxity of the Police

SAYS HANDS ARE TIED

Baker Will Clean New York If Plain Clothes Men Are Given Him

New York, Sept. 24.—"I am strictly obeying the orders I have received from by superior officer, Mayor Gaynor. If the gambling houses are running, it is due to the fact that I am obeying the orders from the mayor. Give me back the plain clothes men and I will clean the city."

Such, in substance, was Commissioner Baker's reply to the grand jury, when confronted with evidence that the police are dealing laxly with gambling and immorality.

Without plain clothes men, he said, according to report, it is absolutely impossible to get legal evidence against gambling and disorderly houses.

RECEIVES $50,000 WHILE "ON LEAVE"

Tuttle to Have $10,000 a Year After Leaving Presidency

Boston, Sept. 24.—The directors of the Boston and Maine railroad announced that Lucias Tuttle, for the past many years president of the road, will be paid $50,000 salary during his vacation year, which began this week, and thereafter he will be paid a salary of $10,000 a year for "an indefinite period."

It is thought that Tuttle will go abroad for a year's rest and when he returns the formal announcement of his final retirement from the presidency of the road will be announced. He is now president of the road "on leave" and will continue with this title during his vacation year.

WEST QUINCY IMPROVEMENTS

Committee Appointed to Work for Cheaper Gas

The West Quincy Improvement Society at its meeting this week discussed several matters of interest to that section of the city. In the matter of street signs it was voted to call the attention of the Commissioner of Public Works to the need.

Cheaper gas was discussed at length and a committee consisting of John Evans, Joseph Walker, John Casey, George F. Elcock, A. LeClair, Maurice Cohen and President Little was appointed to co-operate with the Board of Trade that the desired reduction might be had.

The proposed ordinance restricting the use of Crescent street to light vehicles was brought up and the society placed itself on record as favoring the proposed legislation.

There was also an informal discussion on a new railroad station and improvements in general for West Quincy, which it was agreed could be obtained by united action on the part of the association.

The committee who had charge of the whist socials reported that the first party was a good success in every way and it was voted to continue them through the winter.

Social Realm

Rev. Peter H. Goldsmith, D. D., of the First church in Salem, has accepted the unanimous call of the First Unitarian church of Yonkers, and will begin his ministry Nov. 1. Mr. Goldsmith is well known to Quincy Unitarians, having spoken at the meetings of the Alliances.

The marriage ceremony will be solemnized before the families and immediate relatives. The reception will be at "The Ledges," from eight until eleven o'clock.

CLOSED BANK MAY RESUME BUSINESS

Case of York County Institution Brought Into Court

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 24.—The first move in an effort to enable the York County Savings bank, whose doors were closed on Aug. 12 by the discovery of discrepancies in the accounts of the treasurer, Richmond H. Ingersoll, to resume business has been made by State Bank Examiner Skelton.

Mr. Skelton presented a petition to Associate Judge King of the supreme court setting forth that the bank is insolvent by reason of loss and depreciation in the value of its assets and asking for an examination of the affairs of the institution under the provision of the statutes providing for the scaling down of deposits of insolvent banks if the court sees fit after a hearing.

Justice King issued an order of notice, returnable at Alfred Oct. 1, when a hearing will be held. It is expected that a final statement by the bank examiner will be ready at that time.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Boston Dressmaker Charged With Smuggling Gowns From Paris

New York, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Mary Dolan, a dressmaker of Boston, doing business under the name "Madam Driscoll," was arraigned before Commissioner Russ on a charge of smuggling, and upon waiving a hearing was held in $750 bail for the action of the federal grand jury. She furnished the amount and was released.

The customs officials charge that they learned that Mrs. Dolan had used the trunks of a young New York woman to carry $1000 worth of her gowns which she was bringing from Paris, and which she did not declare in her list of dutiable articles.

GRAHAME--WHITE ENTERTAINS THOUSANDS

Gives a Wonderful Exhibition with Biplane and Monoplane at Quincy Field

Fourteen Passengers Including Three Ladies

The largest crowd of any day during the Aviation meet was present Saturday inside the grounds at the exhibition of Grahame-White and his aeroplanes, under the auspices of B. F. Keith. The grand stand was one mass of humanity from one end to the other. In fact it had about its full complement of people. The automobile parking place was also well filled. The larger part of this crowd were having their first view of flying close at hand. From 20,000 to 25,000 were on the field and as many more outside at Squantum, Atlantic and Dorchester.

LOUIS W. FROTHINGHAM

All enpoyed it to their fill, for while there was a great deal of sameness to the exhibition, the crowd did not seem to tire of it and remained in their seats until the exhibition was over. The air was cool on the field and heavy wraps did not feel at all out of place. The wind however was not strong enough to interfere with the flying, and the absence of the glaring hot sun made it much more easy for the aviator to do his stunts.

That the air hundreds of feet above the earth was cold was evident from the fact that Mr. White not only wore a sweater under his jacket but he had a muffler about his neck.

There was also a good crowd outside of the grounds but the crowd was not near as large as it was during aviation week for thousands who looked hard at a two dollar bill before parting with it for admission and a seat during Aviation week, readily parted with a half dollar for the same privilege on Saturday.

The Salem Cadet band was present during the afternoon and they were free with their music, playing constantly when Mr. White was not in the air. The crowd thoroughly enjoyed the flying, and after Mr. White would alight there was much applause in the grand stand and a continual din from several hundred automobile horns.

While it was a one-man exhibition it was a good one, and at times when making quick turns of harp angles while going full speed the optical illusion made it seem as though he was flying upside down. One of the prettiest exhibitions was the aerial dive with a passenger. From a height said to be 1000 feet, the engine was stopped, and the front of the plane pointed toward the ground. The machine came down at a terrific speed and it looked as though he would be dashed to pieces. Just before reaching the earth, however, the front plane was elevated, and the biplan righting itself landed as gracefully as a bird. It was an exhibition that was thrilling in the extreme.

Another stunt that brought much applause was the corkscrew glide and the riding of an invisable roller coaster about the field.

During many of these tripes he had passengers and for them it was a rare experience. Among those to go up were Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr, Miss Eleanor Sears, Wallace Goldsmith, (known as Asa Spades,) Lieut. Gov. Frothingham, Charles H. Taylor, Jr., J. Howard Edwards, Miss Dorothy Jordan, H. T. Sears, Harold W. Pierce, Carl A. Sylvester, A. A. Merrill, Adams D. Claflin and Master J. Phelps Edwards.

Among the stunts not mentioned above were aerial switchback, skidding in the air, flying with both hands off the control levers, shooting the air shoots, and accuracy in getaway and lighting, so that taking it as a whole it was a good show and everybody went away satisfied. They would like another exhibition next Saturday.

WITH THE BATTLESHIPS.

In order to repair the damage caused by the recent explosion and fire on the battleship North Dakota, that vessel, will proceed to the Norfolk navy yard immediately after the completion of the first division firing on the Southern drill grounds. The battleship Georgia will also proceed to Norfolk when she will have completed practice in order to receive two new 12-inch guns, one in place of that ruined in Thursday's accident.

A wireless from the battleship Vermont reports keen rivalry among the sixteen battleships of the Atlantic fleet for the record trophy. The Rhode Island took its final run of day practice on Saturday.

COUNTY A. O. H.

Several hours of balloting were necessary on Sunday at the biennial convention of Norfolk county A. O. H. to elect officers. The new president is Dennis J. Slattery of East Weymouth. James L. White of Walpole was elected vice president, Patrick J. Ferguson of Quincy secretary and financial secretary and Thomas J. Hannor of Dedham treasurer. The Rev. Fr. Chittick of Hyde Park was reappointed county chaplain.

—The rigging loft at the Boston Navy yard was destroyed by fire Sunday; loss $12,000.

BRIEFS

The first social dance of the season will be held in Wollaston hall on Friday evening under the auspices of the Dorothy Q. Lodge.

Mrs. George H. Murray of Wollaston entertains the Sunbeam club this afternoon at her home on Newport avenue.

Mrs. Gorge W. Bowman of Caledonia avenue returned Sunday night from Scotland, where she has been spending the summer.

Mr. Jay, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. will speak before the Men's club of Houghs Neck this evening.

The steam trawler Spray, built at Quincy returned to Boston on Sunday with her record catch, 140,000 pounds of fish, principally haddock.

Delegates from Quincy attended the district council meeting in Boston on Sunday. An effort will be made to increase the wages of all union blacksmiths in New England.

The Norwegian bark Queen which left Frey Bentos in June, arrived today at Bradley's works at Weymouth with 900 tons of guano. She put into Buenos Ayres for repairs.

The Daily Ledger has installed another linotype machine which went into commission today, and will be better able to handle the news. The necessity had been felt for several months.

Candidate William S. McNary addressed different clubs in Quincy on Sunday, and this evening will speak in City Square at 5 P. M. and East Milton at 5.25, Atlantic depot square at 5.40, and then tour Boston wards.

Two open air rallies were held in City Square on Saturday evening. Archie Thayer, a candidate for the Democratic Representative nomination outlined his platform. Socialists Labor speakers followed and expounded their principles.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell will begin another whirlwind tour in Quincy this evening which will close his notable speaking campaign. He will speak at St. Mary's hall at 7.30 and then go to Ashmont where he is due at 7.50.

The funeral of John Kilmartin, a long and well known resident of West Quincy, was held this morning from St. Mary's church, and was very largely attended. A requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Henry T. Grady, and the Gregorian mass was sung by the regular church choir. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

PROMINENT AMONG SCOTS

Many Societies Represented at Funeral of Robert C. Allen

The funeral of R. C. Allen, one of the most prominent Scotchmen in the State, was held Saturday afternoon from his home at 70 Copeland street, and was attended by delegations from many Scottish orders. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. James A. Matheson, of the Water Street Presbyterian church. After these services the remains were escorted to the Hall cemetery by Clan McGregor, of which he was a charter member, and their burial service was performed at the grave. Mr. Allen had also been chaplain of the clan for sixteen years.

Mr. Allen was born in Scotland and came to America at the close of the Civil war locating in Quincy, where he has since been engaged in the granite business. He was a past grand chief of the State Grand Clan, and was also a member of the Scot's Charitable Association and the Burn's Memorial Association.

MAYOR'S MOTHER ILL.

The mother of Mayor Shea, who has been ill for some weeks, is reported as being very low this morning, and is not expected to live throughout the day.

INSULTS AVENGED.

A driver of one of Ferguson's bakery wagons was at South Quincy on Sunday looking for trouble, and as is usually the case he found it. The young man was about South Quincy Saturday evening accompanied by a young lady, and it is claimed the street corner gang made numerous remarks which were directed to him and his lady companion. After taking the young lady home he returned to find the gang but they were gone. Sunday noon he came to South Quincy again, and this time he found them. There were a few words and then blows, and the gang pitched into the gallant driver. He held his own well, and although battling against great odds some of the crowd got a worse beating than he did. There were no police about and the people who reside in that neighborhood made no effort to notify the police.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Carson was fined $15 for gaming on the Lord's day at Quincy.

William Nelson was arraigned for the illegal delivery of liquor to the Timilty club at Hanley's grove Quincy, Sept. 11. Case continued until Oct. 8.

TRUST SCORES A POINT

And Quincy Concern Will Lose Large Contracts

The sale of the Thomas G. Plant patents and the Wonder Worker shoe machinery to the United Shoe Machinery Co., means more to Quincy than people generally realize, for the machine shop of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company has had large contracts for machinery for the Wonder Worker Shoe Co., sometimes employing as many as 150 men at a time.

Under the royalty lease system says the Boston Record, the trust has the manufacturers of the country in an iron grip. It takes so much on each pair of shoes, getting a payment on over half a dozen of the different portions, because they are made on the trust machinery.

Mr. Plant secured some very remarkable machinery and went into court challenging the right of the Machinery trust under the laws to tie up the shoe manufacturers of the country, so that their customers need not always have the enormous expense of an overcapitalized concern tacked on the price of their shoes.

He declared against these leases and took them into court. The hearing was set for next week. And then the trust bought out for $5,000,000 or thereabouts.

As a cynical friend and advocate of the Machinery says:—"The legal issues were those which the company would never wish to have tried out in the present state of political sentiment."

Mr. Plant had developed a line of shoe machinery that for the first time since the United States Machinery Co., was formed could equip a factory.

SUNDAY CARD PLAYERS.

Five congenial spirits were having a quiet game of poker Sunday afternoon in the rear of 668 Washington street, when Officer Johnson appeared on the scene. With the cry, "I'll see your raise and go you one better," the officer jumped over the fence into the crowd. There was a great hustle to get out of the way, and four of the five were successful. It was John Carsons "anti" however, and he did not come up in time to escape. Officer Johnson had a full hand. Carson was sent to the police station where he remained the remainder of the day. In court this morning the court assessed him $15 for his part in the game. He did not have the money, and declared that unless the balance of the party came to his rescue and paid the fine he would tell the police who they were.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Argentina

Quincy had two distinguished visitors on Saturday, in the person of Senor Don Epifanio Portela, who is te envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic. He was accompnied by Vice Counsel Guillermo McKissock of Boston. They arrived in town early Saturday afternoon, going direct to the Fore River shipbuilding plant, where they inspected the work on the Mammoth battleship now building for the Argentine Republic. Both gentlemen were greatly pleased with what they saw and were surprised to find work on the battleship as far advanced as it is.

GALVIN VS. CURLEY.

In the Tenth congressional district J. Mitchel Galvin will undoubtedly win the Republican congressional nomination over W. B. Willcut by an overwhelming vote.

But the Democratic situation is involved in doubt. The best authorities seem to think that Congressman O'Connell will land in third place, but whether W. S. McNary or J. M. Curley will get first place is quite uncertain. Curley has the endorsement of the city organiztion, in the main, and of Mayor Fitzgerald. This may pull him through by a narrow margin. McNary has been "coming strong" in the last week, and South Boston has always preferred its own candidate to ward 17 or any other ward outside the peninsula.

—Aviation is a new word for a new thing. Ever since the days when Icarus flew in the face of the sun and lost his life because the wax that held his wings in place was melted, the problem of flying has interested the human mind. When Archimedes said, "Give me a place to stand,, and I will move the world," he set free a thought which has been useful in all ages. If birds can fly, why cannot we who are far more ingenious than the birds invent machinery which will give us the same control of the air that we now have of land and sea? Many active minds and ingenious inventors are now at work at the problem. What will come we do not know, but it will be something as surprising as anything that has happened in the electrical world during the past fifteen years.—Christian Register.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people are always telling how much they have to do but if they should stop and figure out just how much was work and how much play they would be surprised to find how poorly equalified they were to be enrolled among the horny handed sons of toil. Some people labor very hard in summer trying to find pleasure, so hard indeed that they are compelled to take a little rest and then comes the winter season with its round of small gayeties and dissipations and the struggle to keep up with the social whirl consumes much more energy than the ordinary day's work.

Of all the important inventions of recent years none is of more widespread usefulness or has so advanced the mechanical progress of the world as the gasoline motor. Without it the present perfection of the automobile could not have been possible and the air ship would still be a possibility instead of an actual reality. Its economical production of power within a small space, its comparatively light weight and its adaptability to many varied uses make it one of man's greatest and most wonderful achievements. Of course a hundred years from now people will coax power from a dozen sources, perhaps now undreamed of but in the mechanical hall of fame one of the most important niches will be occupied by the ever useful but sometimes belittled gasoline engine.

It looks as though Quincy, Taunton, Everett, Chelsea and Pittsfield were to have a struggle among themselves the next five years in the population race. Quincy's census returns are expected daily and may total 33,500. Then the returns of the four cities would be:

Taunton	*34,000
Quincy	*33,500
Everett	33,484
Chelsea	32,452
Pittsfield	32,121

*Estimated.

At the last State census in 1905 Taunton, Chelsea and Everett were larger than Quincy and Pittsfield smaller, so if Quincy is near the top of the quintette it will be "going some."

The Daily Ledger has already made comparisons between Quincy and Pittsfield, and Quincy and Chelsea, and today puts Quincy side by side with Everett whose figures were announced yesterday:

Census	Quincy	Everett
1910	*33,500	33,484
1905	28,076	29,111
1900	23,899	24,336
1895	20,712	18,573
1890	16,723	11,068
1885	12,145	5,825
1880	10,570	4,159
1875	9,155	3,651

*Estimated.

Everett is gaining fast but her percentage of increase was not as large by this census as at the last one. Everett gained 37 per cent and Pittsfield 47 per cent, while Chelsea because of the conflagration lost 4 per cent.

The figures for Taunton have not been announced, and may fall below Quincy. The City of President's stood No. 21 in the State in 1905 and is sure to move up by the new census. Whether to 20, or 19 or 18 remains to be seen. By the census of 1905 only 15 cities and towns of Massachusetts made a larger actual gain in ten years than Quincy.

Korea Developing Fast.

Korea has a population of 12,000,000. Its area is nearly 84,000 square miles. Under Japanese control and management Korea is beginning to develop marvelously. The great Korean hospital at Seoul is a magnificent building well equipped.

DRIFT OF OPINION

No Greater Boston for Dedham, thank you. We are satisfied to spend our own money for our own purposes, for ourselves and by ourselves. We don't need Boston's political gangs to help us.—Dedham Transcript.

We want to say a good word for the man who meets his small obligations promptly. Such men are not as plentiful as they should be, and they are worthy of more than passing notice. Most men will pay, but fewer men will pay promptly. Almost any firm will testify that counting the time, postage, booking, and the like, it costs all some accounts are worth to collect them.—Chelsea Record.

Amen so say we all of us.

A little band of venerable men met the other day in a city in this country, and after contemplating their dwindling ranks and noting their own age and feebleness they decided to adjourn without day, or as they put it, "to meet on that beautiful shore." It had at last come to them that they were beyond the pale of life's activities, and that it was time for them to conserve their energies and obtain all the peace and rest possible in this world. They were Mexican war veterans. In Chicago another little band of men who took part in the happenings of another historic period hav announced that they will hold no more reunions. These men were in the rush for gold to California in 1849. The youngest man in the list of survivors is 79, and of the 14 pioneers who attended last year's meeting half have since died. Forty-niners still meet in Boston, but time's heavy hand has stricken that band as well as others, and their reunions will soon be a matter of history, as is the glorious and virvile period which they meet to discuss. Sixty-one years is a long time, and youthful men of 1849 are now beyond the fourscore mark.—Brockton Enterprise.

Eben S. Draper deserves to be re-elected Governor of this Commonwealth because he has stood with the people and their interests rather than with the politician. He has proved himself the strongest Governor that Massachusetts has had in a long term of years. He has given to the people an honest, fearless and thorough business administration of their affairs. Governor Draper has proved his courage and ability to stand unswerved by selfish interests and partisan appeal for his own convictions of what was right and best. He has withheld his approval of legislation that appeared to him to be radically wrong, which a weaker executive perhaps would have signed under less pressure than has been brought in some instances against Governor Draper. Moreover the Governor is a man of his word. No man who ever received a promise from Eben Draper can point to one that he has not kept, regardless sometimes of personal sacrifice. In a word Governor Draper has not played politics.—Lynn Item.

JURY DISQUALIFICATIONS.

The jury commissioner of Chicago recently filed a list of citizens to whom he objected for jury duty. His objections were approved by the court. This is the list:

Actors, because they have no fixed abode.

Boilermakers, because of defective hearing.

Saloon keepers and bartenders, because of their occupation.

Train dispatchers and tower signalmen, because they are doing a greater service at their regular positions.

Medical and theological students, because they are exempt.

Pedlers, junk dealers and scavengers, for obvious reasons.

The commissioner also sought to exclude all those persons who in pursuit of their daily tasks habitually accept tips. This list would exclude waiters, porters, barbers, cabmen and the like but the court decided that the objection of the commissioner was not sound in such cases and refused to bar men of that class from jury service.—Cincinnati Citizens' Bulletin.

SEPTEMBER.

William Wilfred Campbell.

Already Winter in his sombre round
Before his time hath touched these hills austere
With lonely flame. Last night, without a sound,
The ghostly frost walked out by wood and mere;
And now the sumac curls his frond of fire,
The aspen-tree reluctant drops his gold;
And down the gullies the North's wild, vibrant lyre
Rouses the bitter armies of the cold.
O'er this short afternoon the night draws down
With ominous chill across these regions bleak;
Wind-beaten gold, the sunset fades around
The purple loneliness of crag and peak;
Leaving the world an iron house wherein
Nor love nor life nor hope hath ever been.

WILSON—BROWN.

Wednesday evening, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of 294 Union street, Braintree, was the scene of pretty home wedding when their daughter Miss Anna J. Brown, was united in marriage to Mr. Wallace W. Wilson son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wilson of 71 Hancock street, South Braintree.

The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by the Rev. George H. Parkinson, pastor of Methodist Episcopal church. The tasteful home decorations of evergreen and golden rod ,with bouquets of asters and ferns added to the beauty of the scene, while Miss Lena Knox presided at the piano rendering suitable musical selections.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white crepe de chine, wearing the conventional veil and carrying sweet peas and bridal roses. She was attended by Miss Olive R. Kibble of Tremont street, who was charmingly gowned in blue chiffon.

The best man was Chester O. Wilson, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal couple received their guests and were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. James Brown and Mrs. Fred Desauliners and Mrs. William, sisters-in-law of the bride. The ushers were John Anderson of Norwood, Thomas Syne of Braintree, George Thom of Neponset and Walter Milton of Neponset.

There were quantities of beautiful gifts which testified to the large circle of friends of the young couple.

Guests were present from Neponset, Norwood, Dedham, Foxboro, East Weymouth and Braintree. At a late hour, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left the Braintree station and were bombarded with rice and confetti by a delegation of friends from the Braintree club. They will spend their honeymoon in Brunswick, Me., and after October first will make their home at 294 Union street, South Braintree.

DOW—TURNER.

Tuesday evening, September 20, Miss Cora May Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Azro Turner of Mt. Vernon avenue was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Clarence Willard Dow, son of Mr. and Willard E. Dow of Middle street, Braintree. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride by the Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman, pastor of All Souls' church of Braintree at seven o'clock. The home was tastefully decorated with clematis, golden rod ,autumn leaves and potted plants, and the bride charmingly gowned in white meteor crepe with pearl trimmings, wearing the conventional bridal veil and orange blossoms and carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley, was given away by her mother, Mrs. Azro Turner.

The maid of honor was Miss Vesta Turner, sister of the bride who wore a beautiful gown of pink messaline and carried pink carnations. The bridesmaids were Miss Grace W. Wheeler and Miss Faustine Bracket. Both wore beautiful gowns of green messaline with duchess lace trimmings and carried pink carnations.

The ushers were all Braintree young men and were Alva M. Dow, George L. Anderson, Joseph T. Morrison, Curtis M. Hilliard and Azro, Turner, Jr.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal couple, standing beneath a green bower with pink and white asters and clematis received their man yfriends from eight until ten o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Willard E. Dow of Middle street. They were assisted in receiving by the bride's mother, Mrs. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Dow and Miss Vesta Turner. Suitable music was furnished by the orchestra and the floral decorations were by Waldecker.

The groom's present to his bride was a gold watch and pin and the ushers were presented with amethyst scarf pins. The bride gave her bridesmaids pearl pins. The groom is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity. Members of this chapter were present at the wedding. John D. Crawford of Randolph served as best man. The young couple are enjoying a wedding trip of three weeks' duration.

PINNED IN TROLLEY WRECK

Two Men Die of Injuries Received In Crash at Haverhill

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 26.—Two men who were injured in a head-on trolley crash in this city Saturday night died Sunday. William Welch of Lawrence died as the result of injuries which he received, while William Blaisdell of Haverhill suffered an internal hemorrhage and a shock which caused his death.

Both men were riding in the front vestibule of the box car, which was bound for Newburyport, and were pinned in the wreck of the car.

Motorman William Welch of the box car and others who were taken to the Hale hospital were sent home after receiving treatment.

ONCE INSTRUCTOR IN YALE

One of the Oldest Graduates of the University Dies a Pauper

Ballston, N. Y., Sept. 26. —Albert J. Perkins, who was one of the oldest Yale graduates, and later served as instructor of chemistry at that university, died in the county almshouse here. He was 84 years old.

In his early life he accumulated a comfortable fortune, but reverses swept away his savings, and for thirty years he had been an itinerant umbrella mender.

BLAZE ON "L" TRAIN

Passengers Badly Frightened as Cars Speed to Nearest Station

Boston, Sept. 26.—Well crowded with panic stricken people, an Elevated train, its rear car belching smoke, enveloped in a blinding glare, raced last night from Northampton street to Dudley, emptying the terrorized passengers before the fire had eaten through the floor of the rear car.

At Dudley street the passengers, fearful of being burned alive or at least electrocuted, fought one another to get out of the train.

Men and women fought through a sheet of fire that enveloped the car, leaping through the flames and smoke to the platform. The platform of the station, licked by the flames, was commencing to catch when the train, finally emptied, was pulled to the Bartlett street car barns, and the fire extinguished by apparatus summoned by a "still alarm."

The fire was caused by the motor leads in the last car becoming short-circuited.

DISGUISED AS A MAN

Woman Worked Six Months as an Undertaker's Assistant

New York, Sept. 26.—For six months successfullly carrying the disguise of a man, 22-year-old Mrs. Maria Carpita-Cavella stood in night court sobbingly admitting her sex.

In court she protested that it was no freakishness of mind that had caused her to seek to pass as a man. Necessity, she said, was back of her having put on trousers and applying for employment at man's work. For six months she has been an assistant to John Caingrasso, an undertaker.

Her duties were to wash down carriages, feed and groom horses, answer the telephone and occasionally go out with the undertaker and assist him in laying out the dead. Caingrasso said that, although he noticed the supposed youth was very soft spoken and that "he" never smoked, chewed tobacco or drank, never once did the employer suspect the sex of his assistant.

GAVE "SILENCE" TO TACTICAL OFFICER

Meals and a Hop Sacrificed by West Point Cadets

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 26.—It appears that Captain Edward Landon, stationed at the United States military academy since Sept. 1 as a tactical officer, incurred the displeasure of the cadets in some manner and when he entered mess hall Saturday night he was greeted with the indignity of the "silence."

Immediately the offchding cadets were ordered to their rooms supperless, but despite their hunger the "silence" was repeated again Sunday morning at breakfast, and once more the offenders were locked in their rooms, after having been forced to march with arms five times around the barracks.

Because of the performance of Saturday night, a hop which had been arranged was cancelled, greatly to the embarrassment of a number of young women who had come to the academy from New York and other places.

AT THE BALLOT BOX

Trainmen Plan to Get What They Consider Their Rights

New York, Sept. 26.—For the first time in the history of railway unions, members and delegates representing 308,000 of the four great divisions of railway employes in the east voted to take concerted action in national and state politics.

In pursuance of this plan the meeting voted to send a series of eight questions to state and national candidates, particularly to candidates for the legislature and house of representatives, asking for a definition of their attitude on the universal adoption of safety appliances and an employers' liability law where such does not already exist, company pensions for superannuated employes, hours of labor and other matters of kindred interest.

MURDER IN PAPER MILLS

One Workman Puts Bullet Through Heart of Another

Rumford Falls, Me., Sept. 26.—A quarrel between two workmen in the wood room of the Oxford paper mills resulted in the killing of Charles Bundul, and the arrest, after a long chase, of Camille Fina. Bundul was shot through the heart with a revolver bullet.

Fina declined to make any statement about the cause of the quarrel, but said that Bundul attacked him with a cant-dog. Bundul was 40 years old and leaves a widow and a son. Fina is considerably younger.

HUGHES IS ASKED TO PARDON HAINS

Application Is Made by Father of Man Who Killed Annis

New York, Sept. 26.—An application for executive clemency for Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., has been filed with Governor Hughes at Albany. Hains was convicted of the killing of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht club on Long island in 1908 and is serving an indeterminate term of from eight to sixteen years in Sing Sing.

The application for a pardon was made by General Hains, father of the convicted army officer, and is based, it is understood, on legal and sympathetic grounds. It recites the immediate history of the case and of the Hains family, including the boyhood of the prisoner, his life at various posts, his marriage and the events which aroused his jealousy of Annis and led to the shooting. Insanity was Hains' defense at his trial.

HAMLIN AFTER DELEGATES

Begins Fight For Nomination by Starting on State Tour Today

Boston, Sept. 26.—Charles S. Hamlin has taken the initiative in the fight for control of the delegates to the state convention. He starts on a tour of the state today and will talk personally with the delegates who will nominate the Democratic candidate for governor.

Without question, Hamlin's action will precipitate the liveliest kind of a pre-convention contest. It will mean that the Foss supporters will be obliged to come out in the open and campaign for delegates. The Hamlin campaign for delegates will also force the hand of Mayor Fitzgerald.

It was practically agreed at the last meeting of the Democratic state committee that the delegates to the convention would be unpledged.

Brown Accepts Nomination

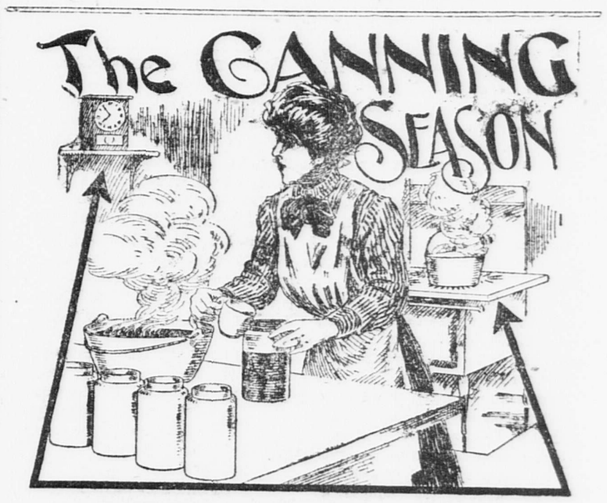

New Haven, Sept. 26.——Edward T. Brown of New London has accepted the nomination for state treasurer on the Democratic ticket, in place of E. K. Hubbard, Jr., of Middletown,

SUNDAY IN CHURCHES

Rally Day at Many of the Churches

Activity in the churches is noted once more as the summer vacation days are over. All churches should be represented in the Daily Ledger of Monday in this department, and all pastors, superintendents, musical directors and others are invited to send news promptly. Sunday church news will not be printed unless received in season for the Monday paper. It should reach the office before 10 A. M. Monday. It may be sent by telephone, messenger or mail.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

All the services were well attended at the Bethany Congregational church Sunday. In the morning Dr. Hardy preached an excellent sermon on the theme "The Hosts of God." He pointed out the advance of religious work and spoke very optimistically of the outlook for the church.

Rally Sunday was observed in the Sunday school. All departments met in the auditorium where a special program was followed. Over 400 were present. An address by Dr. Hardy took the place of the regular lesson assigned for the day. The boys choir sang.

A large number came out for the Sunday evening meeting. The pastor spoke of the tendency among us to judge by the external and gave some very striking examples to illustrate the unfairness of it.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The fall work is getting under way at Christ church and all the organizations that have not held their opening meetings already will do so in the near future. The Galahad club starts Thursday evening of this week and Saint Margaret Guild has its first meeting on Friday. The Men's Club will meet the first of next week.

The regular services were held Sunday with the celebration of holy communion at the morning service of worship.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Rally Sunday was observed at the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday. All the church services were of a special nature and the Sunday school had a rally day exercise. The different church organizations will begin their activities very soon and the outlook for a year of better service and helpfulness is bright.

The Ladies Benevolent society will hold its opening meeting in the vestries on Wednesday afternoon.

WOLLASTON M. E.

At the morning service Sunday Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor of the church delivered a very able sermon on Bible study, taking his text from Acts 17:11.

Rally day services were held by the Sunday school. Delcevare King of Quincy was the speaker and a large number were present to hear him.

The Epworth League had its regular meeting at 6 o'clock. The subject was "Waiting for God." Miss Rena M. Chamberlain lead the meeting. Beginning Oct. 9 a series of special services will be held by the young people.

The Whatsoever Circle of Kings Daughters will meet with Mrs. F. E. Cleveland, Cheriton road, this evening at 8.

The annual "home gathering" for members and attendants will be held Wednesday evening at the church. A special program has been arranged and there will be refreshments and a social hour.

The Deaconess Aid society will hold a "motor fete" on Thursday. Autos will leave Park street church every 5 minutes from 10 A. M. to 6 P. M.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Friday evening at 7.45.

The Ladies Aid had an outing with Mrs. R. B. Smith of Stoughton on Tuesday. A picnic lunch with hot corn chowder was served by the hostess. A very enjoyable day was spent by all.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

"Reminiscenses of the War" will be the subject of Col. Edward Anderson's address at the social of the Walther Men's class held in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church this evening. All members active and associates are urged to attend.

The Wollaston Boys club opens its season on Tuesday evening in the Wollaston Baptist church with an entertainment by Lansing and Burrough of Boston. All Wollaston boys whether members or not are invited to the opening meeting.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The choir of hte Finnish Congregational church, numbering 20, went by trolley to Norwood, and took part in services there in the afternoon.

HEBREW SYNAGOGUE.

There was a very large attendance at the synagogue of the Congregation Avath Achium on School street Sunday afternoon. The occasion was the presentation to the synagogue by the Hebrew Ladies' society of a set of Scrolls or Bible. The scrolls were imported from Jerusalem and they were officially installed by Rabbi Friedman. There were several visiting Rabbi present and addresses were made. The exercises bgan at 5 o'clock and wre continued until 10 o'clock in the evening.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The monthly business meeting of the Swedish Baptist church will be held on Tuesday. The prayer meeting will come on Thursday as usual. The property of the church is being surrounded by a new fence which will be a decided improvement.

Mr. Hanson conducted the regular services Sunday all of which were well attended. The Young People's society had their meeting at 6.30 as usual.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The congregation still meet at the United Presbyterian church Sunday afternoons at 3. These meetings have been unusually well attended.

The Endeavorers will meet at the pastor's home next Sunday evening for their consecration meeting, and the church prayer meeting will be held there Thursday.

On the 4th of October the semi-annual meeting of the Presbyterian churches of Boston and vicinity will be held at Lynn. The pastor and one delegate from each church will attend.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

Large congregations attended the morning and evening services Sunday. Special singing was a feature of both, the male chorus taking part in the morning worship and the mixed choir rendering several selections in the evening. Rev. G. W. Palmgren, pastor of the church, preached. He took for his morning topic the 23d Psalm, and said in part: "The world could spare many a large book better than this sunny little psalm. A dying person, on the threshold of the world unknown, cares little for so-called masterpieces of literature, but is glad to listen to the beautiful wooing strains of David's shepherd song. The contents o fthe entire psalm might be condensed into the following outline: Every need met, every fear banished, every longing satisfied."

The subject treated by Mr. Palmgren at the evening discourse was: "What think ye of Christ?" Matt. 22: 42. Christ's superiority was dwelt upon at length by the speaker. He then pleaded with those that were not Christians to enthrone and crown the Divine Saviour before he becomes the judge of amn.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of the First church and Mrs. Butler arrived home from their European trip Sunday night. Rev. Mr. Butler reports having had a fine trip although he would have liked to have spent more time in some of the places visited than he did.

FIRST UNIVERSALIST.

Rev. Ciark L. Paddock, for the past two years, pastor of the First Universalist church preached his farewell sermon Sunday to a large audiance. Rev. Mr. Paddock resigned his pastorate in Quincy to accept a call to Athens, Pa., where he will commence his new pastorate Oct. 1. After the services the parishioners and friends gathered about and wished him all success in his new field of labor.

The Murray club of the Universalist church are arranging for a Hallowe'en party to be held Oct. 28.

He Came Down Light.

A Chicago board of trade man who was not in the habit of attending church was taking a walk one Sunday morning, and on coming to a church at the regular hour of service he decided to go in. As he entered the auditorium in which the pews were adjusted upon a sloping floor an usher stepped forward and, wishing to consult him as to location before conducting him to a sitting, politely inquired:

"Would you like to come down pretty well?"

Mistaking the inquiry to be an appeal for money, the board of trade man began to fumble through his pockets as he drawled:

"I'd like to, but I'm not prepared to come down very heavy, as 15 cents is all I have with me."—Harper's Magazine.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS USE OLD DAVIS HOME.

Bathe and Collect Oysters and Crabs Near New Orleans.

The veterans of the Confederate army are housed in the home which was once the house of Jefferson Davis, on the gulf of Mexico, not far from New Orleans, where they can see the blue expanse of water, bathe to their hearts' content and in spare moments collect oysters or catch crabs from the piers in front.

Beauvoir is an ideal spot for an old man's home. It was given to Mr. Davis by a southern woman who admired him greatly, and for many years he and his family lived there when they were not in the larger cities. It is one of the many southern homes on the Mississippi and Louisiana stretch of the gulf of Mexico, with their shell roads in front and wide domains covered with trees behind.

It is built in the usual style of that region, with a long, wide hall extending through the middle of the house and opening on to a veranda or gallery which runs across the front. The hall is used as a living room, and off from it are bedrooms. In the yard is a guest house, where Mr. Davis entertained his friends, and a small but well stocked library is housed in a cottage which fell to the Davis family with the house.

But the estate of Beauvoir is not the only attraction the veterans enjoy, for it is situated in one of the most unique regions of the United States. This part was the home of the Arcadians who migrated there from Nova Scotia, and it is also the home of many aristocratic creoles who live there the whole year or own picturesque summer cottages, retiring to New Orleans or Mobile in the winter.

FIBER PREVENTS DROWNING.

Lighter Than Swansdown, but Two Pounds Float a Man.

One of the most important life saving discoveries ever made has just been tested on the Thames at London. A vegetable fiber has been found lighter in color than flax and lighter in weight than swansdown, and less than two pounds of it will save any man or woman from drowning.

All the circumstances which frequently accompany a boating disaster were reproduced at the test. Two men set out in a canoe from a houseboat in the neighborhood of Laleham. There was only one other craft on the reach at the time, a large steamer laden with passengers taking a trip upstream. The majority of them leaned over the rail and watched the canoe.

Suddenly they were horror stricken to see—what is so often a prelude to a boating tragedy—one of the young men standing up in the canoe. In a moment the gunwale was under water and the two men were overboard Everybody expected to see them sink. They had not noticed that two white cushions had fallen in as well.

A moment later both men snatched hurriedly at the cushions, and, to the surprise of the steamer passengers, once they had seized a corner of these white cushions they were safe. The weight of the two men, and they were both fairly heavy, seemed to have no effect whatever on the cushions, which were stuffed with kapok, the new life saving fiber.

EARTH WEIGHED ON SCALES.

New Yorker Says Figures Are Seven Trillion Tons.

Reinhard A. Wetzel, a young instructor in the College of the City of New York, has weighed the earth, gram by gram, ton by ton, on scales so small that if the breeze caused by a drifting feather had stirred them his calculations would have been upset and useless. The weight of this little planet on which we live is only 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 grams, or 7,000,000,000,000 tons.

Five years ago Wetzel hied himself forth to seek the weight of a sunbeam and while experimenting upon this problem found such delight in the thought of centering his energies on the other feat that he decided temporarily to devote himself solely to figuring exactly how great is this planet.

He has discovered it and asserts his calculations are more accurate than any formerly made. Only three such calculations have been sent forth before to startle humanity.

PAPUANS WEARING TAILS.

Have Holes In Ground to Put Them In While Sitting.

Judge J. H. P. Murray, the British lieutenant governor of Papua, says that he has never heard the natives speak of pygmies—a race of whom is reported to have been discovered there—but stories of men with tails were common among them.

Judge Murray once chatted with a Papuan who alleged that he had actually been in a village inhabited by men with tails. Their houses had holes in the ground for the reception of their tails when they sat down.

These stories, says Judge Murray, are rather curious in view of the fact that there are no monkeys in the great equatorial island.

New Brunswick Sells Cattle.

One way in which the New Brunswick government has encouraged farming progress lies in the importing of cattle and horses of approved breeds and selling them to farmers at cost price, in some instances time being given on part of the purchase price.

EAST BRAINTREE.

Mrs. David G. Doane is visiting relatives in Newbury, Vt.

Edward Avery of Commercial street has gone to Dartmouth college.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Bullard, nee Blanch Lillian Niles of Weymouth, who were married late in June are at home to friends after October first at 10 Forest street, Milford, Mass.

The annual reunion of friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. David G. Doane was held at their home on Bowditch street last Sunday. Forty visitors registered their names during the day. Thes youngest, Miss Elizabeth Gertrude Hart, being five months and the oldest Mrs. Mary E. Maxwell, aged eighty-five years.

DR. SARGENT'S LECTURE.

The first meeting of the Mother's Association for the season will be held on October 5th at 3 o'clock in Bethany church chapel. Dr. D. A. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium will speak upon the subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's body." Every woman in Quincy who is interested directly or indirectly in this subject is invited to attend and hear it discussed by one who is an acknowledge authority on physical development. It is an opportunity which should not be missed. No admission fee.

The Royal Box.

The king of Sweden is a tremendously hard worker, but he takes relaxation from the cares of state and is an ardent tennis player.

Queen Mary of England is an expert needlewoman. She is not only an expert dressmaker, but is wonderfully clever at lacemaking.

The king of Toro, Africa, has decided to be crowned annually. His father was so fond of the ceremony that he was crowned every month. His majesty of Toro is probably the only monarch who avowedly wears a false beard—made, by the way, from the hair of white monkeys.

The Home Doctor.

To keep the soreness out of a painful soft corn try binding it up each night with baking soda moistened with a little water.

In all cases of poisoning the great thing is to get rid of the poison by vomiting and purging. The antidotes are of secondary importance.

In acute fevers and inflammations where the pulse is quick and the skin dry a little aconito administered will prove helpful. When sweating sets in the need of aconite is over. Neuralgia is a disease often helped by aconite.

Laundry Lines.

Table napkins and tablecloths should never be starched.

A spoonful of salt added to starch on windy days will keep the starch from blowing out of the clothes.

A bosom board for fine shirts should le very smooth and but thinly covred. Some advise a marble slab.

A careful laundress always uses lemon on wash day. She puts half a lemon sliced in the boiler full of white clothes. She maintains that it not only whitens them, but is helpful in removing slight stains.

The Symbolism Didn't Appeal.

"Charlie," sorrowfully sighed the young lady in the parlor of the concrete house on Washington avenue, "it is nearly 12 o'clock.

"Yes, Belinda," was the breathing response of her poetical companion, who was sitting on the sofa beside her, "the minute hand is drawing closer to the hour hand, and when the time of midnight is chimed the two hands will be even as one. Oh, darling Belinda," he continued as he literally simulated the action of the minute hand, "may not the coming together of those two hands be symbolical of us?"

She broke away and stood firmly on her feet. "No, Charles Henry Smith," she retorted angrily, "those two hands will remain as one but a single second, and then the minute hand will divorce itself and go on its way alone. No, Mr. Smith, a minute hand that doesn't stick isn't the kind of symbolism I want!"—Chicago News.

An Unpleasant Tendency.

It gives a married man the chills
And chronic blues
When marriage merely runs to bills
Instead of coos.

BRIEFS

Sun rise, 5.35; sunset 5.36.

Sunday was a delightful fall day.

Saturday will be the first day of October.

Another holiday two weeks from next Wednesday.

Mrs. Charles H. Penniman of Revere road is the guest of friends at New Bedford for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lunt of Milton were in the trolley accident at Haverhill. Both escaped with a shaking up.

The City Council committee on Water Supply meet tonight and the Committee on Public Buildings on Wednesday evening.

Regular meeting of the School Committee on Tuesday evening. Teachers for the evening schools will probably be appointed at this meeting.

Sample ballots for the joint caucuses have been posted and everything is in readiness for the battle of ballots which opens Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

People are asking what has become of the plan to separate the grades at Saville and Water streets? It was a year ago this month that the final hearing was held in Quincy.

Mrs. Royal S. Eastman has returned from a five weeks' stay in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., where she has been visiting friends and relatives, and points of interest in and near the town of her birth.

A DISTINCTIVE NUMBER.

Always of unvarying interest, next Saturday's (Oct. 1) edition of the Boston Evening Transcript will be read by thousands of persons with gratification and benefit because of the many specially written articles on a variety of subjects which will be printed. One topic "The Farm on the Edge of Town" will appeal to many who enjoy semi-rural life. Other articles of particular interest to real estate owners, investors and builders are "Growth of the Bungalow," "Great Increase in Number of Building Lot Owners" "Increasing Demand for Country Estates," "Review of Building Materials Market," etc.

Anyone who has city, suburban, country or seashore real estate, houses or farms anywhere in New England to dispose of will find it advantageous to advertise in next Saturday's Boston Transcript as it will have an exceedingly wide distribution.

Many people who are not regular readers always look in the Transcript when they need a house, apartment, board or room, for they know that the largest lists of the better offerings are printed there as well as the "want" advertisements of especially capable business assistants and good servants.

—Exchange tickets began to be sold for the grand stand seats at the Brockton fair Thursday, and at night several thousand had been disposed of. The engagement of Mr. Grahame-White, the English aviator, who will fly every day of the fair, assures the record-breaking attendance which the committee anticipated when they entered into negotiation with Mr. White.

☞Dates for the winter season of Alpha and Union Halls are being rapidly booked at the present time. tf

LOVE'S DREAM IS SHATTERED

"Tip" Knox Becomes Member of Reno Divorce Colony

ELOPED SIX MONTHS AGO

Married Providence Shopgirl When He Was Pupil In Providence School and Received Parental Forgiveness a Month Later—Tried to Elope With Pig-Tailed Girl Long Before He Had Discarded Short Pants

Reno, Nev., Sept. 26.—Philander C. Knox, Jr., son of Secretary of State Knox, is in this state for the purpose of establishing a legal residence for the filing of a divorce complaint against May Beler, the pretty young girl clerk in a department store with whom he eloped six months ago, when he was a pupil at the Morris Heights school in Providence.

It is understood a divorce is to come, notwithstanding the fact that his parents have become reconciled and forgiven him, as reported.

From no less authority than the declaration of a prominent president of a bank here, it is authoritatively admitted that the smooth-faced stocky young man has been in Nevada for a couple of weeks.

The elopement of "Tip" Knox at the age of 19 was not without incident, for he literally traveled from the north to the south looking for a parson to tie the knot.

When this was accomplished he had to face the parental wrath of Philander Knox, Sr., who was in no complacent mood at the news of his son's secret marriage.

"Tip" Knox announced that he would shift for himself. He became a salesman for an automobile concern after refusing to become a headliner in vaudeville. He would not disgrace the family name, he said. A month passed; then came the announcement of parental forgiveness.

Now comes his residence at Reno for the purpose of divorce. Has Papa Knox once more administered the stick as he was forced to do years ago when Philander, Jr., as a lad in short pants, eloped with a Pittsburg school miss? is being asked.

Tip's recent successful elopement and marriage recalled a previous effort in the same direction. When a lad in short pants he contracted a bad case of love for Minnie Green, the pig-tailed daughter of a Pittsburg grocer, and tried to elope with her.

He got his father's $9000 Donovan team, and with his little lady love, got a few miles out on Greenburg road before he was overtaken by a groom, who told the young Lochinvar that he didn't care whether or not he eloped with freckled Minnie, but he wouldn't have the finest pair of driving horses in Pittsburg misused.

The young hopefuls were dumped out and made to walk home, after which Philander, Jr., had a sad reckoning with the elder Knox.

WALSH PETITION FILED

Wife and Sons of Chicago Banker Appeal For His Pardon

Washington, Sept. 26.—A petition to the President of the United States for the pardon of John R. Walsh, the former president of the Chicago National bank, from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., was filed at the department of justice by Attorney Buckingham of Chicago, on behalf of the wife and sons of the prisoner.

Accompanying the formal application for a pardon were thousands of letters from individuals urging President Taft to grant the petition.

In 1907 Walsh was found guilty of a violation of the United States banking laws, in having made excessive loans to railroads in which he was interested, and in December, 1909, he was sentenced to five years in Leavenworth prison.

Walsh is 73 years old, and the principal motive for the appeal to President Taft is based upon the prisoner's failing health. He is represented as suffering from acute heart disease.

TRADED TWIN FOR PIG

Russian's Trade With Neighbor Is Called Off by Constable

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 26.—When twins were brought into the world by a Russian woman living a few miles north of this city the husband was greatly offended at the dual arrival and without the consent of his wife traded one of them off to a neighbor for a young pig.

A police constable then stepped into the game and called the trade off, making the father of the twins take back the pig and receive in return the baby.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house. Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes death by fire.

CHAPTER VI.

ON the principle that disaster ever demands its victim the sentry of the second relief—the immediate predecessor of the soldier now on post at the north line of the stables—was stirred up at once and ordered to explain. Even as Stannard was hastening the movements of the men detailed to mount and trail the Foster team, even as Ennis was galloping townward on a mission of his own, Captain Langley of the infantry, officer of the day, began his stern examination of the luckless guardian.

Orders are orders. Even a stable sergeant could not take or send an animal out at night (except the building stood in danger of destruction by flood, fire or tornado) save on written order of a commissioned officer and in the presence of the corporal of the guard, and Stoner, the sentry of the second relief, admitted he knew these were the orders, but "the fellers" had never supposed they applied to Sergeant Fitzroy, who did pretty much as he pleased. In fact, Fitzroy hitched up and drove away without so much as a word to him.

And the stable orderlies had sworn that Fitzroy started alone. Therefore, unless Dora Mayhew had circled the fort and joined him on the bleak eastward prairie, it was most unlikely she had gone with him, and up to 1 o'clock there was none to hint with whom or how, except afoot, she could have gone. Then, however, came revelation. The sentry stationed at the northwest face of the post admitted having seen "a rig from town" making wide circuit clear around behind the fort on the westward "bench," which was swept almost clean of snow. It had kept well out beyond hailing distance, stood a moment or two up at the edge of the bluff, then whirled about and went the way it came.

By 2 o'clock that rig had been trailed back to town. There Ennis and Field and several troopers, with one or two interested citizens, were in quest of tidings. There they were joined by Mayhew himself, who had one more hope. Dora had a friend a few years older than herself who was married to a conductor of the Union Pacific railway and living in town. It might be that Dora had gone to her. They found the house and hammered at the door and succeeded only in waking a Chinese servant, who said, "All gone; b'long Omaha." They went to the three stables in town, and all had "rigs" out. Most of them had gone to a dance at Arena, six miles east. "What's all the row about anyhow?" demanded the night watchman of one of these establishments. "There was that cockney sergeant fellow here along about midnight, asking questions and raising hades. The town marshal had a rumpus with him and went to bed mad." The half dozen hangers-on about the railway station and the roisterers at the one open all night saloon were growing inquisitive, if not impudent. The station master had gone home, but the lone operator, to whom one after another, Field, Ennis and Mayhew, had appealed, declared that no young lady had gone on No. 6, for the reason that No. 6 hadn't gone and wouldn't go till along toward daylight. She broke down somewhere about 7 o'clock at Medicine Bow.

But Ennis and Mayhew came at him a second time, with a second question. Could he tell them anything of Mr. and Mrs. Osborn, Osborn being a conductor and Mrs. Osborn Dora's friend, of whom previous mention is made? Had they gone to Omaha? No, for Mr. Osborn was round here early in the evening and had to be here at 8 a. m. to meet and take No. 5 over the Mountain division. Then John Chinaman had lied, said Mayhew, ready to break down.

"Keep your heart, old man," said Ennis. "Go to the hotel, lie down and leave the rest to me."

And still Jim Ennis felt by no means confident he could be in time. He knew the Mayhews only slightly. He had never before been stationed at regimental headquarters, had seen and known Dora only since their coming to Fort Cushing and therefore had not learned to share Bob's honest admiration for her. She might be all Bob thought her, a loving child and a true hearted girl in spite of her infatuation for this presentable young trooper whose antecedents nobody knew.

With just two troopers at his back, toward 4 in the morning big Jim went spurring on through the dim moonlight, town and station far behind, following a meandering sleigh and wagon track across the wide, dreary upland, riding, as a rule, parallel with the railway, while such sleighs as tried the journey had evidently been making many a detour. Three miles out two "rigs" were passed, westward bound, filled with town folk who had been to Arena for the dance. Had they seen or heard aught of Mr. and Mrs. Osborn? he asked. No; they knew them well by sight and would be sure to note them had they come to the dance. Five miles out a stage was encountered, loaded with exuberant revelers who had remained after the dance for a spree and were now consumed with wrath because certain officers of the law—from their own town, too—had hustled them out.

"A hull sleighful of 'em—three or four anyhow—came over there with that cockney sergeant you fellers keep at the fort, lookin' for deserters. You after deserters? Well, here's—hic—hopin' you don't get 'em."

It was all Jim Ennis wanted to know. "Come on, men!" he cried and spurred ahead, his wondering troopers following.

"Now, what the mischief is that man Fitzroy's game?" thought Ennis. He reasoned it was after Dora that Fitzroy had gone; that in his jealous misery he had kept watch upon her, had followed to town on hearing of her flight, had followed farther, and this it was that gave Ennis the hope that she was accompanied by such worthy people as the Osborns. If that were so it could mean but one thing. It was to join Rawdon, perhaps to be joined to Rawdon. Osborn had sent two messages by wire and had received two early in the evening. Ennis had learned this through the operator, though the contents were withheld. Rawdon probably dared not come to Cushing City. There he might still be arrested on sight. Yes, Ennis had it now. Dora Mayhew had fled to Arena to meet and marry George Rawdon. Fitzroy had followed fast in hopes of blocking it.

And just as the twinkling switch lights of the little prairie station hove in sight ahead there came a sound that startled him—the whistle of a railway engine not a mile behind. No. 6 at last and coming full tilt, the very train, perhaps, that they, the young couple, hoped and meant to take and might have taken on their eastward way had not Fitzroy, keen eyed, quick witted and vengeful, been there in time to bar the move.

And then in the soldier soul of big Jim Ennis was born a strange, sudden and somewhat unprofessional spirit of opposition. Starting out in the hope of finding and restoring to her father's roof the sorrowing fugitive, Jim Ennis veered right round to the purpose of succoring a maiden in distress. If marriage was Rawdon's motive in bidding her join him, then Rawdon was honest, after all, and who was he or who was Fitzroy to stand in the way and stop it?

BODY KNEELED IN RUDE GRAVE

Remains of Long Missing Girl Under Cellar Floor

LIGHT ON 'FRISCO MYSTERY

Shed by Lad to Whom Doctor Owes Money Which He Refused to Pay—Alleged Principal In Crime and Nurse Under Arrest—Remains of Victim Partly Destroyed by Acid, but Identity Is Positive

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—Discovery of a crime which strongly resembles the Crippen case has startled San Francisco.

Kneeling in a narrow grave, as though in prayer, the body of Miss Eva Swan, a stenographer and former school teacher, 26 years old, was exhumed by the police beneath the flooring of a vacant house on Eureka street.

Coming from its resting place, after five months, the corpse bore testimony of a shocking tragedy. While the police were searching for the body, detectives proceeded to the office of Dr. James T. Grant and arrested the doctor and Miss Marie Messerschmidt, a nurse.

The discovery cleared a mystery since April last, when Miss Swan dropped out of sight. It unfolded a story of an attractive country girl seeking her way in the city, led into guilty love with a well-to-do youth, a subsequent endeavor to hide her disgrace, a fatal operation, and then the brutal attempt to conceal the facts. Since April 22 search has been kept up for the girl, the crime finally being revealed by a lad named Ben Gordon because Grant refused to pay $18 he owed the boy.

The police are searching for William Sachs, an assistant, who helped Grant to conceal the body, and for Homer Hatch of Paso Robles and Paul T. Parker of this city, who were close friends of the girl.

Ben Gordon learned the story of the crime from Sachs. Later he told how the girl had died on the doctor's operating table. Sachs rented a house on Eureka street and the doctor moved the trunk there containing the body. They ripped up the floor in the cellar and dug a shallow grave. The doctor sawed through the girl's bones at the joints and poured several gallons of nitric acid over the body. Then they mixed it, went and covered the body with a foot and a half of cement and replaced the flooring. They kept house one month and then gave it up, but, curiously enough, left the blood stained trunk in the house as well as the shovel with which they dug the grave. The house has remained empty since.

The police found the body partly disintegrated by acid but there was no question of identity. The doctor came from the east about a year ago but never told from what city. The nurse has always borne a good reputation.

POPULATION OF 88,926

Springfield Shows Increase of 43.3 Percent For Last Decade

Washington, Sept. 26.—Census returns from Massachusetts cities show that the population growth has been equal to that displayed in the figures of some of the western boom towns. Chief among them is that of Springfield which has grown 43.3 percent in the last decade. Its population is now 88,926.

Lawrence also shows a substantial growth with a population of 85,822, an increase of 23,383, or 37.5 percent.

Haverhill shows a population of 44,115, a growth of 6904, or 18.7 percent, over the 37,175 population it had in 1900. From 1890 to 1900 its growth was 9763, or 35.6 percent.

Everett's population is 33,484, showing a healthy increase of 37.6 percent over its population of 1900.

PETITION FOR RECEIVER

Followed by Closing of Day and Night Bank at Boston

Boston, Sept. 26.—A typewritten slip of paper, bearing the sentence, "Bank closed for liquidation" on the door of the Day and Night Bank on the second floor of the Rogers building marks the latest developments in the career of the Boston Banking company.

The notice announcing the closing of the bank follows a petition for a receiver for the Boston Banking company, filed in the supreme judical court by Bank Commissioner Chapin, and the issuance of a temporary injunction restraining the company from doing business.

The Boston Banking Company (The Day and Night Bank,) which traveled a rough road in the financial world, has done a small business. Its assets and liabilities are about even.

SAYS CHARGES ARE FALSE

McElroy Asks For Court of Inquiry In Grand Army Muddle

Washington, Sept. 26.—A court of inquiry will probably be one of the echoes of the Grand Army encampment at Atlantic City.

Colonel McElroy of this city, who withdrew as a candidate for commander-in-chief, said in an interview that he had been forced out of the race by "slanders, innuedoes and stabs in the back."

Colonel McElroy has asked the commander-in-chief to name a court to investigate the allegations made against him. McElroy says the commander-in-chief has granted the request and is now making up the court. McElroy declares the charges made against him are false.

The controversy arose over land deals which, it is alleged, resulted in the Grand Army colony at St. Cloud, Fla.

CANADIAN IN CASK FOR OVER AN HOUR

None the Worse For His Trip Through Whirlpool Rapids

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Bobby Leach of Niagara Falls, Ont., made a trip through the Whirlpool rapids in a barrel. Except for a few scratches and bruises, Leach was unhurt.

Leach entered the rapids at 3:57, and three minutes later was in the whirlpool. The barrel went through the rapids, holding to the middle, and riding the tremendous waves smoothly. The "Great Wave" caught it and hurled it clear of the water, but it righted itself nicely and went on to the whirlpool without mishap.

Five times the barrel circled the whirlpool, keeping to the outer edge, away from the vortices. At the south end of the pool, it was caught in an inshore eddy and floated in close enough to be caught with a pole at 5:05.

THINK HOME RULE NEAR

Irish Envoys Bring Optimistic Reports of the Prospects

New York, Sept. 26.—Four envoys delegated by the Irish National party to seek support of the home rule movement among Irish immigrants in the United States and Canada arrived here on board the Baltic. John E. Redmond, T. P. O'Connor, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, all members of parliament, are the delegates, and the representatives of several Irish societies greeted the arrivals.

There was talk of the prospects for home rule in Ireland, and the leaders declared that they were bringing the most optimistic reports that any envoys had ever been able to, and that it was not unlikely that this would be the last appeal they would ever have to make to their countrymen in America for money to carry on the fight.

AVIATOR'S SPINE BROKEN

Killed by Fall From Machine, While Pasenger With Him Escapes

Charlas, France, Sept. 26.—Aviator Poillot was killed while making a flight with a passenger. The latter escaped with slight injuries.

The machine had reached a height of ninety feet and seemed to be going well, when a piece of canvas ripped from the wing. The aeroplane fell backward, turning completely over and burying the two men under the wreckage. Poillot's spine was broken.

ANYTHING BUT A LOVE FEAST

Bosses Prepared to Fight For Life at Saratoga

ROOSEVELT'S VICTORY CERTAIN

Looks as If He Will Have to Make Concessions on Direct Primary—Barnes Stirring His Followers to Fight to the End—Realize That Their Leadership Hangs on Issue at Convention—Governorship Uncertain

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Delegates are pouring into Saratoga for the Republican state convention which opens Tuesday and the prospects are that the convention will be one of the largest in years. Every corner of the state is eagerly watching for developments, to say nothing of the national concern felt over the question of what will be done by the Empire State Republicans.

It is no love feast, this meeting of the Republican clans and chiefs. On the contrary, over the gathering of the party hosts here hangs an ominous feeling that the Republicans of New York are on the eve of one of the bitterest factional fights in years and that it will be long before the scars of the wounds at Saratoga are effaced.

If the convention winds up without the party split wide open, beyond healing, not merely in this campaign, but in 1912, it will achieve more than most people expect. As the situation stands now, no solution of the Republican factional differences seems possible that will not send hundreds of the delegates to their homes sore and vengeful and determined to wreak defeat on Republican nominees in the elections.

The old guard leaders who have arrived are in a mood to make trouble. They are in an ugly temper. They will go to any lengths to damage Roosevelt and the men who have aided him. They understand this is something like a last ditch fight for them and that they might as well go down fighting as to surrender. So, while occasionally some word of compromise is heard, the signs indicate slim prospect of it.

County Chairman Griscom of New York says the progressives have at least 570 of the 1015 delegates. The state committee will meet to-night, but the expectation is that the fight over the temporary chairmanship will be carried straight into the convention.

Stirring scenes are promised when Roosevelt takes the gavel, if he does, as temporary chairman, and delivers the progressive speech which he has been working on. The progressive doctrines are all gall to the old guard leaders, especially to Barnes.

The Albany boss, big of voice, big of frame and a born fighter, is stirring his followers. Many of them would quit if it were not for him, but he never quits until he's beaten, and often not then. He is busy putting out pronouncements of defiance to Roosevelt. He and Woodruff and Payn and those about them are making it plain that if Roosevelt has his way in the convention, the regulars may be expected to throw the state to the Democrats.

The general feeling is that the temporary chairmanship fight is as good as over, with Roosevelt the winner, and that the big question now is what will be done as to the direct primary plank. This question and the organization of the state committee are of foremost importance. They are being discussed much more than the question of who will be governor. It looks as if Roosevelt would be forced to make concessions on the primary, though he will insist on some form of declaration in its favor.

The governorship is still in the air. Representative Bennet of New York is making an active campaign. Much favorable mention is heard of Otto I. Bannard, recent candidate for mayor of New York and a great friend of President Taft. But Bannard says he won't run.

PALACE FOR RYAN'S "PETS"

Structure Costing $60,000 Erected to Shelter Herd of Guernseys

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 26.—When the sixty imported Guernsey cows, now in quarantine at New York, arrive at Thomas F. Ryan's Oakridge estate, they will find what is declared to be the finest barn in America awaiting their occupancy.

Finishing touches are now being placed on the structure. When complete, the barn will have cost a trifle more than $60,000. The cows were all shipped from Guernsey, a small island in Europe. They will be used more as pets than milk producers.

HOUSEHOLD RECEIPTS.

Dreams. Take square saltene crackers, put a thin slice of cheese between, and let stand in a hot oven about five minutes.

Plain Tea Cake. Cream two level tablespoons of butter and one cup of sugar together, add one beaten egg, one cup of milk and two cups of flour in which three level teaspoons of baking powder have been sifted. Bake in a sheet and serve while fresh.

Custard Pudding. Line a baking dish with slices of sponge cake. Make a boiled custard with four cups of milk and the yolks of five eggs, one-half cup of sugar and flavored with vanilla. Pour the custard into the baking dish. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth with one-half cup of powdered sugar and spread over the top. Set in a very slow oven to brown slightly.

Seed Cookies. Beat one-third cup of butter and one cup of sugar to a cream. Add one well beaten egg and two cups of flour sifted with four level teaspoons of baking powder alternately with one-quarter cup of milk and last stir in a teaspoon of caraway seed. Put the dough in the ice chest to chill, then roll out and cut in shape or break off bits the size of an English walnut roll into balls, lay on the pan or sheet and press out about one-third of an inch thick. Bake in a moderate oven.

Wreck Death List of Forty-One

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 26.—Clyde Brown died in a hospital here of injuries received in the track wreck at Kingsland on Wednesday. The deaths now total forty-one.

—In line with other reforms, Springfield, Mass., is soon to consider establishing a scheme of scheduled fees for the use of the public streets similar to Boston's. Boston collects some $30,000 a year under the provisions of its enactment of 1907, and Springfield evidently also needs money. At any rate if Alderman Chamberlain's plan bears fruit, street advertising, driving cattle through the streets, painting, raising awnings, loading and unloading goods and the like will begin to cost in Springfield. —Boston Common.

BRIEFS

Indian summer weather today.

The mercury had climbed to 82 at 2 P. M.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers meet on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. H. A. Stevens of Wayland street.

Mr. Herrick, the father of Mrs. Henry H. Schulze of Upland road, continues seriously ill at his home in Cincinnati.

Many men would undoubtedly like to wear their straw hats today, but the bell has rung and men seem to be a slave to fashion.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pritchard, 83 Columbia street wish to announce the marriage of their son, Fred G. Malcolm to Miss Elizabeth J. Berger of Holboken, New Jersey, on Saturday evening, Sept. 17, 1910, at the home of the bride.

An important meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks will be held Tuesday evening, at which time a lodge of sorrow will be held in memory of its late exalted ruler, William J. Coleman. In addition to this, action will be taken on a proposed amendment to the constitution and nominations will be in order to fill all vacancies.

Tales of Cities.

New York city likes peanuts. Its people consume $4,500 worth of them every day.

Boston now requires its retail milk dealers to sell their product in sealed bottles only.

St. Paul is, it is said, the second largest buttermaking city in the world. Omaha alone surpasses St. Paul. This year the production in St. Paul will amount to 12,000,000 pounds.

Taihoku, the capital of Formosa, is being converted by the Japanese into an imposing up to date city, with scientific sanitation, wide streets and government buildings more imposing than most of those in Tokyo.

The Widow.

"In a town," said a life insurance official, "where life insurance was a rare thing a schoolteacher said to a little boy pupil:

"'Tommy, define the word widow.'

"'A widow,' Tommy answered, 'is a poor woman with a large family of children who takes boarders.'"

Painfully Frank.

Wedderly—They say that a man and his wife grow to look alike after they have been married a few years. Now, my wife and I have been married ten years. Do you think we look alike? Singleton—Yes, indeed. You both seem to have the same sad expression.

Might Have Been Worse.

Rheumatic Patient—Oh, doctor, I do suffer so with my hands and feet! Cheery Doctor—My dear woman, only think what inconvenience you would have to suffer without them.

The Earth.

Tommy—Pop, does the earth go round? Tommy's Pop—Yes, my son. But it wouldn't if it was divided among all the people who want it.—Philadelphia Record.

MARRIAGES.

MALCOLM—BERGER—In Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 17, Mr. Fred G. Malcolm of 83 Columbia street, Quincy, to Miss Elizabeth J. Berger of Hoboken, N. J.

DEATHS.

GANNETT—In North Scituate, Sept. 25, Mrs. Emeline Gannett, widow of Joseph Gannett, aged 72 years, 6 months.

BOWDITCH—In East Braintree, Sept. 24, Mrs. Albina W. Bowditch, widow of William Bowditch, of 125 Allen street.

FORE RIVER ALSO WINS

Shut Out the Boston Rovers at Franklin Field

The Fore River football team played the Boston Rovers on Saturday at Franklin Field, Dorchester, and won 4 to 0. The "champion" now top the Boston district league, having won 3 games and lost 0; scoring 19 goals and lost 2.

Collins, Greves, Martin and Houston were the best men on the Rovers team and fought hard to avert defeat, but the Fore River forwards led by Hughes, proved too much for them. The shipbuilders' back held the Rover forwards well in hand, and Ridge in goal, had several hard shots to hold, which he cleared in good style.

Score—Fore Rivers 4. Goals J. McDonald, Hughes 2. Carruthers. Referee Mr. Todd. Linesmen, Mr. McVicar, Mr. McLeary. Time 45 m. halves.

HARDY'S WIN.

The Hardy A. C. won on Saturday from the Fore River Apprentices by the score of 7 to 5.

It was necessary to call the game at the close of the seventh inning because of darkness. At the end of the sixth inning the score was a tie, and had been a tie since the third. The batteries were Belanger and Pittipett for Hardy and Grethe, Boyle and Newcomb for the Apprentices.

The score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Hardy	1	0	2	0	0	0	4	— 7

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Elizabeth Crecroft, oldest living show proprietor in the world, was born in a showmen's van in Chelsea, England, in 1818 and has never known what it is to live in a house.

Marie Wheck, sister-in-law of Robert Schumann, the composer, is still living and recently took part in a concert in Berlin. Though she is seventy-eight, she plays with almost her old time facility.

The youngest person ever to take a master of arts degree from the University of Michigan and possibly from any university in the United States is Miss Dorothea Jones of Harrisburg, Pa. She was seventeen years old when she passed the examinations.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, a lawyer and woman writer, of Washington is the founder and dean of the Washington College of Law. Mrs. Mussey's chief work has been the securing from congress of a bill giving married women the right to control their own earnings and to carry on their own business.

Mrs. Catharine Belknap, sole survivor of the Watts wagon train party, which crossed the plains from Iowa to Oregon in 1848, and the oldest pioneer woman in the northwest, recently celebrated the ninetieth anniversary of her birthday in Spokane. She has not experienced a day's sickness in eighty-three years.

Dividing a Long Sermon.

Dr. Samuel Buell of the last half of the eighteenth century, who used to preach two or three hours, like Isaac Barrows, was ingenious in detaining his congregation. On one occasion, after preaching nearly two hours—as long as he could feel secure in the presence of all his hearers—he remarked that he was done preaching to sinners and that they were at liberty to go; the rest of his discourse would be addressed to good people.

A gentleman who once went to hear him stated that when the hourglass was nearly ready to be turned a second time from the commencement of his sermon he said, much to the relief of the person who related it, "Once more." After going on some eight or ten minutes longer he said, "To conclude," and after another about equal interval he said, "Lastly."

The gentleman added that he expected every moment to hear him say "Everlastingly."

Full Many.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear.
Full many a woman's backbone may be seen
Because a book has come unfastened there.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mighty Particular.

Ella—She's very exclusive.

Stella—Well, I should say so! She will not order half a chicken at a restaurant unless she knows who is to have the other half.—Cynic.

McGREGOR VICTORY

Defeat Brockton by Score of Two to One

In one of the best played games ever witnessed in Quincy the McGregors defeated the Brockton association football team Saturday by a score of 2 to 1. In the first half everything was going Brockton's way. Their team work was fine and there seemed to be more snap in their play. The half ended with the score 1 to 0 in their favor.

The McGregors were by no means docile opponents however and their lasting powers proved to be superior to the Shoe City men. Brockton continued their spurt at the opening of the second half and came dangerously near scoring several times. The McGregors got their first goal on a penalty kick. Forsythe booted it a little too hard for Ellershaw to handle it, and it got through him. That seemed to be turning points. The McGregors took a new lease of life and played better football than their opponents, although they had to fight all the time. The second goal was scored about five minutes after the first. There was a scuffle near Brockton's goal, out of which the ball emerged after a few moments. Rennie showed good head work and butted the ball through for a score.

No account of the game should close without making mention of the fine playing of Robertson of the McGregors. His playing was not sensational perhaps, but he seemed to be the bulwark of the team, and everyone except the Brocktonites liked to see the ball in his charge.

Every man fought a good fight and the victory was well earned, just as on the other hand the defeat was accepted only after a struggle. A number of the men on both teams were hurt, but they showed their pluck and stayed in to the end.

The line up:

McGregors		Brockton
Drysdale	G.	J. Ellershaw
Forsythe	R. B.	Petrie
Craig	L. B.	Yongson
McDonald	R. H.	Fletcher
Robertson	C. H.	L.Ellershaw
Meldrum	L. H.	Brown
Pringle	O. R.	Wilson
Rennie	I. R.	Carruthers
Roe	C.	Nicol
Haldane	I. L.	Rancrey
Hendrie	O. L.	Harrison

Score: McGregors 2, Brockton 1. Goals—Forsythe, Ronnie Nicole. Referee—Heatham. Linesmen — Burford and Cummings. Time—two 45 minute halves.

LOCAL SPORTS.

The annual championship golf tournament of the Boston A. A. will open tomorrow at Montclair and continue through Saturday.

• • •

Nine lively events were run off Saturday by the Old Colony Driving club at the South Weymouth track. The best time was 1.11 by George Beal's bay gelding "Young Bayard." in class D (mixed) five heats were necessary and Mr. McKenzie won.

• • •

Forty members of the Wollaston Golf club participated Saturday in the medal play handicap. J. E. McLaughlin with 79 had the best gross, and G. M. Bahan with 69 the best net.

• • •

The Fore River and McGregors will meet Saturday on Fore River ground, Quincy Point, and as both teams are undefeated in the league, a hard and fast game may be looked for.

• • •

The autumn meeting of the Wollaston Golf club will be held next week Wednesday and Thursday.

• • •

At football on Saturday, Malden High defeated Boston College preparatory 4 to 0. Everett High and St. Johns preparatory were unable to score. Somerville High won from Chelsea High 28 to 0. Waltham High defeated Needham High 14 to 0.

• • •

The success of Claude Grahame-White as an aviator is the more remarkable when one reads of the accidents and fatalities to others. Aviator Poillot was killed in Charlos, France, on Sunday. Then Chavez, the Peruvian aviator, is in a serious condition. Others have given their lives.

Cranch A. A. Defeat the Adams A. A.

Cranch A. A. defeated the Adams A. A. in a well played game at Ward Three playgrounds on Saturday. It was a pitchers battle throughout, but Knight was hit freely in the sixth and Cranch got her 3 runs. Knight struck out 17 men to Bates' 12, but the latter refused to get rattled and thus won out.

The Adams team came very near scoring in the fifth. With men on second and third and only one out, it looked as if Adams must get a run or two, but Bates showed good head work and all that his opponents could raise was a pop fly and a strike out. There were about 500 good rooters present, and if the game should have had a tendency to flag, the feminine cheering section on the Adams side would have been sufficient to buoy up the enthusiasm.

The game however was interesting all the way through and unusually exciting for a pitchers' battle.

Much can be said in praise of the players on both sides. R. Collins at first fielded his position well and picked off three or four flies some distance from the bag. Mulligan did some good base-running and Barry caught a good consistent game. King of course comes in for a good share considering his string of strike outs.

For the Cranch team Bates pitched fine ball and although his work was not as sensational as Knights he was doing against greater odds and deserved much credit. Both Fred and Gus Erickson did some clever fielding and picked up some hot ones as if they were used to it. In the sixth inning the Cranch team started some bunts going which seemed to rattle Knight, for a two bagger and two singles followed immediately. The game is one that will be remembered by the supporters of both teams.

MAKARIA WIN.

Makaria won a very interesting game of ball on Saturday at Milton, defeating a strong team playing under Cunningham Gym colors. Cunningham's men were nearly all Old Colony Leaguers, and Makaria had her old battery back again. The score was 8 to 6. Strike outs—Michaels 8, Ford, 5. Base on balls—Michaels, 2; Ford, 0. Three base hits—Ganzel. Two base hits—Macdonald, Nicolls and Hoyt. Both Ford and Michaels pitched a great game.

Not In His Line.

A man had just spilled a glass of milk all over the one sitting next to him in the beanery without a word of apology or regret.

"Why didn't you knock the chump down?" asked a friend. "It might have taught him some manners."

"No," was the reply. "A man who would do a thing like that hasn't got sense enough to learn manners. Besides, I am not running a school of deportment."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

They Come Later.

The Young Wife (showing her furniture)—Here's the rocking chair for the parlor. Isn't it just lovely? Mrs. Oldley (rather critically)—But I don't see any rockers, dear. The Young Wife—Oh, they'll be here next month. You see, we are buying the chair on the installment plan, and we have paid for the rockers yet.—Chicago News.

WORLD'S SERIES ON THE WANE?

Long Schedule May Affect Receipts and Class of Ball.

PLAYING SEASON IS TOO LONG

Philadelphia Will Have to Lay Off a Week Before Series Starts—Cold Weather May Interfere With Contests.

Is the interest in the world's championship series on the wane? Will the long playing season adopted by the National league affect both the receipts and the class of ball in this year's games? Many fans are pondering over these two questions. The facts upon which they base any deductions they may make are as follows:

In 1900 Pittsburg played its last game of the season in Cincinnati on Oct. 7. Detroit finished its schedule at Chicago on Oct. 3. The playing season of the two leagues was as follows:

	First game.	Last game.
American league	April 12	Oct. 4
National league	April 14	Oct. 7

The world's championship series between Pittsburg and Detroit began on Oct. 8 at Pittsburg. The full seven games had to be played, and the last contest took place in Detroit on Oct. 16.

The schedules for this year are:

	First game.	Last game.
American league	April 14	Oct. 9
National league	April 14	Oct. 15

Athletics Will Have to Wait.

As the Cubs and the Athletics are the winners in their respective leagues, then the first game of the world's series could not be played before Sunday, Oct. 16, which would be eight days after the close of Philadelphia's season. Stanley Robison, president of the St. Louis Nationals, has stated that he will in no event release the Chicago team from its late dates with his club, nor will he allow the games to be disposed of by playing them earlier in the season.

This means that if it should become necessary to play the full seven games the series would not be completed before Oct. 22. Moreover, that is making no allowance for such contingencies as rain or the difficulties of sufficiently speedy traveling between Chicago and Philadelphia. It is more than probable that in the event of seven games the last contest would take place as late as Oct. 24 or 25. Robison is not apt to recede from his present attitude, as he fought the longer season, while Murphy advocated it and finally secured its adoption.

To show how late in the year these final games might come it is only necessary to turn to the football schedule. On Saturday, Oct. 22, Yale plays Vanderbilt university, Harvard plays Brown, Princeton plays Holy Cross, and Pennsylvania plays Penn State. These are all midseason games.

Of course if two eastern or two western teams were to come together the difficulties of traveling would be obviated, but a series of this kind would also lack the universal interest created by a competition between two different sections of the country.

Layoff Will Not Benefit Philadelphia.

Also it seems a most unlikely culmination of the race of 1910. The fact remains that a week's layoff will be apt to be of little benefit to Philadelphia American league champions, while the Nationals will either have to exhaust precious energy in a hairline finish or dull the edge of their top form by being obliged to play several dreary games which it makes no difference to them whether they win or lose.

The fourth game of the Pittsburg-Detroit series last year, played in Tigertown on Oct. 12, was contested on a frozen field, with the mercury below the freezing point all during the game.

The series this year must probably begin four days later than the 12th. The series last year totaled $188,302.50. Of this amount $68,924.90 was the players' share, $102,547.35 went to the clubs, and the national commission got $18,830.25.

The games drew $80,000 greater gross gate receipts than any previous world's contests. Could this year's series, considering the probable date of playing, weather conditions and the small chance of another seven game result, draw anywhere near the same money?

Sporting Notes.

Harvard football candidates report Sept. 19.

Newark, N. J., is to have a junior socker league of eight teams.

The English Football association amateur cup series has 244 teams.

The Toronto Federation of Homing Pigeon Fanciers has just been formed.

Memphis will not permit white boxers to oppose negroes in boxing contests.

Marquette university of Milwaukee, Wis., plans to embark in all branches of athletic sport.

Lord Lonsdale's championship belts that are being offered in England as emblematic of the different pugilistic titles can be competed for only by British boxers. A stranger can box for the title, but he does not get the belt if he wins.

A Varnishing Tip.

When varnishing wood the work must be done in a warm room at a temperature of at least 75 degrees F. At a lower temperature the moisture in the air will give a milky and cloudy appearance to the varnish. On the other hand, at the higher temperature the moisture is not precipitated until the alcohol of the varnish has sufficiently evaporated to leave a thin smooth film of shellac. The durability and gloss are dependent on this.

The Blind Man's Lantern.

A blind man in Khoota (a Caucasian village) came back from the river one night bringing a pitcher of water and carrying in his hand a lighted lantern. Some one meeting him said: "You're blind. It's all the same to you whether it's day or night. Of what use to you is a lantern?" "I don't carry the lantern in order to see the road," replied the blind man, "but to keep some fool like you from running against me and breaking my pitcher."

His Peers.

"Pa, what does it mean to be tried by a jury of one's peers?"

"It means, my son, that a man is to be tried by a jury composed of men who are his equals or on an equality with him, so that they will have no prejudice against him."

"'Then, pa, I s'pose you'd have to be tried by a jury of baldheaded men."

IMPORTANT CONSOLIDATION OF OLD GRANITE FIRMS

Demand for Quincy Granite Is Greater Than Ever and on the Increase

Judicious Advertising Has Been Of Great Benefit

Papers will probably be passed this week whereby several retail granite dealers will form a corporation to operate the quarry of Reed & Vendret. This is the quarry recently owned and operated by Field & Wild, and produces a dark stock excellent for monumental purposes. The retail manufacturers who are in the deal are said to be Milne & Chalmers, John L. Miller, McGrath Bros., Patrick Fitzgerald and Reed & Vendret.

Reed & Vendret, who purchased the quarry from Field & Wiid, also operate a cutting plant at South Quincy. The real object of the new corporation is to insure the firms that are in the deal of being sure of getting a supply of extra dark Quincy stock. It is understood that the quarry will be operated as a separate company, each of the incorporators also operating their cutting plants as separate companies.

There has also been a proposition among some of the quarry firms at West Quincy to consolidate, although it is doubtful if anything comes of it. The scheme was to consolidate the quarries of J. S. Swingle, Badger Bros and Mannex. These three quarries adjoin each other, and each produces a handsome granite. Between each quarry, however, there is what is called a headway of fine granite which it is now impossible to quarry.

If these quarries could be consolidated it would be possible at a small expense to quarry a large amount of stock which is now lying idle. It is doubtful, however, if this proposed plan goes through, as it is understood that Badger Bros and Mannix would not go into the scheme.

The demand for Quincy granite is greater than it has been for years. A few years ago the demand for Quincy stock fell off, and cheaper granite took its place. Then some of our enterprising quarry firms undertook to revive the demand for Quincy stock. Printers' ink was used freely and the country was flooded with circulars setting forth the good qualities of Quincy stock. J. S. Swingle, who is known among the trade as "The Extra Dark Man," was the man behind the gun, and so persistent has he been that today there is an unprecedented demand from all parts of the country for Quincy stock, and every quarry in the city in being worked to its fullest capacity. All of which shows the value of the judicious use of printers' ink.

One of Mr. Swingle's form of advertisement was a cut showing a disk of extra dark stock in the centre of which was a picture of Mr. Swingle. These were published in trade journals and sent broad cast on circulars, so that his face became a familiar one. As an illustration, Mr. Swingle says that while attending the recent Retail Dealers convention at Rochester he had dozens of strangers come up to him, call him by name and shake his hand, having recognized him by the illustrated circular he had sent out.

AT HOME TO MRS ROYAL.

A delightful at-home was held Monday afternoon at the home of Miss Flora Underwood, Fairmount way, Presidents hill, in honor of Mrs. Forrest B. Royal, who is leaving town to reside at Annapolis. Miss Underwood and Mrs. Royal received the greetings of a great many guests and the affair was most happy and informal. Mrs. Herbert Lawton and Mrs. Pery Lawton, neighbors on the hill presided at the chocolate urns and were assisted by Miss Miriam Marsh and Miss Marie Bass. Late summer flowers added their brightness to the scene.

SIXTY-THREE YEARS MARRIED.

Weymouth as well as Braintree has an aged couple 63 years married. Braintree however has the lead by about two weeks. Mr and Mrs. Albert Burell of East Weymouth celebrated their 63d wedding anniversary Sunday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Merchant. A number of old friends were present to help them celebrate, and among them several members of the Weymouth brass band which was organized in 1844, and to which Mr. Burrell formerly belonged. Mr. and Mrs. Burrell have living three children, six grandchildren, and seven great grand- children. Both of the old people are well and bright, and a very happy day was spent by all who were present at the home.

NINETY-FIRST BIRTHDAY.

Probably Hingham can boast of one of the oldest people in this vicinity. Mrs. Mary Beaufort Gannett celebrated her 91st birthday Sunday. She is in good health and her mind is still vigorous. Mrs. Gannett is still active and busies herself about the house where she lives. The Congregational church in Hingham centre claims her as its oldest member. Mrs. Gannett has been thrice married. Her last husband died in 1902 in Madison, N. H. Mrs. Gannett returned to Hingham after his death and has since then made her residence with Mr. and Mrs. John Kelsey of 101 South street. Many friends called on her there to pay their respects to her on her birthday. Her many estimable qualities have endeared her to all her intimate friends.

FLAGS ON CHURCHES

Col. Anderson Makes the Suggestion at Wollaston

The first social for the season of the Walther Men's class was held in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Monday evening, a goodly number attending.

J. Arthur Sparrow, president of the class, spoke a brief word of welcome, and introduced Col. Edward Anderson of Quincy, who spoke most interestingly upon the subject "Reminiscences of the War."

Following introductory remarks leading up to the Civil war he told of his personal experiences in going West at the time of the trouble over the Kansas-Nebraska bill and of his meeting with John Brown. The speaker related many interesting anecdotes gleaned from a personal acquaintance with Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., and showing the latter's presentiment of the coming strife between the North and South.

"In the great strife," the country wass aaved by boys. Out of an enrollment of 2,778,304, there were 2,159,798 under 21 years of age. Of these, 1,523 were under 14 years, 300 under 13 years, 225 under 12 years, 38 under 11 years, and 25 under 10 years. In the entire army but 618,511 were over 22.'

Col. Anderson proceeded to illustrate by many humorous anecdotes the raw material which went to make up the brigade of cavalry which he raised in northern Indiana, and the various devices used by the boys who wanted to enlist. "Few realize what bravery is," said Col. Anderson, "who have not gone into battle"." The man who says he is not afraid when he goes under fire is either made of wood or lies." The colonel spoke of the "powder thirst" in battle, caused by the nitre in the air and brining about great suffering. The turmoil of a battle takes away all sense except a realization of an immense and continued crashing.

In closing, Col. Anderson paid a glowing tribute to "that magnificent flag that stands on earth as God's representative." "I wish," he said, "that every church as well as every school house should have a flag." At the suggestion of the speaker the program closed to the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" sung by the hearty chorus of men's voices.

Refreshments and a social hour followed.

ANOTHER BIG CATCH.

The new steam trawler Foam, launched at the Fore River Aug. 18, is proving a great financial success. She returned to Boston late on Monday from her second trip of only a few days with 120,000 pounds of fish, 8,000 pounds more than the Spray on Sunday.

POLLS OPENED FOR JOINT CAUCUSES

Great Triangular Fight Among Democrats for Congressional Nominee

Some Doubt Between Galvin and Willcutt

The joint caucuses of the Democratic and Republican parties are being held today. The polls were opened at 12 o'clock this noon in all wards and will remain open until 9 o'clock tonight. There are several interesting contests on tap and an unusual large caucus vote should be polled by both parties. This is particularly true among the Democrats, for this party not only has a hot contest on hand for congressman, but there are contests for Representative in both districts.

The hottest fight is of course coming over the Democratic Congressional nomination. There are three candidates, O'Connell, McNary and Curley. Each of these gentlemen claim the city, although careful observers size up the situation as being a close fight between McNary and Curley.

The situation in Quincy is a peculiar one, especially in some wards, for the reason many avowed Democrats will be unable to vote the Democratic ticket today. At the time the joint caucus law went into effect, there was a hot Republican Mayoralty contest on in Quincy, and it is a well-known fact that at that time many Democrats registered as Republicans and have been debarred from voting at Democratic caucuses since, unless they have appeared before the Registrars of Voters and changed their political complexion. As this must be done six months previous to the caucus few have done it. The result is that the Democratic vote in Quincy today will necessarily be small, and it is hard to size up the situations as between the three Congressional candidates.

Mr. Curley began his campaign in Quincy some months ago. He joined numerous social clubs and frequently attended socials and smoke talks at which he spoke, thus makig himself solid with the rank and file of the democracy, and that is going to cut quite a figure in today's contest.

As for representative there is not much question but what M. T. Sullivan will win over Archie Thayer in the Fifth district.

In the Sixth district it will be neck and neck until the votes are counted, as to who gets the nominations, Councilman McDevitt or ex-Representative Coombs. The former will doubtless carry his own ward, and Coombs will undoubtedly carry Ward Six, and there are not enough Democrats in Ward Five to count either way. It would, therefore, not be at all surprising if McDevitt secured the nomination as Ward Four has more votes.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES.

But little activity has been shown among the Republicans. When Senator Hultman withdrew from the senatorial contest the bottom dropped out. There are two sets of senatorial delegates in several of the wards, and th plan seems to be to send unpledged delegates that they may better work for the interests of the city. Councilman Sandberg has a large following, however, and he will get a number of the Quincy delegates.

Locally there seems to be but little interest in the Congressional contest and no one has ventured to predict whether Willcott or Galvin will carr ythe city. A little missionary work and hustle on the part of either gentlemen would have been sufficient to swing the city either way.

TELEPHONE RATES REDUCED

Many in Quincy Figure Cost Will Be Less by New Rates

The New England Telephone Company made it clear in bulletin No. 4 that the majority of Quincy telephone subscribers would pay less for telephone service under the new rates than heretofore, as very few desire to telephone very often outside the Quincy district which includes Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton and Dorchester.

The lower rates quoted will take care of quite a number of five-cent tolls to these exchanges within the eight-mile limit: Brookline, Hingham, Hull, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Randolph (including Holbrook), Roxbury, South Boston, Back Bay, Fort Hill, Haymarket, Main, Oxford, Richmond and Tremont.

The rates for Quincy exchange subscribers are:

BUSINESS RATES.

One party line, unlimited	$60
One party line, measured, 840 calls (Additional calls at 3 cents each)	$42
One party line, coin box (Guaranty to include Metropolitan and Suburban tolls.)	$60
Two party line, unlimited	$54
Two party line, measured, 680 calls (Additional calls at 3 cents each)	$33
Four party line, coin box (Guaranty to include Metropolitan and Suburban tolls.)	$30

RESIDENCE RATES.

One party line, unlimited	$36
One party line, measured $840 calls (Additional calls at 3 cents each.)	$42
Two party line, unlimited	$27
Two party line, measured, 480 calls (Additional calls at 3 cents each.)	$24
Four party line, coin box (Guaranty to include Metropolitan and Suburban tolls.)	$21

On Unlimited service, calls in the Quincy district are covered by the rates named. For calls to exchanges outside the district there will be a toll charge of 5 cents for each 8 miles or fraction thereof from the calling exchange.

On Measured service, each call within the Quincy district will be counted as a measured service call.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Licking La Follette is like blowing down the barrel of a loaded gun.

If Senator Gallinger is anxious to leave the Senate, nobody is holding him.

Mr. Walter Welman's famous airship is still flying across the ocean on dry land.

Recent events at St. Paul indicate sure enought that the Big Stick knows no brother.

This has certainly been a big season throughout the West in the ovation business.

Some people may call running into debt "horse sense," but others will call it mule sense.

On Monday the Daily Ledger made an estimate of the population of Taunton and came within 259 of the census returns which are 34,259. Probably Quincy will not pass Taunton at this census but it is sure to do it before 1915 as the folowing figures show Quincy to be gaining much faster:

Census	Quincy	Taunton
1910	*33,500	34,259
1905	28,076	30,967
1900	23,899	31,036
1895	20,712	27,115
1890	16,723	25,448
1885	12,145	23,674
1880	10,570	21,213
1875	9,155	20,445

*Estimated.

In 35 years Taunton has gained 13-814 in population, while Quincy has gained about 23,000. This is a striking example of the rapid growth and progress of Quincy.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

"By a simple arithmetical calculation can be shown the exact year when there will be more insane persons in the world than sane." "At least 50 per cent of the cases of insanity now in the hospitals of this country are preventable." These two statements, presenting in the usual degree that conventional agreement which prevails among experts, enable us to face the future with equanimity. Dr. Forbes Winslow of London, who looks forward to "an insane world with certainty in the not far distant future," rests his fears upon the statistical fact that in the forty years from 1869 to 1909 the number of lunatics increased from one in 418 of the total population to one in 278. That the methods of gathering statistics have been greatly improved in the same period is a factor which is missing from many a series of inferences beside his. This improvement, indeed, actually makes conclusions based upon short periods often more reliable than those based upon long ones, although such conclusions are unfortunately apt to be much less startling than we have grown to expect from rows of figures. The more agreeable assertion of Dr. Joseph Collins, based upon what is now being done to restore mental incompetents to health, that, when once the possibilities of such restoration are more generally understood, the number of insane will dwindle until historians will write of its prevalence and primitive treatment today with the same horrified pity that we feel when we look at Hogarth's fearful cartoon of the unhappy inmates of Bedlam, is happily enforced by Dr. Winslow himself in the words: "I have breathed the atmosphere of lunacy for over sixty years."—New York Evening Post.

The merchant's problem in September and October is dealing with the "lookers" who wander through the stores and bother salespeople without much thought of buying. Many of them are trusting to cuts of the late season to stock up for another year.

This does very well for people who are keen judges of fabrics. Others often find that cut rates mean secondary values, with no more wearing quality proportionate to price, and a sacrifice in quality of assortment, and in the satisfaction of getting stylish goods when they are wanted.

All this the merchant must demonstrate to this public as best he can through the newspaper advertisement, and in the face of a widespread contrary habit. If he does not make this effort to convince them, he will find that he must spend money lavishly later in the season for bargain sales. And at that time the cost of the advertising comes out of the smaller profit of cut rates.—Beverly Times.

A German baron who has gone home from this country after a visit of eight months declares that "to the mind of an unprejudiced foreign observer, it is apparent that Colonel Roosevelt believes that the time will ultimately arrive when he shall be elected president of the United States in perpetuity as his life is measured." The prejudiced American observer will not agree to that conclusion at all. Mr. Roosevelt may entertain a hope that he will once more be elected president, or he may not. Some things he says and does may lead to one inference concerning his thoughts, and some may lead to another. It is this very contrariety that makes the word "apparent" a misfit. For ourselves, we have not the remotest idea that Mr. Roosevelt expects to be made president for life. —New Bedford Standard.

Shoe manufacturers claim that one reason why business is dull is because people have left off walking and go today in trolley cars, railroad trains and other vehicles. If this is correct it is also an indication that people have money to spend. If they did not they would have to walk instead of ride.—Taunton Gazette.

ALL PLEASURES CUT OFF

Four Hundred West Point Cadets Paying For "Silencing" Act

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 27.—After being released from arrest Sunday night the entire West Point corps of cadets, numbering 400, were ordered under arrest again yesterday afternoon while the board of inquiry continued its investigation of the "silencing" Captain Longan, the new tactical officer of the academy.

Football practice, all sports and academy pleasures are eliminated. The embryo army officers are prisoners and are only allowed to leave their quarters for attendance on classes. The second order of arrest surprised the corps and things begin to look very serious in their eyes.

AN OLD NEW ENGLAND LANE.

Samuel Minturn Peck.

They te ' me of the wondrous grace
Beneath a foreign sky;
Of lovely sea, and mountain place,
Or vales that charm the eye;
Of snowy Alps, and storied Rhine
Whose beauties never wane—
But dearer to this heart of mine
An old New England lane!

Above the lichened fence of stone,
Through mossy meadow bars,
With nodding graces all their own
Soft shine the aster stars;
And everywhere the chicory blue
That gardeners disdain—
Its bits of heaven with azure strew
An old New England lane.

Enchantment lures at every turn,
New vistas win the eye;
See, see how bright the sumacs burn
Beneath the autumn sky!
Ay, every color, every scent,
And many a soft refrain
It keeps to fill us with content,
An old New England lane.

'T is rare to see at dewy morn,
And lovely too at noon;
And when ,the autumn day outworn,
Slow mounts the silver moon,
How sweet the twilight odors fare,
The sense-enthralling train!
To sing its praise I hafdly dare—
An old New England lane.

We wander not with weary feet,
The heart is full of song
And gladder grows its loyal beat,
While rarer fancies throng,
In all the world the eye cannot
A richer harvest gain:
And once beheld 't is ne'er forgot,
An old New England lane.

FIRST VICTORY FOR OLD GUARD

State Executive Committee Votes to Stick by Sherman

NAMED TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN

Roosevelt Is All Confidence, Declaring That Progressives Will Beat Opponents to a Frazzle In New York Convention Fight—Pressure Being Brought to Bear by Leaders on Both Sides In Capturing Delegates

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 27.—By a vote of 22 to 15, the Republican state committee at a special meeting last night reaffirmed its selection of Vice President Sherman over Theodore Roosevelt as temporary chairman of the state convention which convenes today.

This action, a victory for the Old Guard, was taken after Sherman had caused a sensation by a letter asking that the committee investigate the charge that his selection as temporary chairman was brought about by trickery, and saying that if the charges were substantiated he would not serve.

After a heated argument, in which the leaders of both the Old Guard and the progressives gave a sharp expression of their convictions, the committee, by a vote of 22 to 15, resolved "that Mr. Sherman be informed that his selection was made without misrepresentation as an answer to his letter."

At times the arguments waxed so bitter that to save what appeared to threaten an unfortunate situation, Representative Fassett moved that the whole matter be laid on the table. But this was voted down. The Old Guard leaders insisted that it was an attempt to gag them and prevent those members who voted for Sherman from explaining their votes.

At the instance of Barnes, a poll of the committeemen was taken in which all members were required to state whether they were influenced by any deception in casting their votes at the meeting on Aug. 16.

On the call of the roll each member arose and said in effect that he had not been deceived in casting his vote.

The Old Guard is making the issue "Shall Theodore Roosevelt rule the Republican party in the state of New York?"

Mr. Roosevelt reached Saratoga late yesterday and within five minutes of his arrival had plunged into the situation, taking full command of the progressive forces and rounding up the wavering unpledged delegates.

The political tides finally set in for the progressives last night, and Roosevelt, after a talk with his lieutenants, said:

"We are going to beat them to a frazzle; do not forget the word, frazzle. I came back from Africa with some trophies, and when we go home from Saratoga we shall have some trophies."

Mr. Sherman says he is in the fight to a finish for the temporary chairmanship. The vice president came in for a spirited demonstration last night, when a marching club of some 200 members with a band arrived from Utica.

Behind the open work to capture a majority of delegates, silent and unseen pressure is being brought to bear by the leaders of both sides. Members of the Old Guard, buttonholing the uncertain delegates, are pleading with them to stand by the organization on the ground that the party now stands at the brink of a new order of things political, which Roosevelt has been pleased to call "New Nationalism," and that this portends grave economic dangers to the country. Against this argument, Roosevelt has matched his personality and the issue "Shall the bosses rule?"

The Old Guard is going to fight to the last ditch. Barnes' friends say that he has a well-defined plan of battle which he intends to carry out and that, if defeated, the end of the convention will find "that the whole responsibility for the coming state campaign rests on Theodore Roosevelt."

WANTED TO KILL GOVERNOR

Insane Man Captured Before He Can Carry Out His Threat

Boston, Sept. 27.—Oscar Hanlon escaped from the Boston insane hospital yesterday morning and was captured in the South End by his two brothers. They surrendered him to the police and the man was taken back to Mattapan last evening.

Some time ago this man managed to mail two letters to Governor Draper in which he stated that he was perfectly sane and that if he was not released he would escape and murder the governor. He escaped, but he was caught before he could get near Draper.

Two Incendiary Fires

Athol, Mass., Sept. 27.—Considerable excitement was caused here by two fires, both apparently of incendiary origin, which caused an aggregate loss of about $10,000. The buildings destroyed were the lumber mill of Stratton Bros. and the house and barn of G. E. Albertson.

HOW BEAUTY WON MABEL.

The day Beauty came marked an era in Jane's life. She was never lonely after that. Before she had often been lonely, for children often long for the companionship of children, and little Jane lived in a world of grown-ups on a cattle ranch in Kansas.

On this day she had been extremely lonely. Mamma was having one of her sick headaches. Hilda, the hired girl, besides the added duties thrown upon her by mamma's illness, had a big ironing on her hands; papa and the men, who, one and all, adored little Jane, had been gone to a distant pasture since early morning; while Mabel, her big sister, and her dearest chum, had been in the parlor all the afternoon entertaining the young city lawyer, whom Jane, who was a trifle jealous, thought came too often.

So Jane was thrown upon her own resources and the companionship of her large family of dolls. But dolls, at best, are unresponsive beings and have a habit of staring unwinkingly back at one; so Jane had grown tired of them and was sitting disconsolately on the veranda steps, her elbows on her knees and her chin in her hands, gazing intently over the prairie in the direction from which the men would return, when the man who had just returned from taking the young lawyer to the station, called her. He was standing guard over a queer sort of box or cage, which he had found at the express office addressed to her. Upon being opened it proved to contain the tiniest pug puppy, which when released, sprang straight into her arms.

"Oh, Mabel! Mamma! Hilda! Come quick! See!" she screamed, queezing him so tight in her ecstasy that his career came near ending prematurely, and every one came running to see what was exciting Jane so.

"A puppy!" Mabel exclaimed, drawing back. "Where on earth—"

"A puppy!" chorused Hilda and mamma.

"Yes, yes! He's mine! He's mine! Cousin Bertie sent him!" And Jane danced wildly about, poking the puppy under each of their noses in turn, causing them to start back hastily, none of them caring to have the moist, black nose come in contact with their faces.

Jane was not so fastidious. She kissed it again and again. Mabel turned away disgusted. She disliked little dogs.

"Don't, dear, don't," implored mamma. "Don't kiss it, child."

An hour later, Jane, with the puppy still hugged tight in her arms, came upon Mabel, who was in the sitting-room busy with some fancy work.

"What shall I call him, sister? Oh, isn't he a dear!" and Jane squeezed her new pet unmercifully in the excess of her joy.

Mabel put out her hand to prevent Jane getting too near and eyed the puppy askance.

"You might call him Beauty," she suggested, with obvious sarcasm. The sarcasm was lost on Jane, however.

"That's just it! He is a beauty! Oh, Mabel, do look at him!" and in her enthusiasm Jane rushed up, taking Mabel unaware, and poked the pug fairly in her face. Mabel jumped up hastily, scattering her fancy work and tipping over her chair.

"Jane!" she gasped, catching the child by the arm, "don't ever bring that ugly little brute near me again. I detest little dogs." Then she continued in a softer tone, letting go her grip on Jane's arm, for the child's eyes were wide with fright. Mabel had never spoken to her like that before. "Don't look like that, dear child. I love you, but nature didn't make me capable of loving pug dogs, and you mustn't expect me to love yours."

And so it was that Beauty came to be a member of the household. He and Jane were inseparable. He slept in Jane's room, and every night promptly at seven he responded to his little mistress' "Come, Beauty, it's bedtime," by yapping a good-night to the family circle and trudging ups-tairs with her where he had a little bed—Jane had ousted Miss Imogene, her finest dolly, from her elegant bed, and he was tucked in between sheets, his head reposing on a pillow. It had taken Jane many, many nights of patient endeavor to teach Beauty that this, and not curled up in a corner, was the proper way from a hygienic standpoint for a dog to sleep. With infinite patience, too, she taught him many really clever tricks. Jane was such a dear, fluffy-haired little girl, that every one loved her, and they all became fond of Beauty simply because he was Jane's. All but Mabel. She did her best and no one ever heard her complain, but, as Hilda said, there wasn't any love lost between them; and Beauty was certainly a trial to her. Jane lacked the power of imparting any of her angelic disposition to her dog, for a more mischievous puppy never was born, and Mabel was his especial mark. His most annoying trick was to run barking to her and catching the hem of her skirt in his teeth, pull and growl until Jane came to the rescue. When Mabel had her good clothes on Jane had to act as special body-guard to prevent Beauty from tagging them all out at the hem. It was always Mabel's handkerchief or sunbonnet or fancy work that was riddled, although he was rather impartial as to whose rubbers and slippers he carried away. It distressed Jane that Beauty annoyed Mabel so, but though she tried every form of punishment conceivable to her gentle nature she never succeeded in reforming him.

A circumstance of which Mabel was the victim, although she brought it upon herself, tended to widen the breach. It happened in this way:—One day Mabel remarked, "Mamma, we ought to get Jane's photograph taken to send to Grandma. She's been wanting one for so long."

"Yes I know," said mamma, "I've been wishing we could have hers and Beauty's taken together. Jane is so fond of him."

In a rash moment Mabel said:—"I'm going to town shopping one day next week. I'll take them along."

Mamma looked surprised, but there was no time for Mabel to retract, for Jane, who had heard the conversation, rushed impulsively to her and throwing her arms about her neck, said: "Oh, you dear old Mabel! We'll both be as good as good can be," and Beauty expressed his gratitude by pulling at Mabel's skirt and barking shrilly.

Accordingly, one of the men drove them to the station, and they took the train to town, a ride of about three-quarters of an hour. Mabel already had misgivings as to the wisdom of the undertaking, but Beauty was doing his best to fulfill his part of Jane's promise. He sat erect beside her, scarcely moving.

It was late that evening when they returned. Mabel sank wearily into the nearest chair, letting her bundles fall about her.

"Mamma," she exclaimed, "whatever possessed me to undertake such a thing?"

"Was it so bad, dear?" began mamma, sympathetically. "I was afraid —"

"Bad!" interposed Mabel, "the wonder is that I'm alive! You see," she continued, straightening herself for a narrative of her experience, "Beauty was a perfect angel on the train, and I had begun to feel easy. We went to the studio first to get the pictures, then—"

"Were they good?" interrupted mamma, anxiously.

"Yes, I think so," answered Mabel, indifferently. She was full of her grievance. "Then," she began again, "we started out. The town was full of shoppers, and do you know, the first we knew Beauty had become separated from us by the crowd. We turned back and hunted and hunted, and finally, when Jane was just ready to cry, we heard him howl. Jane started to run, and I had almost run, too, for I didn't want Jane and the dog both lost. The crowd seemed to be going in the opposite direction from me, and as I was hurrying to keep Jane in sight I just bumped into

ENTHUSIASTIC FOR 1911 MEET

Harvard Society Promise More Aviation in Quincy

The Harvard aeronautical Society, under whose auspices the recent Harvard-Boston aero meet was held at Quincy, will hold a meeting next week, Tuesday, and at that time the exact financial status of the society will be made known, says the Globe.

When the promotion of the aero meetvas first undertaken it was thought that by grouping some of the bestknown aviators in America and England and some of the most famous aeroplanes a goodly sum would be realized and that the surplus could be used toward the advancement of the art of aviation among the members of the society and, perhaps, enable it to purchase a motor for Harvard, designed and constructed under the direction of James V. Martin.

Just previous to the opening of the meet, on Sept. 3, the society purchased one of A. V. Roe's triplanes, and it was that machine that was wrecked near the close of the meeting. However, the machine has been practically rebuilt at the hangars at the Quincy aviation field, so that it will soon be ready to try again. It was thought that enough money would be realized also to purchase an engine for Mr. Martin's original biplane, but it is doubtful, from the present outlook, if the receipts of the meet will warrant such expenditure.

Indeed, it is extremely doubtful if the receipts will balance the expenditures, but the public spirited men who backed the scheme, and they are mostly Harvard graduates, do not consider this in a very serious light in view of the successful manner in which the meet was conducted.

The exact financial outcome of the first great aviation meeting held in this country is not yet known, nor will it be known until the different reports are submitted at the meeting, but Adams D. Claflin, who managed the met, stated last evening that the deficit, if there was one, would be very small, and would have absolutelyno bearing on the plans that are already being formulated for next year's meeting.

Although the loyal supporters of the Harvard aeronautical society who contributed the $50,000 necessary to launch the venture may not realize fully on the investment, they are more eager than ever to underwrite the meeting in 1911.

Even though the receipts from the meeting may show a slight loss there is a pronounced sentiment of unanimity among undergraduate members of the society and those who financed the project and the prospects are that some such arrangement wil lbe followed next year.

LADIES' AUXILIARY A. O. H.

The annual convention of the Norfolk county Ladies' auxiliary A. O. H. was held in Boston this wek. The election of officers took place at the meeting and Miss Myra Shea of Atlantic was chosen vice-president. The state president Mrs. Mary A. Cavanagh of East Boston was present and addressed the meeting.

The former county president Miss Elizabeth M. Hennessy declined to be a candidate for reelection and Miss Mary L. Mahoney of Norwood was elected in her stead. The former president was given a purse of gold in recognition of her services.

HOW TO DO UP YOUR TOWN.

The following clipped from an exchange is worth reading and serious consideration:

Oppose improvements.

Mistrust the public men.

Run the town down to strangers.

Refuse to advertise in your local paper.

Do not invest a cent. Lay out your money somewhere else.

Be particular to discredit the motives of public spirited men.

If any man wants to buy your property ask him two prices for it.

If he wants to buy anybody else's, interfere and discourage him.

If he is a new comer and pays cash for his goods charge him 10 to 25 per cent extra. He won't tumble to your game but he may leave town suddenly and settle in some nearby place where one man's money buys the same amount of goods his neighbor's does.

Refuse to see the merit in any scheme that does not exactly benefit you. Such a course will win you the reputation of possessing extraordinary wisdom.

Don't take your local paper but run it down, and run down your officers.

TRIAL TRIPS OF PERKINS

Made Run From Quincy to Rockland in Eight Hours

Monday the Perkins left the Fore River shipyard, and a dispatch from Rockland, Maine, under that date to the Globe says:

"The torpedo boat destroyer Perkins arrived here at 5 this afternoon from Quincy, Mass., and will begin a series of four builders' acceptance trials on the Rockland course Tuesday morning. She left the yard at 9 A. M. ,making the run up the coast partly at 15-knot speed and partly at 25 knots. The engines ran smoothly and the ship met her tests for water consumption and economy in a satisfactory manner.

"The government is represented on board the craft by Asst. Naval Constructor Battles and Lieut. Commander Hill, inspector of ordinance.

"The board of inspection and survey arrived tonight. Rear Admiral Chauncey Thomas is president and Comamander C. F. Hughes recorder.

"Interest in the trial of the Perkins centers to some extent in the showing made by the Curtis turbines, as she is the first destroyer thus equipped."

Lieut. J. R. P. Pringle U.S.N., was on Monday detached from duty on the battleship Masachusetts and ordered to the Fore River Shipbuilding company, in connection with the fitting out of the torpedo boat Perkins. When that vessel is placed in commission Lieut. Pringle will command her.

BRIEFS

George F. Elcock of Copeland street captured another fox last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Loud of Washington street leave Wednesday for New York where they will visit their daughter Mrs. W. Brandau until the first of November.

Officer Cahill has been at Springfield several weeks familiarizing himself with the mechanism of the police automobile so that he will be able to take the engine apart and put it together again, and make any minor repairs.

Through an error the name of Candidate Curley appeared on the sample ballots first printed as Joseph M. Curley instead of James M. Curley. The error was discovered Monday and a new set of official ballots were printed for the caucuses today.

Chief of Police Burrell has written letters to the authorities of Somerville, Milton, Weymouth, Braintree and other places who furnished him with uniformed police during Aviation week, thanking them for the efficient service which they rendered during that week.

While many florists were unable to cultivate dahlias this season, the plants continue to bloom freely for George F. Elcock of Copeland street. He estimates that he now has about 10,000 blooms about his residence and they are more beautiful than ever. In variety and beauty Mr. Elcock certainly excells.

The Baptist Boston South Association, comprising churches in Boston, Dorchester, Milton, Quincy, Rockland, Wollaston, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph and Avon holds its annual session and conference at the Avon Baptist church Wednesday. Prominent speakers of the Baptist denomination from all parts of the State are to give adresses.

Candidate William S. McNary, who was announced to speak in City City Square Monday afternoon did not connect, and those gathered in City Square at 5 o'clock were disappointed. Archie Thayer entertained them later, however. Candidates Curley and O'Connell were at West Quincy during the late afternoon and early evening, and addressed rallies on the issues of the day.

Prof. J. W. Maynard of Boston, the celebrated blind entertainer, is to visit Quincy Thursday of this week and give one of his popular concerts that evening at the Hall Place Methodist vestry. Prof. Maynard was born blind and was educated at the Perkins Institute for the blind at South Boston. He has been before the public for many years and has delighted thousands by his wonderful performances on the piano, and by his rich, full baritone voice. His witticisms and original imitations always please. This will be a rare privilege to hear a wonderful artist and to assist the Ladies' Aid of Hall Place M. E. church in their good work.

KILLED WIFE WITH POISON

Coroner's Jury In Crippen Case Finds Wilful Murder

MISS LENEVE AN ACCESSORY

Telling Points Against Accused Man as Jury Is Instructed—His Successor In London Office and Former Partner Give Testimony—Line of Defense Not Yet Indicated by Counsel For Doctor

London, Sept. 27.—A verdict of wilful murder was returned against Dr. H. H. Crippen by a coroner's jury at the conclusion of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore Crippen. The jury was out only a brief time. The jury further found that the remains disinterred in the cellar of Crippen's Hilldrop Crescent home were those of Belle Elmore, and that death was due to hyoscin poisoning.

Coroner Schroeder called special attention of the jury to the flight of Crippen and Ethel Leneve. He pointed out the precautions that were taken—of Crippen shaving off his mustache and Miss Leneve disguising herself as a boy. However, he informed the jury that its verdict should not mention Miss Leneve in any way, as she is charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Coroner Schroeder, in summing up and reviewing the evidence, instructed the jury as follows: "The final question to be answered is, 'Does the evidence show that death was due to a criminal act? If so, who committed the act?' The only person suspected is the accused, Dr. Crippen. It has been definitely established that Mrs. Crippen disappeared from sight and mind. It has also been established that the letters announcing her resignation from the Music Hall were written by Crippen and that they were carried to the offices of the guild by Ethel Leneve, Crippen's typist. It has also been testified that Miss Leneve was seen wearing Mrs. Crippen's jewels after the latter's disappearance."

The story of Crippen's movements at the time his wife was supposed to have died in America was told yesterday on the witness stand by Miss Marion Curnow, who succeeded Crippen in charge of the London office of the Munyon firm.

Miss Curnow repeated the evidence which she gave when Crippen and Miss Leneve were arraigned in Bow street police court, charged with the murder of Mrs. Crippen.

She testified that Crippen told her his wife had died in America last February. About the same time he began a series of financial operations which mainly consisted of getting checks cashed. Miss Curnow said that she cashed one $500 check for him. Then she told of Crippen's warning that she must say nothing about his wife's disappearance if questioned by the authorities. She said that Crippen left a package with her to be turned over to Miss Leneve.

Gilbert M. Rylance was called to the stand and repeated practically the same story he had previously told. Rylance and Crippen, under the firm name of Crippen & Rylance, embarked in a business enterprise for the making of false teeth.

Rylance testified that Crippen had told him that his wife died in America last winter. Following this Crippen told him he had married his typist, Miss Leneve.

The absence of Crippen and his typist did not prevent a crowd from gathering. Attorney Newton represented the prisoners, but gave no indication of the line of defense which will be adopted when this famous murder trial of international interest starts next month.

FINA HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Shot and Killed Bundul When but Two Feet Distant From Him

Rumford Falls, Me., Sept. 27.—Camille Fina, the Italian charged with murder for the fatal shooting of Charles N. Bundul, a Pole, in the woodroom of the Oxford paper company, was bound over to the October term of the supreme court after a hearing in the municipal court. He was committed to jail without bail.

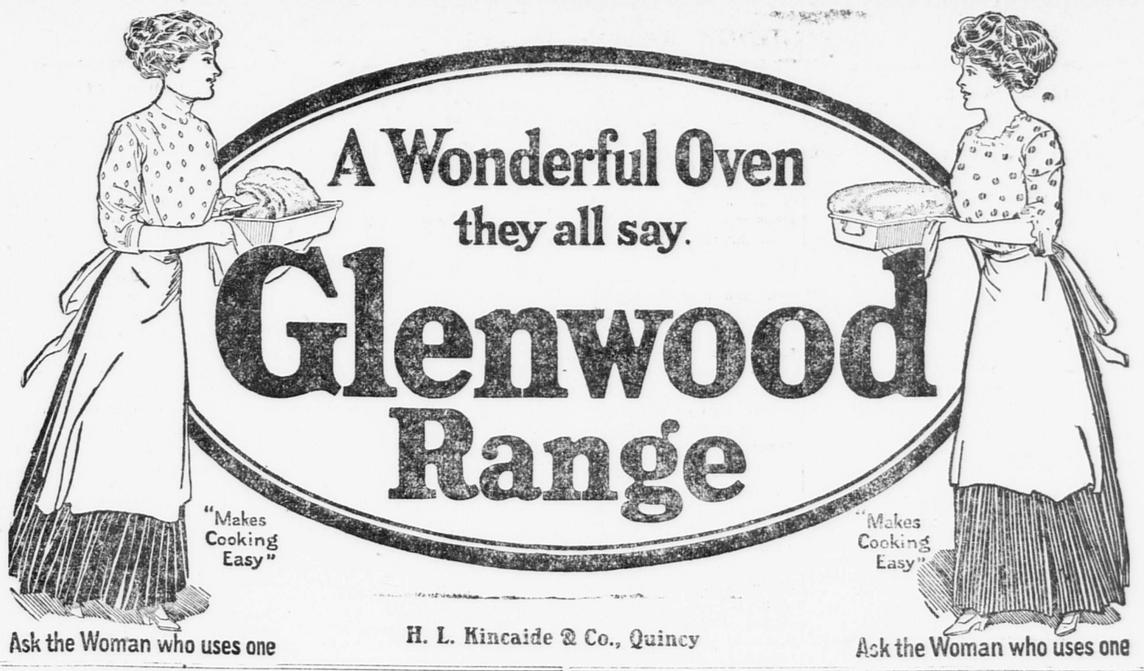

Thomas C. Oldham testified that Fina fired four revolver shots at Bundul while standing only two feet from him. He also stated there had been trouble between the two and earlier in the day Bundul had hit Fina over the head with a heavy oil can, inflicting a scalp wound.

Calls to exchanges outside the district, but within a radius of 8 miles from the calling exchange, will also be counted against the minimum number of measured service calls contracted for. After the minimum number of calls contracted for has been used, additional calls within the district will be 3 cents each, while calls to exchanges outside the district will be 5 cents for each 5miles or fraction thereof from thecalling exchange.

On Coin Box service, calls to any exchange within the district or to exchanges outside the district, but within a radius of 8 miles from the central exchanges of the district are 5 cents. Calls to other exchanges 5 cents for each 8 miles or fraction thereof from the calling exchange.

All tolls for calls within the Metropolitan or Suburban exchanges will count toward the required guaranty.

In Quincy it is hoped shortly to install some telephones with divided ringing. On a two-party line, for example, there will be but one ring of the bell, and that for the subscriber wanted. This improvement will require a change in the form of the listing in the directory.

For example: On a four-party line the present numbers ore 62-1, 62-2, 62-3, 62-4. On a two party line with divided ringing, the ring numbers will be replaced by letters, and the two subscribers on the line will be 62L and 62M, and will be so called for.

Such a change as this is an improvement which many subscribers will welcome, especially those who have been frequently aroused in the night by rings for others on the same line.

While the Quincy district is limited, it requires only a little figuring to show that the new two-party line, either "unlimited" or "measured" will cost less (with tolls added) than the present four-party lines unlimited. It will not be so in all cases but in a great majority of cases. At the same time Boston merchants who call up Quincy people for orders in competition with Quincy merchants will have larger telephone bills.

Here are the different prices which subscribers in different exchanges pay for two-party lines unlimited at their residences:

Boston exchanges	$36
Dorchester (including Atlantic)	$30
Quincy exchange	$27
Braintree exchange	$24
Hingham exchange	$21

It will be seen at the outset that it does not cost a Quincy man as much as an Atlantic man, to have a residence telephone, and not half as much as it does a Boston man, although he may make more calls.

CHAVEZ MAY NOT RECOVER

After Long Consultation, Doctors Hold Out but Little Hope

Donodossola, Italy, Sept. 27.—Grave fears are now entertained over the recovery of George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator who made a flight across the Alps and was injured while landing at this place. Chavez suffered several fractures and is believed to be injured internally.

Great general depression was noted, and an eminent specialist was summoned and examined the patient. After a long consultation, the attending physicians said that they were unable to express an opinion as to the outcome.

KNELL OF HOUSE FLY.

An authority on health has this to say regarding the house fly:

The fly can be got rid of. This fact was proved in England, where, 50 years ago, flies were a nuisance and as great a danger as they are now in America. Today, broadly speaking, England is so thoroughly rid of flies that the English rarely screen their houses. How did the English do it? As we must do it; by each family keeping its house clean. Screens will keep flies out of a house and flypaper will kill them. But neither gets at the cause. There is only one way to do away with flies, and that is to keep clean the places where they breed and love to feed.

Manure heaps of horses and cattle should be kept in covered pits, bins or fly-proof closets, and stables and pens must be kept clean of manure.

Outside lavatories should be kept clean and all excrement covered up or drenched with poisons, lime or oil.

Kitchen refuse should be placed in closed, cleanly kept garbage cans.

Until we are clean ourselves we cannot keep healthy, and until we keep our houses clean we cannot keep away the flies.

If there are flies around or in your house either you or your neighbor is careless with regard to absolute cleanliness. And until the flies are got rid of, as they can be with care and watchfulness, a positive danger to your own health and the health of your wife and children confronts you.

Dates for the winter season of Alpha and Union Halls are being rapidly booked at the present time. tf

BRIEFS

G. S. Hamlin is moving to Wollaston from Eaton street, East Milton.

Wellesley college opened Monday with a large enrollment of students.

The mercury took a sudden drop yesterday between 1 and 6 P. M., from 82 to 64.

Wollaston men will have a chance to register as voters on Friday evening at the Hose house.

A meeting of the directors of the Y. M. C. A. is called for this evening in the Association building.

The Norfolk Conference of Congregational churches meets at Weymouth today, two sessions being held.

Harvard University reopens in all its departments on Thursday and a large freshmen class will enter.

Girls of the Wide-awake class of the East Milton Baptist church are to give an entertainment Friday evening.

Cornelius M. Duggan, high vice chief ranger of the Foresters, will make an official visit to John Henry Newman court at Everett this evening.

Prof. Blanchard of Chicago University is to give a recital of "The Rivals this evening at quarter of eight at the Quincy Mansion school, to which friends of Mrs. Willard or the school are invited.

A meeting of the chief rangers of the Forresters who are to take part in the big Boston Columbus day parade, will be held in Fenwick hall, Worcester street, Boston, Thursday evening. Capt. Jeremiah G. Fennessey, PHCR., will address the meeting and give delegates instructions.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Baptist Missionary Society will be held at the First Baptist church in Randolph Wednesday. Delegates will be present from Boston Dorchester, Milton, Wollaston, Quincy, Weymouth, Rockland, Braintree, Holbrook, Avon and Randolph.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Swedish Luthern church will hold their annual fair this week. Senator Eugene C. Hultman will speak at the opening of the fair. An orchestra has been engaged to furnish music each evening and there will be a literary entertainment and additional new features.

TELEGRAPHERS MAY STRIKE

Resent Alleged Dismissal of Men For Their Interest In Unions

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Unless the differences between the Postal Telegraph company and its employes are patched up in the next few days it is possible the city of Chicago, if not the whole United States, will be involved in a telegraph strike.

Officials of the local union declare they are prepared to strike, and that the support of the Order of Railway Telegraphers' union has been promised them. The trouble started over the alleged dismissal by the company of several men for attending union meetings and for joining unions. The men declare they will insist on the right to join any organization they see fit, and that if the company fails to agree with them they will call a strike.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,

Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1900, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes death by fire.

(Started Sept. 14.)

Five minutes later a young fellow in civilian dress was struggling in the grasp of two detectives. A terrified girl was clinging to his arm, tears streaming down her face. A clerical looking elderly stranger was expostulating. A man in the cap and dress of a railway conductor was vehemently arguing with a stocky sergeant of cavalry, who seemed master of the situation and greatly enjoying his importance. A pale faced young woman, whom the conductor of No. 6 addressed as Mrs. Osborn, was imploring his aid when, to the amazement of the sergeant, this big subaltern in boots and spurs bulged in between him and Conductor Osborn and demanded to know the nature of the trouble.

"I've run down this man at last, sir," gulped Fitzroy, flustered, but making a valiant effort at control, "as you see, sir, only in the nick of time."

"Oh, Mr. Ennis!" cried Dora, throwing herself upon him and clasping his arm. "Rawdon has done no wrong. We are married. Here are our friends to prove it. Why should they arrest him?"

"Colonel's orders, lieutenant—arrest him wherever found," said Fitz stoutly, "and I've a si—stage here to take him back."

"On charges of your own invention, Sergeant Fitzroy," said Ennis icily, "no one of which you'll ever prove. Have you any warrant for this man?" this to the detectives. "He's no deserter. He's on furlough by order of General Crook, traveling, I take it, with his own wife, and unless you want to burn your fingers to the bone let go."

"Then, lieutenant," burst in Fitzroy, "he's a prisoner by order of Colonel Button."

"Then as senior officer on the spot I'll take charge of him; also, Sergeant

"I LOST THE CHANCE TO KISS THE BRIDE."

Fitzroy, of you and the sleigh you feloniously made way with. Stand aside, sir. Now, gentlemen, go on with your train.

"I did my best to be in time for the ceremony, Mrs. Rawdon," continued Ennis, gallant and impressive, as he swung her suddenly aboard, "but with my usual luck I lost the chance to kiss the bride."

For answer she quickly turned, flung her arms about his neck, and her warm lips swept his cheek. "One for you, Mr. Ennis," she cried, and then again, "and this for Mr. Lanier!"

Friday again and late in the day and Bob Lanier's arrest lacked but a few hours of its first full week, and Bob was in bandages and bed in a sunny room of the hospital. Paymaster Scott was up and about and in his independent way had been saying unrelishable things to Button, who was in a most peppery frame of mind. A wire had come from department headquarters to say an inspector would follow. "Instead of ordering a general court to try Lieutenant Lanier they have ordered a colonel out to try me, by gad," said Button, "for that's just what it all amounts to."

And of all colonels to investigate matters at Cushing there wasn't one in the army Button would not rather have had than the very one who was coming—bluff, blunt, rasping old Riggs, best known to fame and Fort Cushing as "Black Bill"—"Bill Riggs to come and overhaul my regiment when it's notorious he never could command even a two company camp without having everybody by the ears! Such men aren't fit to be inspectors!"

Indeed, there was much to warrant poor Button's disgust. He had preferred most serious charges against Lanier. He had accused him of quitting camp on campaign, quitting his guard in garrison, quitting his quarters when in arrest, failing to quit himself of a money obligation, drinking and consorting with enlisted men, and in his letter of transmittal he had intimated that there were other misdeeds he might yet have to uncover, all said Button, on the information of veteran officers and sergeants of the regiment, notably Captains Curbit and Snaffle, Lieutenants Crane and Trotter, Sergeants Whaling and Fitzroy, and now here were both medical officers, both of his majors, two of his best captains, seven of his subalterns and nine-tenths of the women folk at Fort Cushing taking sides with Lanier and issue with him—their colonel and commander! And here, too, were Lieutenant and Mrs. Foster, highly connected, influential, wealthy, insisting that his most active and important witness, the unimpeachable Sergeant Fitzroy, had corrupted their coachman, run off with their sleigh and ruined (this was Mrs. Foster) their horses.

And the story Snaffle told Button before Foster could reach him was to the effect that Foster ought to be ashamed of himself for abusing Fitzroy for taking the sleigh in hopes of having a warm nest to fetch the poor girl home in as soon as he'd found her. "Sure, did Mr. Ennis expect her to ride back on his cantle on so bitter a night? Faith, Fitzroy was worth the whole pack of 'em put together if they'd only let him alone."

And that, at 9 o'clock, when Ennis was sent for, was the colonel's way of looking at it. Moreover, he had a rasp up his sleeve for our massive young friend on half a dozen other counts.

"In point of fact, Mr. Ennis, that girl has simply fooled the whole party and is probably laughing at all of you. A girl that will run away without a word or line to her father and marry an out and out adventurer, a mere nobody, has neither heart nor head anyhow. And now you've interfered in a matter of discipline just as Mr. Lanier did, and I gave you credit for better sense. You know I had ordered that fellow's arrest."

And so all Fort Cushing seemed in turmoil and trouble as the sun of the 23d went out and "Black Bill" came in, yet that sun must have been potent, for Mrs. Stannard's face as homeward she sped after a long talk with Mrs. Osborn was radiant with sunshiny smiles. "You're not to know anything yet, Luce, at least until you get it from Dr. Mayhew, for you never could keep it, and for a week at least it's got to be kept."

"Well, one thing you can tell," said the major—"that is, if you know—and put a stop to an awful amount of censure that poor girl's getting. Why did she leave no word for her father?"

"Because she expected to be home in two hours." And the reader can judge just how full and satisfactory must that answer have been.

Now, whatever Mrs. Osborn had told that so cheered Mrs. Stannard, it is certain the latter could not contain herself long and that even as the major was summoned toward 9 of the evening to join the solemn conclave at the colonel's (where by this time Button had opened proceedings by giving "Black Bill" the best dinner a frontier larder and cellar afforded) she bustled over to the Sumters', was delightedly welcomed by her friend and neighbor, whose husband, too, had been called to council, and presently these two sages were in confidential chat.

To them presently entered the captain, electric, bristling. He wanted the bundle of latest newspapers. They had not half rend them, and Colonel Button was all eagerness to see some articles concerning the campaign about which Riggs had been twitting him, asking him whom he had subsidized at this late hour to rescue his reputation, etc. Riggs had seen three long, well written letters in the great New York Morning Mail, obviously the work of a correspondent on the spot, an eyewitness to the scenes he had described, and these letters refuted the calumnies recently heaped on Button and his comrades—gave him, in fact, high praise for soldiership, bravery, energy, even though the writer owned himself by no means one of the colonel's circle, if, indeed, one of his personal friends and admirers. Only the Sumters at Cushing subscribed for the Morning Mail. Riggs had seen the paper at Omaha. It took a search of some minutes before even the first was found. Then Sumter's eyes danced as he read, and Mrs. Sumter exclaimed over another, and for the first time in a week sounds of cheer arose in that little home. Presently Mrs. Stannard read aloud a spirited, stirring paragraph, describing a dash led by Lieutenant Lanier, and then Sumter made a swoop for all three pages and said, "The quicker Button can see these the sooner he'll come to his senses," and, begging pardon for his rudeness, took the papers and his leave and almost collided with Kate.

It must have been nearly an hour later when Sumter came hurriedly in, threw his furs off in the hall and, with troubled face, re-entered the parlor. His wife rose instantly, laid her head upon his arm and asked, "What has happened?"

"A scene the like of which I never thought to hear of in this regiment. We had adjourned to the office. Snaffle had been drinking a bit and got angered and flustered when Riggs cross examined him. One thing led to another, and finally in exasperation he blurted out: 'I'm sick of being called the accuser of Mr. Lanier. Why, I've defended him! I've hidden worse things than ever I told you yet, and now I'll stand it no longer! You twit me with spying and slandering. Then by all that's holy you shall say here and now who's the better man! 'Twas Lieutenant Lanier himself that leaped from the window this night a week ago—the back upper window of Sumter's quarters. That's how his hand was cut and torn, and I've got three men that'll swear to it.'"

He broke off suddenly, for Kate had turned and flung herself from the room and into the arms of Mrs. Stannard.

"Oh, father, father—it was—it was what I heard—when she screamed—and fell!"

"What did you hear?"

"The other voice—his voice. It said plainly: 'Miriam, hush! Don't you know me?'"

Developments In Democratic Situation In the Bay State

Boston, Sept. 27.—Mayor Fitzgerald last night issued a statement withdrawing as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

At a big Democratic meeting in Malden Frederick W. Mansfield read a letter from President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, denouncing Congressman Foss as a foe of organized labor.

At the same meeting James H. Vahey, candidate for the nomination for governor, scored Representative Riley, candidate for the nomination of lieutenant governor and chairman of the Democratic legislative campaign committee.

That Charles S. Hamlin has entered into a very active campaign for control of the delegates to the state convention was demonstrated by the fact that he sent to every delegate in the state a copy of the platform on which he stands.

USED AS A DECOY FOR SWINDLER GANG

Berlin Police Are Looking For Young American Woman

Berlin, Sept. 27.—A young American woman, who before her marriage was Miss Florida Settle, is wanted by the police here in connection with swindles perpetrated by the gang headed by a man known as the Marquis Ramee. The girl came to Europe when she was 18 years old. She belonged to a respectable family in a southern state.

For nine years, the police say, she has been the chief decoy in the gang organized by Ramee. She is married to a member of the band, a former lieutenant in the Austrian Hussars, named Goebel, now nominally a partner in an automobile factory.

On account of her great beauty and charm of manner Florida has been employed chiefly in Paris, Interlaken and Lucerne in decoying young men of wealth into the net spread by the cardsharpers.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Norfolk, ss.

At the District Court of East Norfolk, holden at Quincy, within the County of Norfolk for civil business, on the thirteenth day of September, A. D., 1910.

Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, a corporation duly organized and established under the laws of the State of Maryland and having a usual place of business in Boston, County of Suffolk, in said Commonwealth, Plaintiff, vs. Loren S. Wilde of Marshfield in the County of Coos, and State of Oregon, Defendent, and Juliette A. Libby, of Braintree in said County of Norfolk, as she is administratrix of the estate of Emily B. Houghton, late of said Braintree deceased intestate, Trustee.

This is an action of Contract to recover five hundred dollars alleged to be due to the Plaintiff from the Defendant on the fourth day of March, A. D., 1910 as set forth in the Plaintiff's writ of that date

And it appearing to the Court by the suggestion of the Plaintiff and on inspection of the officer's return on the Plaintiff's writ, that the Defendant at the time of the service of said writ, had no last and usual place of abode, tenant, agent or attorney in this Commonwealth known to the Plaintiff or to said officer; and that no personal service of said writ has been made upon the defendant.

It is ordered by the Court, here, that the Plaintiff give notice to the Defendant of the pendency of this action, and to appear before said Court, on SATURDAY, the eighth day of October next, to answer to the same, by causing an attested copy of this order to be published in the Quincy Daily Ledger a newspaper published in said Quincy, once in a week, three weeks successively; and that this action be continued to the said eighth day of October, or until notice shall be given to the Defendant agreeably to this order.

GOBBLES SHIP'S CAT

Eagle Swoops Down and Makes Off With Large and Sleek Feline

Boston, Sept. 27.—Captain Smith and members of the crew of schooner William P. Hood, which arrived in Boston harbor from Governor's Run, Md., are authority for the statement that the ship's coon cat, large and sleek, was carried off by a huge eagle which swooped down upon the deck when the vessel was in the vicinity of Highland light.

For two days the voracious bird had hovered over the Hood, evidently watching its prey, and when a good chance presented itself it took advantage of it. The noise of the eagle's wings drew the men on deck, and they arrived in time to see it soar away with the feline firmly gripped in its powerful talons. Not a sound was heard from the cat, for the eagle must have taken it by the throat.

KNOCK CONDUCTOR OFF CAR

Motorists Speed on and Victim Dies Within an Hour

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 27.—Search is being made as far north as Portland for the chauffeur and passengers of a big brown touring car, said to have a New York license, which struck and fatally injured Conductor Samuel W. Hollingshed here last evening.

Hollingshed was hit while riding on the running board of his car, and was thrown into the road, striking on his head. He sustained a fracture of the skull, and died within an hour.

Although the conductor was struck with such force as to bend the mud guard over the forward wheel, the driver of the machine did not stop to ascertain the extent of the man's injuries, but put on full speed and disappeared in a cloud of dust.

HELPED CROSS IN NARRAGANSETT RAID

Policemen's Suits Against Cutting Are Finally Quashed

Wakefield, R. I., Sept. 27.—The two suits brought by Narragansett Pier policemen against George L. Cutting of Worcester, Mass., who assisted Constable Cross in his raid on the Narragansett club last month, were quashed by Judge Lewis in the second district court.

After these cases have been settled the attorney for James S. Y. Ivins of New York, who was also one of Cross' deputies, moved that his complaint against Policeman Cullen be discontinued and the motion was granted.

Cutting was charged by Policeman Quinn with carrying concealed weapons and with assault upon Cullen in hitting him on the head with the butt of a revolver when the officer sought to arrest Ivins. Ivins afterward had Cullen arrested for assault. The Cutting warrants were found to be defective.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Armenian Who Shot Turk at Lowell Is Charged With Murder

Boston, Sept. 27.—A plea of not guilty to the charge of murder was made by Bogos Mucksian of Lowell when arraigned before Commissioner Hayes in the United States district court room. It is alleged by the government that the defendant killed Mohammed Ahmed by shooting last Friday on the steps of the postoffice at Lowell.

On the motion of counsel for the defendant, a continuance of the case was granted until next Monday. The case is the first of its kind known to United States District Attorney French in this district. His office has had murder cases upon the high seas.

The police of Lowell say that the defendant stated that the two Turks shot threatened him by saying they had killed his wife and they would kill him.

CABINET IN WAR COUNCIL

Campaign Matters Discussed by Taft's Official Family

Washington, Sept. 27.—How to save the Republican party in the fall congressional campaign and how to save the presidency for the party in 1912 were the two big topics in the discussion Monday by President Taft's cabinet. It is believed that these two questions were the principal reasons for the convocation of the president's official family in the three days' council.

All the members were present at the meeting excepting Secretary of War Dickinson, who is in China. A strenuous program for the three days has been mapped out.

HUNDREDS SEE STREET DUEL

Youth and Grown Man Engage In Desperate Encounter

RESULT OF TRIVIAL QUARREL

Keep Fighting Until Revolvers Are Emptied of Bullets—Battle Continues With Stilettos After Youth Is Shot—Question of Bravery Settled In Unique Manner In Italian Quarter of New York

New York, Sept. 27.—Merely to illustrate his side of an argument, it is alleged, as to whether old men or young men are the braver, Leopold Ratano shot and stabbed his friend, Rocco Bricce, mortally wounding him, in a carefully arranged duel, watched by a gallery of several hundred Italians. Bricce is 18 years old and Ratano is somewhat past 30.

The two were standing in Bolivar street near Navy street, Brooklyn, when Bricce began to tell what advantages his youth gave him over Ratano in affairs of gallantry and bravery. Ratano did not like being classed as a "has been" and declared further that in his opinion Bricce was a "never was" proposition, anyway.

"You're only a kid," he told Bricce. "What do you know about fighting or winning the ladies? You would run from a man or become tongue tied in the presence of a good looking girl."

"Never," asserted Bricce. "You're almost old enough to go around on crutches. No girl would want you and you have outgrown your courage, if you ever had any."

"I'll show you if I am too old to be courageous," shouted Ratano. "You take your revolver and I'll take mine. Let us shoot at each other until one of us falls."

"Fine," agreed Bricce, "I'll make you run with a single shot; but there is no need of hurting any one else. Let us go to the middle of the street and measure off a proper distance like gentlemen."

"But suppose neither one of us runs away and neither one is killed?"

"Then we will use our stilettos," suggested the youth. Ratano assented, measuring forty paces in the middle of the street.

Both men stood facing away from each other. At Ratano's word that he was ready they swung around and began to fire. They emptied their revolvers, walking to each other, only one shot taking effect. Bricce was hit in the abdomen, but the youth kept on, throwing away his revolver and drawing his stiletto. The men closed in, cutting and stabbing, while several hundred Italians watched from the windows of the crowded tenement houses or poured out into the street to cheer the knife play.

Weakened by his bullet wound, Bricce fought desperately against Ratano, who had the advantage in weight and reach, besides being uninjured. The boy refused to give ground, and more than once his knife point grazed his opponent's body. Finally Ratano broke through his weakened guard and slashed deep across his abdomen.

As he fell, Policeman Cohen, who had heard the shots, broke through the ring of Italians watching the fight just in time to seize Ratano. He saw that Bricce was terribly wounded, and he called an ambulance from the Cumberland street hospital.

At the hospital Bricce, in a dying condition, is a prisoner, charged with carrying concealed weapons, while Ratano is charged with felonious assault. The Italian colony is carrying on the argument, which the duel failed to settle.

HOLE IN HEART OF CITY

It Gives Residents of Lead Somewhat of a Scare For a While

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 27.—The firing of a blast at the 300 foot level of the Homestake mine at Lead started a cave-in which continued to the surface, making a hole in the heart of the city fifteen feet wide and forty feet long.

Fright among the residents of Lead, most of whom live above similar caverns, was allayed somewhat by assurances from officials that there was no danger. The Homestake has hundreds of miles of tunnels under the city and the slopes form immense caverns reaching in the upper levels well toward the surface.

SUES FOR STOLEN FUNDS

Bank Does Not Believe Cashier Lost $500,000 In Wall Street

New York, Sept. 27.—The New York branch of the Russo-Chinese bank has brought suit for $400,000 against its erstwhile youthful cashier, Erwin J. Wider, now awaiting sentence for looting the strong box of more than 500,000.

This move to recover money indicates that the bank does not place much trust in Wider's story that he lost all his stealings in Wall street.

Year's Murders and Suicides

Washington, Sept. 27.—In 1909 there were 2854 homicides in that portion of the United States covered by death registry laws, and in the same area 8402 deaths due to suicide.

HOW BEAUTY WON MABEL.

everybody. Well, after that we tried to keep an eye on him, but bless you, it wasn't ten minutes until that wretched dog was lost again. This time we looked and looked, but it just seemed as though we couldn't find him. Jane was going along bawling, and every one was turning to stare at us, so in sheer desperation I stopped a policeman and enlisted his help. This comforted Jane, and she stopped crying, but her face was all streaked with dust and tears, so that she looked just dreadful. It was by merest chance that we finally did get him. He was following a little girl with a white dress like Jane's. I was in a quandary. I had to manage some way so that that dog wouldn't get lost again. The policeman suggested tying him; so we got a strap and fastened one end to his collar. I was afraid he'd get away from Jane, so I held to the other end. Do you know, we hadn't gone half a block when that dreadful dog ran between a man's legs, and running around until he had one leg completely wrapped, he began to pull and bark. I was paralyzed. I stood there and held on to my end of the strap with both hands, and if it was to save me, I couldn't have uttered a word. The man looked at me, then at the dog, then back at me.

"'Well, madam,' he finally said, 'I guess you've captured me.'

"I wanted to faint, but I couldn't. I could only stand and look. Jane and the man got himself and the dog unangled and Jane apologized.

"Well, I couldn't go along roping people in like that, so the strap had to be discarded. There was but one thing for me to do—carry him!"

The air of martyrdom with which Mabel uttered this last, together with the thought of the tall, dignified young woman, who had always expressed the greatest contempt for women who fondled pet dogs, going along the street with a pug in her arms, was too much for her listeners, and they interrupted her story with peal after peal of laughter.

When she could be heard Mabel continued: "Here it was noon and I hadn't done one thing, not one! We got luncheon and started out again. To make matters worse we began to meet people we knew. They would say, 'Why, Mabel,' or 'Why, Miss Davis,' according to the degree of acquaintanceship, 'what a sweet pug you have!' and now and then one would add, 'but I didn't know you were so fond of dogs.' Even strange women would exclaim, 'What a dear little pug! Isn't he just too cunning! How you must love him!' Of course I couldn't stop and explain to every one that he wasn't mine; and that I despised pug dogs and that I was simply carying him to keep him from getting lost. I just had to 'grin and bear it.' I was so thankful when the time came to start home! I didn't have half the things I wanted, but I didn't care. I just bundled that dog in a hack and started for the train, and," Mabel concluded with a tragic note in her voice, "here I am alive, but that's about all."

* * * *

It was toward the close of a hot August afternoon. Extra men were expected the next day to make hay, and Mabel and mamma had been in the hot kitchen all day preparing for them. Hilda had chosen this most inauspicious time for the toothache and they ha dto do without her help. It was about over now, though, and mamma was resting on the dining-room lounge, while Mabel, hot and tired, was putting her last batch of cides into the oven, when in bounced Beauty. He rushed up to Mabel, and barking excitedly, caught her skirt in his teeth and began pulling toward the door. Mabel was so intent upon finishing her work and so fatigued, that at first she took no notice of him, until finally he became so exasperating that she called out:

"Mamma, do call Jane and have her take this dog away; he's driving me frantic."

"Where can Jen be?" said mamma, appearing in the doorway. "They are never far apart. Here, Beauty, come here," coaxingly to the dog.

Whereupon Beauty sprang to her, and seizing her skirt, began pulling toward the door.

"Why, how odd," said Mabel. "He never pulled like that at your dress before."

Mamma went to the outside door to call Jane. Beauty ran out before her and down the walk, but seeing her pause in the doorway he ran back and began pulling at her skirt again.

"Mamma," exclaimed Mabel in sudden alarm, "something has happened to Jane and he's trying to tell us!"

With that they ran down the walk Beauty running ahead barking and looking back at intervals to see if they were following. Through the gate and down through the orchard they hurried after him, and there, in the farthest corner, what a sight met their eyes! Jane hung head downward from an old apple tree, the heel of her shoe somehow having become fastened in the crotch of a limb. Her fair face was purple; her form limp. She was unconscious.

Mabel, even as a child, had always been rather prim, and impulsive Jane's tom-boyish proclivities often shocked her. She had never climbed a tree in her life before, but some way—she never knew precisely how—she got up that tree, and together they got Jane down and carried her, still limp and unconscious, to the house, and began working desperately over her.

"Oh, if papa were only here," wailed mamma, and Beauty whined piteously.

Mabel suddenly thought of Beauty's trick of carrying notes, and although he had always refused to carry them for her, she determined to try him. Hastily scribling a line, she said, "Here, Beauty, take this to papa."

Beauty, with a look of almost human intelligence, seized the note and bounded out, and Mabel saw him go tearing across the field.

Papa saw him coming and paused. A pleased look came over his face. "A note from my little girl," he thought, and he opened it with a smile which quickly died out as he read, "Papa come quick. Jane is hurt. Mabel."

He started for the house on a run and arrived there just as Jane regained consciousness.

As Beauty came panting into the room at papa's heels, Mabel stooped and caught him in her arms.

"You dearest, sweetest, best doggie! I love you!" and fastidious Mabel, half-laughing and half-crying, planted a kiss fairly on the wrinkled black, cold nose.

But Beauty, unappreciative of the unusual honor, wriggled out of her arms, and springing upon the bed, lay down with his fore feet resting across his little mistress. He was panting heavily and his little red tongue lolled out, but he looked supremely satisfied with himself.—Grace S. Howell.

NEW BEDFORD SHOWS 54 PERCENT GROWTH

Largest of Any New England City Yet Reported

Washington, Sept. 27.—The census bureau yesterday made public the population returns for three more Massachusetts cities, New Bedford, Salem and Taunton. New Bedford shows a growth in population of over 50 percent, the largest of any New England city yet reported.

The last census showed New Bedford to have 62,442 inhabitants, while the figures given out yesterday credit that industrial centre with 96,652 persons, an increase of 54.8 percent.

Salem has increased in population by 21.5 percent. The census of 1900 reported 35,956, the latest data giving the figures as 43,697.

The 1900 census credited Taunton with a population of 31,036, while the figures of the government issued yesterday are 34,259, an increase of 10.4 percent.

NAMED IN DIVORCE SUIT

Bodyguard of Governor Draper Throws Up Detective Job

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 27.—State Detective William J. McDowell, bodyguard of Governor Draper, has resigned as a result of an approaching divorce suit to be brought by George F. Estabrook of this city against his wife, in which McDowell will be named as corespondent.

The Estabrook divorce suit is the result of a raid of a room at a Boston hotel last Friday, where, it is said, Mrs. Estabrook, who is 23 years old, and McDowell, were found together.

BRIDE COMMITS SUICIDE

Follows Example Set by Former Wife of Her Husband

Providence, Sept. 27.—Following the example of her husband's former wife, Mrs. Fred Ruoff committed suicide at her home here by inhaling illuminating gas.

The woman was Rouff's third wife and had been married only three weeks. His first wife was divorced and his second wife committed suicide by the same method about two years ago, after asphyxiating her infant child. Rouff's father is also said to have ended his life of his own volition.

Gold Arrives In Seattle

Seattle, Sept. 27.—Steamer Jefferson, from Skagway, arrived with two tons of gold bullion valued at nearly $1,000,000. The gold was from the Tanana placers and belongs to various owners.

Miss Muriel A. Rogers of Hancock street is teaching at Hanson.

Milton Republicans will hold their caucus on Wednesday.

The monthly meeting of the School Committee will be held tonight.

The precinct one officers are serving as election officers at the caucuses today.

The street railway is relaying its tracks at the junction of Hancock and School streets.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Rhodes of Old Colony avenue returned Monday from Brant Rock where they spent a week.

Rev. Charles Conklin, D.D., of Boston, has been engaged to supply the pulpit of the Universalist church until a pastor is called.

Tickets for the banquet and cup celebration of the Quincy Yacht club to be held Thursday evening are reported as selling fast.

J. Thompson of Bangor, Maine, a boyhood friend and neighbor of Dr. H. C. Hallowell, was his guest Monday and both enjoyed talking over old times.

The many friends of James H. Webb, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, will be pleased to learn that the crisis has passed and that he is now recovering.

The plant of the Pneumatic Scale Co. was entered by burglars sometime during Monday night, and tools to the value of $100 taken. Entrance was had by smashing a window.

It is reported that a representative of the Telephone Company will hold a conference at City Hall this evening with the Mayor and City Solicitor relative to telephone rates.

Quincy churches are represented today at the conference of the Norfolk Association of Congregational churches at the Union church of Weymouth and Braintree. The general theme was "The church militant."

Miss Marguerite Titus of St. John, New Brunswick who was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Titus is spending the week with her uncle Joseph Titus and Mrs. Titus of Warren avenue.

It is expected that the new automobile patrol wagon will arrive back from Springfield next Monday ready for service. Chief Burrell will go to Springfield on Saturday and return with the car Monday morning.

It is reported that some Italians living in the vicinity of Water and Phipps street had a squabble Sunday evening, and that during the argument a revolver was accidentally discharged. This gave rise to the rumor there had been a shooting and officers were sent to the scene. The shooting, however, did not matrialize and no arrests were made.

The Atlantic Boys' club had its opening meeting Monday night in the Methodist church. The biggest attendance in the history of the club turned out and it was a rousing good meeting. Osgood and Lansing made a great hit with everyone, and tonight at the Wollaston Baptist church they will undoubtedly be greeted warmly. The program will be entirely different tonight.

Best Time Over 31 Knots at Rockland Trial Today

(Special to the Ledger.)

Rockland, Me., Sept. 27—The torpedo boat destroyer Perkins, built at the Fore River shipyard, more than made good this morning in her government standardization runs over the Rockland course.

The average speed for the five best runs was 31 knots, and she was not pushed any to do that. The fastest time she made was 31.86 knots and her builders claim that if pushed she can easily make 32 knots.

As the government contract only calls for 29 1-2 knots, it can readily be seen that she has exceeded this requirement. She made in all 20 or more runs this morning.

Wednesday if the weather is favorable she will have 25-knot calendar run for four hours. Should the weather prove unfavorable for this she will have her 16-knot r un.

LOCAL SPORTS.

The first ball season at Quincy High will open this afternoon at Merrymount Park, with Cambridge Latin as opponents. Great interest is being taken by High school students and there will be a large attendance, weather permitting. The Quincy line-up:

Blackmur, right end.
Arthur, right tackle.
Edwards, right guard.
Tirrell, centre.
Chapman or Church, left end.
Manning, quarter back.
Hill, left half back.
Rice, right half back.
Harmon, full back.

Many other candidates will be tried out. The Daily Ledger will have a column report tomorrow.

The Wollaston A. A. football team has been reorganizing this year with the following line-up: Denehy, left end; Bill Gerstel, left tackle; Ned Bennett, left guard; Johnson, center; Morton, right guard; Charles Lyons, right tackle; Carl Mansfield, right end; Captain "Web" MacDonald, quarter back; Savage, right half back; Bill Rice, full back; Phil Clapp, left half back. The first game will be played Saturday afternoon at Merrymount Park, when they will meet the Kinwoods. The fellows have put in quite a little practice of late and expect to make a strong showing.

Lynn has got the aviation fever, says a Boston paper, at least many of her young inhabitants, and while they have not got any aeroplanes or biplanes to make ascensions in they are manufacturing kites for a kite flying contest, which will be held on Meadow park Saturday, Oct. 8, and the arrangements for and the conducting of the meet will be under the direction of Harrison H. Buxton, the physical director of the Young Men's Christian association. Several prizes have been offered and the winner will receive a silver cup. The prizes will b for the kite flying the highest, those who make them the best and fly them the quickest.

CAUCUSES

WARD ONE.

Quietness reigned at the opening of the polls in City Hall this noon. Up to 1.30 about 20 had voted, party lines about evenly drawn. Some of the candidates had men out working for them, but there was little opportunity for any substantial work. But few teams are out.

WARD TWO

The polls opened promptly at 12 in the Hose house at Quincy Point. The regular appointed officers were in charge in connection with Officers Matthews and Fallon. Elijah P. Barrows of 5 Charles street was the first to vote. During the first half hour things were very quiet, only five votes being cast, four of them Republican. It is not expected that this ratio will continue throughout the day. From 5.30 till the close at 9.30 the officers may expect to keep busy.

WARD THREE.

At Doble's hall, South Quincy, where the Ward Three voters are having their say, there was but little doing during the noon hour. In fact there seemed a decided lack of interest, and unless the afternoon and early evening brings out the voters the election officers will have but little to do after the polls close.

This ward is claimed by the Curley forces, although there are some who dispute this claim. The seemingly lack of interest makes the situation a hard one to size up.

WARD FOUR.

A small half dozen were in the Ward Four polling place at St. Mary's hall when the polls opened this noon, and during the first fifteen minutes eight voted. Checkers at the polling place, however, predict a large caucus vote during the early evening, and Councilman McDevitt places the total at 350 votes. He also believes that O'Connell will carry the ward. Others about the polling place claim the ward for McNary and also add that McNary will carry Wards One, Two and Four. There was but apparent little interest however during the noon hour and the vote was light.

WARDS FIVE AND SIX.

The election officers at Wollaston and Atlantic will not be busy until after 4 o'clock, as a large majority of the voters were in Boston when the polls opened. Very few votes were cast at 1 o'clock in either ward. The Democrats will make a big effort to get out a large vote for R. P. Coombs for Representative. McDevitt men are scare in Ward Six.

CONDITION UNCHANGED.

The condition of Mrs. Margaret Shea, mother of Mayor Shea, who is seriously ill, remains about the same as yesterday. She is very weak and her death is looked for at any time.

Mr. Franklin at the Bar.

Among the state papers for the year 1536 may be read a letter from John Bartelet to Henry VIII.'s minister, Thomas Cromwell, stating that in accordance with the recent act the mayor and aldermen had chosen Mr. Pryseley to attend the English parliament as the representative of Calais and that he had made certain arrangements about his passage into England.

One Thomas Boyd was elected as his colleague, and Calais continued to send M. P.'s to Westminster until, in the reign of Mary, we lost the stronghold we had held for over two centuries. This is the only instance in England's history of anything like colonial representation at Westminster unless indeed we reckon one or two exceptional occasions when colonial grievances have been voiced at the bar of the house of commons, as they were so brilliantly by Benjamin Franklin, when Burke said the scene reminded him of "a master examined by a parcel of schoolboys."—London News.

Learn to Laugh.

Laughter is the best of all tonics. Bacilli are humorless folk and hate the physical constitution that is always vibrating with the shocks of fun. This is a truism, but serviceable and likewise worth repeating are the platitudes on laughter as the great aseptic of the soul. It is true there are different kinds of laughter, and some of them need formaldehyde. There is a kind, too, that needs bicarbonate of soda as an antidote—another that calls for lithia tablets. But the right sort of laughter was stolen from the gods by some wiser Prometheus, and nothing can prevail against it. In America there is plenty of laughter, good, bad and indifferent, but mostly good, and much that is very good. It is one of our greatest national resources. May we conserve it always. A people that laugh kindly and often have not much to fear; a people that laugh wisely, nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

—The baggage of Mrs. H. N. Slater of Readville has been held up by custom officers of New York. She declared on $1700, but the officers insisted on an inspection.

WORK ON WARSHIPS.

The Fore River Ship Building Company reports the degrees of completion of government work at their yard as follows: Torpedo boat destroyer Perkins, 94 per cent; Sterett, 90 per cent; Walke, 53 per cent; torpedo boats, Skipjack, 54.3 per cent; Sturgeon, 53 per cent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

The Congregational Sunday schools of the Norfolk Association will hold a conference in the South Congregational church at Brockton Wednesday and Thursday. The Rev. Stanley Durkee of the South Congregational church, will extend a welcome. The Sunday school orchestra of the South Congregational church will assist. Addresses will be given by Mrs. L. E. Ware, Miss Margaret Slattery, and by Professor St. John and Dr. C. S. Winchester, educational secretary. The Revs. Dr. Albert Marion Hyde, Porter Congregational, Alan Hudson, First Congregational, and J. E. Nyhan, South Congregational, will assist.

MILTON ACADEMY SCHEDULE.

The football season of Milton Academy will open Wednesday when the annual game will be played with Milton High. "Bob" Finlay, formerly of Wesleyan, who is teaching at the academy, is handling the football team and he thinks the outlook for a strong team is bright. There are six "M" men back, and with about 26 other candidates filling the five vacant positions should not be difficult.

The veterans are Edward Handy right tackle, Frank Perkins right guard, Frank Wigglesworth centre, Capt. John Talbot left guard, Phillip Watson left tackle and Cushing Hamlen, who played in the backfield.

The most promising of the new men are Vogel, Sweigert, Howe, Alles and D. Watson. Cushing Hamlen is manager. The schedule:

Sept. 28—Milton High at Milton.
Oct. 1—Roxbury Latin at Milton.
Oct. 5—Dedham High at Milton.
Oct. 8—Volkmann at Milton.
Oct. 12—Stone school at Milton.
Oct. 15—Noble & Greenough at Milton.
Oct. 22—Groton at Groton.
Oct. 29—St. George's school at Newport, R. I.
Nov. 5—Pomfret at Pomfret, Conn.

Twain and the Rivermen.

Mark Twain once told to a party of friends the following story on himself:

On one occasion when he started on a trip down the Mississippi river on a flatboat he was advised never to answer the questions asked by rivermen on other boats and never to bandy words with them, as he would be sure always to come out second best. He followed the advice religiously for a time, but one day he thought he saw a chance to get the better of a riverman who called out:

"Hey, thar, what yer loaded with?"

"Jackasses. Don't you want to come aboard?" yelled back Twain.

"That's whut I reckoned seein' as how they let ther biggest donkey hev ther run of the deck!" came back. Twain made a dive below as all the rivermen in the neighborhood set up a derisive laugh at his expense.

"Niggering" Logs.

The question was asked me as a native of Maine if I could find out what "niggering" logs meant in the statement "We niggered the logs." I found that to "nigger" logs was to save the labor of chopping them into lengths by piling them up crossed at points where it was desired to separate them. By building fires under these crossings several logs could be burned into sections at once. Because "a nigger" was supposed to be lazy this lazy man's way of cutting logs into lengths was, naturally enough, called "niggering."—Appleton Morgan in New Shakespeareana.

The Inexpensive Policeman.

Mr. Walter Seymour, who writes "Ups and Downs of a Wandering Life," had Thorold Rogers for a tutor while at Oxford. Rogers was as amusing as he was heterodox. "I remember asking him one day, 'Mr. Rogers, what do you consider the origin of the idea of the devil?' 'Cheapest policeman they could find.'"

A HINDRANCE AND A BURDEN

Woman Suffrage Thus Considered by Miss Seawell

SHE GIVES AMPLE REASONS

Grant of Ballot to Women Would Deprive Her of All Property Privileges, Including Her Right to Maintenance by Husband—Would Also Nullify Many Existing Laws Fro Protection of Working Women

Molly Elliot Seawell, who is one of the smartest women in America, contributes an article on woman suffrage to the September Atlantic Monthly, to which the editor gives the first place in this number. It is, perhaps, the most powerful and logical argument against conferring the suffrage on women which any woman has ever written, and the advocates of this "reform" will be kept busy for some time in answering it.

That which will trouble them most is her searching analysis of the actual operation of the suffrage in the states where it has been introduced—Colorado, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah. The evidence which she quotes from a congressional report proving the prevalence of fraudulent voting among the women of Colorado will be new to most people, and it quite upsets all the arguments about the purifying of government by giving the right to vote to women. Miss Seawell, whose stories and plays are well known, tells how she undertook the support of her family when she was 21 by literary work, how she became "through literature alone" a householder, a property-owner, a tax-payer and the regular employer of five persons. "I can say with positiveness," she added, "that there never was a moment when the possession of a vote would not have been a hindrance and a burden to me."

The two basic reasons against woman suffrage, according to Miss Seawell, are: "First, no electorate has ever existed, or ever can exist, which cannot execute its own laws; second, no voter has ever claimed, or ever can claim, maintenance from another voter. In the suffrage states these basic laws are for the moment nullified."

The grant of the ballot to woman would deprive her of all property privileges, including the wife's right to maintenance by the husband. What this means can be appreciated only when the extent of the property privileges now enjoyed by women is understood. The list is thus set down by Miss Seawell:

"The wife on her marriage does not become responsible for any debts owed by her husband before marriage; the husband on marriage becomes in many states responsible for every debt owed by the wife before marriage. The wife is the sole possessor of her own estate; the husband is not, and never has been, the sole possessor of his own estate, unless there is a pre-nuptial contract. He cannot alienate his wife's dower, either in his lifetime or by his will. A husband's courtesy-right in his wife's estate by no means corresponds in value with the wife's dower-right in his estate. A wife is not liable for her husband's debts; a husband may not excuse himself from paying his wife's debts, even on the ground that they were contracted without his knowledge, or even against his prohibition. The law compels him to pay those debts of his wife which are reckoned justifiable and in proportion to the husband's income and station in life. A married woman is entitled to her own earnings; a married man is not, and never was, entitled to his own earnings. The law compels him out of them to give adequate support to his wife and minor children. The woman seeking divorce from her husband can compel him to pay her counsel fees, and to give her alimony if she be the innocent party, even if he marry again, and this alimony continues until the former wife's death or remarriage. She can also compel her former hsuband to provide for the support of the minor children. A husband seeking divorce from his wife cannot force her to pay his counsel fees or secure alimony from her, or, if she be guilty, force her to support the minor children, although the wife may be wealthy and the husband may be penniless."

Now Miss Seawell reasons correctly that all these privileges must be resigned at once by every woman who acquires a vote. A wife upon obtaining the ballot, would have to give up all claim to maintenance upon anyone whomsoever, except upon public charity.

In this connection, a related consequence of woman suffrage, not mentioned by Miss Seawell, may be pointed out. As the possession of the ballot would deprive woman of all property privileges, so also it would nullify many existing laws for the protection of working women. Laws limiting the daily or weekly work time of women have been held by the courts to be constitutional because women are in the subordinate position of wards of the state.

Quincy Republicans declared themselves for Draper and Frothingham as the State ticket, J. Mitchell Galvin for Congress, J. Stearns Cushings for councillor, elected county and district attorney delegates without a contest, chose unpledged delegates to the senatorial convention in some cases divided between opposing lists, and renominated Representatives Thomas and Langelier.

All of the Wards of the city with the exception of Ward Four gave Galvin a majority over Willcutt in the Congressional contest, and in the whole city Galvin had a majority of 105. In Ward Four, Willcutt led by three votes. No particular hustle was made by either candidate to get out the voters.

Representative William R. Thomas in the Fifth district, and Representative Louis F. R. Langelier in the Sixth district, had no opposition and received practically all of the votes cast.

In none of the wards were there contests for delegates to the State, Councillor, County or District Attorney conventions. In Ward One there were no names,, however, for Councillor delegates and names were written in at random.

For Senatorial delegates four ward had opposing lists. In Ward One the "Hultman" list won 120 to 71. In Ward Two, Edwin W. Newcomb was picked from one list and Hiram W. Phillips from the other. In Ward Three the contest was close but the first list was elected. In Ward Five the upledged list had a walkover.

These delegates were elected:

WARD ONE.

State—Clarence Burgin, Charles H. Johnson, George E. Adams and George H. Brown.

Councillor—Eben W. Sheppard and three blanks as several had two votes each.

County—John O. Hall, Charles C. Hearn, T homas M. Butler and Francis M. Curtis.

ELKS IN MOURNING

Nominations Made for the Vacancy in Office

A lodge of sorrow was held by Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening in memory of William J. Coleman, late exalted ruler of the lodge. The station of the exalted ruler was draped in mourning and remarks of an eulogistic nature were made by several members. It was also voted to procure large photographs of the two deceased Exalted Rulers, Frederick W. Tirrell and William J. Coleman to be hung in the club house.

Several candidates were initiated into the mysteries of Elkdom, the initiatory service being made as simple as possible out of respect to the late exalted ruler.

Nominations were made to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Exalted Ruler W. J. Coleman. The following were nominated for the office and will be voted for at the next regular meeting. John W. Walsh, James W. Sweeney and Elmer L. Paine.

TODAY'S COURT.

Hannah Alsted was arranged for disturbing the peace at Weymouth. Case continued until Nov. 1.

William F. Stalp was arraigned for the larceny of brass to the value of $5 from the Fore River Ship Building Co., at Quincy. He was fined $10.

John L. Horgan was arraigned for the larceny of fowl at Weymouth. He was sentenced to six months in the house of correction. Horgan was also sentenced to one year in the house of correction for lewd cohabition at Weymouth.

A special dispatch from Washington to the Daily Ledger today reports the 1910 census of the City of Quincy to be 32,642 a gain of 8,743 in ten years, a percentage of gain which was equalled by very few cities and towns of Massachusetts.

The figures at each census will be of interest and are as follows:

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The census returns of Newton fell far short of the estimates, and it will not be many years before Quincy is larger than Newton. The total for Newton was 39,806, an increase of 6,219 or 18.5 per cent. Somerville gained 25.3 per cent.

The Insurgents seem to be as active in the Democratic camp as the Republican, for two Democratic Congressmen of Massachusetts who were candidates for reelection were laid low—Kelliher in the Ninth and O'Connell in the Tenth. Peters in the Eleventh also had a contest but won 4006 to 3687. The other nominations are made by conventions.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

To make one's home a little corner of the kingdom of heaven is the highest motive that one can have, whether one is father, mother, child, sister, brother, or friend. Home first of all must be realized as heaven within one's own consciousness. Those who are truly at home within are at home everywhere. Those who live under the same roof with others have the most admirable opportunity to prove this inward home-coming by the degree of heavenliness which their own experience brings to those about them. Order is here and serenity; good cheer and comfort; peace and joy. Here none feels himself unloved or left alone with his problems. There need not be officious thrusting in of unsought aid, but there may be this: he who has found home himself may so keep himself in this light that he shall never be found wanting to those who turn to him for any helpfulness.

Of a great and good woman some one said, "I expected to be afraid of her, but I actually never felt so much at home with any one in my life." It is the open heart and hand of love that makes this home atmosphere about such a woman. Here is no freedom of a vulgar familiarity but the simplicity of true sister or motherhood, which unconscious of self looks to bring the light of a diviner love than humanity unaided has ever known to all who may step within her circle.—Christian Science Monitor.

In one thing all live church workers are united, and that is that the Church should not only take an interest in social conditions and work, but that it should do some actual and practical things. The differences arise wholly over the method of doing: some are feeling that the Church as an organization should take off its coat and go right at the hard job of reforming conditions and giving men a better show, while other feel that the work of the Church is largely inspirational. We have our own opinion on these things, but just now we want to call attention to the attitude of the social workers which has radically changed in recent times, until instead of insisting that the Church should throw off all restraint and give itself bodily to the actual work of social reform, they are now insisting with even greater earnestness that the real work is to be better done by the specific organizations and instrumentalities fitted for that work, and from the Church is to come the inspiration, and the men and the means. The latest work along this line comes from the social expert, Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia, who says:

It is clearly recognized in this era of sociological zeal that the Church is not to be diverted from her supreme mission in the realm of the spiritual; that the manifold reforms that are yet to be accomplished in the condition of existence here are not to be administered by the Church, nor even necessarily in the name of the Church, but by people who have been inspired by the Church, and who go out from her worship and instruction with an understanding of the times and an enthusiasm for their brethern that shall inject into all relationships the spirit of Jesus Christ and usher in the Kingdom of God.—Universalist Leader.

BOSTON-1915 CIVIC PAGEANT.

On Nov. 10th, 11th, and 12th, a Pageant will be given under the auspices of Boston-1915 in the Boston Arena, the like of which has never been seen in America. Heretofore, Pageants have been historical showing the development of the city or the state as the case may be, from earliest beginnings up to the present and stopping there; but this Pageant, which the citizens of Boston will have the opportunity to witness, will be a spectacle which is more than historical. Civic needs will be brought out in a way that will impress upon the minds of citizens the conditions in which they live.

Last year for six weeks, beginning with Nov. 1st and lasting until Christmas time, Boston-1915 successfully conducted an exposition in the Old Museum of Fine Arts. This was attended by thousands of people from all sections of the city and all walks of life and the success of the exposition has been a great impetus toward the continuance of the program which this organization stands for. The exposition was an attempt to show the citizens good features and bad features of the city by means of charts and figures stationary in one place. The proposed Civic Pageant will show similar conditions by means of figures that move. The result will be one of the most spectacular and gigantic productions that Boston has ever seen.

That this is to be a Civic Pageant does not mean that the Historical features will not be considered. It is part of the plan to represent the development of the city from earliest times up to the present. Beginning with the Cave Dwellers the episodes will move on through Indian life and life among the Colonists to the present date. Primitive ways of gaining food, primitive occupations, religion, music, marriage, Indian warfare, wooing, worship, war dance, meetings with white men, times of starvation, Colonists' dame schools, town criers, husking bees, quilting bees, and country dances and will be shown in a way that cannot be other than interesting.

The Civic Pageant is another contribution which Boston makes to the large list of helpful social ideas which have already emanated from this city. That this is so, is proven by the fact that representatives from all over the country, including some from the Russel Sage Foundation, which is vitally interested in this Civic Pageant, will be present on the three days when the Pageant will be produced.

HOW TO ENTER OFFICE.

Advance to the door and give three raps. The devil will attend to the alarm. You will give your name, postoffice address and number of years you owe for the paper. You will be admitted into the sanctum and will advance to the center of the room, where you will address the editor with the following countersign Hold the right hand about two feet from the body with the thumb and fingers clasping a ten dollar bill, which you will drop into the editor's hand saying, "Were you waiting for me?" The editor will grasp your hand and the bill, pressing it, and will say, "You bet!"—Thayer (Mo.) District.

Aeroplane In Flight and Land Station Maintain Communication

London, Sept. 28.—Wireless communication has been maintained between an aeroplane in flight and a land station. The experiment was carried out by Robert Loraine from a biplane.

The wireless apparatus weighed only fourteen pounds. The transmitter was attached to the passenger's seat and aerial wires were stretched along the length and breadth of the biplane. A Morse key for tapping messages was fixed at the airman's right hand.

Wireless communication was thus maintained with the airman up to a distance of a quarter of a mile.

SUES FOR $50,000

Actress Claims to Be Entitled to Part of the Baldwin Cash

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 28.—Zelda S. Aedo, an actress, filed suit against the estate of E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin for $50,000, claiming that, when she was a child actress, in New York, Baldwin made arrangements with her parents whereby he was to educate and support her and that he would give her $50,000.

The girl alleges that in 1893 she was appearing in New York at the age of 10 years. Baldwin saw her, she alleges, and brought her to California, educated her and carried out all his promises with the exception of giving her the money.

After his death, she demanded the amount from the executor and was refused. Miss Aedo is now in New York.

CIVIL SERVICE EXTENDED

Eight Thousand Assistant Postmasters Affected by New Order

Washington, Sept. 28.—The first definite result of the present cabinet sessions in Washington was the issuance by President Taft today of an executive order extending the civil service to include all assistant postmasters. The president will recommend to congress that second and third class postmasters be placed under civil service.

This action is in line with Postmaster General Hitchcock's recommendations. By today's order some 8000 assistant postmasters will be affected.

CONTESTS RICH HUSBAND'S WILL

Widow Declares That Relatives Invoked Aid of Spooks

MESSAGES FROM FIRST WIFE

Avers That They Are Responsible For Husband Neglecting to Provide For Her—Cut Off Entirely In Testament Which Gives $2,000,000 to Others—All Because Paper Manufacturer Had Faith In "Muzzy"

New York, Sept. 28.—Maintaining that he was influenced by spirit messages from his first wife to ignore her as a beneficiary in his will disposing of $2,000,000, Mrs. Robert H. Thompson, widow of a wealthy paper manufacturer, who died last June, is contesting the instrument in the surrogate's court in Brooklyn, where the spooky messages and the details of the receipt of the alleged messages are being told of in full.

Mrs. Thompson avers that, but for these alleged messages from the first Mrs. Thompson, her husband, who was many years older than she, would not have neglected to provide for her. These messages, she maintains, led to her being cut off and the estate divided among his grandchildren and a son.

She charges that Thompson's relatives called on the spirits to influence him against mentioning her in the will. In this, she said, they succeeded, but they had failed previously in attempts to have them persuade Thompson not to marry her.

It was testified to at the trial that the messages were received through the mediumship of Mrs. Marion Funk, 24 years old, granddaughter of Thompson, who was 70 years old. She is the wife of Dr. Merton L. Funk of 2500 Newkirk avenue, Flatbush. "Muzzy" was the spirit from whom the messages came and "Muzzy," Mrs. Thompson says, was represented to her husband to be his first wife.

Mrs. Funk and her brother, Robert H. Thompson, 2nd, were adopted some years ago by Thompson, and each is given one-fourth share in the estate. J. L. Thompson, an only son, is to have one-half.

Mrs. Funk denied that she tried to influence Thompson in any way. She received messages, some of which she wrote out. Many of the messages were received, Mrs. Thompson contends, just before her husband signed his will.

WORKING ON THE MAINE

No Bodies Yet Yielded Up by Hull of the Battleship

Havana, Sept. 28.—There is no foundation for the report that divers have discovered bodies in the cabins and between the decks of the Maine. No internal examination of the wreck could possibly have been made, and preliminary investigations are necessarily confined to the position of the hull and the character of the bottom.

Borings show that bed rock of the channel is about 100 feet below the surface of the water and the Maine rests on mud fifty feet above this. The nature of the mud bottom will soon be determined by employment of the coffer dam now under construction.

An evidence of the co-operation of the Cuban government is shown in the decree just issued by President Gomez, in which the American military commission is authorized to enter free of duty all machinery and materials needed in the work.

HIT BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Little Fellow With Arm Crushed Displays Wonderful Nerve

New York, Sept. 28.—After his arm from the wrist to the elbow had been crushed by a train in the freight yards of the New York Central railroad, Tommy McMahon, 6 years old, got up and, holding back his sobs, walked to a wall fifty feet away and tried to climb over to get to his home. Boys who were playing with him ran screaming to the street. Policeman Brown heard them and saw Tommy as he tried to get over the wall.

The policeman jumped over the wall and making a tourniquet of his pocket stick applied it above the injury and carried the little chap to the street. There he impressed a grocer's delivery wagon into service and took the boy to a hospital.

More Census Figures

Washington, Sept. 28.—Additional census statistics given out here include two Massachusetts cities, Somerville being credited with 77,236 and Newton with 39,806. Somerville's population in the last decade increased at the rate of 25.3 percent, while Newton's increase was at the rate of 18.5 percent.

Heavy Seizure of Fish

Philadelphia, Sept. 28.—Claiming that it was misbranded "No. 1 Prime Italian Fish," 16,000 pounds of haddock, said to be from Gloucester, was seized by federal food inspectors here.

Child Scourge Is Spreading

Providence, Sept. 28.—Twenty-two new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the state board of health yesterday.

SHIPYARD LOCKOUT.

The Monitor prints a dispatch from London which says the dispute between the federated yards and the boiler makers' society has taken a distinctive turn for the better. On both sides there is a tendency to attempt to bring the lockout to a close, with the result that the shipyards, though as determined as ever only to make terms on some understanding which will prevent the renewal of the sectional strikes of the last few years, have agreed to meet the representatives of the society as well as the other unions interested in the shipbuilding trade. In agreeing to negotiate with the other unions, besides the boiler makers' the federation has made a concession in the hopes of securing peace, but it insists that that concession is not to be translated into a sign of weakening in any degree, on the main question.

DR. SARGENT'S LECTURE.

The first meeting of the Mother's Association for the season will be held on October 5th at 3 o'clock in Bethany church chapel. Dr. D. A. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium will speak upon the subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's body." Every woman in Quincy who is interested directly or indirectly in this subject is invited to attend and hear it discussed by one who is an acknowledge authority on physical development. It is an opportunity which should not be missed. No admission fee.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The Quincy Mothers' Association has had for its speakers this year, some of the best talent in and about Boston. The women of Quincy are quick to take advantage of the good things offered to them. The attendance at these meetings has steadily increased. Young married women as well as the older women find that they get a great deal of help from the fine speakers. The October meeting, at which Dr. Sargent of the Sargent Gymnasium, will speak, will probably be an exceptionally large meeting because his subject, "The Importance of Training the Child's Body," is one which will attract the women of Quincy.

Members of the Quincy and Wollaston Alliances are planning to attend the meeting of the New England Associate Alliance on Thursday, Oct. 6 at Kennebunk, Maine, at the First Parish church, Rev. D. M. Wilson, pastor. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of Wollaston is president of the New England Alliance. Trains leave the North station, Boston, at 7.30 and 9.15 returning at 4.22. If the weather is good this should be a delightful trip both en route and at Kennebunk.

The Woman's club of Whitman opens its season this fall with a membership of over 450 and a waiting list of over 200.

The Hospital Aid Association will hold their first meeting after the summer vacation with Mrs. Theophilus King, Adams street, tomorrow, September 29, at 2.30 o'clock. It is hoped this year more members may be present at the meetings, which will be held the last Thursday of every month, and that many new names may be added to the Asscoiation.

• • •

Brockton's Day Nursery association is to have a "benefit day" on Oct. 15, the same date as the tag day of the Quincy association.

• • •

Susannah Tufts chapter, D. A. R. of Weymouth met on Monday afternoon with Miss Mary Loud and was first meeting of the fall season. The Quincy members have resigned from this chapter and formed a new one with Mrs. Jones of Wollaston as regent.

Rockland's Woman's club calendar presents an excellent program for the coming season. Miss Grace Chamberlain will give a dramatic recital of Pygmalion and Galatea at the opening meeting in October. On Nov., Health day, Dr. Arnold of Tufts college and Drs. Frame and Colgate will speak on subjects of local interest. Hon. Curtis Guild, Jr., will address the club in November. Two excellent musicales have been arranged and a committee is now at work on a dramatic afternoon in April. The club will observe its fifth anniversary. The other meetings will be equally as interesting and helpful. The club now has a membership of 249 while the limit is 20.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution is to resume meetings after the summer vacation and will meet on Monday afternoon at three o'clock at the birthplace of President John Adams. The council for business will be held at half past two. Being the opening of the season the meeting will be in the nature of a social and discussion of the year's work.

• • •

Over 200 invitations have been sent out to members of the Day Nursery Association for the annual meeting at the Woman's club house next Tuesday at 2.30 P. M. A specially interesting program is promised, followed by tea and a social hour.

ABIGAIL PHILLIPS QUINCY CHAPTER.

On Monday afternoon at half past two eighteen ladies met a t the residence of Mrs. Walter F. Jones, 98 Beach street, Wollaston, to plan for the organization of a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Various names were suggested and the one chosen was the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter of Wollaston, D. A. R. This was the name of the wife of Josiah Quincy, patriot, of Revolutionary fame, whose home the old Josiah Quincy homestead is situated in Wollaston and whose heroism in stirring Revolutionary times thus receives appropriate recognition.

The first regular meeting will be held in October at such time as Mrs. Dunning the State Regent can be in Wollaston to formally organize the chapter.

Twenty-five ladies have filed application papers and will become charter members and it was voted that total membership should be limited to seventy-five.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The season of the Quincy Women's club begins in October, the first meeting being that of the executive board on Thursday morning Oct. 6 at ten o'clock at the club house. The first social gathering will be on the second Tuesday of the month, the 11th, at half past two at the club house and will be a reception to new members with business, music and a social tea.

There will be year books containing the year's program of meetings, list of officers, and members. The book is now in the hands of the printers and will be mailed next week with copies of the new by-laws so that members will have an opportunity to look them over before the opening meeting.

It promises to be a busy year in the departments. The Arts and Crafts committee is prepared to offer lessons in pottery and china painting in addition to dressmaking, Irish crochet, stenciling, leather, brass, basketry and millinery. A course of departmental lectures is also being arranged for. Those wishing to join the classes should consult with Mrs. Tenney, chairman before the first club meeting. Three lectures or entertainments are to be given by this committee on the third Tuesday of Jan., Feb., and March at 4 P. M., for those who cannot attend the regular meetings.

In the Home Economics there will be much activity, especially in the Woman's exchange department which has already opened its exchange on Saturday afternoons at W. G. Shaw's store. Similar sales will be held at the club house on days of club meetings. Woman are asked to send in various kinds of cake, small cakes, pies, pickles, preserves, jellies, doughnuts, bread, rolls, baked beans etc., and it is hoped members will take advantage of these sales. As only a certain number can be accommodated in the classes, names will be registered in the order received.

This year's club entertainments will be made up of lectures, a musicale, a play, the reading of a play, a children's party and several special meetings of music, recitals, lectures, etc., which will make a full social season for the club.

Its work along educational, civic and philanthropic lines will also receive the usual thought and attention of most of the members.

CAUCUS RETURNS.

The first official returns from the caucuses were received at City Hall from Ward Six which arrived at 10.58. Ward Two followed at 11.20. Ward Four at 11.28, Ward One at 11.40, and Ward Three at 11.45. All were then in except Ward Five, and this was expected at any minute. It was a long wait, however, before it arrived and the hands of the clock in the City Clerk's office pointed at 1.45 when the officer walked in with the ballots. The result of the city, however, had been known long before that and everybody with the exception of the City Clerk City Messenger and reporters had gone home.

QUINCY ILLUSTRATED.

The City of Quincy will be written up at length and finely illustrated in the October number of the New England Magazine of which Bertrand L. Chapman, a summer resident of Adams Shore is the editor. The New England, true to her name, is trying to do for the New England states what the magazines of the Pacfic are doing for their states. Boom New England is now the popular cry, and it is not surprising that an article on Quincy is wanted, for Quincy is not only booming itself but New England.

Since Charles E. Beane came to Quincy in behalf of the magazine, and set right the misrepresentations of the advance agents, the Board of Trade has heartily endorsed the paper on Quincy, and now urges the members of the association to assist the magazine to such extent as they deem possible, either by subscriptions to the magazine or advertising in its pages.

The article on Quincy, which is up-to-date as well as historic, will have a national circulation, and be productive of good.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Tight Skirts Decreed for Fall And Winter

Coats Cut Short and Single-Breasted Popular

Paris, Sept. 20.—One of the best-known sartorial critics, after seeing everything that has been invented in clothes for the Autumn and Winter, says there are no fashions. I think he is right.

There is much groping for a definite style, and each designer and manufacturer is trying to invest something that will arrest public attention and call out money. So far it has not been done.

Critically, clothes are prettier than they were last March or last September. There is a return to grace and comeliness there is less evidence of the eccentric and spectacular. Here and there one sees monstrous things that really have no reason for existence; but, on the whole, clothes are saner than they were.

It may be the designers have found that freakishness has had its day when carried to an extreme, or it may be that they wish to introduce sanity into clothes as an experiment. One thing that is rather interesting over here is that the designers try to put off on the American some of the most heinous crimes; for instance four of them, when interviewed anent the hobble skirt, shrugged their shoulders and declared that this was an American fashion which the French had declined to receive.

When reminded that the first hobble skirt was worn by a Frenchwoman at Longchamps, they again shrugged their shoulders and said it was brought out by a small house and was taken up by Americans only. Be that as it may, the hobble skirt is now all over Europe, but there is not a sign of it among the Autumn and Winter clothes.

Don't let any one jump to the conclusion from this statemen t that skirts will be full. They are so narrow that we will have to learn to walk in a different way.

The Chantecler hop is the thing. One must go to the Theatre Porte St. Martin to learn how to do it, for the human fowls have it to perfection. It is a necessary part of their business; but it looks very queer when transferred to the avenues.

One skirt which has been shown by a great house is less than a yard wide but these models are difficult to describe by this single statement, because they all have a good deal of fullness at the back, which the models of the Summer omitted.

There are cascades of cloth, Watteau plaits, Directoire panels dropping from waist to hem at the back that obiate in a great measure the crudity and vulgarity of the narrow hem.

There is a tailor suit here that is as common as the chestnut leaves and which we have seen seldom in America. Ten to one it will be the suit of the Autumn with us. It lends itself too readily to the cheaper style of ready-made clothes, in which it has already appeared in the huge department shops here, and yet it is very smart.

The skirt is narrow, more or less so according to the inclination, and has a bias band around the edge of a short, narrow coat. The skirt, mind you, has no bias band. Its seams are lapped and stitched, and there is a row of small buttons for about six inches up the two front seams.

Paris is very tired of buttons, so these are left off in the suits made for the American trade. The skirt is about a yard and a quarter wide, but this will be enlarged by our tailors.

The coat just covers the rounded part of the hips, and its bias band runs from three to four inches wide. The shoulders are inclined to be narrow, because they are not padded, and the buttons, which go straight down the front, are large bullets of lead-colored metal, or brass if one prefers. The sleeve is long and plain, the rever short and square at the edges.

If you want to know just how the majority of smart women look at noon at Trouville, Deauville, and the boulevards you must imagine in your minds eye this suit.

The skirt is short, showing dark gray silk stockings, with heavy clocks up the sides, and patent leather America pumps, with a flat bow, which will be replaced by heavy shoes with gray tops. A high collar attached to the blouse shows above the coat, and in the front is always a plaited frill, with lace at its one edge.

The hat is still flat and, rather large, but in the next week or two it will be replaced by a tall, plaited turban of changeable velvet, bordered with fur or grebe. There is little trimming on these hats for noon wear, but for afternoon use they are repeated with the addition of a pair of Mercury wings placed directly in front and made of iridescent pin feathers.

In this suit, which dominates Paris now, becomes too common in America before the season is well advanced, there is another type of coat and skirt which the exclusives will take up, possibly in addition to the little coat and skirt already described.

It is of serge—and, by the way, the plain surface has replaced the heavy whipcord and herringbone—in blue, black, fig purple, and gun-metal gray. The skirt is narrow, with a straight panel down the back made of six-inch black silk braid, supple and glossy. It is in a basket weave of Hercules braid, which is so effective on serge. There is a border of this around the skirt in detached portions.

The jacket is a bit longer than the other coat, and is increased in length according to the height or slimness of the wearer. It has soutache braiding across the back below the waist, is fastened straight up to the neck with large bullets, and has an ornamental turnover collar.

Another suit has a tight skirt, with superimposed panels, very wide ones, of serge, that are stitched down half way to knees. These relieve to a great extent the tightness of the hem and provide a new note in the tailor suits of the Autumn.

The coat is short, for one never sees a long coat any more except as a wrap, and it is fastened, double breasted, below the bust and has extravagant revers in the Directoire style, made of satin and cloth laid over each other. It would be necessary to fill in the space with a full plaiting of lingerie to give the right effect, and this is done with soft linen and cluny lace.

One notices on many of the jackets the suggestion of pockets on each side over the hips. This is done by running bands of broad and narrow braid across the space and swirling them into arabasques at the end. Here and there this square or oblong is framed in with a tiny fold of satin but it is better to leave the latter off.

GOOD WORK BY NORTH DAKOTA

Made One of Best Records in Gun Practice

A Washington dispatch to a Boston paper speaks well of the Quincy built battleship: Entering battle practice within three months after they went into commission, the American "dreadnoughts" Delaware and North Dakota probably have made the best records of any of the 16 battleships which participated in the annual maneuvers just completed on the southern drill grounds.

It is learned unofficially, that the Delaware is likely to be awarded the trophy, with the North Dakota ranking not lower than third. The Idaho is regarded as a strong contender for second honors. The South Carolina and the Minnesota are expected to win fourth and fifth places respectively.

All of the shots fired by the Delaware and North Dakota were estimated at a distance of more than 12,000 yards, or seven land miles. The showing they made on their first tryout without the customary shaking down run and elementary practice is very gratifying to department officials and is declared to be a vindication of Secretary Meyer's order that all new ships should fire their guns within three months of their going into commission.

The recent battle practice also proved to officials the ability of the navy's gunners to shoot effectively at anything in sight.

INJURIES RECEIVED IN ALPINE FLIGHT

Result In Death of George Chavez, the Daring Aviator

Domodossola, Italy, Sept. 28.—George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator, who achieved the glory of being the first man to fly over the Alps in an aeroplane, died here of injuries which he received when his Bleriot machine crashed to the earth with him last Friday, just after he had completed the most perilous leg of the journey. Both his legs were broken and he suffered from internal injuries.

Chavez's death came close upon the heels of an announcement from the contest committee of the Iatlian Aeronautical society that it had decided to give the aviator $12,500 of the $20,000 prize which had been offered for a successful flight from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan, Italy. The committee also voted to give Chavez a special medal.

Chavez's feat was the most remarkable in the history of aviation. His aerial route lay over the most dangerous ground that could have been chosen. He negotiated the trip successfully, and the fatal accident was directly due to the momentary loss of control of his machine because he had been benumbed by the cold at the high altitude, between 8000 and 9000 feet, at which he crossed the mountain peaks.

Sultan of Sulu Says He Prefers Them to Automobiles

Washington, Sept. 28.—The Sultan of Sulu played second fiddle to Prince Tsai Suun of China among the capital's distinguished guests Tuesday. But while the latter was being received by the president and members of the cabinet, the sultan was content to enjoy himself under the guidance of Colonel Scott, U. S. A.

The sultan visited the Washington monument, took a street car ride, it being his special desire to ride on a "street train," and visited many public buildings. The sultan greatly enjoyed the street car ride and said he preferred the street cars to automobiles.

Lanier of the Cavalry
Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes death by fire.

CHAPTER VII.

"BOB," said Mr. Ennis, sauntering in to his comrade's bedside the following morning, "I'm instructed to pay you a kiss." Lanier's bandaged head spun on the pillow. He had but one girl in his mind.

"Wh-who?" he demanded.

Ennis threw his head back and laughed. "Nine times out of ten when a fellow is asked, 'Will you take it now or wait till you get it?' he's wise to take it now. If I'm any judge I should say you'd better wait till you can get it, which may be in less than a week."

"Ennis, if you can quit being an ass long enough to tell me what you mean and where you've been I'll thank you. If you can't I wish you'd get out. Ugashe!" concluded Bob, with a lapse into Apache and the pillow.

"Well, it probably isn't just the kiss you were thinking of—no more was I when I got it—but, Robert, my son and fellow soldier, it's my recorded conviction that the most enviable member of the regiment this day of our Lord is your twin trooper friend Rawdon. I saw him off on his wedding tour, and he didn't have on your clothes."

Lanier's head popped up in an instant, the one visible eye all eager interest. "Where were they married? When did they get off? Was Lowndes there?" were the questions that flew from his lips.

"Arena. On No. 6. Don't know," was the categorical answer. "Rawdon brought the parson out from Omaha, and the Osborns gave her away. Of Lowndes I've seen nothing since the night you staked him at Laramie, and what I've heard of him you refused to listen to. Of that calflow specimen of the effete and ultra refined Back Bay district you've long since had my opinion. He's too good and gentle for this western world of ours, Bob, and he and his shuddering kinsfolk suffer too much by contamination"—

"Oh, shut up, dad! His people did wire him that his mother was desperately ill. They merely wanted to get him away from the campaign. He'd been gambling, the pesky little fool, with some of the Rawhide crowd, was all out of cash and dared not tell his guardian. That's all there was to it. Soon's he gets his money he'll square up—thought perhaps he had, since Rawdon had enough to marry on. Lowndes owed him ten times what he owed me, I reckon."

To them, thus engrossed in confidential chat, there suddenly entered the two doctors, "Black Bill," the inspector, had given notice that he must needs have speech with the culprit. If that bandaged, blistered and unprincipled young man were in condition to see him. "Black Bill" and his host had been having a night of it. Button was in high fettle over the amazingly truthful and unlooked for articles in the Mail and as eager to know and reward their author as he had been to apprehend and punish the earlier detractor. Button had begun to "wabble," as Bill expressed it, in his spleen against Lanier until so suddenly "braced" by the truculent stand of Captain Snaffle, whose half drunken words the previous night were by this time known all over the post.

The matter was now in the hands of Colonel Riggs, however, and it was his to determine what further action to take. Snaffle had named as his witness Sergeant Fitzroy. Private Kelly (who, though drunk on duty, had not been so drunk, said Snaffle and Fitzroy, that he could not recognize an officer when he saw him), and the third witness, to the amaze of Barker and the derision of Ennis when told of it, was no less a person than poor Tom Rafferty, Lanier's own "striker" and hitherto devoted henchman. And to the consternation of Stannard, Sumter and others Captain Snaffle had been able to back his words. Riggs sent for the two availables, Fitzroy and Kelly, and the two had declared they could not be mistaken; that they had heard Miss Arnold's scream, followed instantly by the crash of glass. Fitzroy admitted that he was at the moment at Captain Snaffle's back door; said he ran round to the Sumters' gate, that he distinctly saw the figure of a man in a soldier's overcoat and fur cap leaping and sliding down the roof and that a moment later he grappled with it in the dark woodshed, dropping his hold only when angrily ordered to do so, the voice adding instantly, "I'm Lieutenant Lanier." Fitzroy declared that a moment later Rafferty rushed to the spot, recognized the lieutenant and by him was sternly ordered to leave.

And these statements presently did Colonel Riggs lay before Lieutenant Lanier in the presence of Drs. Larrabee and Schuchardt as well as Lieutenant Ennis. "I've known you three years, young sir," said he, "and I've believed in you from the first. I have reminded Sergeant Fitzroy of his previous allegations against Trooper Rawdon as to the scuffle and assault, and, so far from showing confusion, Fitzroy promptly said, 'Certainly; that took place barely half a minute later and within ten yards of the spot.' He says his whole idea first was to drive Rawdon from the scene and prevent his finding his officer in so humiliating a plight. He says he sought in every way to shield the lieutenant, but when all these other facts came out about the cap, the clothing, the lieutenant's absence from his quarters, his lacerated hand, etc., there was no help for it. He finally yielded to the pressure of Captain Snaffle's questions and told the truth. Kelly miserably admitted his knowledge of it, and when Rafferty came to his senses he, too, was to be catechised.

"Now, Mr. Lanier, there's the situation. Do you care to say anything to me, or would you prefer to take counsel?"

And Bob Lanier, leaning on his elbow, looked quietly up in the colonel's bearded face and answered:

"Colonel Riggs, I reckon both those men think they're telling the truth, and I may have to prove they're not."

"Do you mean you were there?" queried old Riggs in genuine concern.

"There, sir? Of course I was there—quick as I could get there, but not quick enough, by any manner of means."

Riggs looked grave indeed.

"You say you may have to prove it was not you. Don't you know you'll have to if these witnesses are further sustained?"

"Fully, sir, and when my need is known there will be witnesses for the defense. The doctors tell me Rafferty may not come round in less than a week. When the time arrives I'll be ready."

That was the condition of affairs when the eighth and final day of Lanier's close arrest arrived. "The idea of Bob Lanier spending Christmas in hospital!" said Mrs. Stannard. A sunshiny room on the ground floor of the major's big house was duly prepared, and thither just before sunset on Christmas eve our young soldier was piloted by Schuchardt and Ennis, making the trip afoot across the rearward space, yet being remanded to a huge easy chair and partial bandages immediately on his arrival.

"Black Bill," with his incomplete report, had gone back to Omaha to further mystify the adjutant general and to eat his Christmas dinner. At 3 p. m. the day before Christmas came a telegram from —— Arnold, Esq., of Standish Bay, Mass., announcing that he would leave forthwith for the west, bringing his sister with him. The Sumters told Mrs. Stannard, and she told Bob Lanier.

It has been said that this young gentleman was an outspoken fellow, with a bit or miss way of saying things when once his mind was made up, and by this time it would seem he had made up his mind.

"Mrs. Stannard, if you think a girl could stand the sight of such a Guy Fawkes as this I would give much to speak ten minutes to Miss Miriam Arnold."

"You're not a Guy Fawkes," said Mrs. Stannard, with fluttering heart. "You've lost something of your mustache and eyebrows, but very little of your good looks, only"—

"Only what?"

"Why, it's going to be much harder to see her now than it was before—before she"— And Mrs. Stannard faltered.

"Before she saw me playing St. Somebody or other at the back window and screamed? Nobody knows I heard it except you, and you won't tell. Moreover, it isn't about that that I have to speak."

Mrs. Stannard's bonny face showed instant disappointment.

"There's—there's another matter," said Bob, with trouble in his tones.

"I so hoped"— faltered that arch matchmaker.

"So did I, Mrs. Stannard," said downright Bob, "but not with charges hanging over my head. First I've got to meet the enemy."

And yet he wished to see and speak with Miriam, who not once had set foot out of doors since the night of the fire, whose sweet face flamed at every recurring thought of that incident, whose self betrayal covered her with shame and confusion indescribable, who would give years of her young life if she could only escape from Fort Cushing and hide herself a thousand miles away. But not until that stern puritanical father should arrive was leaving to be thought of. A week agone and the tidings of his coming would have filled her with dread. Now she heard them with relief. Father coming, and Aunt Agnes—Aunt Agnes, who never before had been west of the Hudson; Aunt Agnes, whose forbears had warred against witchcraft and woodcraft, against village crones and forest children, against helpless old women and stealthy young savages, all without mercy when delivered into their hands!

Congressmen Keliher and O'Connell Lose In Bay State

LIVELY STRUGGLE AT BOSTON

Murray and Curley Named to Succeed Defeated Men, While Peters Wins Renomination In Democratic Primaries—But Few Delegates to State Convention Are Pledged, Leaving Nominee For Governor In Doubt

Boston, Sept. 28.—The notable feature of the Democratic primaries held throughout the state yesterday was the defeat of two congressmen, John A. Keliher in the Ninth and Joseph F. O'Connell in the Tenth, and also the fact that a large majority of the delegates to the state convention will go to Faneuil hall on Oct. 6 without pledges for anyone of the three candidates for governor.

Republican primaries were also held jointly with the Democrats in eleven cities, but it was only in Lowell that there was any noticeable opposition to Senator Lodge.

In the last named city, the home of Congressman Ames, the only avowed Republican candidate against Lodge, three of the candidates nominated by the Republicans for the two branches of the legislature are outspoken for Ames.

The Democratic congressional winners of the primaries were: William F. Murray in the Ninth, James F. Curley in the Tenth and Andrew J. Peters in the Eleventh.

The Republican nominations in these districts were: William H. Oakes in the Ninth, J. M. Galvin in the Tenth and William D. Cotton in the Eleventh.

All of these nominations were made directly in the joint primaries. The three districts have been strongly Democratic for ten years.

The congressional struggle among the Democrats in the three Boston districts was a lively one. Keliher was opposed by five well known leaders, and Murray, who has had two terms in the lower branch of the legislature and one as a member of the governor's council, outstripped all others in the race for the nomination.

The district is heavily Democratic and nomination has always been followed by an election.

Congressman O'Connell had two opponents, a former congressman from the same district, William S. McNary, and City Councillor Curley. The latter won, with O'Connell second and McNary a poor third.

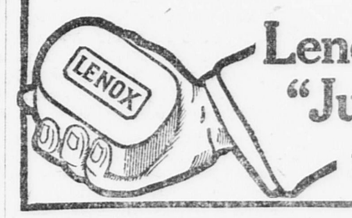

Congressman Peters had little difficulty in defeating Frederick A. Finigan.

There were also contests for the Republican nomination in the Tenth and Eleventh districts, and Galvin, who missed going to the Sixty-first congress by five votes, defeated William B. Willcutt, while Cotton in the Eleventh overwhelmed Police Commissioner O'Meara.

There were also contests among the Democrats in the Second congressional district and early reports indicate that Springfield favored William G. McKechnie over Samuel Bowles, Jr., although the latter secured some delegates in the small towns. The contest will be decided in the convention.

ROOSEVELT IN HIS ELEMENT

Things Go His Way In Severe Battle at Saratoga

OLD GUARD MEETS DEFEAT

Former President, as Temporary Chairman of Convention, Pays Attention to Malefactors of Great Wealth, Defines and Lashes Bosses and Gives Brief Endorsement of Primaries—New York Anti-Roosevelt District Leader Delivers Some Hot Shot at the Colonel

Saratoga, Sept. 28.—The Old Guard was given a smashing defeat in the Republican state convention when Theodore Roosevelt was elected temporary chairman over Vice President Sherman, the Old Guard's candidate. The vote:

Total number of votes cast	1012
Theodore Roosevelt	567
James S. Sherman	445

After he had named the members of the three important committees and the convention had adjourned to meet today, Roosevelt turned to the newspaper men and remarked: "I said frazzle, you may recall. You may quote me on that."

At Troy Monday the former president said he would beat his opponents to a frazzle.

The proceedings up to the balloting were marked with bitterness and turmoil. After the first tremendous swirl of cheering, when the vote was announced, Chairman Woodruff made the first move for harmony by asking the defeated candidate to escort his victorious opponent to the platform.

Mr. Roosevelt acknowledged the step with a curt nod. As he faced the multitude he presented a somewhat disheveled appearance. Attired in a dingy black coat with a rumpled black and white tie, and his trousers bagged and shot with creases, he began:

"I thank you for the confidence you have displayed in me; now or hereafter you will not regret what you have done."

Then, after graceful and complimentary references to President Taft and Governor Hughes that brought forth prolonged cheers, the temporary chairman turned his attention to malefactors of great wealth and in referring to them, hurled a bomb into the camp of the bosses by saying: "There is no need to say, 'turn the rascals out,' for we have turned our rascals out.

"I believe in the principles for which the Republican party stood in the days of Abraham Lincoln. Let us treat them not as dead, but as alive today, and to use them in the same spirit with which he and those associated with him used them to grapple with the problems of that time.

"I hold that we show ourselves the best servants of our party when with all our might we strive to make that party the best servants of the people as a whole. It is said that no party makes a profession of dishonesty. No, but there are plenty of people who make a practice of it."

Mr. Roosevelt then ripped into corruption, political and business, and declared that he was against it, first, last and all the time. He took occasion to define a boss, giving this version:

"The difference between a leader and a boss is that the leader leads and the boss drives. The leader holds his place by inspiring his followers, the boss holds his by crooked manipulation. The leader works in the light of day; the boss under cover of the blackest darkness.

"Corporations must be given their rights," he declared, "but they must be prevented from doing wrong. I don't propose to ask them to do right. The state must have the power to make them do it."

He praised the farmer, denounced child labor, and advocated indemnities for the widows and orphans of killed or disabled working men.

Then came the long expected endorsement of direct primaries. It was very brief. Roosevelt merely said that he was for them, that he believed the people of the country would succeed in governing themselves and that in doing so, they might set at defiance all the other nations of the earth.

Mr. Roosevelt avoided sensation and denunciation. Leaning a little forward and biting off every word with the click of his teeth, he made his talk, nevertheless, with a demeanor as fierce as though he had been reading the riot act to the vanquished bosses.

The battle was not won until terrific blows were given and received by both sides. Probably the hardest arraignment that the ex-president had ever received came from Abraham Gruber, a New York district leader, who seconded the nomination of Sherman.

Mr. Gruber's attack on Roosevelt followed a short and startling speech by Timothy L. Woodruff in which he said that President Taft had asked that Sherman be endorsed by the convention and also that Taft had been responsible for Sherman having been booked as temporary chairman.

In his speech seconding Sherman's nomination Gruber made these shots at Roosevelt:

"This man is now shooting at the courts and judges. He now finds sport in holding up the courts and judges to the scorn of the mob."

"The lungs of the country are not its brains."

"The shooter should have laid on his shoulder the hand of the people while they solemnly said, 'Be sane, be careful or leave the country.'"

"No sane man may ever say 'I am the United States.'"

"From Caesar to Napoleon, from Napoleon to the American Jack Cade."

"From Schlatter the healer to Dowie the Elijah, and then from Cook to every fakir in politics, the cry that saluted them was loud and long."

"All of us may now, if we will, join in the great fight begun in convention to prevent a third term or something worse."

Riotous scenes marked the opening of the convention, the entire police force of the town being required to clear the hall of crowds that overran and usurped the delegates' seats.

The crisis of the convention was soon precipitated when, just after roll call, Woodruff proposed Sherman for temporary chairman.

At the conclusion of Woodruff's speech Delegate Hicks of Nassau county offered the name of Theodore Roosevelt for temporary chairman. There was a tremendous outbreak of cheering, which lasted for a minute and a half.

PLATFORM PRAISES TAFT

Progressives Control Republican Convention In New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., Sept. 28.—A platform constructed by progressive members of the party was adopted unanimously at the Republican state convention held here. Under the new primary law, this was the only work which the convention had to do.

The administration of President Taft was indorsed to the extent of a commendation of "the Republican achievements of the last congress under the leadership of President Taft in carrying out in such a large measure the policies inaugurated by Theodore Roosevelt."

NEAPOLITANS FLEEING

People Becoming Panic-Stricken Over Spread of Cholera

Rome, Sept. 28.—With the removal of the censorship startling details of the cholera epidemic at Naples are being received. A number of persons have died in the streets and the popular excitement is such that the police have great difficulty in maintaining public order. It is reported that 100,000 persons of the better classes already have fled from Naples.

There were thirty-two new cases and twenty-six deaths from the cholera in Naples yesterday. Immigrants arriving from America were forcibly prevented from landing. The passengers on the steamer Canopic, from Boston, were permitted to debark, but were immediately escorted to the railroad station by soldiers.

Virginia Octogenarian Takes Woman of Thirty as His Bride

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 28.—In the vaults of the National Exchange bank and in the presence of President Fishburn and other officials of the institution, W. P. Snidow and Miss Rose Price of Montgomery county, Va., were made man and wife.

The groom is 80 years old, while the bride gave her age as 30. Following the marriage Snidow deposited $2000 to his wife's credit.

Heavily-Insured Man a Suicide

Dublin, Ga., Sept. 28.—Thomas J. Pritchett, president of the Georgia Warehouse and Compress company, committed suicide by shooting through the head. He carried life insurance for about $110,000. Ill health is attributed as the cause for self-destruction.

IN FASHION'S REALM

It is rather difficult to omit fur from a tailor suit, so popular have pelts become. There are few new furs. Possibly the undyed skunk is the most noticeable. This is used in its faded yellow state, with here and there a streak of brown. It is put on tailor suits, on ball gowns, and on evening wraps. Grebe is another pelt which one can hardly call fur, that is being used on coats and dinner gowns, but it is to be hoped that it will not extend to coat suits unless they are of velvet, made for brilliant afternoon wear.

Heavy serges and the new satin cloth, with a cashmere back, is made up with a short skirt edged with fur and a coat that drops just below the hips with fur pockets, cuffs, and collars. If the fur is omitted from the skirt it is put on the edge of the coat.

Surely there never was a time when the economical woman could more gladly bring out from the moth balls all the fur she has inherited and bought. She can have it dipped and combed and put it on every gown that she will wear this Winter. The nightgown is about the only robe that is not fur trimmed, and I should not be surprised to see one appear with an edge of sable at sleeves and hem.

Sable is in first style for everything. It is used in 15-inch borders on evening wraps, in 10-inch borders on afternoon gowns, and in 3-inch borders on ball gowns. On the latter it is combined, or rather held down at intervals, with huge dull red silk roses. One sees it combined with flowers on a great majority of gowns not for street wear, of course, but for all manner of house occasions.

Cinchilla is shown again, but not in great quantities. Skunk, in its dyed state as well as its natural condition, is very fashionable and is used on chiffon and satin or tunics and coats.

Narrow edges of all the brown furs are run on sleeves and the drapery on the bodice, and one sees it also on tabs that hang from the waist in severe elongated Directoire fashion.

It is supreme in millinery. Hats for all hours are trimmed with it. Every turban is to have a border of it. Fisher, badger, skunk, and grebe are used with lynx, dyed marten, sealskin, and dyed otter. Sealskin is especially smart on hats and the woman who has any of it in good condition can turn it into a high plaited turban and border it with three inches of brown fur; if sable, all the better.

If she wants this hat for afternoon wear she can have one rose at the side or front—preferably a huge dull red one. This black-red tone, which is the color of blood, is very much the fashion in gowns, in wraps, and especially in roses.

You who have a gown with tunic may continue to wear it with entire content. There is no evidence of its being abandoned by the great dressmakers. All of them show it, although some are trying to keep away does not appear in that short apron from it on the majority of gowns. It form which slopes away to greater length at the back; it is more even around the hem and longer. And, by the way, it is usually gathered very slightly at the waist line, which is a fashion that is indorsed by all the dressmakers.

No matter how tight or how severe the underskirt is, and it must be both to be in fashion, the outer drapery is full. You can't save material on this. It is not only gathered at the waist, but it resolved itself into a series of convolutions that are eminently East Indian.

If one could summarize the fashions in a haphazard way, for the details will come later as the gowns progress and certain things are eliminated, it would be as follows:

Tight skirts at the hem lead all others. There is no evidence anywhere of a skirt that is wider than a yard and three-quarters at the most.

The hobble skirt has disappeared. Nothing is tied in at the ankles or the knees, the narrowness comes from the shaping of the skirt itself and not through any drapery.

All skirts are slightly full at the waist line except the severe manish ones, which are worn on the street with short coats, and even these are sometimes held in a little over the hips between a flat panel back and front.

Overdrapery on everything except a morning coat suit is the dominating fashion. Every dressmaker uses it and exploits it, and their differences, or rather their claims to individuality, are shown in the way they handle it. The greater the artist the more beautiful the swirls and trends and folds of the soft materials.

Fur in every form is to be used. One's purse is the only limit. Entire wraps of it that reach from neck to hem are the rule, and these will be worn in carriages and always in the evening. They rule the day as an evening wrap, only yielding to heavy satin and changeable velvet, which is always bordered with a fine pelt.

Coast are short. Wraps are not, but that is a different matter. The velvet coat for formal afternoon wear with a velvet skirt and a wonderful satin and chiffon blouse is as short as the jacket of serge which is worn on the street during the informal hours. Nearly all of them are single breasted, although here and there one sees the wide lapping just below the waist line that is so apparent on all the evening wraps. The jacket is then caught with ornamental pieces of handsome braid.

Braiding itself is again in fashion. It is done from the basket weave of ten nches to the soutache of thread width. Nothing ornate is attempted in the way of design. It is used in cord effect with flat portions in centre pieces.

Hats are large and small. There is a wide choice. There is little change from last Spring for Paris itself, but the American will have a great number of those high-plaited turbans with the ornamental border, and sometimes an immense aigrette or panache of plumes at the side of the back.—Special by Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

BRIEFS

Tomorrow will be a red letter day for the Quincy Yacht club.

It was awfully close between ex-Representative Coombs and Councilman McDevitt.

Some good catches of smelts are reported as being made in Town river and Quincy bay.

Ground has been broken for a house on Beach street for Clark G. Boynton.

M. O. Thompson and family of Berlin street are occupying the house at 77 Beach street recently vacated by the H. O. Fairbank's.

Personal and real estate tax bills are being sent out as fast as ready, and as a result the annual kick at the amount of the bill is in order.

It is said that Congressman O'Connell has it up his sleeve for Mayor Shea, and will endeavor to place a mayoralty candidate in the field against him at the municipal caucuses.

It appears that the drinking fountains that were invented by Commissioner Bainbridge and installed in the school buildings do not work and the School Committee want the City Council to provide new ones.

I hear that the Argentine schoolship Presidente Sarmiento will arrive here Oct. 19, and the customs authorities have been ordered from Washington to extend all courtesies to those aboard the visiting vessel.—Boston Journal.

If Ward Five is as slow at the municipal caucuses at is was at the State caucuses it will be late the next day before its official returns are received. Let it be recorded, however, that for once the ballot box worked satisfactorily.

The Quincy G. A. R. delegates returned Tuesday from the National Encampment at Atlantic City, all having enjoyed a side trip to the battlefield at Gettysburg. In the party were Charles P. Costa, William M. Bird, Joseph W. Hayden, Joseph A. Lapham, Cushing Baker, Mrs. Joseph W. Hayden and Mrs. Smith.

The chairman of one of the Democratic Ward Committee found himself in a peculiar position Tuesday when he entered the caucus to vote. He called for a Democratic ballot but was refused by the election officers as he was registered as a Republican. After receiving considerable bantering he visited the City Clerk's office and got it straightened out.

Grahame White will fly every day at the Brockton Fair, October 4, 5, 6, 7. This famous aviator is secured at an expense of $15,500, for the management of the Brockton Fair always give their patrons the best obtainable. The rest of the big show will not be curtailed in any way. The big stage show, Horse Show, Firemen's Muster, Athletic Meet, and all the popular features will be bigger and better than ever.

BRIEFS

Sergt. David J. Barry is still confined to his home by illness.

Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock returned Tuesday from a trip to New York.

John Sullivan made a big catch of mackerel off "the Willows" at Houghs Neck, Tuesday, landing 165 tinkers.

The condition of the mother of Mayor Shea remains practically unchanged this morning. If anything she is a little weaker.

Engineers Thompson and Grant of the Torpedo boat Perkins received slight injuries on Tuesday by a flame back of a temporary burner. They were burned about the face and arms

With the oil and rain, the streets in City Square were in a wretched condition this morning, and it was almost impossible to cross the street without getting covered with oil.

Speed is not the principal thing for which the torpedo boat Perkins is paving h er trials, but economy in consumption of water, steam, oil, e tc. She is expected to excell h er sister ships, the Paulding, Roe and Terry.

The South Quincy Boys Club will meet in the Y. M. C. A. this evening at 7.30. Osgood and Lansing will give one of their popular instrumental and vocal entertainments. The Boy Scout movement will be talked over.

With the most largely attended meeting it has ever held the Wollaston Boys' club opened its second season in the Wollaston Baptist church on Tuesday evening. Over one hundred boys enjoyed the program of songs, stories and impersonations furnished by Osgood and Lansing of Boston. At its meeting one week from next Thursday a branch of the Boy Scouts will be organized. During the winter it is planned to have various state senators address the club.

Will Make Capital $2,000,000

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 28.—The Bates Manufacturing company has decided to increase the stock from $800,000 to $2,000,000; also on extensive re-equipment and improvements.

THE NORFOLK ASSOCIATION

Good Speakers at the Congregational Conference

The 87th fall meeting of the Norfolk Association of Congregational churches was held Tuesday at the Union Congregational church of Braintree and Weymouth. There was a large attendance at both the morning and afternoon sessions, and most of the 36 churches in the Association were represented.

In the morning the subject was "The Church Militant at home." Lt. Col. E. W. Halford, vice-chairman of the Layman's Missionary Movement, was the principal speaker. Mr. Halford c ame from New York city to attend the meeting and the program committee found it expedient to make an exception to the rules and give him 40 minutes instead of 20, the usual time allowance. Everyone wanted to give both the committee and Col. Halford a vote of thanks at the conclusion of the address. He told of the rapid growth of the movement. The older men who are deeply interested in missions and cannot go to the foreign fields themselves, are banded together for the purpose of raising funds to s end younger men and women to represent them in these foreign lands.

Rev. Charles C. Merrill of Winchendon gave a very able address on "Ways and means of providing sinews of war." After both of the addresses a general discussion was allowed and great profit was gained by this means.

An hour and a half was given over to rest and refreshment, after which the afternoon topic "The Church Militant abroad" was introduced. Rev. Robert A. Hume spoke very eloquently of triumphs in India and Rev. James H. Pettee told of conquests and triumphs in Japan and the Orient. Both these men have lived useful lives in the mission fields and what they had to say came out of their own experience and observation. Mr. Hume is one of the greatest missionaries of the age, and his personality alone is capable of moving an audience.

Mr. Pettee considers the Jauanese the most religious of men because of the number of religions there are, warring against, each other. This conflict caused growth and intensity of purpose.

The association sermon was delivered by Rev. C. F. H. Crathern, former pastor of the South Braintree Congregational church.

The Washington Street Congregational church at Quincy Point, Bethany church and the Swedish and Finnish churches of the denomination are members of the association. The pastors and a number of the members attended the meeting. Rev. C. P. Marshall of the Washington Street church led the devotional exercises in the afternoon.

Dr. Hardy of Bethany church was chairman of the business committee, and Deacon R. D. Chase served on the committee on resolutions, and was one of the deacons at the communion service which followed the sermon.

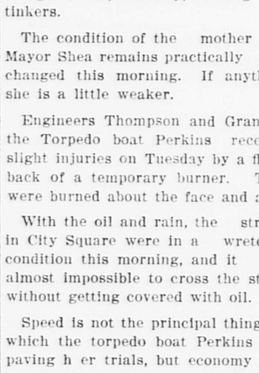

This was Mr. Crathern's last sermon before his dearture for Worcester where he will be pastor of the Park church. He was well known in Quincy as well as in Braintree, and his ability as a preacher has been well proven in the fourteen years of his pastorate.

The convention was very successful and the powerful speeches and the profitable discussions will benefit the churches in the vicinity to a great extent.

QUINCY HIGH WINS.

Quincy High opened their football season Tuesday afternoon with a victory over Cambridge Latin by a score of 6 to 0. The home team outplayed their opponents and deserved to win the game. For the first game of the season the spectators saw some remarkably good football and if the Quincy team continues to improve the season should be the best in the history of the school.

The new rules were given a tryout and did not appear to be as formidable as those who were not familiar with them have been lead to believe.

When the Cambridge Latin team came on the field it looked much heavier than our home team. Practically every man was big and husky and the general opinion was that the golden apple would fall on their side of the fence. Instead they received a goose-egg.

Quincy started off with a rush and gained consistently until within twenty-five yards of the goal when they were held for downs Cambridge tried two or three rushes and made good gains but the Quincy ends began to get busy and threw them back for a loss. Shortly afterward Cambridge tried a forward pass. Manning caught the ball and ran it back twenty yards to the 25 yard line. Hill made consistent gains and the ball was advanced to the fifteen yard line when Cambridge held for downs. Time was called shortly after.

An intermission of three minutes followed during which the players were not allowed to leave the field. When the ball was put in play it was given to the team that had it last, 15 yards from the other goal, thus causing a change of goals. The idea is to give both teams equal chances as far as the wind and the nature of the field are concerned.

Cambridge braced up at the beginning of the second quarter, Volk, in particular, made good gains. Quincy's defence proved stubborn however and Cambridge was obliged to kick. After one or two small gains the ball was given to Hill who made a 20 yard gain around the end.

Cambridge regained the ball and the 2nd quarter ended with the ball well into their territory.

Between the second and third quarters a ten minutes intermission was given and both teams had a consultation of war.

Cambridge kicked off to Quincy at the opening of the third quarter. Manning caught the ball and ran it back to the 45 yard line. An attempt was made to work a forward pass but it failed and Cambridge got the ball soon after on a kick. Blackmur got away fast and downed the man who caught the ball, in his tracks.

Quincy recovered the ball after holding the Latin school team for downs. Harmon and Rice both made good gains Manning tried a quarter-back run but was thrown back for a loss. Chapman continued his brilliant game at end and very frequently broke through the interference and tackled his man for a loss.

On one of these sallies he received a severe kick in the head but pluckily stayed in the game.

Hill made another long end run and carried the ball to the eight yard line. Quincy was unable to make her distance however and Cambridge got the ball on the 5 yard line. Harmon made a fine tackle on the second rush. The quarter ended with the ball in Cambridge's possession on the ten yard line.

The fourth quarter was the waterloo for the Latin school boys. The ball was put in play on their ten yard line. The center snapped it back for a kick but the ball rolled between Volk's legs Chapman fell on the ball and scored the touchdown. Arthur kicked the goal from rather a difficult angle.

Rice received the ball on the kick off and passed it to Hill. He brought it to the 40 yard line after another long run. Quincy made two short gains and Arthur kicked. Chapman downed the man as scon as he caught the ball. His head troubled him considerably in consequence of the kick he received earlier in the game and he was taken out. Church went in to take his place.

Cambridge began to show her efficiency in the forward pass and two or three successful attempts brought the ball rapidly down the field. When time was called they were on the 20 yard line.

The game was very satisfactory from a local standpoint and the team did itself proud. Captain Hill and Chapman played brilliantly. Manning and Blackmur also come in for a good share of the glory. The line held well and there was very little penalizing which is som what remarkable in the first game under the new rules.

The centre o fthe line which was thought weak, did very good work. White weakened in the third quarter but Holmes took his place and bolstered up his side of the line.

The offence and defense were both good but naturally there is room for improvement, particularly in the latter. There is need of a little better team work in both offence and defence but that will come with practice. Everyone was very much pleased with the showing of the team and it is hoped that the anticipations for the future may be realized.

MUST PAY BILL OF $2196

Otherwise Mrs. Slater Will Have to Lose Her Imported Gowns

New York, Sept. 28.—After paying duty amounting to $878.58 on wearing apparel valued at $1700, which she had declared upon arrival, Mrs. H. N. Sater of Readville, Mass., was told by Deputy Surveyor of Customs Smyth that she would have to pay $2196.28 additional duty and penalty on goods which she had not declared, and which otherwise will be confiscated by the government and disposed of by public auction in December.

Mrs. Slater was at the appraiser's stores to assist in the examination of her baggage which was seized when she arrived on board the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. She said her maid had packed her trunks and she was not certain of their contents, but had declared duty, was assessed as stated, and she paid it. There were also in her baggage eleven other Paris gowns, dresses, jackets, coats and blouses to the appraised value of $1353, which, plus $843.28 duty, will make her bill $2196.28.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY

Young Woman and Male Companion Held by Boston Police

Boston, Sept. 28.—In the arrest of Miss Lillian M. Eddington, 21, and her companion, A. J. Czysconsky, 25, the police believe they have caught a clever adventuress.

Miss Eddington, who has worked as a stenographer and bookkeeper since her arrival in this country from England some years ago, was arrested at the Parker house on a charge of forging and uttering a check.

Although the check, made out in the name of a prominent attorney, was for a small amount, the police found several other checks bearing the names of prominent business and professional men in Czysconsky's pockets. The arrest was made at the instigation of the International Trust company, on whom the check was drawn.

—Mrs. Horatio N. Slater of Readville must pay the custom officers at New York $2,196.28 instead of $1,353 declared.

Fanny Dickens.

Fanny, the sister of Charles Dickens, was one of the first students entered at the old Royal Academy of Music when it opened its doors at Tenterden street in 1823, and at that time the students lived at the academy, only going home for the week end. "Every Sunday," Dickens told Forster, "I was at the academy at 9 o'clock in the morning to fetch her (Fanny), and we walked back there together at night." And the Sunday itself the two spent—in the Marshalsea prison, where their father and mother then resided, owing to Mr. Dickens having "failed to propitiate his creditors." While her father was still in prison Fanny won a prize at the academy, and the future novelist, then engaged in pasting labels on blacking pots at 7 shillings a week, was present to see her receive it.—Westminster Gazette.

MAYOR'S MOTHER PASSES AWAY

Was Proud of Son and His Election to Mayoralty

The mother of Mayor Shea who has been hovering between life and death for the past few days, passed peacefully away to rest at 4.30 this morning, surrounded by her children. She was about 79 years of age.

Funeral services will be held from her late residence, 12 Common street, Saturday morning at 8.15 A. M. and will be followed by a High mass of Requiem at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock.

The citizens of Quincy in general sympathize with Mayor Shea in the loss of his mother Mrs. Margaret Shea. Mrs. Shea has been in poor health for a number of weeks and while it was known that she would never recover everything possible was done to prolong her life. She has been very weak for the past few days and her death has been expected every day.

Mrs. Shea was the widow of William Shea who came to Quincy in the early 50s, and by his thrift built up a substantial granite business. He died in 1889 and since that time his business has been carried on under the firm name of W. Shea & Son. Her husband was a veteran of the Crimean war and took part in that famous battle known as the charge at Balaklava as a member of the immortalized Light Brigade that went into battle against the Russians with 607 men and came out with but 198. He was one of survivors and was presented by Queen Victoria with the Victorian Cross, the highest badge of honor which the British empire bestowes upon its soldiers. It was shortly after this battle that he came to Quincy.

Mrs. Shea was justly proud of her children, and it was for her a happy moment when she sat in the gallery at City Hall three years ago and saw her son inaugurated as Mayor of the City of Quincy. Yet she was no more proud of her children than they were of her, for her comfort and pleasure has always been uppermost in their minds. She leaves six children, two sons and four daughters. They are Hon. W. T. Shea, Mayor of Quincy; Michael E. Shea, foreman of the Street department of the city; Miss Katherine E. Shea, who lived at home with her mother and brother; Mrs. Mary, wife of Michael Lyons, Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of A. A. Murphy, both of Quincy, and Mrs. Anne, widow of John V. Scollard late of Braintree.

OVER 1000 MAJORITY.

At the Republican caucus in Milton Wednesday night, but 38 votes were cast for the congressional candidates. Of this number Galvin received 23 and Willcutt 15. This makes Galvin's total vote in the district 2,861 and Willcutt 1769, a majority of 1092 for Galvin.

HOME COMING AT WOLLASTON

Annual Gathering of M. E. Church Organizations

The home coming reception of the Wollaston Methodist church ws held in that edifice on Wednesday evening. This event, which is supposed to call the members and attendants of the church from vacation pleasures back to active church work, has become an annual affair and one which is largely attended.

Following an informal reception from 7.45 to 8.15 by the heads of the various departments of the church, the evening's program was opened with an organ voluntary by Mrs. William Darling of Atlantic.

A. N. Murray delivered an address of welcome in his usual humorous manner, and introduced Master William Jackson who sang the "Lost Chord very credibly to organ accompaniment.

The pastor, Rev. Wesley Wiggin spoke of the confidence he felt in the members of his congregation and briefly mentioned the various organizations of the church. "There is nothing like co-operation," said Mr. Wiggin, "and if we secure this it is all we need to ask for."

J. A. Sedgwick, superintendent of the Sunday school, told of the efforts to increase the membership of that department to 200 before January 1. "There are good teachers in the Sunday school and there is enthusiasm in numbers. We are here to help the

IN ANOTHER ACCIDENT.

Misfortune seems to be persuing John Kitson, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Kitson of Park lane. The young man has not as yet fully recovered from the shooting accident of some weeks ago, whereby his left arm was badly injured, and now he is suffering from a broken right wrist by being thrown from a team Tuesday afternoon.

The young man, with his mother and young sister Babsy, had been to Merrymount park witnessing the football game on Tuesday. While returning home the horse became frightened on Putnam street and ran away. Before he could be controlled the team smashed into a telephone pole throwing the occupants out. John suffered a fracture to the right wrist and Mrs. Kitson was severely injured about the shoulders. The little girl was also somewhat cut and bruised.

WEYMOUTH DELEGATES.

The Republicans of Weymouth elected on Wednesday evening eight delegates favorable to George L. Barnes for senator. Delegates to the Representative convention are favorable to the nomination of John W. Cronin in the Seventh Norfolk district.

—No less than 57 Methodist clergymen, for the most part young and vigorous, have announced to the upper Iowa Methodist conference their decision not to accept charges for another term. They will quit the ministry entirely and engage in secular callings, their grievance being that salaries paid them as clregymen are too small to maintain their families according to a decent standard of living and to educate their children as they desire.—Milford Gazette.

HOUGHS NECK BUDGET

Scrap over Widening of Sea Street Thrashed Out

(Special Correspondence)

President Maloney's gavel called the Houghs Neck Associates to business Wednesday evening at 8.30 minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Chairman Coughlan of the committee on streets declared that City Hall believed the expense too great to fix the causeway, but could expend the proposed $10,000 for other improvements.

The committee reports having favored the widening of Sea street to 60 feet as far as the allowance would go beginning at "The Willows" leaving the emphatic preference for this improvement.

Referring to the apparent differences of opinion exhibited by Babcock street residents at the recent Council hearing, President Maloney said that he could not understand why any feeling should have arisen, of any question of dissagreement as to the object in mind, when it was the unanimous vote of the Associates to appear before the council, advocating the widening of Sea street.

For the next fifteen or twenty minutes rapid fire was trained on several members. Mr. Phillips endeavored to redeem himself for looking at the reportorial desk at the Sea street hearing, leading Houghs Neck to believe that Mr. LaBrecque was unblemished, and that the first intimation he had as to the removal of Babcock street tracks was given to him direct from Mr. Decker.

President Maloney called on Mr. Decker to reply and Decker stated that he did invite Mr. Phillips to attend the Council that night, as the Associates had voted to appear in favor of Sea street, but that the possible removal of tracks from Babcock to Sea street was never heard or thought of till it was sprung by Mr. Phillips in the manner above referred to.

Mr. LaBrecque then addressed the assembly stating that the gentleman who wrote the article which undoubtedly referred to him, had ambition, but very little experience in reportorial work and probably could not see or hear very well, and allowed the mistake. The final shot came when President Maloney verified the statement that Mr. LaBrecque had interviewed Babcock street people, evidently to start a scrap.

Henry W. French, the originator of the widening of Sea street was called upon to explain the order. He explained it to the apparent satisfaction of the associates. No one could get the tracks removed if they wanted to.

Mr. Coughlin said that track removal had never been disscussed at all. Mr. French advised that Houghs Neck wait till it got its money first, then fight after.

Mr. Phillip sparred again, by claiming that Mr. French and his friend Decker had talked it all over. Mr. French asked Mr. Decker through the chair when he had such conversation and Decker stated that French never mentioned car tracks in any conversation with him at all.

Mr. Wall claimed honors for starting the agitation, that he believed the track question had been all cut and dried. Mr. Wall offered a motion that Babcock street tracks remain on Babcock street and Sea street be widened.

CUP NIGHT OF Q. Y. C.

Presentation of Trophies Won This Season

Plans are all complete for the grand cup reception and dinner to be held tonight at the Quincy Yacht Club house, and the indications are that there will be a very large attendance of yachtsmen. The reception will be at 6.15 at which time the club members will have an opportunity to meet the guests of the evening who include Hon. Charles F. Adams, 2d, Arthur Adams and Thomas N. Perkins, the crew of the victorious Harpoon; Thomas Fleming Day, the donor of the cup brought back by the Iris and Dolly III from Narraganset bay; the cup committee of the Boston Yacht club, from whom the Quincy challenge cup was won this year; the donors of the Inter-bay Cabin Cat Boat association cups, and the officers of the Narraganset and Barnegat bays yacht racing association.

At the conclusion of the reception a dinner will be served by Whittemore.

Following the dinner will come the presentation of the several cups to the skippers of the winning yachts. There is quite a large number of cups to be presented and there will be more or less speaking during the awarding of the cups.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Roosevelt still holds his grip. It is because he is with the masses and an open fearless fighter.

Twenty of the 33 Massachusetts cities have reported their population for 1910, and only five made a better percentage a gain than Quincy, a remarkably good showing for the City of Presidents.

The average percentage for all the cities was less than 23, but Quincy's percentage was 36 6. The five making better percentages were New Bedford, Pittsfield, Springfield, Everett and Lawrence. Those with lower percentages are Boston, Fall River, Lowell, Cambridge, Lynn, Somerville, Holyoke, Haverhill, Salem, Newton, Taunton, Chelsea, Malden and Waltham.

Quincy was in hopes to overtake Everett at this census, but did not succeed, as Everett still leads by 842. While the census of 1910 shows Everett to have gained 9,148 in ten years against 8,743 for Quincy, it is a fact that Quincy increased the faster during the last five years, which are more up-to-date. Everett has gained 4,373 in five years, against 4,575 for Quincy. Here are the figures:

Census.	Quincy.	Everett
1910	32,642	33,484
1905	28,067	29,111
1900	23,899	24,336

In the list below the 33 cities of Massachusetts are arranged in the order of the 1900 census, but it will be seen that Quincy, Everett, Taunton, Fitchburg and Newton have passed Chelsea. That New Bedford has passed Lynn, and Lowell has passed Cambridge:

	1910	1900
Boston	670,585	595,380
Worcester		128,135
Fall River	119,295	105,762

Lowell	106,294	94,889
Lynn	89,336	77,042
New Bedford	96,651	74,362
Springfield	88,926	73,540
Lawrence	85,892	70,050
Somerville	77,236	69,272

RUBE IN PHILADELPHIA.

He had not proceeded far when he saw an employee of the Philadelphia Electric Co. lift the lid of a manhole and crawl down into the conduit chamber. Evidently the sight filled Joshua with much thought, for he gazed earnestly toward the manhole for a minute or two and then went over to a cop.

"Excuse me, Constable," said Joshua, addressing the police person, "but hain't they got a railroad down in the ground under this street?"

"They certainly have," indulgently answered the officer. "It is the subway of the Rapid Transit Co."

"Thet's what they told me," responded the farmer, with another glance toward the centre of the street, "but I hain't never seen it. Howsomever, I jes' seen a feller crawlin' down ter ketch a train, an' sez I to meself, them holes may be all right for ther men passengers, but they must be mighty derned onconvenient fer the women folks."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

ODD FELLOWS ON A VISIT

Puritan Lodge Makes Presentation to Mayflower Lodge

An unusually large delegation of Braintree Odd Fellows chartered a special train on Tuesday evening and visited Mayflower lodge at Plymouth. The goat was in charge of Mascot Stephen Levangie. The train was run by Conductors Henry J. Madden and Rufus H. Woodsum, with Hugh W. Owens as engineer and E. Forrest Watkins as brakeman.,

The travelling cabinet which they took with them was presented by Hon. B. H. Woodsum. A good time was enjoyed and it was midnight when the train left for home.

THE BURDENS OF WEALTH.

One spring, for some reason, old Eli was going round town with a face of dissatisfaction, and, when questioned he poured forth his voluble tale of woe thus: "Marse Geo'ge, he come to me last fall an' he say, 'Eli, dis gwine ter be a hard winter, so yo' be keerful, an' save yo' wages fas' an' tight.' An' I b'lieve Marse Geo'ge yas, sah, I b'lieve him, an' I save an' I save, an' when de winter come it ain't got no hardship, an' dere was I wid all dat money jes' frown on mah hands! other fellow, and if we do this is God's name our work here will be blessed."

An original reading by Willard Keyes entitled "A social call," followed, which was loudly applauded.

"What the Epworth League stands for" was considered by Frank G. Bennett. "The league deals largely with the young people, and is a training school for Christian character and service." Mr. Bennett called upon Miss Rena Chamberlain to give a history of the league.

The league was organized the year that Epworth Leagues were started and at the suggstion of one of its members the present Pilgrim Union was formed. The members of the league, said Miss Chamberlain, should stand on their feet, square their shoulders, hold up their heads and be proud of the work they have done in the past, are doing now, and will do in the dim future.

Mrs. George Crothers represented the Ladies' Aid society, and in presenting their work told an amusing story of the Garden of Eden. After everything else had been created said Mrs. Crothers, God made man, and he found him to be a helpless creature. He needed somebody, to keep him company, some one to help and encourage him, someone to lay the blame on. So the Maker put man to sleep to keep him quiet and then made woman. From that day to this the work of woman has been known. As that woman was to that man, so many women are to the church They plan to help the church and help pay the bills. When anyone doesn't know what to do they always go to the Ladies' Aid for help.

George Taylor, president of the Men's club was called to speak upon the subject, "How I secured my reelection." He told a witty running story of the unscrupulous methods of bribery used to attain this coveted position. He closed with a cordial invitation to the men to join the club.

Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick spoke on the Missionary society, saying that it might be known as a mental improvement society, being both interesting and instructive.

Miss Rena Chamberlain spoke on the Junior League, and of the parents moral obligation to the child. She urged a large attendance at the meetings of this body.

The Ladies' class was spoken of by their teacher Mrs. Wesley Wiggin. The class is most successful, having a membership of over 35.

"How I make both ends meet not to be treated in a personal way," by A. B. Cassidy, the church treasurer, closed the evening's program. He told of the receipts and expenditures of the year and of the needs for the coming season.

At its close the company adjourned to the vestry where bountiful refreshments were served and a general social gathering and reunion ensued.

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES.

The Democratic caucus of Braintree held in the lower Town hall Tuesday evening, was called to order at eight o'clock by Moses H. McGaughey. The meeting was presided over by Mr. McGaughey and John R. Ryan, chairman and secretary of the democratic town committee. The following gentlemen were nominated as delegates to the various conventions:

State convention—Col. A. C. Drinkwater and Moses H. McGaughey.

Congressional convention—John F. Powers and John F. Kelley.

County convention—Moses H. McGaughey and John F. Sullivan.

Representative convention—H. R. Drinkwater, John Heaney, John F. Powers, Moses H. McGaughey, John F. Kelley, Walter Howland and John F. Sullivan.

Councillor convention — Edward Shay and John A. Ryan.

Senatorial convention—E. P. Cuff and John H. Sullivan.

District attorney delegates—M. F. Drinkwater and Arthur Levangie.

For town committee—T. F. Mulligan, Jr., John A. Ryan, John T. Powers, John F. Sullivan, Moses H. McGaughey, John F. Kelley, James Levangie, E. P. Cuff, J. M. Connell, H. R. Drinkwater, John Heaney, Joseph Drinkwater, Charles Cavanagh, Frank Mischler and Alson Furtan.

"Well, Tommie, what did you learn at kindergarten today?" asked the boy's father.

"How to make a caterpillar out of clay," said Tommie.

"And was it a good one?"

"I guess not," said Tommie. "I couldn't make it crawl without breaking its back; so I rolled it up into a ball and played marbles with it, and won five glass agates from Bobby Jones."—Harper's Bazar.

THE NEW TELEPHONE RATES

The following editorial analysis by the Boston Transcript will be of interest to those who are trying to determine whether they are favorably or adversely affected by the new telephone rates:

The Highway Commissioners, in their letter to the telephone company, enunciated a policy which is fundamental to any discussion of the new telephone rates. It starts out with the theory that the five-cent toll rate between Boston and the suburban exchanges should be extended to the longest distance that can be practically afforded, and also that local service should be given to each subscriber at the lowest practicable price. These principles coincide with the economic principles governing social intercourse and trade.

The policy of the commissioners was made two years ago when they recommended the reduction of toll rates from ten cents to five cents for messages between the central Boston exchanges and the suburban exchanges within five miles. This has been obviously satisfactory to the subscribers. Every step of the kind brings the mass of the people into closer association with Boston, with corresponding advantages to the commercial and political development of the city. An obstacle to the extension of this policy has existed in the loss to the telephone company caused by much of the unlimited service. This loss has been heretofore made good by the toll charges and unfairly heavy burdens imposed on the measured rate subscribers.

The investigation of the highway commissioners showed that, excluding the private branch exchange telephones, which are on measured rates, about one-half of the telephones in use in the Boston and suburban districts are on unlimited service and the other half on measured, or coinbox service. The hearings brought out that the measured-rate half of the telephone users were paying two-thirds of the exchange income of the company, though they are originators of considerably less than one-half of the exchange messages. These users plainly are unfairly treated by the old rates, whether the telephones are in residences or business places.

On the other side of the shield are the figures which show that unlimited special-line business service, and multi-party line suburban service, are classes which create about one-fourth of the company's messages in the district. A good part of this business is done at a loss. More than forty percent of the special line business subscribers, with unlimited service, get their telephone use for less than two cents a message, and about twenty-five percent of the multi-party line subscribers make a large enough use of their telephones to get their messages equally cheap. The telephone company claims that this rate is insufficient to pay the normal running expenses; and we cannot gainsay the company's contention that, to live, it must collect sufficient income from its subscribers to pay the cost of keeping the plant up to date and pay the dividends of six percent on the money invested.

The letter of the Highway Commissioners to the telephone company contains the Commission's conclusion that subscribers to measured rate service and also many subscribers to the unlimited service are paying dearly for the service that they use, and that the only way to equalize the conditions, while extending the distance for the five-cent reduced toll rate, is to curtail the unlimited service of those who now receive a larger value than they pay for, whether the subscribers affected are special line business users or multi-party residence users. The figures brought out at the hearings show that this curtailment will affect a small minority of the service.

Important figures have been brought out at the hearings during the last four years, and in the reports of the accountants and engineers who have been investigating the company's accounts, property and processes of operation. These sufficiently indicate that the only way to bring about a general low price for telephone messages between central Boston and its suburbs is to follow the path that the Highway Commissioners are travelling. It would consequently be a misfortune to Boston to have the trial of these new rates set aside. Wakefield, Waltham and the other municipalities about central Boston want five-cent toll service into the centre. Boston and all the surrounding municipalities will profit from it.

Having started this important policy two years ago, the Highway Commissioners have proposed plans enabling the extension of the policy without dealing unjustly, it believes, with any users. The Commissioners believe that putting their plans into effect will cause a large increase in the company's business. The company holds the same opinion. If this anticipation is sustained by experience here, as appears to have been the case in other cities, the Commissioners ought soon to provide for another extension of the five-cent toll radius. This is foreshadowed in the experts' reports. It is understood that no exact knowledge exists in telephone circles to show how far a message may be transmitted for a cost not exceeding five cents, and the Commissioners should move cautiously. They now extend the five-cent distance to eight miles, compared with five miles formerly fixed upon. This more than doubles the area within the five-cent radius, and is probably as great an increase as judicious commissioners could make at one time in a field where experience is so limited as in telephony.

The Commissioners also fix the toll rate at five cents for messages crossing the borders of the suburban district to adjacent exchanges, which will be a boon to some of the bordering exchanges. The changes of two years ago were put into effect experimentally, and having proved desirable they have been continued. No backstep should be taken now by opposing the spirit of the Commissioners' recommendations: their rates should be put into effect and tried out.

SOMEWHAT COMPLICATED.

Four customers had called that morning. The dealer reflected that the order by mail would necessarily take time, so going to the long distance telephone he got his favorite jobber on the wire. This conversation ensued:

"Hello! Is this the Retailers Supply Company?"
"Yes."
"Who's talking?"
"Watt."
"What is your name?"
"Watt is my name."
"Yes. What is your name?"
"My name is Watt—Charles Watt."
"Oh! Charles Watt. Well, Watt, send me this order on this noon's express." (Here he reads order.)
"All right. Are you Schott?"
"No; I'm not shot nor half shot."
"I mean are you John Schott?"
"No, I'm Knott."
"Well, then, what is your name?"
"Will Knott."
"Why won't you?"
"Uh! My name is Will Knott of Knoxville. I want that order sent out on today's express, sure."
"Certainly, Knott. Good-by."

And Knott went back to the counter wondering whether Watt said he would or not or what.

But he got the goods.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

The School Department of the Daily Ledger is published every Thursday. It is not now confined to High school notes but includes the High, the Woodward, the public schools, the Parochial school, and other schools. The Daily Ledger invites the cooperation of teachers and pupils and also graduates and others to make this department interesting.

QUINCY HIGH.

Dr. Brayton who refereed the game with Cambridge Latin on Tuesday said that he had been to several college games ad refereed one, and in none of them had he seen better football than in Tuesday's game. And it certainly looked good to the ordinary spectator not a fumble and only three penalties for the two teams is a pretty good record. Dr. Brayton made an excellent referee, and it is to be hoped that he can be secured again. There were no disputes and his knowledge of the rules eliminated the possibility of delays.

Gore '08 made a 50-yard run in the Massachusetts Aggie's game last week. He received the ball on the kick off and brought it back nearly half the length of the field.

* * *

There was some good sportmanship in the game Tuesday. One of the Cambridge players was tackled and in falling injured the man who grabbed him. As soon as he could extricate himself the Cambridge man was at the side of his opponent doing what he could to help restore him.

* * *

H. Prout will be in the Quincy lineup before long. He will be out for practice tomorrow and probably next week will get into the game. Prout should strengthen the team considerably because he is fast and powerful.

* * *

Roy L. Sidelinger has returned to High school for post graduate work.

* * *

Loyal Safford was obliged to undergo an operation on his arm this week. He is recovering rapidly from its effects and will be himself again in a few day.

* * *

Arthur has great possibilities as a punter. Before the game Tuesday he was getting off 45 and 50 yard punts at every try. During the game he did not equal them, probably because there was little time to spare in getting the punts off at all. Before the season is over we may expect to hear him mentioned as one of the best in the interscholastic world.

* * *

Additions have been made to the football schedule and is now as follows:

Sept. 30—Weymouth High at Quincy.
Oct. 7—Abington High at Quincy.
Oct. 11—Revere High at Revere.
Oct. 14—Brockton High at Brockton.
Oct. 22—Dedham High at Dedham.
Oct. 25—South Boston High at Quincy.
Oct. 28—Melrose High at Quincy.
Nov. 1—Hyde Park High at Quincy.
Nov. 11—Hingham High at Quincy.
Nov. 19—Dorchester High at Dorchester.
Oct. 4—Holbrook High at Quincy.
Oct. 18—Open.
Nov. 4—Walpole High at Quincy.
Nov. 8—Open.

It is expected that games will be arranged with Brighton High and Roxbury Latin to fill the open dates.

The following graduates of Quincy High are now in collges. Undoubtedly the list is not complete, and the editor requests additions:

At Technology—Theodore Marceau, '07; Brewster Walker, '08; Hilding Carlson, '08; Gordon Jameson, '10; Alfred Hanson, '10; Richard Favorite, '10; and Stanley Churchill, '10.

At Tufts College (Medical)—Stanley Duncan, '07; Harold Marsh '09.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

Woodward has sent a number of girls to the various colleges during the past few years. Among those who return this fall are the following:

Ethel G. Hersey, '07, Wellesley '11.
Marion E. Johnson, '09, Wellesley '13.
Irene C. Dasha, '09, Wellesley '13.
Esther U. Sidelinger '07, Radcliffe '12.
Katherine Moran, '08, Radcliffe '14.
Helen Fitzgerald, '08, Radcliffe '14.
Marguerite Davis, '06, Vassar '12.
Alice Dinegan, '09, Vassar '13.
Helen K. Horton, '06, Simmons '13.
Elizabeth G. Pattee, '09, passed her examinations for Massachusetts Institute of Technology but will not enter until next year.

A very happy surprise came recently to Mr. Horace W. Rice the principal of Woodward Institute. He has been obliged to keep his family in Natick until the house here can be made ready for him. When he went home one Friday not long since, the surprise was in store for him. The class of '09 of the Natick High school went to his home enforce and all spent a delightful evening with games and reminiscences Before the party broke up, Mr. Rice was presented with a beautiful oak desk chair. The Natick people seem very reluctant to part with Mr. Rice but what is their loss is Quincy's gain and thus our sympathy for Natick is tempered by a feeling of satisfaction with our own good fortune.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

The number of modern improvements at the St. John's school seem s to be inexhaustible. The patent bubbling fountains and the new arrangement of coat rooms have been mentioned. The telephone system is very conveniently arranged. Each telephone is a central for all the other rooms in the building. There are little cards bearing the names of the sisters in charge of the different rooms. By inserting the plug in the hole opposite a name connection is made with the room in which that person is located. The rooms are also aquipped with electric clocks which are controlled by the master clock in the office of the Sister Superior.

The ventilating system is the best that can be secured. In the basement there are cold air closets opening outdoors which furnish the fresh air for the rooms. The air is conducted to the different rooms by means of shafts. On the side, opposite these, there are other shafts for conducting the warm air out. These lead to the roof. By meaus ofthe double system the air is kept in circulation all the time. In winter the cold air can be heated so that it will be warm but still fresh when it reaches the rooms.

The desks and chairs for the teachers have arrived. There has been delay in getting the equipment for the two rooms for scholars, inasmuch as it is a special order, and more time will be required in getting it out. By the first of the week it is expected that they will have arrived, and it will be a matter of only a day or two after that when the folding chairs can be set aside and the new rooms occupied.

The parochial school at Stoneham is built of stone with marble and copper trimmings and has a slate roof. The architect was Charles R. Greco of Boston. Rev. William J. Millerick is the pastor of St. Patricks parish.

GRADED SCHOOLS.

Sanitary drinking fountains have been placed in the corridors of the Willard school.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth McNeal, who has been out owing to the death of her brother, has resumed her duties in grade five at the Willard.

Miss Anne M. Cahill has now returned being absent from her duties in grade two at the Willard for several days owing to the illness and death of her mother.

* * *

On Saturday T. B. Pollard of the Washington school is going with a party of his teachers to Lawrence. They will have dinner there and spend the afternoon in a drive through the towns of Andover and North Andover. These are two very beautiful towns specially just at this time when the autumn foliage is in its glory.

* * *

The eighth grade of the Washington now numbers fifty-one pupils, the largest in the history of the school. All grades below the seventh are smaller than usual.

* * *

An opaque projector, which is a combined stereopticon and reflectorscope has been ordered this week for the Coddington school. The money for this purchase was raised last year by means of the operetta "Golden Hair" and a candy sale. The machine is one of the best of its kind and is expected to be a source of both pleasure and profit.

* * *

A number of graduates of the class of 1910 have visited the Coddington school the past week.

* * *

Three of the four combined grades which will occupy the Atherton Hough school have been organized and are working with their regular teachers in the Coddington school building.

* * *

Charles H. Bryant of Beach street has assumed the duties of janitors at the Massachusetts Fields school.

* * *

Miss Elsie Turner,the sixth grade teacher at the Cranch, has been in Nantucket attending the wedding of Miss Joy, a former teacher in the school.

* * *

The class pin committee of the Cranch school, composed of eight grade scholars, has been chosen. It has been decided that this year a permanent design will be selected. Grace Miller, Herbert Reis and Earl Bates are on the committee.

* * *

Miss Rothwell has been transferred from the second to the seventh grade, in accordance with the regular line of promotion.

* * *

The class pin committee of the Adams school, is considering a number of designs from which they will choose a permanent design for the pin.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Weymouth High team will come to Quincy tomorrow for their first game under the new rules. The team has been practicing for two weeks under three coaches, Humphrey, Nolan and Dr. Crocker. There are eight veterans on the team and a number of likely looking freshmen and sophomores are trying out for the three open positions. Smith , the freshman centre, is practically sure of his position, however, so there are a dozen men fighting for two places. The team that will meet Quincy High tomorrow will be light but scrappy.

The New England Conservatory of Music offers a free scholarship for one year in the Vocal Normal department to young men and women of limited means. The requirements are that the applicants should have good voices and natural musical ability.

English High seems to be specializing in youngest pupils. The son of ex-Alderman Thomas J. Giblin was landed for his extreme youth and scholastic attainments a few days ago. And now another William Waldstein, aged 11 years and 9 months, comes to the front as the youngest pupil. But not content with this personal glory, William has called attention to the fact that his brother Peter graduated at the age of 15. Quincy's youngest entering pupil this year is 12 years and 10 months. O tempora! O mores! Our reputation is at stake.

The free evening schools of the City of Quincy will open on Monday evening. Already a large number have signified their intention of entering.

* * *

The question of athletic control is an important one to every school or college. If the faculty have full control the students raise objections partly on principle and partly because there are faults in faculty jurisdiction. The ideal condition and the one which will probably be put into practice in Quincy is joint control by a committee composed of students and faculty. In New Bedford two pupils from each class work in conjuction with two members of the faculty. In Melrose one member from each class and two or three from the faculty work in connection with an alumni advisory board. A small committee which is efficient can get the best results and the idea of one representative from each class and two faculty members seems to be the best, all things considered. The freshman member will gain much although he may not have much to say, and the next year his efficiency will be so much the greater. The classes as a whole will take more interest in the executive side of athletics, also if they have a representative on the board.

* * *

A course in wireless telegraphy will be given at the Everett free evening school. A sub-master of the High school will be in charge. Apparatus is already installed in the school building for the use of day pupils taking the course. A graduate of the school who is a wireless expert will assist the sub-master in running the course.

ELOPES WITH SHOW GIRL

Cupid Overcomes Objections to Rich Young Man's Choice

New York, Sept. 29.—Another show girl has married wealth. She is Flora Ross, known on the stage as Ruth Elton, formerly a member of the Havana Musical Comedy company.

Her husband is Edwin C. Feigenspan, 24, son and heir of the late Christian Feigenspan, a brewer of Newark, N. J. The son took charge of the brewery several months ago.

Objection was made to Feigenspan's marrying on the ground that he was too young, it was said, so he took the matter into his own hands, married quickly and sailed for Europe.

SHILOH COLONY FOR SALE

Important Change In Conduct of Holy Ghost and Us Society

Portland, Me., Sept. 29.—Shiloh, the picturesque colony at Durham of the Holy Ghost and Us society, is to be abandoned as headquarters for the sect by Rev. Frank W. Sandford and his followers, and they are to take up their communistic abode on a lonely island located in mid ocean.

Shiloh, with its great colony building and adjoining farm property, is for sale. In what quarter of the world the new colony is to be located is not known. The Holy Ghost and Us followers are to be transported there in the vessels of the society's fleet.

—What is the use of putting garbage outdoors and then letting flies bring it back ? Garbage-cans should be of metal ,they should be emptied every day at least; they should be kept tightly covered, and should be scrupuously cleaned every twenty-four hours. This is not a difficult task. A sauce-pan of boiling water and a lump of washing-soda will do it in a moment ,or a fire made with a few sheets of old newspaper in the bottom of the can and allowed to burn itself out will disinfect and destroy all odor immediately.

The famous New York Mathusheck Pianos are now for sale at Kincaides—Cash or easy payments.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much Of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street. Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erecteld June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse. Admission may be secured on application to W. E Dewhurst, sexton, 3 Maple street. A fee is asked for attendance, etc.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

Presidents Adams Mansion.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants Not open to public.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Dorothy Q. House.

Hancock street, corner Butler road Quincy, Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Owned by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Open free to the public on Saturdays, from 11 A. M., until 4 P. M Other days admission charged.

Myles Standish Cairn.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

Somebody Had.

The peerless statesman then arose;
His slanderers he defied.
He said, as everybody knows,
Somebody 'd lied.

The charge against his honor he—
Well, he almost denied,
But still insisted savagely
Somebody 'd lied.

Meanwhile the wires from the west
Were telling on the side
About a statesman who'd confessed
Somebody lied!

—Chicago Tribune.

Gone For Good.

Some folks in foreign lands have their own way of determining whether their relatives who have migrated to this land of ours have become hopelessly Americanized. One old lady in Germany reached her conclusion in a way that can be appreciated only by those who know the type of the German butter dish, deep as a bowl, and the German reverence therefor. Last week her granddaughter in New York received this sad lament:

"You will never come back. You are lost to us. Hans (a cousin) arrived here from New York on Monday and reports that you have even given up our deep German butter dishes and are using those shallow little plates that Americans like."—New York Times.

BRIEFS

Population 32,642.

A big gain in population, and a better percentage than most of the Massachusetts cities and towns.

Friends of Clarence Cassidy of Winthrop avenue will be pleased to learn of his recovery from an attack of typhoid fever.

Central garage now under construction at corner of Washington and Pond streets will be open for business in a few weeks.

Exterior alterations are being made to the residence corner of Beach and Kemper streets, recently purchased by James E. Bliss.

The Men's club of St. Chrysostom's church will open its season on on-Monday evening when annual meeting and election of officrs will take place.

About 300 boys and girls have been confirmed this week at Saint John's church. The division of the sexes is about equal with possibly a few more girls than boys.

Unity circle of King's Daughters will give its annual reception to "older friends" on Saturday at the hospitable residence of Mrs. E. W. Sheppard of Greenleaf street.

An entertainment in aid of the blind will be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Methodist church on Monday evening when the "Blind Trio" will contribute a program of music and readings.

The meeting of the South Quincy Extension club was held at Y. M. C. A. Wednesday. Over 100 enthusiasts were present. The entertainers were better and funnier than ever and were greeted very warmly by the audience. The formation of the Boy Scouts appealed very strongly to all those present

Thursday night is the big night for Employed Boys at the Y. M. C. A. There will be a crack-a-jack entertainment by Giles and Wheeler of Boston, and a swim in the new pool for every fellow present. Every employed boy in the city ought to be there and have the time of his life. Program begins promptly at 7.30.

JAMES IN THE COUNTRY.

A ten-year-old lad by the name of James something had his first glimpse of country life this year. He learned a lot of new things about what a cow or a sheep or a colt will do or will not do under a given set of circumstances, but he got the greatest surprise of his rural sojourn when he walked by a swampy place one morning and saw a bunch of cat tails growing.

He took one more look to make sure he saw aright and then he broke into a lope for the farmhouse.

"Say," he yelled out excitedly at his farm host, "I never knowed them things growed on long stems like that! I've e't a lot of 'em, but I never seen 'em growing before. Do they all grow that a way?"

The farmer asked him what he was talking about.

"Why, them sausages!" he replied. "Ain't you noticed 'em?"

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house. Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes death by fire.

(Started Sept. 14.)

Was it in partial reparation for the rapine, the swindling and stealing dealt out by her pilgrim forefathers to the Indian of the east that Aunt Agnes had become the vehement champion of the Indian of the west? President of a famous peace society was she and secretary of the Standish branch of the Friends of the Red Man—a race whom the original and redoubtable Miles had spitted and skewered and shot without stint or discrimination. And now was Aunt Agnes hastening westward with her brother to reclaim their one ewe lamb from the wolf pack of the wilds and incidentally to see for herself something of the haunts and habits of the red brother, in whose behalf these last six months her voice had been uplifted time and again.

Sumter came in, cheery and laughing, for the late family breakfast. Guard mounting was long over, but he had been detained by the colonel.

"It is almost comical," said he, "to see Button's delight in those letters in the New York papers. He's as curious now to know the author of those as he was furious at the supposed author of the others."

"What others?" faltered Miriam Arnold.

"Some bitter attacks on him that appeared in the Boston and Philadelphia papers about that night surprise of Lone Wolf's village—the one he accused Mr. Lanier of having started."

"Accused Mr. Lanier!" And Miriam Arnold, with consternation in her voice, was half rising from the table.

"I had thought it best to say nothing to you about it, Miriam, dear," said Mrs. Sumter gently.

"But, Mrs. Sumter—captain!" interrupted Miriam, wild eyed. "Do you mean Colonel Button accused Mr. Lanier of those letters?"

"That was the backbone of his grievance against Lanier," said Sumter. "Why?"

"And he didn't deny it—didn't tell what he knew?"

"Denied it, yes, but refused to tell what he knew—said it came in such a way he could not tell. Why, Miriam, what do you know?"

For a moment it looked as though she were on the verge of a hysterical breakdown. Kate sprang to her side and threw an arm around her, but with gallant effort she regained self control.

"I know just who wrote those wicked stories, and I told Mr. Lanier, and I know—and I'm ashamed I ever had to know—who first told them."

CHAPTER VIII.

STANNARD had been summoned to Omaha, much to Button's curiosity and disquiet. Mrs. Stannard was none the less radiant. A romance was unfolding right under her roof. Her patient was sitting up in a sunshiny parlor. At just about 4 p. m., when most people were gone, Mrs. Sumter came quietly, cheerily, convoying her two girls, and presently Bob Lanier was smiling into the eyes of Miriam Arnold.

Not since the night of the fire had he set eyes on her. Miriam looked as though she had been seriously ill. Kate Sumter had given him only hurried and almost embarrassed words of greeting. Mrs. Sumter, however, had extended both her hands in an impulse of loyal liking and friendship, and it is doubtful if Bob even saw the daughter's face. His eyes had flitted almost instantly to Miriam Arnold's. A few minutes of swift, purposeless chat ensued, Mrs. Stannard and Mrs. Sumter doing most of it. Then somehow three women seemed to drift away and become engrossed in matters of their own over by the Navajo covered lounge, and then Miriam lifted up her eyes and looked one moment into the young soldier's face.

"It's the first chance I've had to thank you for the dance we didn't finish," said he, noting with a thrill the tremor of the little hand that fluttered for that moment in his grasp.

"Do you think it a thing to be thankful for? I don't."

"I wouldn't have lost it for a month's pay."

"How very much more than that you may lose!" said she. "Do you think I could have danced with you if I had dreamed what—what you were doing?"

"You were dancing like a dream," said he. "Do you mean I was dancing like a nightmare?"

"You were doing what was sure to involve you in grave trouble, and it wasn't kind to me, Mr. Lanier."

"I'm all contrition for the anxiety it caused you, Miss Miriam, and for absolutely nothing else. I wish you to know that I did nothing unusual. Colonel Button was angry with me for a very different matter."

One moment she was silent. Then, with lips that quivered in spite of her effort—a quiver that he saw and that set his heart to bounding madly—with lowered voice she hurried on: "And that, too, involves me or mine. And you"—then uplifting her swimming eyes—"you would not tell."

And then the barrier of his pride was swept away.

"Miriam!" he cried, his hands eagerly seeking and seizing hers, only faintly resisting. "There was no need to tell." He was lifting her hands to his heart, and as he drew them he was drawing her. She had to come, her long, curling lashes sweeping the soft cheeks, now once more blushing like the dawn. "Oh, Mr. Lanier!" he heard her murmur as though pleading and warning. Then his dark eyes, glowing and rejoiceful, fastened on hers, and quick and fervent came the next words: "There is only one thing that need be told—that must be told, because I've just been brimming over with it all these weeks" (ah, how the bonny head was drooping now, but drooping toward him), "and now I can keep it back no longer. Miriam, Miriam, I love you—I love you! Have you nothing to tell me?"

One instant of thrilling suspense, then with a sob welling up from her burdened heart the barrier of her pride and reserve went as his had gone a moment ago. "Oh, you know—you know it! Who hasn't known it since that awful night?" she cried and then found herself folded, weeping uncontrollably, almost deliriously, in his arms, his lips raining kisses on the warm, wet cheeks. A moment he held her closely wrapped to his heart, then gradually, yet with irresistible power, turned upward the tear stained, blushing, exquisite face so that he could feast his eyes upon her beauty. Then with joy unutterable his lips sank upon the soft, quivering mouth in the first love kiss she had ever known, and their troubles vanished into heaven at the touch.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

—The "Boy Scout" movement is gaining ground daily in this country and more particularly in Greater Boston, where it is recognized that anything which will give the boys the chance to secure exercise in the open air, under proper supervision and with surroundings that make for clean lives and clean minds, is worthy of support. Prominent army and naval officers, both in this country and abroad, have offered their services as drill masters. Boys by the hundreds are enrolling themselves in the ranks and are earnestly taking up the work of training the youth, not only in the practice of arms, but in the way of living that makes good citizens. It is well that the movement be encouraged, just as it is here in Framingham. As a supplement to the playground associations and the various devices for keeping boys in the open air, it is invaluable. Anything which tends to teach a boy honesty, cleanliness and right ways of thinking and living is deserving o fthe heartiest support.—South Framingham News.

CONDITIONS IN SPIRIT WORLD

Curious Sidelights In Widow's Suit to Break Will

SPOOKS ENJOY THEMSELVES

Spend Pleasant Social Evenings, Enjoy Tittle-Tattle, and Even Take Much Interest In Mundane Politics—Medium Testifies That Her Powers Were Developed Under Tutelage of Millionaire Thompson

New York, Sept. 29.—Social life in spookdom will figure in the briefs which counsel on both sides have begun to prepare in the suit of Mrs. Mabelle Thompson to have the will of her husband, Robert H. Thompson, set aside. She was cut off, she says, because of letters sent from the spirit world by Thompson's first wife.

Most of these ghostly missives were put into material form by Mrs. Marion A. Funk on any scrap of paper which came handy, and then transcribed into a little blue covered book by Thompson. Briefs must be submitted by counsel in ten days to Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn, who has been listening to the queer case.

According to Mrs. Funk's testimony, spooks are a pretty jolly set of good fellows and enjoy tea and tittle-tattle as well as they did before they disappeared from the material world. A meeting of ghosts as she described them, would be really quite a comfy little affair.

They even take a good deal of interest in mundane politics. Said one ghost one night through Mrs. Funk's pencil: "You take a girl like Marion for instance; she could have no control over, say President Roosevelt, because his mind is not in trend with hers. Her nature differs from his. So it is here; some natures are too practical to give themselves to this work."

"Really, dear," remarked another ghostly visitor, "you would laugh if you could see the time we are having around you tonight."

"We are all here tonight," chirped another. "'Muzzy' (Thompson's first wife) stands near you and mother and father stand between. James is standing by Gussie. James Linton has come to see little Marion. God bless Bob. Where is he, anyhow? You know my life, old man. It was not a success. Well, I chased the little Mella away, anyhow."

At other times messages were received that the spooks "would drop around to spend a social evening."

By the terms of Thompson's will all his $1,000,000 property was given to his two sons by his first wife and no provision made for his widow.

Mrs. Funk testified that her powers as a "medium" were developed under the tutelage of Thompson. Most of the "Muzzy" communications read give advice to Thompson, although there were a good many "social notes."

Mrs. Thompson followed Mrs. Funk on the stand. She said that in 1908 she was a guest at Thompson's ranch near Passadena. It was about this time that "Muzzy" first began to chide her husband for falling from his high ideals through Mrs. Funk. Mrs. Thompson said that she attended some of the seances held by Mrs. Funk at which these communications were alleged to have been received.

Surrogate Ketcham, who has listened to all the spirit testimony with a humorous twist of the mouth, said when the evidence was all in:

"I am not deciding this case now. Both sides may have ten days in which to submit briefs. But I do not see that it has been proved that the spiritualistic seances influenced Thompson in making his will. I should say, rather, that these ghostly manifestations tended to deter him from marrying, and that was all."

SONS CUT OFF IN WILL

Evangelist's Widow Says They Received More Than Their Share

New York, Sept. 29.—The will of Frances V. Sankey, widow of Ira D. Sankey, the famous evangelist, was filed for probate here, disposing of an estate valued at about $70,000. It expressly provides that none of the property shall go to her sons, John E. Sankey and Ira A. Sankey, stating that they have already received more than their share of their father's estate.

The grandchildren, Grace and Ira A. Sankey, Jr., are remembered, and several friends and charitable institutions will receive bequests.

Mill Hands Out of Work

Sturbridge, Mass., Sept. 29.—The Fiskedale mills, the principal industry of the town, are to be stripped and shut down for an indefinite period. There are two mills employing about 350 hands and having a weekly payroll of nearly $3000.

High Prices For Rats

Odessa, Sept. 29.—An autopsy has established a case of pulmonary plague here. The prefect of police has offered $7.50 for the destruction of any rat which, on examination, proves to have been plague stricken.

Danderine
Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips."
Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

Cut This Out — FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Quincy People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Quincy who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Quincy. Here's Quincy testimony:

Charles Somers, 17 Newcombe Place, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to make known to other kidney sufferers, the benefit I received from Doan's Kidney Pills. I had lame back as the result of weak kidneys, for about ten years. I could get no relief from the many remedies I tried and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before long this remedy completely cured me. I shall always praise Doan's Kidney Pills.

Slate of Progressives Is Successful at Saratoga

STIMSON HEADS THE TICKET

Bennet's Determined Campaign For Nomination For Governor Carried on to the End, but He Is Swamped—Nominee Has Gained Fame as Special Counsel For National Government—Roosevelt Forces Dictate Platform and Now Control Party Machinery In Empire State

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The Republican state convention last evening nominated Henry L. Stimson of New York as its candidate for governor. The nomination of Stimson was one more victory for Theodore Roosevelt, who personally led the fight for the nomination of his candidate, completing the unbroken series of triumphs from the moment the convention was called to order Tuesday afternoon until its final adjournment.

The vote for governor stood as follows: Henry L. Stimson, 664; William S. Bennet of New York, 242; Thomas B. Dunn of Rochester, 58; James J. McEwan of Albany, 28; scattering, 23.

The balance of the ticket follows: For lieutenant governor, Edward Schoeneck of Syracuse; secretary of state, Samuel S. Koenig of New York (renominated); state comptroller, James Thompson of Valley Falls; state treasurer, Thomas F. Fennell of Elmira; state engineer, Frank M. Williams of Oneida (renominated); attorney geeeral, Edward B. O'Malley of Buffalo (renominated); associate judge of the court of appeals, Irving G. Vann of Syracuse (renominated).

The slate as made up by Roosevelt, Root and their advisers, went through without a hitch. With the exception of the nominations for governor and comptroller, there were no contests. Representative Bennet, who had been conducting the only open campaign for the nomination for governor, kept up his efforts to the end, and his persistency and strength with the New York delegation threatened to break the slate.

At the close of the convention James S. Wadsworth, Jr., speaker of the assembly, announced his withdrawal from the legislature.

Roosevelt Men In Control

The close of the convention found the Roosevelt forces in complete control of the situation. It was the election of Roosevelt as temporary chairman over Vice President Sherman which decided the issue between Roosevelt and the organization, but the Old Guard kept up its opposition grimly until the end.

After the first rout of the organization came Roosevelt's dramatic and successful strike for the adoption of the platform of the progressives and his final victory in the nomination of Stimson.

By the time the vote was taken, the strength of the organization had been much dissipated. Having no candidate on whom to centre, the organization threw the bulk of its vote to Bennet. As the result, the vote for gubernatorial candidate followed the same division between progressives and the Old Guard as the vote for temporary chairman. There were some important exceptions, however. Monroe's 38 votes were cast for Dunn and Albany's 28 for McEwan. Bennet received 99 votes from the New York delegation, or more than half, whereas Sherman had only 26. Ward's delegation of 33 from Westchester county voted for Stimson.

Just before the convention came to an end the new state committee was announced. The list contained several new names and it was assumed that the progressives would have control, turning over to the Roosevelt forces the party machinery.

Chairman Woodruff, who failed of re-election in his own district, was elected from the Second district. The election of a chairman from among the progressives in place of Woodruff is expected, although no idea could be gained as to who he will be.

Bennet Causes Some Worry

Mr. Bennet's determined campaign for the nomination for governor led to a second consultation after the slate had been agreed upon. The convention adjourned in the middle of the afternoon and for three hours the leaders canvassed the field once more in the idea that they might decide on an up-state man who would receive the united vote of the New York delegation. Roosevelt asked Bennet to withdraw, but the congressman refused to do so.

Messrs. Roosevelt and Root, the main figures in the conference, decided to stand by the slate, and Roosevelt agreed to make the nominating speech in place of Otto T. Bannard of New York, who had originally been selected. The meeting broke up, and shortly after 6 o'clock Roosevelt started back for the convention hall.

Kingsbury Foster nominated Bennet, and after the nomination had been seconded Roosevelt went to the platform to make his last speech of the convention. He said that he held Bennet in high regard, but that he believed Stimson the proper nominee. He described what Stimson had done as prosecutor of the Sugar Trust, and as he finished his speech the delegates stood up and cheered.

The platform indorses President Taft's administration, commends Hughes as governor, declares against graft in public life, promises to work for direct nominations, stands for conservation with state rights, deplores frauds at primary elections, favors work to prevent tuberculosis and demands economy in state expenditures.

Stimson Has Fine Record

Henry Lewis Stimson first came into national prominence as the special counsel for the government in the prosecution of Charles W. Morse.

To him is given the credit for the success of the government's case against the banker, whose appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals will be argued this coming spring.

Not only did he secure the conviction of Morse, but he also successfully prosecuted Alfred H. Curtis, president of the National Bank of North America, of which Morse was vice president. Morse is serving his fifteen-year sentence in Georgia, but Judge Hough suspended Curtis' sentence for five years.

Mr. Stimson had been appointed to the position of United States attorney by Roosevelt in January, 1906. He had been thirty-nine months in office when he won fame by his prosecution of the Sugar Trust and the New York Central railroad and the Edward H. Harriman interests. Before he had finished he had obtained the imposition of fines aggregating nearly $400,000.

Perhaps the most important of his successes was the prosecution of the Sugar Trust for fraudulent weighing of imported sugar. This case alone resulted in the recovery of more than $2,000,000 in duties by the government.

Mr. Stimson is 43 years old. He is a New Yorker by birth, with a college education at Yale. He studied law at the Harvard law school. He returned to New York in 1890 and was admitted to the bar. In 1893 he was married to Miss Mabel W. White of New Haven.

Taft Wires Best Wishes

Washington, Sept. 29.—President Taft, upon learning of the nomination of Henry L. Stimson for governor of New York, sent the following telegram of congratulation to Stimson:

"It gives me the greatest pleasure to hear that you have been chosen as the Republican candidate for governor of New York. I sincerely hope and believe that you will be elected. You certainly will be elected if the people of New York wish to have as their next governor a citizen of the utmost civic courage and disinterested patriotism, a lawyer of eminent ability and a man of the highest character."

A flood of congratulatory telegrams from friends in official life here followed that of the president.

NASON DEFEATS PETERS

Lodge Sentiment Strong In Other Districts of Bay State

Boston, Sept. 29.—State Senator Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill, sworn enemy of the Republican state machine and bitter opponent of Senator Lodge, swept the Republican primaries in the Fourth Essex district yesterday. Nason favors Congressman Ames for United States senator.

So decisive was the defeat administered to W. S. Peters, drafted from the office of district attorney on account of his personal popularity and political prestige, that Nason's followers are claiming that Peters will not have a solitary vote in the convention to nominate the senator from the district.

An anti-Lodge Republican was chose by Lynn voters to represent one of the Essex districts in the house, but most of the other victories went to the Lodge forces.

Latham Makes High Speed

Paris, Sept. 29.—Hubert Latham, in a trial flight with his new 100 horse-power monoplane, developed a speed of from sixty to seventy miles an hour without the full power of the motor having been utilized.

OTHER BOOMS TO THE FRONT

Gaynor Positively Refuses to Consider Gubernatorial Race

EIGHT CANDIDATES IN FIELD

Shepard of New York and Havens of Rochester Appear to Have Lead For Head of Democratic Ticket In Empire State—Sulzer's Boom Somewhat Noisy, but Not Considered Very Strong

New York, Sept. 29.—Much impetus has been given to the booms of other candidates, especially that of Edward M. Shepard of New York, for the Democratic nomination for governor, by the positive withdrawal of Mayor Gaynor from the consideration of the delegates.

The letter of Mayor Gaynor has smashed the Democratic slate, thrown the delegates into uncertainty and upset all calculations. Up to the announcement of the Gaynor letter it had been expected everywhere that the mayor of New York would be nominated and that his heading of the ticket would insure success for the Democratic party.

The boom of Representative Havens of Rochester, with the backing of Thomas W. Finucane, is regarded as the most formidable outside that of Shepard's. The supporters of Shepard are in dread of it. Finucane and Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall are warm friends. Because of this friendship there is a feeling in some quarters that the Rochester man will be nominated. If Murphy can be influenced by Finucane it is believed that he will.

The Sulzer boom is noisy but not considered so strong as that of Shepard and Havens. Sulzer said he would not have become a candidate for the nomination but for the fact that Gaynor told him months ago that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances.

Thomas M. Osborne of Auburn has opened headquarters here. He is a candidate for the nomination. City Judge Richard Drummond of Auburn will present his name for first place on the ticket. Osborne is the chairman of the Democratic league.

John A. Bensel and Judge Gerard of the supreme court are mentioned as possible candidates. Martin H. Glynn of Albany, one time state controller, is also mentioned. There are about eight candidates altogether.

The letter addressed to James Creelman, in which Gaynor declares he will not accept a nomination for governor, is as follows:

"I am writing a letter to Chairman Dix stating that I am not a candidate for nomination for governor and refuse to become such.

"I do this to remove all doubt on the subject which may have arisen by reason of irresponsible statements which I am informed are being circulated. No utterance of mine has put the matter in doubt. Some have said to me that the convention may nominate me although I am not a candidate. It seems to me that it might appear vain and egotistical for me to assume in my letter to Mr. Dix that that extraordinary thing might happen. I therefore write this supplemental letter to you to take to Rochester and show there so as to prevent my nomination if it should appear to be imminent.

"Make it plain that if nominated I would decline to accept. I could not abandon to their fate the splendid men whom I have appointed to office and who are working so hard for good government, nor could I abandon the people of the city of New York after so short a service.

"You may make this letter public in advance of going to Rochester if in your judgment you think the situation calls for it. But do not do so unless it be plainly necessary. Every honest man will understand me."

Supply of Lynn Baby's Friendly Neighbors Is Exhausted

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 29.—Cormoto Gambole, 6 months old, was committed to the Home for Homeless Children by Judge Lummus, the child's mother having disappeared.

Baby Gambole has been cared for by neighbors for the past two weeks. A neighbor would take him for a night or two and then pass him along to another neighbor. The supply of neighbors ran out yesterday.

Mrs. Gambole has been traced to Chicago, according to Police Chief Corson, and there the trail was lost.

Goodwin Leaves Biddeford Bank

Biddefrod, Me., Sept. 29.—Harry H. Goodwin, assistant treasurer of the York County Savings bank, which was closed by the alleged embezzlement by former Treasurer Ingersoll, tendered his resignation and it was accepted by the trustees.

Selectman Killed by Train

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., Sept. 29.—Struck by an express train here, David D. Nye, chairman of the board of selectmen of the town of Bourne, was instantly killed. For the past twenty-five years Nye, who was 75, has been a selectman.

WITH $300,000 TO SPEND

Eighteen Thousand Jackies to Have Shore Leave at New York

New York, Sept. 29.—When the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet steamed into port, joining the seven other battleships now at anchor, there were 18,000 sailors here, 8000 of whom will be allowed shore leave every day. The men have just been paid off and will have about $300,000 to spend during their stay here.

The Connecticut, the flagship of Rear Admiral Schroeder, commander-in-chief of the fleet; the Michigan, the South Carolina, the Delaware, the Louisiana, the Kansas and the New Hampshire arrived Tuesday. The Minnesota, the Vermont, the Mississippi and the Idaho arrived last evening.

The Idaho won the fleet trophy at battle practice. The Vermont had held the trophy, having won it from the Tennessee.

LARGE AREA DEPOPULATED

Earthquakes In Arizona Are Growing In Violence and Magnitude

Flagstaff, Ariz., Sept. 29.—A territory fifty miles square, extending from here to the Grand Canon of the Colorado river, is practically depopulated because of earthquakes and rumblings which have greatly increased in magnitude and violence.

Indians, of whom there were many in the region, fled when the earthquakes began, terrified by the sinster import which they gave to the cracking of the ground. Tribal tales of the ancient activities of craters now burned out, of which there are more than fifty in the region, hastened their flight. The white men remained until their houses fell about them.

The whole district is of volcanic origin. The present phenomena are attributed to a slipping of the earth's crust.

LONG-CONTINUED PROTEST HEEDED

Chief Peters of Bay State Cattle Bureau Is Ousted

Boston, Sept. 29.—Dr. Austin Peters, chief of the state cattle bureau, was refused reappointment when Governor Draper sent to the executive council the nomination of Fred F. Walker of Burlington as Peters' successor.

The appointment of Walker is the first indication that Peters was to be replaced. The former head of the cattle bureau has been under fire by the farmers, cattle men and dog breeders in the state for the past few years. The governor's action is taken as a recognition of their position.

Mr. Walker is considered an expert in the raising of garden produce and live stock. He is the proprietor of the Walker farm in Burlington and his herd of pure bred Holsteins and Jerseys ranks with the best in the state. He served in the legislature in 1906.

HERO MEDALS FOR TEN

Oilers on Battleship Risked Their Lives to Save Shipmates

Washington, Sept. 29.—Ten oilers of the navy were awarded medals of honor and gratuities of money by the navy department for heroic conduct in rescuing comrades and putting out the oil fire in the boiler room of the battleship North Dakota recently, in which three men lost their lives. The men are:

Thomas Davis, John J. Quinlan, George F. Ellis, Arnold J. Smith, Thomas Stanton, Carl Westa, Patrick Reid, August Holtz, Charles C. Roberts and Harry Lipscomb.

These men went into the boiler room during the fire, hauled the fires in the furnace and took all precautions to prevent a boiler explosion. Then they searched for and carried out the bodies of the dead men.

Gebhard Once Enjoyed Fat Income of $125,000 a Year

New York, Sept. 29.—The will of Frederick Gebhard, one time society leader and club man, as filed here, gives the value of his estate at "less than $10,000," although at one time Gebhard enjoyed an income of $125,000 a year.

The will, dated June 28, 1905, makes no mention of Gebhard's wife, who was Marie Wilson, one of the original "Floradora Girls." The entire estate is left to his sister, Mrs. Mary I. Neilson of this city. The widow lives in Washington. Gebhard died Sept. 8 at Garden City, L. I.

Albani and Gye.

The story of Mme. Albani's first London engagement is as follows: Colonel Mapleson heard of her singing at a theater at Malta, and, thinking that she would be successful, he made her an offer through an agent of a contract to sing in Her Majesty's theater. She agreed to it and went to London, but on arriving there she told the cabman to drive her to the Italian opera house. He, instead of going to Her Majesty's, took her to Covent Garden, which was also devoted to Italian opera. She was shown up to the manager's office and stated that she had come to sign the contract which Mr. Mapleson had offered her. Mr. Gye, thinking to play a joke on his rival, Mapleson, made out a contract, and Albani signed it. Mr. Gye then told her that he was not Colonel Mapleson, but that he could do much better by her. He offered to tear up the contract if she liked, but told her that Nilsson was singing at Her Majesty's and would brook no rival. Albani decided to let the contract stand and thus became one of the stars of Covent Gardens, eventually marrying the son of Mr. Gye.

The Lost Umbrella.

"I have been coming here for my lunch for years, but never again," said a man to the head waiter of a downtown restaurant recently. "Sorry," began the waiter. "Sorry nothing. I left the umbrella here not five minutes ago, there was no one near our table, and the waiter must have seen it." "If we find it"— "Find it? It is found, I tell you, and I'll have it now or you'll never see me here again." The man, flushed with excitement, was walking away when he was hailed by a man who had entered by the rear door: "Say, Frank, is this your umbrella? I picked it up when we finished lunch. Glad you were still here." "Here, but not still," the head waiter whispered. "The umbrella has been found, but our customer has been lost for a few days. He'll be ashamed to come in for a little while."—New York Tribune.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pettengill of Revere road have returned from a month's sojourn at Haines Landing, Maine.

Alton E. Briggs, who spoke at the Y. M. C. A. last winter, has been renominated for the board of control at Chelsea.

Miss Ida L. Thomas of Mechanic street is attending the State C. E. convention in Springfield as a delegate from the East Norfolk union.

Mrs. J. J. Crain has been ill in Newport for the past six weeks and on account of so much illness there, had to send to Quincy for a nurse. Mrs. Crain returned Wednesday to her home at 59 Bigelow street, where she is convalescing under the care of Dr. Ellsworth and Mrs. Bennette, the nurse.

George F. Casford and Miss Florence L. Hersey, two well known Quincy young people, were quietly married Wednesday evening. The bride was attended by her mother, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. R. E. Armstrong of Christ church. After a wedding trip to New York and Washington they will reside at 467 Hancock street, where they will be at home after Oct. 20.

Great credit is due Richard H. Moyle for his kindness and the manner in which he conducted the morning service at Hall Place M. E. church last Sunday in the absence of the pastor through illness. Mr. Moyle preached from the text found in Acts 8-1, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you," and without notes or any other preparation, preached an instructive and helpful sermon. His great kindness is appreciated by all who were present at the morning service and who also enjoyed it.

A clear sky today.

The elm and maple leaves are falling in large quantities.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Walker of Granite street, left this week on the Hudson River excursion to New York.

Registration in the Wollaston ward Friday evening. It is open to the whole city.

James H. Vahey claims seven delegates from Quincy pledged to him for Governor.

Willis Middleton and Alfred Brown of Washington street, Quincy Point, returned to Tufts medical school today.

A reception is to be given Rev. and Mrs. Frederick Steenstra this evening by the parish of St. Chrysostom's church.

The wires connecting with the large gong on the outside of the High school building became crossed in the middle of the night, Wednesday, and the bell rung with a din that woke the whole neighborhood. The bell rang until the battery run down.

John J. Quinlan of Charlestown and George F. Ellis of Mansfield are warmly commended by the government for heroic action at the time of the explosion on the North Dakota. Charles Roberts of Boston was given a medal of honor a gratuity of $100.

A meeting of the City Hospital association was held Wednesday evening in Colonial hall. Fred B. Rice presided. The usual canvass of the city will be made this year for raising funds to cover expenses and help along the good work the Hospital is doing.

The travelling staff of the Knights of Malta, of which an account appeared in the Ledger last week, will be placed on exhibition in W. G. Shaw's window. Mr. Shaw having kindly consented to allow the commandery to place the staff in his window, in order to give members of Malta and their friends, who otherwise could not see it, an opportunity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Sunday School convention of the Norfolk Association is in session at the South Congregational church Brockton. Wednesday was the opening day. Rev. J. Stanley Burkee, pastor of the church, had charge of the devotional exercises. Conferences for primary and advanced grade teachers led by Mrs. L. E. Ware of Worcester and Miss Margaret Slattery of Fitchburg followed. Lunch was served at 6 o'clock and representatives from nearly 30 churches partook of it. Miss Slattery spoke both in the afternoon and evening. Rev. Alan Hudson, pastor of the First Congregational church of Brockton, took charge of the devotional service in the evening.

The convention will close this evening after a number of special conferences during the day, taking up particular phases of the work. A number of representatives from the churches of this city are attending the convention.

ATLANTIC ASSAULT CASE.

Timothy B. Harrigan of Atlantic summoned Mrs. Catherine Donovan into court this morning on a complaint for assaulting his little daughter. Mrs. Donovan's story was that on the afternoon in question she was greatly annoyed by the constant ringing of her door bell. She answered the bell several times, but found no one there. Then she laid in wait for her tormentor, and caught the little girl. Taking the girl by the arm she carried her to her mother's door. She claimed that she did not assault the girl but the girl's mother claimed she did. The court after hearing the evidence dismissed the complaint on payment of $5 costs.

WHICH HORSE?

With the following argument a woman suffrage lecturer made a hit: "I have no vote, but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables, but I am sure if I were to go to him and say, 'John, will you exercise the franchise?' he would reply, 'Please, mum, which horse be that?'"—Cleveland Leader.

Umbrella Economy.

Umbrellas last much longer if during fine weather they are never kept rolled up. If this is done the silk will soon begin to fray at the folds, and a rent will be the result. When wet an umbrella should be opened to its fullest extent on entering and dried with the handle downward.

CUPID'S DARTS HIT LAUNDRY WORKERS

Twenty Get Married on Same Night as Joke on Boss

Trenton, Sept. 28.—Joseph Prince will have to close down his laundry until he can hire new help, as twenty of his employes walked out of the plant yesterday to go on their honeymoons. Prince offered them extra pay if they would forego their wedding trips. When they refused, the laundry proprietor became indignant and discharged them all.

Four weeks ago Samuel Johnson and Mamie Reed announced that they were engaged and would be married soon. Engagements were announced almost daily in the laundry thereafter. One of the girls suggested that all the ceremonies be performed on the same night, and that all hands walk into the establishment the following morning and surprise the proprietor by telling him all hands were starting on the wedding trips. This was considered a good joke, but Prince did not laugh.

"I will see that hereafter there won't be any love affairs in this building," he angrily declared while he was writing a "want ad" in a local newspaper office.

His Final Plea.

A Chicago man appeared at the White House one day during the McKinley administration with a petition containing 7,000 names recommending him for appointment as Brazilian minister. He was a picture framer, and when he was canvassing for orders he took along his petition and asked everybody in the picture frame business to sign it. Almost everybody did.

The man was insistent and finally reached the president. Always gentle and considerate, President McKinley explained to the candidate that he would have to consult the Illinois senators and representatives about the matter before making the appointment.

"You know," said the president, "we have to select big men for these big places."

"Well," asked the picture framer, "won't I be just as big as any of them if I get the job?"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Cupid and Mammon.

Young ladies who will wed for gold
Will, in a manner blithe and breezy,
Say "Yes" to any man, we're told,
With wealth enough to make life easy.
And only men with gold to burn
Can lead them to the kirk or min'ster.
They're quick to wed, but not to earn—
They toil not, neither do they spinster.
—Lippincott's.

The motion was carried, and Mr. Wall looked relieved.

Capt. Fosdick stated that his committee had done nothing towards the selection of a playground site, but at the proper time the committee would do its duty. He requested that Mr. French succeed him as chairman of this committee, as he could not walk around with much ease, his limbs bothering as they now do, but he wished to be retained as a member of that committee. The captain's wishes were complied with and Mr. French becomes chairman.

The Council committee have proposed the following names to choose from for a candidate for the City Council: John Ross, Leo Noonan, Chas. E. Decker, Walter Buchan, Capt. Oliver G. Fosdick, Ross Woodbury, George Uran, James P. Percell James E. Wall, Wm. J. Hudson, David Fenner, J. E. Johnson, C. R. Southwick.

Capt. Fosdick thanked the committee for their selection of his name but declined on account of age and infirmities. Chas. E. Decker declined on account of his tender years and inexperience as a politician, believing that he could do better by telling the truth through the Ledger about Houghs Neck. Others declined for good reasons, as follows,—Uran, Wall, Fenner, Johnson and Southwick.

It was then voted to notify every legal voter of Houghs Neck to attend a rally at Associates hall, Oct. 6, which would give open opportunity for extra nominations, and to pick a man by straw vote.

Committee on Dedication of the school reported progress.

A communication from the fire alarm committee recommends a coat of paint to our hose house which backed up by the opinion of our commissioner of Public Works, looks like a surety.

Mr. French was requested to ask for a two weeks posponment for more police protection at the Council and to place an order for $15,000 through Councilman Branch, for a hearing before the Chief of Police. The treasurer's report was given and accepted.

Charles E Decker.

R. R. Freeman, secretary of the Massachusetts golf association has received the makeup of the Pennsylvania team that meets the Bay State players in the Lesley cup matches at the Myopia hunt club tomorrow, the winner to meet the team from the Metropolitan district Saturday in the finals. The name of W. C. Fownes, Jr. of Pittsburg winner of the year's U. S. amateur championship at the Country club appears first on the list. The others are J. H. Childs, E. M. Byers, A. G. Kay, W. L Thompson, H. W. Perrin, W. D. Pheil, W. P. Smith, F. W. Kemble, H. M. Clements and W. S. Sargent. J. G. Anderson will probably go against Fownes.

Trouble For the Tourists.

There is a story on record of three Irishmen rushing away from the race meeting at Punchestown to catch a train back to Dublin. At the moment a train from a long distance pulled up at the station, and the three men scrambled in. In the carriage was seated one other passenger. As soon as they had regained their breath one said:

"Pat, have you got th' tickets?"

"What tickets? I've got me loife! I thought I'd have lost that gettin' in th' thrain. Have you got 'em, Moike?"

"Oi? Begorrah, I haven't!"

"Oh, we're all done for, thin!" said the third. They'll charge us roight from th' other soide of Oireland."

The old gentleman looked over his newspaper and said:

"You are quite safe, gintlemen. Wait till we get to th' next station."

As soon as the train pulled up the little gentleman jumped out and came back with three first class tickets. Handing them to the astonished strangers, he said: "Whist! I'll tell you how I did it! I wint along th' thrain. 'Tickets, plaze; tickets, plaze!' I called, and these belong to three Saxon towrists in another carriage."

Banks on the Lookout.

A merchant in a large city allowed his name to be posted in his club three times for nonpayment of dues. A few days after the last posting he applied to his bank for a loan. When the application came up to the bank's credit man—that newest of a bank's important officials—he pulled out the customer's history card.

The latest entry was one typewritten sentence. "Does not pay his club dues; three times delinquent." The loan was refused. The merchant was either careless, near broke or unappreciative of his credit standing. Any of these reasons looked bad to the banker.

Business men do not realize how closely their banks watch them—how much the banks are bound to know about their affairs, how much seemingly small things in their daily lives affect credit, and big things that they sometimes want to conceal too.—System Magazine.

Eddystone Island.

The smallest inhabited island in the world is that on which the Eddystone lighthouse stands. At low water it is thirty feet in diameter. At high water the lighthouse, whose diameter at the base is eight and three-fourths feet, completely covers it. It is inhabited by three persons. It lies nine miles off the Cornish cost and fourteen miles southeast of Plymouth breakwater. Flatholme, an island in the British channel, is only a mile and a half in circumference, but, consisting mostly of rich pasture lands, supports a farmhouse besides the lighthouse, with a revolving light 156 feet above the sea. There are about 100,000 islands, large and small, scattered over the oceans. America alone has 5,500 around its coasts. There are 365 in the bay of Rio Janeiro, 16,000 between Madagascar and India and some 1,200 off the eastern coast of Australia between its mainland and New Guinea.

Jenny Lind and the Trill.

Jenny Lind after years of steady practice believed that the much coveted trill was for her an impossibility. She practiced hours a day, but was unable to accomplish the feat. One day, thoroughly discouraged, she was sitting in her garden when all at once she looked up into a tree. Above her a bird was trilling. She at once went to her piano and through some magic or power of imitation began the trill and from that day never had any further difficulty.

Losing His Senses.

A mischievous boy, having got possession of his grandfather's spectacles, privately took out the glasses. When the old gentleman put them on, finding he could not see, he exclaimed: "Mercy on me! I've lost my sight!" But, thinking the impediment to vision might be the dirtiness of the glasses, he took them off to wipe them, when, not feeling them, he, still more frightened, cried out: "Why, what's come now? I've lost my feeling too!"—London Ideas.

An Ancient House.

The ancient Romans had a catapult that could hurl rocks more than a mile."

"Now I understand it."

"What?"

My landlord told me the house was a stone's throw from the depot. He must have had it on his hands since the time of the Caesars.

A Complex Rest Cure.

"Bliggins is a very vociferous person."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "but I don't blame him. The way a man of his mentality rests his nerves is by talking so loud he can't hear himself think."—Washington Star.

Center of Toughness.

Inquiring Tourist—Would you call this a tough town? Stray Native—Tough? Say, stranger, when we have old home week here detectives from all over the country come and pick out just who they want.—Puck.

Conscience.

Conscience is not an indicator of what is right. That is the province of wisdom based on knowledge. Conscience is the divine imperative impelling us to do what we believe to be right.

A whole lot of people never blame the fool for parting from his money until after it is all gone.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

AIRSHIP CRASHES INTO FENCE AT FAIR

Aviator For Wright Brothers Escapes Without Injury

Rochester, N. H., Sept. 29.—The Wright biplane operated by Archibald Hoxsey, employed by the Wright brothers, was injured yesterday afternoon as a result of a collision with a fence surrounding the half-mile track, inside which Hoxsey attempted his flight. The accident occurred in the presence of the 47,000 people attending the fair.

Hoxsey had made seven trials under adverse conditions, being at no time more than thirty feet from the ground. Then, on the eighth try, he ascended to the height of fifty feet or more, when his motor went back on him. He then glided down toward the ground, but struck the fence before the wheels beneath the machine struck the ground. Eight of the stays on the right side of the machine were broken as well as the elevation planes.

The accident caused great excitement but, when Hoxsey pulled himself to his feet from beneath the plane unhurt, he was given a rousing cheer.

COTTON LOCKOUT OCT. 1

Little Strike Involves 150,000 Operatives In Great Contest

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 29.—The Federation of Master Cotton Spinners decided that they could make no further concessions to their operatives and that the lockout of 150,000 men on Oct. 1 must become effective unless the employes yield.

The whole trouble originated in a local strike at the Fern mill at Oldham. The employers demanded that the dispute be settled by arbitration and threatened a general lockout in the event of a refusal.

The secretary of the card-room amalgamation replied that the strikers would not accept arbitration of the terms proposed by the federation. The members of the latter now announce that they will go no further.

"I'm agraid you'll never know how to write, Tommie," said his teacher, sadly.

"Don't care," said Tommie. "Uncle Jim is going to send a type-writer for my birthday.

CUP NIGHT OF THE QUINCY YACHT CLUB

Quincy Challenge Cup Returns to Possession of The Quincy Yacht Club

Skipper Adams and Prominent Yachtsmen Present

Of the many good times held in the past by the Quincy Yacht club nothing ever exceeded that of Thursday evening when the club gave a reception to ex-Commodore Charles F. Adams, 2d and the crew of the Harpoon; Thomas Flemming Day, of the Rudder; and officers of the Rhode Island Yacht clubs, and the many cups and trophies won the past season by Quincy Yacht club yachts were presented.

It was a grand good time and when Rear Commodore Crane of the Iris and Wallace W. Arnold of the Dolly III left for home they were loaded down with silver cups and penants.

The hero of the evening was ex-Commodore Adams a former mayor of the city, and the welcome given him showed in a measure the high esteem in which he is held by the members of the club over whose destinies he once presided.

The reception was at 6.15 and was held in the reading room on the first floor. Here the club members had an opportunity to grasp the guests and visiting yachtsmen by the hand. Among the guests of the evening were representatives of the Boston Yacht club, Narragansett Bay Yacht racing association, Barnegat Bay, Newport, Fall River and King Phillip of Fall River, Rhode Island, Edgewood, Connanicut, Wollaston and Squantum clubs as well as representatives of the Interbay, Interclub and other yacht racing associations.

The reception was followed by a banquet served in the upper hall by C. C. Whittemore, and it was a good one, the menu including escalloped oysters, chicken salad, turkey, vegetables and relishes, ices and coffee. tables were laid lengthwise of the hall, that on the northerly side being reserved for the guests of the evening.

This table was enbellished from one end to the other with handsome silver cups, the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup occupying a conspicuous place in the centre. Front of this sat Commodore Robbins. At his right was "Charlie" Adams, skipper of the

QUINCY NOW EIGHT IN METROPOLITAN DISTRICT

Fast Becoming One of Boston's Greatest Suburbs--May Overtake Newton

Braintree, Weymouth and Milton Are Gaining

The Metropolitan district, or Greater Boston, includes 44 cities and towns, and Quincy now ranks eight in the list.

The new census gives the district 1,423,431, an increase of 254,633 in ten years, or 21.7 per cent.

Boston proper has a population of 670,585, less than one-half of the total. Boston's increase was 109,693 or 19.6 percent, while Quincy increased 36.6 per cent.

None of the cities and towns smaller than Quincy made a larger actual gain, Everett about the same, Malden about 2000 more, Cambridge 4,000 more, Somerville and Newton 7000 more, and Lynn 12,000 more.

Here are the figures for all the cities and towns of the district, both in 1910 and 1900, being arranged according to the new census:

	1910	1900
Boston	670,585	560,892
Cambridge	104,839	91,886
Lynn	89,336	68,513
Somerville	77,236	61,643

Hull	2,103	1,703
Westwood	1,266	1,112
Nahant	1,184	1,152
Dover	798	656

Weymouth made a gain of 1,571 in ten years, but Braintree gained 2,085. Milton added 1,346, and Hyde Park 2,263. Hingham and Cohasset both lost, while Hull gained 400.

RESTELLI NOT LOCATED

No Foundation for Story of Boston Paper

One of the late Boston papers came out Thursday afternoon with a sensational Restelli story, which Inspector Daniel R. McKay brands as a lot of falsehoods. According to this story, which is an alleged interview with Inspector McKay, Restelli had been located in Italy and Inspector McKay is made to say that Restelli was situated so that he could not get away from the officers, and that he was going to Italy after him.

Other Boston papers who saw the story immediately kept the telephone wires hot and were not long in running the story down as being pure rot so that few other papers made any mention of it.

Inspector McKay when interviewed by the Daily Ledger this morning said that he was at Police headquarters in Boston on Thursday on another matter, and several of the reporters present asked him if there was any news about Restelli. He says that he informed them that there was nothing new and that the conversation on the case became general.

He in no way or manner intimated that he knew where Restelli was or anything of the kind. An hour later he was more than surprised to read the startling story which the paper in question had published.

Inspector McKay said this morning that he intended to make the paper in question deny the story today, as it was false in every particular.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The population of four more Massachusetts cities are reported today and in all the percentage of gain was less than in Quincy. The percentages for ten years are:

Quincy,	36.6
Worcester	23.3
Woburn	6.2
Melrose	9.9

There is not the least probability that Gloucester will rank ahead of Quincy by the new census, for Quincy passed Gloucester by the State census of 1905, and left her far behind. Gloucester lost in population both in 1900 and 1905, as will be seen by these figures:

Census	Quincy	Gloucester
1910	32,644
1905	28,076	26,011
1900	23,899	26,121
1895	20,712	28,211
1890	16,723	24,651
1885	12,145	21,703
1880	10,570	19,329
1875	9,155	15,389

It is now certain that Quincy will rank as the 20th city of Massachusetts in population, and the advance has been remarkable in 35 years. It is one thing for a city to gain, but quite another to pass other cities in the race, but Quincy has passed 14 in the 35 years as this summary will show:

	Census	Rank
In 1875	9,155	No. 31
In 1880	10,570	No. 29
In 1885	12,145	No. 27
In 1890	16,723	No. 23
In 1895	20,712	No. 22
In 1900	23,899	No. 23
In 1905	28,076	No. 21
In 1910	32,642	No. 20

The cities and towns which Quincy has passed since 1875 are: Weymouth, Milford, Adams, North Attleboro, Woburn, Newburyport, Northampton, Chicopee, North Adams, Pittsfield, Gloucester, Waltham, Taunton, and Chelsea.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

A dispatch from Washington says that the growth in the Bay State is a source of surprise to the people in charge of the census. Judging from their low estimate of the population in several cities the surprise is genuine. Yet why should they be astonished? The whole country seems to be growing and booming. Here and there are cities that have increased in ten years 100 per cent or better. Why shouldn't Massachusetts be in the running with the other States? We have fine manufacturing plants. We have a little good farming land. Our people are not emigrating in any considerable numbers to other States; they find plnety to do at home. A considerable part of the immigration into the country comes to the Bay State and remains here. There is nothing to wonder at in the growth of Massachusetts. It would be genuinely astonishing if rapid growth wasn't discovered.—Brockton Enterprise.

Boston's proposition to increase the population by adding all the towns and cities within twelve miles of the State House would extend poor municipal government to no good purpose. —New Bedford Standard.

STIMSON'S FEDERAL FEES

Received $59,000 For Services In Morse and Sugar Trust Cases

Washington, Sept. 30.—Henry L. Stimson, the Republican candidate for governor of New York, was paid a total of $59,000 for his services while employed as special assistant attorney general of the department of justice after his retirement as United States attorney at New York.

According to a statement issued by the department of justice, he received $4000 for preparing a brief in the Morse case, $35,000 in the sugar case and $20,000 for grand jury investigation of officials of the sugar trust.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN FAIR

Large Attendance and Many Attractions

The annual fair of the Swedish Lutheran church started off very auspiciously Thursday evening with an attendance of over 300. Electa hall was very prettily decorated with autumn leaves and the national colors of America and Sweden.

The Ladies' Aid society run a fair of this sort every year for the benefit of the church. Mrs. Andrew Anderson, president of the society, is at the head of the geenral committee. Under her are the following sub committees:

Decoration—Ragar Wallin, Nels Carlson and Carl Carlson.

Soliciting—E. J. Ekblom, Charles Thorn, S. N. Elvin, Mrs. Augusta Kjellberg, Mrs. Christina Anderson, Mrs. Maria Viden, Mrs. Anna Nordin and Mrs. Adolf Nelson.

Johnson, song by Church choir, and xylophone solo by Mr. Brooks.

QUARRY ACCIDENT.

Thomas Thompson, of 49 Nightingale avenue, met with an accident Thursday in the quarry of the Granite Railway company. Thompson, who is a quarryman, was at work in one of the dump cars when it struck a block of granite, stopped short, and threw him out. He fell 20 feet and landed on a pile of granite dislocating his left ankle. A physician was summoned. Thompson was etherized immediately and the ankle was brought back into place. The ambulance was called and Thompson was taken to his home. It was very fortunate for the man that he landed on his feet rather than on his head or some other part less fortified. Owing to the quick action of the doctor, Thompson is suffering very little pain although the ankle is badly swollen. He will probably be about in the course of a week.

AUTUMN MAGAZINES.

Many good things in the October Magazines for all Readers.

Lippincott's Magazine opens with a novelette by Rupert Sargent Holland, entitled "The Riders of Petersham." Gen. Charles King writes "Thirty Years of Pencraft; What it came to and what it cost." Among the short story writers are Elizabeth M. Coombs, in "Little Brother"; Rafael Sabatini, in "The Lust of Conquest"; Thomas L. Masson, in "Ten Thousand Dollars," etc. Among the "Cogitations" of Ellis O. Jones is this: "Credit is a good thing until it becomes merely an excuse for spending the same dollar twice."

Suburban Life for October is devoted largely to the interior of the house. Every owner of a suburban home, and every prospective house-builder, will find it of exceeding interest. In the opening article, Mr. Fred H. Daniels tells how the interior of "The house of contentment" was finished. "Color Harmony Within the House," tells how to treat the walls and draperies, while "Two Aspects of the Lighting Question" deals with different varieties of illuminants, as well as describing many attractive lights fixtures. But of course the number is not devoted entirely to house-building. "A Squab Farm and How it Grew," is a particularly entertaining story, filled with practical suggestions, and an article entitled "Using the Hotbeds and Coldframes to the Best Advantage" will prove of particular interest to amateur gardeners.

National Magazine, among its non-fiction contributions, presents "Distributing the Immigrants," by Ormsby McHarg; "The Nation's Harvest," the Editor; "The Governors' Report on Crops"—26 states are reported and Porto Rico; "The Presidential Skirmish for 1912." Joe Mitchell Chapple; "The Gas Problem in New York City," W. C. Jenkins; "First Aid to the Injured," H. H. Hartung, M. D., and the "Political Situation in Great Britain," by S. T. Cooke. In fiction, Frank E. Channon begins his new story, "The Great Coup."

Rex Beach begins a new serial in the October Everybody's, a story of the big ditch we are cutting across the Isthmus. It was in this magazine that "The Spoilers" was published, five years ago, and Mr. Beach's position as an American novelist became assured. The magazine is uncommonly varied in the type of its articles. Lincoln Steffens continues his study of organized business and the virtual monarchy under which it has fallen. "Let's Play Indian," by M'Cready Sykes, tells how the Seton Indians and the Boy Scout movement are making a new American boy through woodcraft. William Hard writes of "Love Deferred" in his series on "The Women of To-morrow," making it a most human and vitally interesting subject. "On Christmas Day in the Evening," by Grace S. Richmond, and a simple bit of romance by G. F. Ogden. With good illustrations and a picture cover this in one of the most attractive numbers of the magazine.

The Woman's Home Companion is for women and children. Here are fiction, fashions, serious articles, cooking and a dozen other practical subjects. The home decoration and handicraft department, which is growing into one of the most important sections of this journal, comprises so many points of interest that any home-loving woman is bound to profit by it in some manner. Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, Mary Heaton Vorse, Fannie Heaslip Lea and Marie Manning are among the short story writers and "True Love," a thrilling stage story by Hulbert Footner is now in its second part. The Fashion department seems to cover every possible need for the woman who wishes to be well gowned, and for the younger readers the Kewpies in verse and picture form one of many interesting features.

McClure's Magazine leads off with "Working Girls' Budgets," by Sue Ainslie Clark and Edith Wyatt, illustrated. Among other non-fiction papers in the number we notice "Goldwin Smith's Reminiscences. II. The Founding of Cornell University and His Introduction Into Washington Society," "King Edward VII," by Javier Paolio "John and Simon Newcomb the Story of a Father and Son." by Dr. Sara Newcomb Merrick, etc. In fiction there is "The Unfinished Story" by O. Henry. S. S. McClure announces in this number a series of articles by John Moody on "The Masters of Capital in America," beginning with November number.

The leading place in the Engineering Magazine for October is given to a profusely illustrated article by Fullerton L. Waldo on recent progress in the canal work at Panama. Mr. Waldo has returned from a visit to the Isthmus enthusiastic over the social conditions prevailing and the efficiency with which the work is being prosecuted. His article is an interesting and vivid presentation of the magnitude and present state of the Panama Canal undertaking. A cost system adapted to the needs of a small factory is described by Paul R. Powell. C. E. Knoeppel contributes the first instalment of an important series of articles on systematic foundry operation and foundry costs. Prof. J. A. Switzer shows by reference to a concrete case the importance of efficient boiler firing, as regards both fuel economy and smoke prevention. The number carries also the full Review of the Engineering Press and Engineering Index.—The Engineering Magazine, New York.

The following is a list of leading articles in Technical World forOctober: People Who Dwell in the Dark, Bailey Millard; Reforming the Bad Seasons, Carl Crow; Gyroscope Works Wonders, Arthur B. Reeve; Saving the Wood Waste, William L. Ninabuck; The Niagara of Africa, Darwin S. Hatch; Artificial Blizzard to Save Fruit, Walter V. Woehlke; Raising a Crop of Young Farmers, F. G. Moorhead; Steering by Wireless, Dr. Alfred Gradenwitz; Schoolyard a City's Beauty Spot, H. D. Jones and Popular Science and Mechanics Supplement.

NEW TIMETABLE.

The New Haven Railroad announces the fall and winter timetable to take effect Sunday, October 2, when the summer trains are discontinued and a few minor changes made in schedules. Folders, effective on that date will be in the hands of agents today and it is suggested that the public post themselves fully relative to local changes.

The train leaving Boston 3.38 P. M. for Woods Hole and Hyannis will be continued until October 14, and the return trains from these points at 7.05 and 6.55 A. M. respectively will run until October 15.

RECEPTION TO NEW PASTOR

Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Steenstra Warmly Welcomed

A reception was given to Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, the new rector of St. Chrysostoms church and Mrs. Steenstra on Thursday evening in the parish rooms and was largely attended by members of the parish and several others including Rev. and Mrs. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church, Quincy.

Mr. Stennstra who came from Manville, R.I., accepted a call of the vestry last summer and commenced his duties the first of August. The rector and his wife who carried a large bouquet of white and pink carnations, were assisted in receiving by the senior warden, Frank E. Cleveland, and Mrs. Cleveland.

The rooms were very beautifully decorated with autumn flowers and foliage, and was the artistic work of Mrs. George A. Bean and Mr. Bean. The palms directly back of the receiving party were from the greenhouse of Patterson.

The ushers were Messrs. William J. Leslie Archibald H. Briggs, J. Albert Severance and John L. Hamilton. During the evening a well rendered musical program was given by Miss J. Verne Fowler 2d mandolin P. Raymond Fowler, 1st mandolin and Carl G. Fowler accompanist which added much to the evening's enjoyment.

Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Walter, Mrs. Parlee, Mrs. Hennigar, Mrs. Croucher, Mrs. Orr, Mrs. Shultz, Mrs. Wheelen and Mrs. Purdom.

The servers were Misses A. Maud Briggs, Dorothy C. Bean, Margaret Bestgen, Ileen Curwin, L. Leah Hennigar, Nettie Parlee, Ruth W. Parker, Louise Allison Ross, Amy Rhodes, Nancy Fulton and Muriel Wheelen.

TAILOR GETS JUDGMENT

Sheriffs Go After Chanler's Property, but Fail to Secure It

New York, Sept. 30.—Two deputy sheriffs, armed with an execution authorizing them to seize upon any goods and chattels they might find belonging to Robert W. Chanler, husband of Lina Cavalleri, in satisfaction of the judgment for $1062 obtained by William Barnes, a tailor, descended upon the studio which had been occupied by Chanler, prepared to seize the paintings, furniture, hangings and other contents of the place.

The raiders went away empty-handed, however, being greeted by a young man who said his name was Christian and who claimed ownership of the property.

"You are on the wrong track," said Christian. "'Bob' Chanler owns nothing in this place. If you expect to levy on Chanler's property you will have to look elsewhere." They are still looking.

BROOKINS BREAKS RECORD

He Also Lands $10,000 Prize Offered by Chicago Newspaper

Springfield, Ills., Sept. 30.—Walter R. Brookins, in a Wright biplane, finished his flight from Chicago at 4:27 p .m., winning the $10,000 prize offered by a Chicago newspaper.

Brookins broke the record of 142 miles for a continuous trip with only temporary stops, the distance from Chicago to Springfield being 192 miles. He made a perfect landing in the centre of the fair grounds here. The machine traveled along the grass for 100 feet.

Brookins started his flight to Springfield from the aviation field at Washington park shortly after 9 a. m. Thursday. He circled over the park and then made straight for Jackson park, where he picked up the special train which accompanied him to Springfield.

SHILOH NOT FOR SALE

Denial Comes From Personal Counsel of "Elijah" Sandford

Lisbon Falls, Me., Sept. 30—H. E. Coolidge, personal counsel for Frank W. Sandford, states he does not believe the report that efforts are being made to sell the Shiloh property of the Holy Ghost and Us society and adds that no arrangement has been made to sell Shiloh or any part of it.

Mr. Coolidge explains that Sandford has no power to sell the place if he wants to, as the property is in the hands of a corporation, organized under the laws of Maine and known as the Kingdom corporation. "If there has been any arrangements made to sell Shiloh, I believe I would have been notified," he says.

Cook Reported In Switzerland

Harpoon, and at his left Thomas Fleming Day the donor of the cup raced for in Narraganset bay and captured by the Dolly III and Iris.

Others at the head table were Arthur Adams and Thomas N. Perkins the crew of the Harpoon; T. R. Goodwin, president of the Narraganset Bay association; Rear Commodore F. F. Crane, C. F. Markam, ex-Commodores, Eben W. Sheppard, Henry M. Faxon and Fred B. Rice; C. W. Dunbar, Secretary John O. Hall, B. C. Brooks of the Ina, John H. Stone, Benjamin Franklin, Jr., Vice Commodore I. M. Whittemore, F. I. Thornton, John D. Peck, skipper of the Bother; Leonard Fowle; Treasurer G. S. Morse; Frank Freeman, Henry S. Crane and Ralph G. Crane of the Iris crew; B. S. Pemar of the Boston Yacht club; W. Sidebottom of the Ina crew; W. J. Brooks, Representative W. R. Thomas, Wallace W. Arnold of the Dolly III; ex-Commodore W. M. Chase and Frank E. Dawes of the Wollaston club; Mr. Brown, Ralph Crosby, Dan Crosby, C. C. Hanley, R. J. Fuller, J. H. Foster, Mr. Rivraty, Charles Brackett, Edwin Morse, J. H. Thornton, Hollis Burgess, Ben Peckam and A. W. Finlay of the Dorchen.

At the second table were the Quincy club chorus and they sang as they never sang before. Monk's orchestra furnished the musical accompaniment and the singing started off with "In my dream of the U. S. A." The choruses of all the popular airs were printed on sheets, so that everybody present might join in the chorus. All of these were sung as well, as several others that were special numbers for the chorus.

Henry W. French was the leader of the chorus and he also led the cheering that followed the presentations of each cup or trophy, and as there were dozens presented the cheering was almost constant.

After the banquet Commodore Robbins welcomed the yachtsmen. He said the present season had been a banner one for the Quincy club, which had been successful in every contest. The red star of the Quincy club had been raced in Massachusetts and Narraganset bays and was successful.

He then called upon B. S. Pemar chairman of the regatta committee of the Boston Yacht club, who returned the challenge cup to its home. He said there was no doubt but it would be retained here for many years. In regard to Mr. Adams he said comments were unecessary as regards his ability and his absolute fairness. He has set an example of fairness that should be followed by all yachtsmen as what is right.

In accepting the cup Commodore Robbins said it was a pleasure to receive it. In 1909 the Ellen was successful and this year you gave a splendid series of races. It was won by a combination C. A. Borden the designer, Mr. Lawley the builder and a good crew almost impossible to beat. In the nine years of the cups existence Quincy has won four times. It has been the custom to keep the cup in a safty deposit box but in behalf of the club Commodore Robbins asked Mr. Adams to take it home with him and keep it until the next race.

As Mr. Adams arose to speak he was greeted with cheers so loud that they shook the rafters.

Boys and old friends, said Mr. Adams, I would not for the world point out that combination as one that can not be beaten for it has been. We have had many pleasant times together, and it was pleasant to have the cup here where it has history Looking at an old picture on the wall reminded him that it was 35 years ago that he first sailed in a boat race here. Many contests marked with good sportsmanship and good feeling have been sailed since then.

Sometimes we sailed regardless of the rules, but we always had a way of settling our difficulties and he could not remember any unpleasantness in those 35 years. It was pleasant to think that this cup has stood for the very best of Quincy Yacht club sport, and he hoped that it would always stand for all that is best in sport and clean yacht racing.

As he sat down the hall resounded with the Quincy Yacht club yell—"Q. Y. C., Q. Y. C. ready about; hard a lee."

QUINCY CUP

Commodore Robbins then said that a member of the club, who did not desire his name known, desired to present to Mr. Adams a replica of the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup that he might always have something as a reminder of it. This cup was inscribed as follows:

"Presented to Charles Adams of the Harpoon, representing the Quincy Yacht club winner of the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup 1910."

In accepting this replica, Mr. Adams said that it was with much pleasure that he accepted it. He wished that he knew the donor that he might thank him. I thank you all."

THE DAY CUP.

The next presentation was of the Thomas Fleming Day cup, which was from the Fall River club, and which was won by the Dolly III and Iris in the interbay series of races at Narraganset bay last August. This cup was presented to the Massachusetts Bay Association by Thomas Fleming Day.

In presenting this cup Mr. Day said that he was very glad to be present. He was a lover of cat boats. This type of boat has a great future. It is the only pure American rig and type of boat. All others have been brought here from some other country. He then went into the early history of Cape cat boats and of his efforts to introduce them in foreign countries. He also spoke of the development of the power boat whose only limit was her fuel carrying capacity. He had always hoped the Cape cat boat would come back, and he believed the day was near at hand when it would be raced in all American waters. He also spoke of the true sportsmanship of yachting. In speaking of the races at Narraganset bay, he said we in Rhode Island had no idea that Massachusetts had any fast boats and we had no idea but what we should win.

NARRAGANSET BAY CUPS.

In Narraganset bay the yachtsmen had every advantage to show their skill and we had a magnificent field of sport. We saw a race well planned, sailed and carried out, and he never saw a better race than that sailed by the Iris, and he congratulated the Quincy Yacht club upon having such a fine helmsman.

In accepting the trophy for the Massachusetts association, Rear Commodore Crane said it gave him a great deal of pleasure to accept it from such a lover of yachting as Thomas Fleming Day. Nothing could exceed the hospitality we received while in Rhode Island. No boats were raced any keener or harder than were the Cape cat boats there. He had started to race the Cape cat boats in 1874 and had always stuck to them. It is not all the man at the stick, because the Iris won, but because it had Frank Freeman and Harry Crane as the crew. No man on earth could get any better class of races than was given us at Narraganset bay.

Then came the presentation of various other cups and trophies won at Narraganset bay.

President J. C. Thornton of the Edgewood club presented the Iris with the cup won at the first day's race. He said that if the yachtemen in Rhode Island had realized what you had here that they would not have been caught napping, but it gave him a great deal of pleasure to present the cup.

In accepting this cup Commodore Crane said that he went to Narraganset bay with fear and trembling, but he felt that as he had a Hanley cat he was all right. He felt sure that any yachtsmen who went to Rhode Island would find the Edgewood club a home.

The second prize for the first day's racing was presented by Benjamin Franklin, Jr., chairman of the Edgewood club regatta committee to the Dolly III and was accepted by her skipper Wallace W. Arnold.

Mr. Arnold said when he went to Rhode Island he made up his mind to give them some good racing. The secret was to make up your system. To know what you want and the keenness to carry it out. Then there was some luck that went with it. During his whole trip there was a general goo dtime and he could not speak too highly of the good fellowship shown them.

T. R. Goodwin of the Rhode Island club presented the Dolly III with a pair of night and day field glasses for winning the second day's race and a cup to the Iris for second prize.

Rear Commodore Markam of the Edgewood club presented the Stone & Markam cup to the Iris for winning the third days' races.

The Tilden & Thurber cup for the special race was presented to the Dolly by Ben Peckam.

Thomas Fleming Day then presented the Iris and Dolly with cups offered by the Fall River club for the fourth day's racing.

The championship pennant for the Cape cat class at Narraganset bay was presented to the Dolly by Dr. Goodwin.

CUP FOR DORCHEN.

A. W. Finlay, skipper of the Dorchen, who won the cup of the Corinthian club at Marblehead in the 18-foot class in 1910 and the Sumner Foster cup for the same class at Cleveland in 1909, spoke briefly of these two races. He said that the greatest tribute that could be paid Mr. Adams was to do as we know he would do. We can not pay him greater honor.

The next cup to be presented was what is known as the Iris cup, whose donor is unknown. This cup was presented to the Dartwell champion of the Cape cat class, and was accepted by Vice Commodore Ira M. Whittemore, her skipper. He said that this was the first cup he had ever won and was really a duration test as he had raced in every race. This cup is awarded on points, and Mr. Whittemore said that out of 29 races he had got the gun at the finish in 13 of them.

QUINCY CLUB PRIZES.

Commodore Robbins then presented the Quincy Yacht Club season prizes which were as follows:

Club Run to Marblehead—The first prize, as well as the blue pennant for the best actual time was presented to Hollis Burgess of the Virginia. The cape cat boat cup was awarded to Walter Coombs of the Busy Bee.

The cup in the power boat class was awarded to L. I. Files of the Arab.

The red pennant for the second best actual time on the run was awarded to F. J. Pierson of the Mystic, and the white pennant for the third best time, to Notoris owned by D. D. Nickerson.

The blue, red and white penants for the best actual time of the Cape cat class were awarded to Vice Commodore Whittemore of the Dartwell, Rear Commodore Crane of the Iris and W. J. Coombs of the Busy Bee.

In the power boat class for the best time the blue pennant went to D. S. Sandberg of the Naughty Girl, the red pennant to M. B. Small of the Chum, and the white pennant to J. Winsor Davy of the Lilla.

The cock of the walk pennant, which is the championship pennant of the Cape cat class went to W. J. Coombs of the Busy Bee, and the second to the Iris.

The championship in the power boat class was given to Walter J. Packard of the Red Wing.

The class B championship was awarded to Rutland owned by E. D. Debs.

CORINTHIAN RACES.

Last but not least came the award of the day and night field glasses for the winner of the series at Marblehead under the auspices of the Corinthian club. These were awarded to Edgar W. Emery of the Mudjekeewis.

It seemed as though the end would never come when the season's prizes were being award, and it can be truthfully said that the past season has been the most successful in the history of the Quincy Yacht club.

The evening's celebration closed with a few words by Commodore Robbins.

A new soprano was having a trial in a church, where she proved wholly inadequate to please the congregation. She sung as a solo that great appeal, "Oh, had I the wings of a dove."

When she made an unusual and unsatisfactory effort in, "I would fly away and be at rest," an old deacon rose in his pew. "I wouldn't wait for wings, lassie," he said, "I would fly right now," and it may be inferred that her service were not engaged.—Chicago Post.

TAMMANY WILL NAME GOVERNOR

Candidates Rather Than Issues the Main Question

TWO UP-STATE MEN SLATED

Others Are From New York City, With Chances Favoring One of Them For Nominee—Parker, In Keynote Speech, Assails the Tariff and Makes Sensational Attack on Roosevelt, Calling Him Usurper

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Candidates rather than issues is the big question before the Democratic state convention that convened here yesterday afternoon. There is no division of opinion about the platform. Tariff reform, direct primaries and an arraignment of the Republican party and its leaders are the slogans the leaders believe will call the party to victory.

But to find men best able to sound this call the leaders are passing in review more candidates than ever before aspired to places on a Democratic ticket. Prospects are that a New York man will head the ticket. The list of candidates given out by Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall contained the names of only two up-state men—Martin H. Glynn of Albany and James S. Havens of Rochester. The others he named were James Gerard, Victor H. Dowling, Martin L. Keough, Edward M. Shepard and Herman A. Metz.

Although the state convention was scheduled to begin at noon to perfect an organization preliminary to nominating candidates, few of the 450 delegates, three from each assembly district, were present at that hour.

It was after 1 o'clock when Chairman Dix called the convention to order. He named Alton B. Parker as temporary chairman and John A. Mason temporary secretary. A burst of cheering greeted the mention of Parker's name. Then the convention settled down to listen to his address defining the issues of the coming campaign.

"There is great unrest among the people," said Judge Parker, as soon as the applause had been stilled sufficiently for him to proceed with his keynote speech.

"The cost of living is too high. The decade of saving has passed." He here launched into an attack upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, saying:

"President Taft pleaded with the senate to keep the party's pledge of a downward revision of the tariff. Senators who repudiated their promises shivered in their boots at robbing the people."

He added that Mr. Roosevelt was trying to overturn the constitution and warned Democrats that if they wanted to get votes they would have to take cognizance of the constantly increasing unrest due to the high cost of living.

At the close of his prepared address, Parker laid aside his manuscript and launched into a bitter attack on the methods by which Roosevelt and the progressives dominated the Republican convention at Saratoga.

"That convention," said he, "has passed from the hands of an old organization into the hands of a new one. It has passed by the assistance of federal officeholders. Nearly two hundred of them contributed to that majority. In vain was an appeal made to President Taft. The appeal was not heeded. Think of the disgrace of it. Free men not daring to vote according to their judgment and their conscience because if they did there stood behind them the federal government saying your political life is at stake. And it must not be forgotten that he who was responsible for this only a few years ago ostentatiously removed federal officeholders for daring to participate in a political fight."

He referred to Roosevelt as a "usurper" of the political control of the state, and called upon the delegates to deprive him of this power at the coming election.

The temporary chairman's speech occupied an hour. After some routine proceedings the convention adjourned until 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Democrats of Rhode Island Nominate a Full State Ticket

Providence, Sept. 30.—The Democrats of the state met in convention here and nominated the following-named state ticket without a dissenting vote:

For governor, Lewis A. Waterman, Providence; lieutenant governor, Phillip E. Clark, Newport; secretary of state, Alberic Archambault, Warwick; attorney general, John I. Dolan, Providence; general treasurer, Edmund Walker, Providence.

The convention met under peculiar circumstances, as there was such a dearth of strong men willing to be the party's standard bearer that it was not known until the nominating speech who the choice of the committee had been. Peter C. Cannon was made temporary chairman and subsequently permanent presiding officer.

The nominating of candidates then followed and the slate was completed within ten minutes. All were chosen by an unanimous viva voce vote.

The platform denounces the Aldrich tariff as the most dishonest piece of tariff legislation ever enacted, attacks Secretary Ballinger and has much to say of state issues.

OLD GUARD SURRENDERS

Members Join Roosevelt Camp and Will Fight With Him

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Republican leaders and delegates to the state convention who remained in Saratoga are busy discussing the victory of the progressive forces under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt and the prospects of success at the November election.

The announced determination of the colonel to stump the state on behalf of the ticket placed in nomination indicates that the Republicans will put up a hard campaign to win.

William Barnes, Jr., State Chairman Woodruff, Speaker Wadsworth and others of the Old Guard leaders who matched strength with Roosevelt for control of the party machinery, take their defeat with good grace and declare that they will support the ticket loyally.

BRIEFS

The last day of September and the last Friday of the month.

A regular meeting of the City Council next Monday evening.

William Corcoran of West Quincy has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene L. McAuliffe at Randolph.

Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock "Bill the Hobo" will be the attraction at the Y. M. C. A. building. Every younger boy in Quincy is urged to be present and see and hear the pictures and story of "Bill the Hobo."

Opening reception tonight at Y. M. C. A. for "Younger Boys," 12-15 years old. Every boy in Quincy is invited and one of the best programs ever arranged is promised. Dudley Prescott of Boston is to be the entertainer, and he is considered the most wonderful and original entertainer before the public for boys. A swim for every fellow is a big feature. Don't miss it fellows.

Sunday will be observed as "Rally day" at the Hall Place M. E. church. A special program has been planned for each service. In the morning the pastor will speak on the subject "Protestantism and its mission in our Community." The Sunday school Junior League and Epworth League will have an interesting service, while the last service of the day will be the best service.

MILTON.

Mr. Kidder, the tree warden is to give a fountain tothe town. It will be erected in the triangular plot at East Milton in front of the Hose house. This will necessitate cutting down the big elm tree which has been a landmark for so many years, but the great need of a fountain will counterbalance the loss.

There will be a food sale in the East Congregational church, Saturday evening.

W. E. Beer, Edgehill road, East Milton, is one of the judges of pigeons at the Brockton fair.

J. T. Goodwin of Huntington road has moved to Jersey City, N. J.

There will be an entertainment and sale given by the Wide-Awake class of the East Milton Baptist church this evening.

The Fruit, Flower and Vegetable exhibition was held last Saturday under the auspices of the Milton Education society. There were unusually fine displays of dahlias, apples, peaches, and in fact all kinds of fruit and vegetables. Mr. Kidder received first prize for the best exhibit of vegetables. Mr. Hart won first place on peaches.

Lanier of the Cavalry

Or, A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES KING,
Author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Foes In Ambush," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Company

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lieutenant Lanier interfere. Lanier, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying Colonel Button's orders.

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Miriam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Miriam's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freezing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinlan finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found. Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk about the thief. Colonel Button sends for Lanier.

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes death by fire.

Dora Mayhew elopes with Rawdon. Fitzroy steals Lieutenant Foster's team and pursues. The elopers are caught by Rawdon and Lanier's friend Ennis.

Fitzroy tries to arrest Rawdon, but Ennis lets him and his bride, Dora, go. Colonel Riggs arrives to try Lanier on Button's charges. Captain Snaffle accuses Lanier of being Miriam's thief.

(Started Sept. 14.)

Mrs. Stannard, you were a jewel and a general. Now, how about the major?

"For conference with the judge advocate of the department," read the order that summoned him, and from that conference forth went our doughty dragoon in search of conquest. "It is understood," said the officials, "that you know the circumstances under which Lieutenant Lanier became responsible for the money borrowed at Laramie by or for that young Mr. Lowndes, also that you know him." There were other matters, but that came up first. Stannard knew and was quite willing to set forth with a plain clothes member of the Omaha force on a mission for and from headquarters. He found it all known to the police. Lowndes had run through the purse of his eastern kindred two years before. Lowndes had been transported to a cattle ranch near Fort Cushing in hopes of permanent benefit, but speedily neglected the range for the more congenial society of the fort. He was well born and bred. He went on the campaign for excitement and took to gambling among the scouts and packers and sergeants, for the officers had soon cold shouldered him. But he was a college man, a secret society man, as had been Lieutenant Lanier before entering the Point. Since the campaign Lowndes had been going from bad to worse, had gambled away the money sent him by his relatives, and they were now sorely anxious about him. Moreover, he was needed as a material witness for the defense in the case of Lieutenant Lanier.

And even as the story was being told there came bounding down the broad stairway from above a slender, well built youth. It was the erect, jaunty carriage that caught the major's eye. In build, bearing and gait the approaching stranger was Bob Lanier all over.

"Rawdon!" he cried.

A wave of color, it is true, swept instantly to the young fellow's temples. Quickly he whirled about; courteously he raised his cap.

"I beg the major's pardon," said he. "I did not expect him here and had never seen him in civilian dress."

And now the detective, too, was on his feet and curiously noting the pair.

"You're on furlough, I understand, but I heard—my wife said—you were in Chicago."

"Mrs. Stannard was right, sir. My wife and her father are there now, visiting my sister. Dr. Mayhew told me of the charges against Lieutenant Lanier, and that is what brings me back at once."

"Going back at once?" began the major, mollified, yet mystified. "I presume you know more of these matters than any one else."

"With possibly two exceptions, sir, I hope to nab one of them here."

"Lowndes?" queried Stannard.

"Lowndes," answered Rawdon.

"Then you're just the man we want."

That afternoon as the Union Pacific express stood ready at the Union station for the start there boarded one of the sleepers a burly, thickset, bluff mannered man in a huge fur overcoat, closely followed by two younger companions. One of these latter, erect and graceful in bearing, alert and quick in every movement, with clear cut and handsome features, was dressed with care and taste, evidently a man accustomed to metropolitan scenes and society. The other, a youth of probably his own age, though looking older, was sallow, shabby, with a dejected, down at the heel expression to his entire personality that told infallibly of failure and humiliation.

"Better pull off that overcoat and make yourself comfortable, Lowndes," said the younger man. "You've a long journey ahead."

Whereat a tall, spare, elderly gentleman in an adjoining section slowly lowered his newspaper and turned half round, while a tall, spare, elderly, sharp featured woman beside him in prim traveling garb sprang from her seat and, brushing the burly man aside, precipitated herself upon the shrinking object in the corner.

"Mortimer Watson Lowndes!" cried she. "Where on earth have you been?"

Mortimer Watson wept dismally.

Two days later the colonel's office at Fort Cushing was the scene of a somewhat remarkable trial. The tribunal consisted, in point of fact, of a single man, acting as judge, jury and attorney—to wit, "Black Bill" Riggs, inspector general of the department of the Platte.

Colonel Button was of course at his usual desk. Colonel Riggs, his jealously regarded rival, was seated at a little table. Lieutenant Lanier, somewhat pale, but entirely placid, occupied a chair to the left of that table, with Captain Sumter, as his troop commander and counsel, by his side. Captain Snaffle was in support of the post commander to cross question if he saw fit. Barker, the adjutant, was present, as a matter of course. Sergeant Fitzroy, with trouble in his eyes and wrath in his heart, was flitting uneasily about.

"If you are ready, Colonel Button," began Riggs with elaborate courtesy, "I am, and let me briefly say that I have seen Trooper Rafferty at the hospital, also certain other men named by Captain Snaffle, but in order that all parties may be given opportunity to hear and to examine and at the request of Lieutenant Lanier, who desires the fullest investigation and publicity, I have invited you and the captain to hear what I consider the really valuable evidence. Will you call in Trooper Rawdon?"

Snaffle's face was a sight when the door opened and there entered a very self possessed young man.

Patten's Will Provides For Aid In Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign

Chicago, Sept. 30.—George W. Patten, the millionaire grain operator, who died of tuberculosis at the home of his brother, James A. Patten, in Evanston, left a fortune estimated at $5,000,000, the greaer part of which, it is said, will be left to public charities, including a large donation for the furtherance of the anti-tuberculosis campaign.

Though relatives have tried to conceal from him the belief that he was dying, it has been known for months that he was suffering from tuberculosis and that there was no hope of recovery. He spent eight years in Colorado fighting against the malady.

Mrs. Annis Will Oppose Efforts In Behalf of Hains

DISPLAYS A BITTER FEELING

Says She Has Good Reason to Hate Slayer of Her Husband and His Brother—Intends to Make Personal Appeal to Governor If Possible—Declares That Murder Was Deliberate, Cowardly and Dastardly

New York, Sept. 30.—Mrs. Helen Annis, whose husband, William E. Annis, was shot and killed by Captain Peter C. Hains at the Bayside Yacht club two years ago, declares that she will fight to the last against the application for pardon for her husband's slayer, which was filed last week.

Mrs. Annis yesterday appealed to the district attorney of Queens county for help. She learned that District Attorney DeWitt himself was out of town and would not return until Monday. Following her talk with the district attorney, Mrs. Annis will go to Albany to get the ear of Governor Hughes. If she cannot arrange a personal interview she will present her case to him in the form of a letter.

Mrs. Annis says that she has new evidence which was not brought out at the trial and which aggravates the premediation feature of the killing of her husband.

She also declares that she can positively prove that Annis was killed, not because he was to be named in Hains' suit for divorce, but because Mrs. Hains in her counter-suit made unprintable charges which the captain believed to have been inspired by Annis. She says she can prove that her husband did not know what the charges were until the papers were drawn up and then he was informed by Mrs. Hains' father.

Mrs. Annis is a tall, imperious woman and her eyes sparkled with rage when she talked of the possibility of a pardon for the slayer of her husband. She was particularly bitter against Prosecutor Darrin, who handled the state's case against Captain Hains and his brother, Thornton. The latter was acquitted of the charge of being an accessory before the fact.

"There was never a more deliberate, cowardly, dastardly murder than that of my husband," declared Mrs. Annis, angrily. "And what was done to his murderers? Thornton Hains, who was really more responsible than his brother, was acquitted and the captain given a comparatively light sentence. If they had been intelligently prosecuted, both would now be in prison for life or would have been given the punishment that other murderers receive in New York.

"There were a hundred little points that could have been brought out by the proper line of questioning. I never got a chance to tell nearly all of the details of my side of the story because I had to confine myself to answering questions and the district attorney never asked me the questions.

"Why shouldn't I be bitter?" she demanded, catching at a word in a question. "Look what those cowardly assassins have done to me and mine! I am without a husband that I loved and my children are without a father.

"I have to work hard and can barely make a living for myself and keep my two boys at school. The youngest one I was forced to send away when he was only 6 years old, and the result is that he is now a nervous, unhappy child."

Mrs. Annis lives with her mother at 501 West One Hundred and Thirty-Ninth street. Her two boys—aged 10 and 8—are at a military school.

BROKERS ARE GATHERED IN

Simultaneous Raid on Offices of Scheftels & Co

WHOLESALE FRAUD ALLEGED

Sixty Men and Women In Mining Brokers' Quarters at Boston When Federal Officers Descend on Them Under Direction of Department of Justice—Raid In New York Witnessed by Several Thousand Persons

Boston, Sept. 30.—Federal officers, aided by police headquarters detectives, raided the brokerage office of B. H. Scheftels & Co., at 52 Devonshire street, arrested George M. Holbrook, the manager, cut all of the telegraph and telephone wires and took the names of sixty men and women in the place. Great excitement attended the raid and one man in the place jumped out of a rear window.

The Boston raid was made simultaneously with one conducted in New York, where the main office was located, and in seven other cities of the country where branches of the concern were run. In New York Barney Scheftels was arrested. The raids were made as a result of the recent bucket shop investigations made by the government.

The charge against the members of the firm in New York and the managers of the branch offices is conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. The raids were made when the business of the day was in full swing and the offices crowded with customers. Wires in the various offices were cut at the same time.

The firm is alleged to have obtained $5,000,000 from its customers on one line of stocks, Rawhide Coalition.

Holbrook was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes. Assistant District Attorney Sullivan asked that his bail be fixed at $25,000, but Lawyer Selfridge, who represented the prisoner, said that he was only an employe of the company and had nothing but his salary, and Hayes fixed bail at $5000. He pleaded not guilty and next Wednesday was fixed as the day for his hearing.

Five clerks were taken to court, and it was said that they would be taken to New York later as witnesses.

Inspector Schmid of the department of justice, who led the raiders, and the clerks in the office did up all the papers in packages and sealed them. They will be taken to New York for evidence.

The raids were accompanied by a big break in the mining stocks in which the firm dealt. Jumbo Extension dropped from 71 to 58, Ely Central from 50 to 20 and Rawhide Coalition from 10 to 5.

The Scheftels company has offices in Boston, Providence, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit. The raids were made under the direction of the department of justice.

Dispatches from New York say that postoffice inspectors, aided by central office detectives, swooped down on the offices at 42 and 44 Broad street. Though Scheftels was arrested, another partner, for whom a warrant had been issued, escaped. The raid was witnessed by several thousand persons. Police reserves had to be called out to restore order.

Scheftels & Co. were much in the limelight about this time last year as a result of a dispute over Ely Central, a western mining stock which had been boomed by the firm. The firm, which advertised a private wire to Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, went into the mining stock game, it was charged, on an extensive and systematic basis and many small investors lost their money in the slump in the stock. Scheftels was arrested on a charge of criminal libel as a result of the suit.

The officers of the company are: Bernard H. Scheftels, president; Charles S. Velser, secretary; George Bowles, treasurer. The same three men composed the board of directors. The capital stock is given as $150,000. The company published a weekly newspaper booming its stocks.

FLEET READY FOR ACTION

Americans Officials Looking For Another Serious Outbreak In China

Washington, Sept. 30.—Every vessel in the United States Asiatic fleet, and the military forces at Manila, have been prepared for immediate action in the event of a threatened outbreak.

Advices have been received here from American officials in the Orient to the effect that a critical situation exists in China, and that an outbreak similar to the Boxer rebellion of several years ago would not surprise the close observers of the recent trend of events.

Schoolmaster's Son a Suicide

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 30.—Lyman G. Smith, Jr., 15 years old, committed suicide by hanging in his grandfather's home in this city. Despondency is believed to have actuated the boy to end his life. He was the son of Lyman G. Smith, master of the Boston high school of commerce.

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The large number of subscriptions for the grand opera performances to be given this coming season by the Boston Opera Company that come from other states besides Massachusetts proves conclusively that the Boston Opera House is rapidly coming to be looked upon as a New England institution. The increase in the price of seats in the orchestra and first part of the first balcony has been accepted by the public as a proper adjustment in view of the galaxy of stars who are to be found on the roster of the Boston Opera Company, while the new plan by which subscribers can secure their seats for a single weekly performance instead of obligating themselves for all the presentations of the season is proving a most popular feature with all opera-lovers. One of the most noteworthy facts in connection with the approaching season is the eagerness with which the lower priced seats are taken up. With the scale of prices for seats in the upper part of the first balcony and in the second balcony remaining unchanged, scores are taking advantage of securing their tickets in advance of the season. The subscription office is open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. An artistic prospectus giving the plans of the Boston Opera Company in detail, as well as the names of singers who are to appear and the operas to be given, will be mailed on application.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Since the days of John T. Kelley known the country over as "The Roll Mill Man," there has not been a story teller to equal Frank Fogarty, who comes to B. F. Keith's theatre next week. Mr. Fogarty was a concert entertainer up to about four years ago, when he was induced to go into vaudeville and since then he has easily held the leading place in this line of work. His stories are always new, bright, and humorous, and he has a way of telling them that is all his own. He will come to B. F. Keith's theatre with some of his latest and already there have been a great many inquiries in regard to the date. Mr. Fogarty will be one of the features of a long bill, in which surprises are promised. Other features will be the famous Belleclaire Brothers, who have just returned from Europe where their feats of strength and balancing attracted wide attention; the Bowman Brothers will appear with their latest songs Al White's new grotesque dancers, "The Jolly Jiggers," Gordon Eldrid and company in the comedy sketch called "Won by a leg," and Maximo, the wonderful Cuban wire walker, doing his famous specialty of the inebriated swell on the slack wire.

GLOBE THEATRE.

The third highly successful week of the engagement at the Globe Theatre, Boston, of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Cub" begins Monday evening with an advance sale of seats for the next sixteen performances large enough to warrant the greatest optimism on the part of William A. Brady that his young star will be able to remain in Boston until snow flies. Mr. Brady himself is authority for the statement that never before in his entire career has he given so much personal attention to a production as he has in the case of "The Cub." Moved primarily by a determination to leave no stone unturned in his plan for the individual success of Fairbanks and also intent on establishing beyond the possibility of doubt a place among foremost American dramatics for young Thompson Buchanan, author of the comedy, Mr. Brady has spent most of the past fortnight in Boston, conducting rehearsals of the big company. As the production stands now "The Cub" is strikingly changed. An entirely different ending for the play has been written—and the one fault noted by the newspaper critics the opening night has not only been remedied but audiences now leave the theatre in roars of laughter, the final curtain descending on decidedly the most uproariously funny situation of the entire comedy. With the return to town of society folk the appearance of the lower floor of the Globe Theatre has constantly become more and more like a first night audience at a symphony concert.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

"The Crown Prince," George Broadhurst's play which John Craig will produce at the Castle Square is a lively romantic play. It resembles "The Prisoner of Zenda," not in plot, but in manner. Its scenes are laid in the mythical kingdom of Rhodoland, where dwells a beautiful queen and whose Minister of War is in love with her. The dashing crown prince of the neighboring kingdom of Morantia has been engaged to the queen of Rhodoland since infancy, and for four acts the entangled web of love and adventure is deftly woven and made cleverly amusing in dialogue and situation. As the hero of "The Crown Prince" Mr. Craig will be seen to exceptional advantage. He will wear handsome and picturesque costumes, he will be the central figure in several exciting scenes in which his life is at stake, he will indulge in sword combats and come off victorious, and in the last act he will overthrow two adversaries and be ready to vanquish a third when the curtain falls. From start to finish, "The Crown Prince" will prove an extremely diverting drama filled with romance and the vigor of love and war. As produced at the Castle Square "The Crown Prince" will be well cast. Mr. Craig will be the hero, and Mary Young the beautiful young queen, while every other member of the John Craig Stock Company will have a suitable role. There will be effective stage settings and costumes.

BOSTON THEATRE.

"Girlies," Frederic Thompson's big musical production which has been crowding the New Amsterdam Theatre all summer, will be seen at the Boston Theatre next week for a limited engagement. With Joseph Cawthorne and Maude Raymond at the head of its cast of 100, the organization which includes "That famous chorus of 60 girls" will come here intact to present, down to the most minute detail, the sensationally successful satire exactly as it was shown during the months of June, July and August on Broadway. In its review of "Girlie" the New York Herald called it "A shower of beauty, melody and fun," and thousands of Manhattan theatregoers, supported by thousands from other cities who regard the metropolis as a summer resort voted the show as "just that" In its preparation the ingredients humor, melody, color, action and the spirit of youth were mixed in the proper proportions and the result is an entertainment the sparkle and effervescence of which, cannot fail to enthuse the most blase theatregoer steeped though he be in the conventionalities of a hundred other musical entertainments. An aeroplane number, is an exact and startling illusion of twenty persons-passengers of a huge biplane, which is in every essential an actual ship flying through space. Burlesques of the seasons' dramatic successes, including "The Spendthrift," "Madame X", "Seven Days," and "Alias Jimmy Valentine" are introduced. A list of the songs embraces many song successes: "Who are you with tonight?" sung by Maude Raymond; "Life is only a Merry-go-round" by Joseph Cawthorne and "My Irish Girl."

ON THE STAGE.

What will undoubtedly prove the greatest sensation the season has brought forth will be the appearance at the Boston Grand Opera House as next week's attraction, Charles Froham's triumphant success of "The Thief" which ran for two years at the Lyceum Theatre, New York. The critics of two continents have exhausted themselves trying adequately to describe this intense, gripping, overwhelming drama, so full of that indescribable something that pierces the heart with its appeal.

Gertrude Elliott (Mrs. Forbes Robbertson,) who comes to the Shubert Theater next week in Frances Hodgson Burnett's play, "The dawn of a Tomorrow," has another talent besides that of acting, from which she could derive a substantial living did she care to drop her stage work and take it up. Miss Elliott is a painter of china and an artist of no mean order. Two years ago, with much trepidation, the actress sent a couple of samples of her work to an exhibition of the New York Ceramic Society. They carried off first and second prizes, and it is doubtful if her stellar honors ever gave the young woman more genuine happiness.

1,423 527 PEOPLE IN GREATER BOSTON

Ranks as Fourth City In United States In Population

Boston, Sept. 30.—Greater Boston has a population of 1,423,527. The announcement of these figures is made possible by the giving out by the director of the census at Washington of advance statements of population, based upon an official count of the returns of the thirteenth census for the cities and towns in the metropolitan district of Boston. This makes Greater Boston the fourth largest city in the United States.

According to the census reports issued by the director of the census, New York is in the lead with little fear of losing its first place as the largest city in the country, while Chicago comes an easy second, and safe in its position. Philadelphia comes third and under present conditions holds the position against all comers with ease, but were Boston to annex the surrounding cities and towns the Quaker City would have a lead of but 125,000 in population.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Walter E. Burke of Adams street is driving a very natty electric phaeton.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Rachel Osborne of Robert street Wednesday evening. She was the recipient of a signet ring.

The body of James M. Smith arrived here on Thursday from Barre, Vt. He was a former resident of this city, and died on Tuesday.

Rear Commodore Crane when asked at the Quincy Yacht club celebration how many Cock of the Walk pennants Iris had won said the one just presented made the fifth.

The School department of the Daily Ledger was unusually newsy on Thursday. Over three columns of items from the High, Woodward, graded schools and parochial school.

The Ladies Aid society of the Washington street Congregational church met on Tuesday for the first time this fall. There was an excellent supper in connection with the meeting followed by speeches. Plans for the work of the new year were discussed.

Dr. J. P. Murphy, the dentist was severely burned about the hands Thursday afternoon at his office in the Durgin & Merrill block. He was at work with a vulcanizer at the time when the alcohol suddenly took fire and before he could extinguish the blaze he was burned about the hands.

I. E. Nickerson Quincy's veteran in the candy business is to open a new shop Saturday in the Johnson building, Maple street, where he is to make a specialty of home made and wholesome candies. "Nickerson's Candy Shop" will be another attractive store for the centre.

Irving Gumb of Lowell has been chosen as the new office secretary at the Y. M. C. A. He will also assist in the boys' department. Mr. Gumb was captain of the Lowell high school cadets last year. At present he is attending the Boston Y. M. C. A. day school in preparation for entering Harvard next year. He will work in the local Y. M. C. A. afternoons and evenings and will make it his headquarters.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Massachusetts Fields school on Tuesday adopted a permanent school pin—oval in shape—in centre raised form of Indian Squanto and name. On the pin also is the name of school and date 19100. Each year from now on the new class will simply change the date.

arents and teachers will hold a meeting at the Wollaston school next Wednesday afternoon to form a permanent organization. Invitations are being sent to every parent in the district.

Airship game has reached the boys at the Wollaston school. Their minature gliders made out of paper, enthuse some one to some day rival Grahame-White.

Parents of the Wollaston school will be glad to know that the double row system of seating, which was necessary a few years ago in several rooms, has been abolished much to satisfaction of all.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY.

Rear Admiral Bowles, retired, was one of the chief speakers Thursday, says the Journal, before the commission appointed by Governor Draper to devise a plan to compensate employees for injuries sustained while at work. Sessions, afternoon and evening, at the State House, were attended by men representing capital and labor. Admiral Bowles represented the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at Quincy, of which he is the head He opposed the act in the form in which it was presented to the last General Court, suggesting a contributory plan by which the employees should bear a part of the liability to one of their number.

TODAY'S COURT.

Catherine Donovan was arraigned for assault at Quincy. The case was dismissed on payment of $5 costs.

WEST QUINCY ENTERTAINMENT

Prof. Maynard, the Blind Musician, Popular

The Ladies' Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church, West Quincy, gave an entertainment Thursday evening in the vestry of the church, at which a large number were present. An interesting program consisting of piano selections and vocal solos, interspersed with funny stories was rendered by Prof. Maynard, the blind musician of Boston. The program was as follows: Piano selection, "March triumphal" by Brooks; Vocal selection, "The hymn of the old church choir," "The Old Oaken Bucket" with variations arranged by himself. "Mocking Bird," whistling so perfectly that everyone was delighted; an imitation of "Fife and drum" which sounded so real that it was but in the street, surrounded by a crowd of people all anxious to get a sight of the on coming parade, but as it passed and the music grew fainter and fainter in the distance, then sounded no more, we realized we were not in the street. He next sang a solo entitled "The beautiful garden of roses," one of the popular songs of the day. His next selection brought vividly to the minds of many, a trip they had enjoyed in the past, and one which some of them do not care to repeat. It was a solo entitled "A trip to Provincetown." The last number on the program was a song which Prof. Maynard gave last year and was asked to repeat, "Oh, what a beautiful ocean," a song in which the beauty of the ocean as seen by different people rests on their viewpoint of it. During the intermission, ice cream and cake were served by the ladies. The evening was enjoyed by all as Prof. Maynard is an excellent entertainer.

LOCAL SPORTS.

Young men of South and West Quincy met Thursday night and organized "The Quincy Rod and Gun Club," at their rooms on Center street. The following officers were elected and after the transaction of some business, refreshments were served and some of the members participated in a "Coon Hunt," in the reservation. President, Arthur H. Dunstan; vice president, Edward Malnati; secretary, William E. Farquharo treasurer, Albert Rennie; committee on bylaws, John J. Barry, A. Elcock, Edward Malnati, George Kelly, A. A. Gillis, A. Picard and A. H. Dunstan.

Claude Grahame-White's Farnam biplane and possibly his monoplane went through City Square this noon, headed for the Brockton fair grounds, where he will fly next week. Not much of a view of the man girds were seen, however, for they were safely encased in the large case in which they came from London, the case in question being an a large dray drawn by four horses. The main part of the machine was on the big draw, while some ofthe smaller planes were on a smaller team. White was not present in person when the machines went through, but was represented by some of his workmen. He will fly each day at the Brockton fair. A brief halt was made in City Square and the box was opened so that several people were permitted to view the biplane.

NOT APPRECIATED AT HOME

Grahame-White Only Took Up Aviation Last Year

Ed. L. Lennon of Cambridge returned on Thursday from Europe. He will be remembered, says the Globe, by many of the old time local followers of cycling and foot-running, especially long-distance running as a close student of the games, and he developed many stars in the halcyon days of bicycling.

Last April he went abroad to take up the study of aviation, and during his travels he attended nearly all the important meets held in England, Scotland, Ireland and France. He was a spectator at the Bournemouth and Lanark meetings and was a close observer of things aeronautical at the Rheims meeting in France.

"France is just about 10 years ahead of the United States in aviation," said Mr. Lennon. "England, too, is far more advanced in the sport than is this country, but from the progress that is being made in America and which is constantly being reported abroad, it undoubtedly will not be long before we catch up with the foreigners.

At the end of a long interview, Mr. Lennon says:

"Grahame-White, however, is not nor ever has been appreciated in his own country. Contrary tothe report that I see has gained some circulation here, Grahame-White is not a graduate of the automobile ranks, but on the other hand is the son of a well-known English yachtsman, who built for himself a charming home overlooking the Hamble river and the Southampton water. At that residence, Bursledon towers, Grahame-White was born and was educated at the Bedford grammar school.

"Like a number of other successful aviators, White became a champion cyclist. It was intended that the young fellow should follow the army, but his tastes lay in other directions and from early youth he was enamored of all that was mechanical. After managing an estate in Sussex, and spending some time in South Africa he settled down to business in London dealing in cars, motor boats and accessories. The aviation fever seized him in 1909, and he therefore belongs to the band of pioneer aviators.

"He was one of those youths who was fascinated by witnessing flights at the celebrated Rheims meeting and some three months afterward he began to fly himself, using a Bleriot two-seater, which was the first aeroplane to carry a passenger properly. Issy was the scene of his early exploits, then he beat all his own records at Pau, but had one or two pretty bad falls there, although he took his mother up at the latter place.

"Not long after starting his flying experiements, he abandoned the Bleriot moonplane for a Farman biplane, and it was in this machine that he made his famous attempts to win the London Daily Mail's $50,000 prize, and it was by sheer misfortune that Paulhan beat him in the London-Manchester race."

Drugs and Sickness.

It is not too much to say that the medical profession today no longer believes that any drug (with a few exceptions, like quinine in malaria, mercury and the antitoxins) will cure a disease as such. All that it will do is so to modify conditions as to help the body in its fight against disease.

We are no longer content, in the biting phrase of Voltaire, to "pour drugs of which we know little into bodies of which we know less." What will help one patient will harm another, and what may be beneficial in the early stage of a disease will be useless or even injurious in a later stage.

In the language of Captain Cuttle, the effect of a drug, like "the bearin' of an observation," "depends on the application on it." It is neither rational nor safe blindly to swallow down a drug which is highly recommended in a certain disease and expect it to "do the rest." There is no such thing as a universal cure for a disease nor even a remedy which can be relied upon as "a good thing to take" at any and all stages of it.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Delineator.

Scene—Railway carriage on the Midland Railway. Enter a colonel with gamebag and case of guns.

Colonel—"Beautiful sport; sixty birds in two hours, and only missed two shots!"

A quiet gentleman sitting in the corner put down his paper, rushed across the compartment and grasped him warmly by the hand: "Allow me to congratulate you, sir! I am a professional myself."

"Professional sportsman?"

"No; professional liar."—Tit-Bits.

LIVED LIKE A HERMIT

Winslow Homer Achieved World-Wide Fame as an Artist

Portland, Me., Sept. 30.—Winslow Homer, the world-renowned artist, died at his home at Prout's Neck, a nearby summer resort, where he had lived alone for the better part of seven years, like a hermit.

Born Feb. 24, 1836, in Boston, he learned lithographing, among other designs producing one that embraced portraits of the entire senate of Massachusetts of 1854. In 1863 he exhibited for the first time war subjects. In 1867 he exhibited in the Paris salon, and was one of the few Americans to receive recognition. He studied in Paris in 1867 from life models. In 1864 he was elected associate in the national academy, and academician next year.

DOCTOR IS CHARGED WITH KILLING GIRL

Body of Young Stenographer Found in 'Frisco Cellar

San Francisco, Sept. 30.—Dr. Robert Thompson, alias Grant, was formally charged by a coroner's jury with the murder of Eva C. Swan, a stenographer, whose body was found buried beneath a cement flooring of a vacant house last Friday night.

The verdict charges that Thompson performed an operation on the young woman. The jury requested that authorities take steps to stop malpractice in medicine and prevent the display of signs advertising "this criminal practice."

CRAZED BY ELECTRIC SHOCK

Peculiar Accident to Motorman Who Received 500 Volts

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 30.—George W. Waldron, a motorman on the Atlantic Shore Line railway, was critically injured at Eliot by coming in contact with a live wire and getting the entire 500 volts.

He was unconscious when the other men of the crew reached him and remained so for some time. When he came to he became violently insane.

The accident was a peculiar one, for while many people have taken a great deal more voltage, others have been killed with a lower voltage, but electricians say they never knew of it having such an effect as in Waldron's case.

LANDSLIDE IN BIG DITCH

Large Section of Culebra Cut Filled With Earth and Rocks

Washington, Sept. 30.—A big section of the Panama canal prism was filled up by a great landslide. The earth and rocks not only covered up all of the tracks on the east side and filled the canal ditch, but spread over one track on the west side.

The slide occurred in Culebra cut at Cucuracha, where the cut is deepest. There are 500,000 cubic yards of earth and rocks moving down the mountain side, and having exhausted every other means to stop it, the engineers have made up their minds that all of this material must be slowly dug out and removed.

Naturally Not.

"Why didn't you try to rescue that young lady when she called for help?" asked the prosecuting attorney.

MISS DEACON WILL NOT WED PEABODY

Breaking of Engagement Has Stirred Up Society Folks

Newport, R. I., Sept. 30.—No reason has been assigned by the principals for the reported breaking off of the engagement between Miss Edith Deacon, one of the three beautiful Deacon sisters of Boston, whose grace and vivacity have made them admired at home and abroad, and George L. Peabody, the Boston and Beverly clubman.

Society people who are well acquainted both with Miss Deacon and the Back Bay millionaire, however, say that a reconciliation between Peabody and his former wife has been effected and look for a reunion of the couple.

Whether or not that is the true explanation of the most startling social event of the year, it is practically certain now that Miss Deacon will not wed Peabody.

TOO STRONG IN THEORY

Taft Sounds Warning Against Prisons Being Too Comfortable

Washington, Sept. 30.—In receiving the delegates to the International Prison congress in the White House, President Taft cautioned them against making prisons so comfortable as to furnish a motive for violating the law, and against associating prisoners who were mere offenders with hardened law breakers.

The president said that sometimes when he visited the prisons of this government he thought they were stronger in theory than in practice. He expressed the hope, however, that this government now had prisons that illustrated at least some of the improvements that the prison congress recommended.

Firearms In Russia.

As an illustration of how closely everything is watched in Russia, take its system of registering firearms. When a weapon of any kind is purchased a permit must be secured from the local authorities. The name of the man who makes the purchase, with the number of the weapon, is recorded. If the purchaser ever wants to dispose of the weapon he must notify the authorities and cause the transfer to be recorded on the books of the firm which sold it.

An Anachronism.

When some celebrated pictures of Adam and Eve were seen on exhibition Mr. McNab was taken to see them. "I think no great things of the painter," said the gardener. "Why, man, tempting Adam wi' a pippin of a variety that wasna known until about twenty years ago!"

Hindering the Process.

Doctor—Well, John, how are you today?

John—Verry bad; verry bad. I wish Providence 'ud 'ave mussy on me an' take me.

Wife—'Ow can you expec' it to if you won't take the doctor's physic?—London Mail.

Her Answer.

In inculcating the idea of truthfulness a teacher asked the question, "What is the best thing in the world to do and sometimes the hardest?"

A little girl raised her hand timidly. "Well, my child?" "To get married!"

Too Fond of Them.

"Is he fond of outdoor sports?"

"Yes. His wife complains that he even invites them home to dinner."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
